

SHOOT'S WOMAN AS SHE TRIES TO STEAL PIG

Danbury Farmer Warns Her Before He Pulls Trigger; She Is In Critical Condi- tion—Companions Held.

Danbury, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Stephen Duhan, 27, shot Mrs. Lillian Smith, residence unknown, in Stony Hill district of Bethel, at nine o'clock this morning. Duhan, standing thirty feet away, fired a shotgun at the woman's leg as she was trying to get away after he found her and two men stealing a pig. The contents of the shell penetrated the woman's left groin, causing a wound which may be fatal. She is in a critical condition at the hospital, having lost a very large amount of blood.

Duhan Surrenders

While State and local policemen were searching the vicinity of the shooting Duhan, with one of the men he accused of being involved in the pig theft, drove to the city and surrendered to a local policeman. Duhan told the police he discovered Mrs. Smith, Joe Legia and a man named Bob Artist leaving his barn with one of his pigs. He lined them up against the barn, warning them he was going to take them to the police. The woman, Duhan stated, kept walking toward him and he said he warned her six times to stop or else he would shoot her in the legs. When she kept coming toward him he again warned her and then fired.

Taken to Hospital

The woman ran out to the state highway and stopped an automobile asking to be taken to a doctor. She was carried to police head-

BIG DROUGHT LOAN STILL IN DISPUTE

Senate Debates Food Angle While Red Cross Head Makes Cheerful Report.

Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Senate returns today to disputing over the $15,000,000 added to the drought loan appropriation bill to be used for food purchases. Assailing the action of the conference committee in disagreeing on its amendment, Senator Caraway said "there hasn't been a piece of legislation before this Congress that's been the subject of such hostile propaganda."

The Arkansas Democrat spoke after Chairman Jones, of the Senate conferees, had reported the disagreement with the House managers, preparing to moving for recession on the $15,000,000 amendment or for another conference. Caraway revealed he had been denied a request to appear before the conferees.

Senator Jones immediately denied this, saying he pointed out to Caraway that the House conferees opposed any one appearing before the conference who was not a member of either the Senate or House conferees.

Payne's Statement

He said the recent statement of Chairman Payne, of the Red Cross, that the drought presented the "gravest emergency" in peace times in the nation's history, saving the biggest post-time fund was needed to be raised proved Payne was not acquainted with the situation a while ago when he said before the Senate appropriations committee that the organization could take care of it. Meanwhile, an encouraging response to the appeal for a $10,000,000 drought relief fund was reported by Mr. Payne at Red Cross headquarters.

Telegrams were received from many chapter chairmen saying checks for their quotas were being mailed. These included three Virginia chapters, Fort Monroe, Fort Eustace and Saltville.

Warren, Ohio, Bloomfield, N. J., Torrington, Conn., and Garden City, N. Y., telegraphed of having placed checks for substantial amounts, the largest $2,500, in the mails. In the mid-west, several cities had met their quotas.

PITY POOR JANITOR OF THIS APARTMENT

Vienna, Jan. 14.—If the janitor of Vienna's newest apartment house receives as many complaints, proportionately, as do those of ordinary apartments, his life will be anything but a bed of roses.

The new apartment is to be one of the largest in the world, and will provide room for 3,322 families. It covers more than two city blocks, will be five stories high and will cost more than $4,000,000.

It will include in the building itself several laundries, two kindergartens for children, a dental clinic, consultation office for mothers, public library and a medical first aid station. It will house workmen's families.

GOVERNOR ATTACKS PROHIBITION LAW

Maryland's Chief Executive Takes Office For Fourth Consecutive Time.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Taking the oath as governor of Maryland for the fourth consecutive time, Albert C. Ritchie, the first ever to be re-elected to that office, today made an attack on the National prohibition and Federal centralization and called for a return to the virtues of a larger measure of self-help and localized government.

He declared that business must realize "the problem of unemployment is its own and not the state's," and that "government itself has helped create the present crisis."

Governor Ritchie, often mentioned as a Democratic presidential possibility, made his address over a National radio hookup in the House of Delegates after he had been sworn in the Senate chamber by Chief Judge Carroll T. Bond of the Court of Appeals.

"I believe the country is entering a decade which will see a new political dispensation in which the ideals and principles incarnate in our Maryland traditions and institutions will win fulfillment," said Governor Ritchie.

"These traditions are toleration in all things and to all people; ordered liberty for the individual and the right to follow his own pursuits as

STARVING STRIKERS IN DEMONSTRATION

Thousand Miners Demand Food In Wales—No Credit At Any of the Food Stores

Maesteg, Wales, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Nearly one thousand striking miners carrying banners with inflammatory slogans last night attempted to march to Caeru to demand food at the Bridgend workhouse.

Marching to the light of pit lanterns they interspersed their songs with shouts: "If you want bread, join us."

The police, who had been notified of their approach, sent out an escort and intercepted them at Nantyllyn, just outside the town, and ordered them to disperse. At one time it looked as if a riot might develop but the counsel of the older men prevailed and the miners finally quieted down and they went home.

One of the marching miners said: "We did not intend to do anything disorderly at Bridgend but we should not have left the workhouse until we were fed. Our wives and children can obtain relief, but we cannot take food from their mouths and single men get nothing. If the owners think they can best us by starvation they are mistaken. We shall not give up because we have to tighten our belts."

Pathetic stories of near starvation were heard from among the miners, whose money reserves have been depleted by the two weeks away from work. No credit is obtainable anywhere in the district for them.

$36,000 in Gems, Bonds Found in Secret Drawer

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A fortune of $36,000 literally dropped into the lap of Dr. Robert A. Baldwin, Springfield dentist, it was revealed last night.

A secret drawer in an antique, purchased by the dentist three years ago in the settlement of the estate of Miss Cornelia A. Dean of this city, dropped out while the piece of furniture was being moved. The contents consisted of negotiable bonds, diamond jewelry and silverware.

WHEN MISSOURI MOB BURNED MAN ALIVE

Wrapped in smoke and flames, this little school house near Maryville, Mo., became a funeral pyre for Raymond Gunn, a negro, who was seized from the hands of sheriff's officers by a mob which made a public holiday of his death by fire. This remarkable picture shows a jeering crowd of 2000 persons circling the blazing building while Gunn, chained to the roof inside, was burned alive. He was charged with having assaulted and murdered Miss Velma Colter, 19-year-old white teacher. The flames were fed by gasoline from the automobiles of members of the mob.

PLAN FREIGHT SERVICE UNITED STATES-INDIA

Planes, Liners, Trains and Motor Trucks To Span Half the World—16 Days Between N. Y. and India.

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Negotiations for a freight service using planes, ocean liners, trains and motor trucks and spanning half the world were revealed today by P. E. Dewshea, manager in the United States for Imperial Airways, Ltd.

He described the plan as the "foundation for the ultimate freight scheme for the world."

Inauguration by early spring of the service, which contemplates transfer of freight by plane from any point in the United States to New York, thence by fast liner to Southampton, by passenger train to London, by motor truck to Croydon Airfield and by plane to Karachi, India, or any intermediary point was forecast by Dewshea.

Lines Co-operating

Arrangements have been completed with the Cunard and White Star lines and with British Customs authorities, he said, and negotiations are nearing completion with the American Express Company and American Customs officials, with American airlines "ready to fall in line."

The express company would take over the handling of freight in the United States under the plan, Dewshea said. Goods arriving in New York by ship would be sent by the company to the consignee by train, plane or truck.

"Air Clearance"

A special form of "air clearance" for freight shipped under the plan is to be sought from Customs authorities.

"At present, clearance of maritime freight is a matter of three or four days," Dewshea explained. "We are thinking in minutes—not days or even hours. We want an arrangement by which the Customs inspection and clearance will be as speedy as the rest of the system."

Under the air-ocean plan, freight will be carried from New York to Karachi in 16 days, cutting 14 days from the fastest time by steamer, Cunard line officials said. The savings between New York and a point like Bagdad, Iraq, would be much greater, they declared—13 days by the air-ocean plan and 60 days by steamer.

CRISIS IS AVERTED

Brussels, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Possible resignation of the Cabinet over the dual language issue was averted today when the Chamber of Deputies voted confidence in the government by 84 to 73, with three members abstaining.

The government was interpellated yesterday by Liberal leaders concerning recent disturbances at the University of Ghent where the dual language issue has caused a series of disturbances in recent months.

Baltimore, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Frank R. Kent, political writer for the Baltimore Sun in a letter published today re-asserts his charge that John J. Raskob has assumed the financial liabilities of the Democratic Party. The letter was in answer to one from Raskob denying similar statements appearing in an article by Kent.

"You are just a breast-beating amateur in politics who has had the covers pulled off him," wrote Kent. "I assert that his liabilities and debts you have taken them over. There may be other endorsers of the note but your name heads the list and you are the chief responsible person, and are so recognized. You have done all the financing and it is you who have reduced the $1,000,000 debt by approximately $900,000."

TREASURY BALANCE

Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Jan. 12 were $8,553,897.33; expenditures, $16,285,944.69; balance, $219,512,788.55.

WRANGLE IN SENATE BLOCKS RELIEF BILL

State Board in Favor Of a Veterans' Home

Hartford, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The present Fitch Home at Noroton be abandoned.

The proposal to be commended to the General Assembly calls for "the construction of a barracks to house 750 men, with a hospital for 250 more and the purchase of sufficient extra ground to provide room for the construction of additions if necessary."

The commission made no recommendations as to possible sites for the new home.

Conferees Unable To Argue On Food Amendment; Car- away Assails Committee Because He Was Not In- vited To Speak Before It; Tilson, In House, Repeats Charges That Democrats Are Staging a Filibuster.

Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Another wrangle over government loans for purchases of food today deadlocked the $60,000,000 drought relief appropriation bill.

After Senator Jones had reported conferees were unable to agree on the Senate's $15,000,000 food amendment, Senator Caraway assailed the conferees for not permitting him to appear before it. Jones sought a separate vote to recede from the Caraway amendment, an action which would clear the way for final Congressional approval.

The House, meanwhile, again heard charges of a filibuster from Representative Tilson, the Republican leader, directed this time at Representative Parks, Democrat, Arkansas.

The latter has made frequent points on "no quorum" since he was refused permission to address the House for thirty minutes last Saturday. Roll calls to obtain a quorum occupy much time which might be devoted to legislation. Parks gave assurance he would not persist, but asked Tilson:

"Is this armistice just for today?" Tilson's reply was that "every little helps."

One bill worked its way through the House legislative machinery. Approval was given a measure to transfer jurisdiction over Sully's Hill National park in North Dakota from the Interior to the Agriculture Department to be maintained as a big game preserve. It now goes to the Senate.

World Court Issue

Senator Walsh, of Montana, asked the foreign relations committee today to reconsider its action deferring the World Court issue until next December.

He made the point he was not present when the committee, by a vote of 10 to 9, postponed consideration. No action was taken on his request today.

Other committees found plenty to do.

A naval construction program to cost $74,030,000 was approved by the House Naval committee. The bill calls for a 13,800 ton aircraft carrier, a flying deck cruiser, 38 planes, four submarines and 130 airplanes.

The committee declined to approve Secretary Adams recommendation for a six-inch gun cruiser at a cost of $16,605,000. It approved an expenditure of $3,000,000 for experimental Diesel engines.

Rear Admiral Yarnell, chief of the bureau of construction, who had asked the committee to accept the experimental item, today appeared before the Senate naval committee for the same purpose.

Treaty With Germany

A treaty with Germany providing for extradition of fugitives from justice was reported favorably to the Senate by the Senate foreign relations committee. It was negotiated last July and is effective for ten years.

The House judiciary committee heard Representative Hook, Republican, Kansas, urge approval of resolutions proposing constitutional amendments designed to exclude aliens from the numerical basis for reapportionment of the House. He said the prohibition issue was not involved.

The committee adjourned in confusion with Representative Sparks, Republican, Kansas, demanding a vote be taken tomorrow and Chairman Graham pounding his gavel and announcing the meeting was adjourned.

The Senate appropriations committee reported the annual supply bill for the Agriculture Department after increasing the total approved by the House by nearly $1,000,000 to $213,959,000. One committee amendment would provide $210,000 for battling the European corn borer.

Issues His Own Coinage For People of His Island

London, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The right of coinage for thy Lundy island at the mouth of Bristol channel has been denied Marion Coles Fairman despite his ousting ownership of the island and his exercise of virtually sovereign rights there.

The Court of King's Bench yesterday upheld an earlier decision of the Devonshire Court giving him £5, or about $25, for issuance of his own coins for use on the island. The coins bore the likeness of a puffin, a bird which nests there.

Fairman who paid £10,000 or about $50,000 for the small domain, which has 5,000 acres and 45 inhabitants, in 1925, told the judges that when anything serious happened there the British government disclaimed responsibility.

"Who is sovereign of Lundy?" Justice Avery asked.

"It am," Fairman said.

"Does it ever happen that anyone assaults anyone else on Lundy island?"

"Yes, and it is put down with a heavy hand. My agent is six feet four and weighs 250 pounds," Fairman replied.

ARRESTED IN HARTFORD

Hartford, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Edward Flutie, 26, was arrested here early this morning by Detective Sergeant Charles J. Keefe and Cunningham for the police of Central Falls, R. I., where he is wanted for theft of two diamond rings valued at $500 from his sister. It is alleged that he stole the rings during a recent visit and disappeared. Judge John L. Bones in Police Court today ordered his return to Central Falls.

HOPE IS GIVEN UP FOR OCEAN FLIERS

Rocket Sent Up By Warship Was Mistaken For Plane By Ship Watchers.

Horta, Island of Fayal, Azores, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A British cruiser engaged in gunnery practice off Sao Miguel Island, Azores, Sunday night unwittingly gave rise to a false hope that a clue had been found to the whereabouts of the airplane Trade Wind, missing on its flight from Hamilton, Bermuda, since last Saturday.

The cruiser sent up several rockets. One of these which disappeared in the ocean apparently about 20 miles off Mosteiros Point, Sao Miguel, was mistaken by some persons as the Trade Wind falling into the sea, and a radio station there is said to have broadcast an appeal to ships to keep a lookout in the vicinity.

Portuguese admiralty officials ordered the destroyer Ibo to the scene when told of the broadcast, but withdrew the order after learning the facts.

Meanwhile the steamer Nuolja and others are continuing the search for the Trade Wind and its two occupants, Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. William A. MacLaren, but with almost no hope of finding them.

quarters then to the hospital. Duhan with Legia and the stolen pig walked about half a mile to the home of W. H. Crawford, whom he took to the shooting and asked to be taken to the police. Crawford drove them into this city.

Duhan is under arrest charged with aggravated assault. Legia and Artist are being held as material witnesses. State police would not say whether they will be charged with theft. Mrs. Smith, about 35, has a husband at White Plains, N. Y.

QUESTION SISTER IN LIMERICK DEATH

Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The mother and sister of Beulah Limerick were detained today for questioning in connection with the murder of the 19-year-old girl.

Mrs. Dora Limerick, the widowed mother, has figured repeatedly in the investigation but the sister, Mrs. Julia Bywaters, has played a minor part.

Police said Mrs. Limerick will be questioned in an effort to learn whether she asked Mrs. Martha Bargfrede, a girl friend of Beulah, who also is under arrest, "not to say anything about the gun in the stove."

The mother has denied making such a statement but Mrs. Bargfrede's husband, George Bargfrede, corroborated his wife.

Was Door Hinge Further examination of a piece of melted metal found in the stove at the death house resulted in an announcement by police that it probably was a door hinge. It was at first thought it might be the revolver with which the girl was shot.

Bargfrede still was held today, although police said lengthy questioning had produced little additional information from him. He said he had objected to his wife's associations with the slain girl but denied they had quarreled about it.

Mrs. Bargfrede said they did have a "little fuss" about it. She said she denied she had ever owned a .25 caliber revolver of the type with which Beulah was killed. Police also went forward with questioning of others who were known to have been friends with the girl, her diary being used as a basis for calling a number of men.

New Haven, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Antonio Nardoni, 67, former inmate of the Italian Home for the Aged, today was sentenced to state prison for from 7 to 16 years by Judge Alfred C. Baldwin in Superior Court for the slaying last November of a fellow inmate at the institution. He pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter.

The defendant was charged with stabbing Bonaventuro Coppola to death November 30 during an altercation at the home. He was originally charged with murder and responsible for the death in coroner's warrant.

State Attorney S. E. Hoyt today withdrew the murder charge and substituted the manslaughter charge. Because of his age and illness Nardoni, described as friendly and without relatives by Public Defender Robinson, had been confined at the home for several years.

SHIPS IN DISTRESS

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A damaged propeller shaft forced the freighter Effingham of the Southern States line of New Orleans to summon aid last night, the line's agents announced today.

The freighter was about 360 miles southeast of St. John's, N. F., and another of the line's freighters, the Nichmaha, which was about 20 miles away, started toward the Effingham, prepared to tow her if necessary.

Meanwhile the steam trawler Tide reported she had boiler trouble 126 miles northeast of Chatham Light, Mass. A Coast Guard cutter left New London, Conn., to go to her.

STATE RESTS SIDE IN SCHOFFELD CASE

Waterbury, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Judge Frederick M. Peasley of the Superior Criminal Court this morning denied a motion made by the defense to drop the two charges of embezzlement by agent for which Joseph S. Schofield of Hartford is on trial here. The motion was made following the completion of the State's case this morning. The defense then proceeded to put in its case and is expected to complete the evidence this afternoon. A decision in the case is expected late today.

Schofield was on the witness stand at 1 o'clock this afternoon when court took recess. State Attorney Lewis in his cross examination was stressing the dealings with Dr. Louis L. Weinberg in connection with the purchase of 100 shares of New York Title and Mortgage Company stock.

Schofield related to the court some of the events which occurred in the fall of 1929 when the Stock Market crashed and admitted that when he ordered 100 shares of the New York Title & Mortgage Company stock sold that he never gave Dr. Weinberg a thought. He said he was not sure at the time what the condition of the account was in at the time the stock was sold nor whether the stock purchased by the dentist had ever been delivered.

CRISIS IS AVERTED AT LONDON PARLEY

London, Jan. 14.—(AP)—An eleventh hour development at the Indian round table conference today may save the London negotiations from being wrecked by the Hindu Moslem quarrel.

Sir Muhammad Shaif, Moslem leader, this afternoon made a new offer to Hindu delegates which resulted in Premier MacDonald adjourning a meeting of the minorities committee for a hurried consultation with the opposing factions.

The new offer concerned representation in Bengal and Punjab, districts which up to this time have been among the most difficult issues in the Hindu-Moslem negotiations. The Moslem spokesman proposed that the Moslems be given 40 per cent of all the seats in the provincial legislature and 46 per cent in Bengal, with the right to contest in special constituencies which may be created.

This means that the Moslems are willing to accept a permanent status as a minority in Bengal, although they form a majority of the population, and in Punjab the Moslems would have a chance for a majority of one should they win seats in the special electorates.

MAN KILLS HIMSELF IN SWEETHEART'S HOME

Danbury, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Clarence Donnelly, 25, of Utica, N. Y., committed suicide by shooting his own head shortly after nine o'clock this morning, within an hour after he had reached the home of Mrs. Irene Austin, with whom he had been keeping company. Donnelly threatened to shoot himself when Mrs. Austin refused to return with him to Utica and displayed a revolver and bullets. The woman took the bullets from him. He told her the revolver was empty.

Within a few minutes Donnelly asked Mrs. Austin to play the radio and told her to turn it on loud. She did so and then heard a shot from the next room. Donnelly had shot himself in the right temple. He drove to Danbury from Utica last night, reaching the home of Mrs. Austin at 8 o'clock. The woman, a widow, and her mother came to Danbury only a few weeks ago.

MANY REDS KILLED IN CHINESE BATTLE

Were checkmating the military at almost every move. Hunan advised the government was expecting every effort to halt Communists who have captured, looted and partly burned several important towns, including Tsingshih, Lichow and Kingan on forays into adjoining Hupeh province.

10,000 Reds Routed. However, the military inflicted a severe blow upon the Reds yesterday when troops routed 10,000 Communists from Lichow. Nationalist headquarters here announced its forces killed 1,000 Reds in this encounter.

The Communists were declared in dispatches to have fled toward the Yangtze river, where they caused considerable apprehension at Ichang and Shasi. To prevent possible trouble from this source, the government sent 20,000 troops from Hankow to this important river ports.

Firmly Entrenched. In other parts of Hunan, dispatches indicated the Reds were still firmly entrenched. They were reported collecting taxes and administering the government throughout the eastern and southern parts of the province.

Communist forces appeared unable to overbid the government for troops wherever necessary. Communist also were reported stronger than the government in the southwestern provinces of Kweichow and Yunnan. The government so far has made no attempt to solve the problem in these provinces.

CHAPTER I

"The trouble with us," declared Ginger fiercely, "is that we're too good."

"I might even go so far as to say," she added, glancing with some apprehension at the parsonage windows where ministerial ears might overhear, "I might even go so far as to say," she repeated softly but with increasing firmness, "that we're too—damn—good."

"Soap and water for Ginger Ella!" called Eddy Jackson.

"Too," she swallowed deeply, "too—damn—good."

"Yeh?" Eddy Jackson grinned. "I don't think you get many subscribers to that theory around Red Thrush."

"I know what you mean, Ginger," said Wesley Meeker sympathetically. "And you're darn well tootin'—we are too good." Wesley Meeker always showed a flattering regard for Ginger's opinions, he being—albeit a junior in college—a mere minister's son, while she was daughter of the District Superintendent.

"But Ginger," protested Patty Sears anxiously, "it doesn't do us any real harm to be good, does it?"

"Well, it jolly doesn't do us any good either," declared Ginger. "For my part, I'm pretty well fed up with it. Why, we're so good we don't even get into any interesting scrapes to tell our children about."

"What children?" inquired Eddy Jackson, with interest.

"When we get them," she added hastily.

"You might tell them about the time you locked your sister Helen in the attic on her wedding day," suggested Eddy Jackson. "And about your being arrested for using the mails to defraud. And about your startling mismanagement of your erstwhile Home for the Blind."

"Those," said Ginger coldly, "were mere incidents."

"The four of them sat under the bleeding maple beside the old parsonage, the very parsonage that had been Ginger's own home until her father's marriage to Phil Van Doorn. It was Easter Week, and Wesley Meeker was home from college, his spring vacation. The maples were just curling out into leafy tendrils, and the first hardy tulips were showing bright colors in the narrow beds under the bay window. The grass seemed fairly springing up beneath the feet, for spring was in their nature as it was in the nature of the earth."

spects, I think the results in my case were better?"

"But what are you going to do?" "Phil wants to support me," said Ginger moodily. "Let her! We've always been supported by somebody. Might as well be Phil as a Ladies' Aid. Better, if you ask me."

Ginger, having been born and bred in the cheerful charity of a parsonage, had none of the temperamental prejudice common to those who are accustomed to giving and receiving little.

Phil, for her part, was more than satisfied. It was what she desired of things in the world. In the privacy of her most secret thoughts she admitted that her marriage to the minister had been prompted more by a desire to get hold of Ginger than to surrender her future to the keeping of a husband.

For Mr. Tolliver she had a cordial and affectionate regard, for Ginger a passionate and gay devotion. Certainly the two Tollivers had brought purpose and plan into the useless, well-ordered, complacent routine of Doorndee and its mistress, Ginger beyond a shadow of doubt was the most amazing and amusing human being Phil had ever encountered, and she often told herself that she would gladly have married half a dozen preachers if it had been necessary to gain the charge of Ginger Ella.

As long as she could keep the girl with her, she was well content. Indeed she was inclined slyly to encourage her, to give her the idea of what was to be expected. Phil did not want her to become like everybody else in Red Thrush.

A Little Flame Needed

"Red Thrush," Ginger was confidingly telling to her particular intimates on the parsonage lawn that mild spring day, "Red Thrush is fatal. I've made up my mind to that. It gets under your skin before you know it, like a flea on a dog."

"I don't see how it she desired of things in the world. In the privacy of her most secret thoughts she admitted that her marriage to the minister had been prompted more by a desire to get hold of Ginger than to surrender her future to the keeping of a husband."

Ginger Ella Tolliver

ley Meeker. "What this town needs is a little flame of its youth."

"What this town needs," said Ginger, "is a place where its youth can get away by itself—away from its fathers and mothers and nieces and nephews and family dogs and bishops—and do its flaming without benefit of clergy. Nothing puts a wet blanket on the incandescent like a family reunion in public."

"A Home For the Bored"

"A bit mixed," said Eddy Jackson, "but on the whole, true. I suppose you're grousing because you had to nurse Helen's baby through the last strawberry festival."

"I'd rather nurse anybody's baby than attend the best strawberry festival in the world!" cried Ginger. "I never want to see another strawberry festival. The next person that offers me a strawberry 'Til—Til—' 'Yeh, but you're lucky," said Wesley cheerfully. "Look at me. I've got to go. Your father's Superintendent. You can make excuses and cut off somewhere in the car. Us—we got to go! We've just got to go—no cutting away for us."

"Wait," Ginger stood up suddenly. "Wait." Her eyes darkened with the strange, far-away intentness that from her early childhood had been a warning signal that she was up to something. "I've got an idea. Let's have a home—"

"For the Blind," suggested Eddy Jackson brightly.

Ginger did not smile. "For the Bored," she said dreamily. "Wait." She struck off unthinkingly across the lawn in the direction of the street.

"Ginger," called Patty Sears plaintively, "are you going home? Aren't you going to take me with you—"

"I brought me here?"

"Wait," Ginger tossed back over her shoulder without turning. "I'm just going up to Jenky's a minute."

In the village of Red Thrush, Ginger Ella Tolliver had two staunch and unflinching allies, poor, faithful, blind old Benny-Brooks, and his wife, the former Miss Jenkins. Of these two Ginger was more sure than of her very self. Her plans might be wild, her hopes intangible, even her intentions not above reproach, but they two saw never a flaw in them or her.

Miss Jenkins had served as a dotting, gratuitous companion to the four Tolliver girls during the hectic years of their growth from a troubled motherless childhood to a romantic young maturity; had indeed, as Ginger Ella stoutly believed, hoped one day to officiate in place of a parent, as the wife of their reverend father.

But coming, and largely by the machinations of that same Ginger Ella, to realize the futility of her fond and foolish fancy, in a final desperation at the prospect of the dreadful and futile loneliness which threatened her declining years, in a sudden accession of great sweet courage, she had become the wife—and at no instigation but her own—of poor, blind, shrinking Benny-Brooks.

During nine months of the year she continued her work in the kindergarten schools of Red Thrush. Thus financing their modest ménage, and saving every possible penny against the inevitable rainy years that lay ahead.

In a small, three-room apartment on the second floor of the old house across the street from the parsonage, she made a happy home for the lucky man, while he assisted in every way possible—making baskets, weaving rugs—to further the financial good that plays so large a part in spiritual contentment.

Upon the support of these two Ginger could unfailingly count, and the occasions when she required support were not infrequent. In her young girlhood she had known no intimate friendships.

The boundless enthusiasm with which she, the youngest of four, had assumed active management of the parsonage and its inmates; her fervent devotion to her father and everything that concerned him; her passionate determination to marry off her sisters as best became their separate charms and values; her eagerness to enhance the family fortunes by means either fair or almost foul; all these interests had united to occupy both all her time and her affection.

Ginger Gets Into Action

But with her sisters happily married—albeit not entirely to her own best judgment, with her father comfortable in the companionship of Phil Van Doorn; and with no financial needs to egg her on, Ginger wanted a chum.

It was natural that of all the girls in Red Thrush her fancy should center upon Patty Sears, pretty, ambitious and unopinionated, a happy satellite to revolve around irascible Ginger. "Ginger's called her moon," Eddy Jackson called her.

But Ginger had learned much. For one thing, she had discovered that a secret shared is not a secret kept. And she had found by bitter experience that plans only half perfected may be easily prevented. Patty Sears, for all her love and loyalty, was susceptible to friendly overtures, and the suspicious nature of Eddy Jackson rendered him dangerously adept at ferreting out Ginger's intentions.

When she went to Ben and Jenky Brooks, on the other hand, it was not to confide a secret, but merely to place it in a private and practical repository all her own. Neither the sweetly sympathetic Patty nor the insidiously sly Eddy Jackson could pry a secret of Ginger's from that faithful pair.

Ginger's mind was apt to leap kangaroo-like from crag to crag of high accomplishment. She never bothered to blaze a trail for herself through the studied valleys of detail that lay between the mountain peaks of inspiration.

From her sudden grand concept of a Home for the Bored Youth of Red Thrush, it was but one flying-fumble leap to an old, neglected, run-down farmhouse on a wooded curve of the Rabbit river, a house which had borne a For Sale sign so many years—ly was all but obliterated by time and weather. From this abandoned house on the Rabbit, in another deep breath she was back the five miles talking it over with Ben and Jenky Brooks. And as this peak was more physically accessible to her at that moment, being right across the street, she was practical enough to turn to first things first.

She tore breathlessly up the stairs and bounded through the open door of their cheery sitting room. Jenky was tearing old clothes into long thin rags and tying them together end to end in a seemingly eternal chain for the small rug Benny was weaving.

"Darling," Ginger began explosively, "what in the world are you going to do all summer when school is out?"

"Finish this rug," said Benny, with an apologetic little cough.

"What have you thought of?" inquired Jenky, who knew Ginger much better than Benny did.

"Well," said Ginger impressively, "I think you ought to go out in the country and get a lot of fresh air and exercise and sunshine and build up rosy cheeks and backbones and what-have-you. I thought maybe you would like to act as caretakers for my little place out in the country."

Ginger's Big Idea

"I didn't know you had a place in the country," said Jenky breathlessly, dropping the pile of rags in a great heap at her feet.

"Well, I've practically got it," said Ginger. "A sort of get-together ground for the Junior Country Club."

"Why, I didn't know there was a Junior Country Club," protested Jenky.

"Oh, of course there is a Junior Country Club—on practically any rate. What do you think of it?"

"I'd like to finish this rug," said Benny modestly.

"You can finish it out in the country," said Ginger. "Right out in the fresh air and sunshine with the birds and bees all around."

"Where is it?" asked Jenky.

"It's the old Mill Rush Farm out on Rabbit river," said Ginger.

"Why, I didn't know it had even been sold."

"Well, it's just the same as sold. To tell the truth, you've practically bought it," said Ginger, with a faint smile.

"I've bought it!" gasped the amazed woman.

"Yes, for me, of course. I want you to go to old Jop Westbury and get it on the best terms you can and I'll give you the money to pay for it. Pay as little down as you can and stretch the payments out as long as possible. And then you can give me a bill of sale for it or a note or whatever you call it. Because I'm not altogether sure that father would be heartily in favor of my owning a road-house."

"A road-house?" gasped Jenky.

"How terrible! Is Mill Rush a road-house?" She almost whispered the horrible words.

"Well, practically so," said Ginger. "Anyhow, it'll be a road-house as soon as we get it fixed up, and Benny and I are running it for the Junior Country Club. Why don't you run along uptown now and find out what old Jop wants for it? You've got enough rags tied to carpet half the Middle West. Friend you want for yourself and don't mention me. And whatever he asks, you bring him down."

"I will," said Jenky, who loved to transact business for other people. "I'll go this very minute. We won't have to say any rent if we live out there, will we?"

"Not a cent! And we'll pay all your living expenses, too, and maybe give you something to boot—if there's any money left over after we get it fixed up."

"I'll go this very minute," said Jenky excitedly.

"And for goodness sake, don't say anything about it before Eddy Jackson, or somebody'll put a stop to it before we get started."

"Are you sure you've got enough money to pay for it?" suggested Benny, with a meek cough.

"Well, practically," said Ginger. "I can mortgage the Dido if I have to." The Dido was the small smart roadster Phil had given her for her birthday.

Jenky's hands trembled nervously as she put on her hat.

"I've always liked the country," she said. "We'll can a lot of fruit and jelly to last all next winter. It'll be good for Benny. He doesn't get outdoors enough. We'll raise chickens, Benny."

"Be sure to argue his price down," continued Ginger. "Half of what he asks will be about right. And pretend you're buying it for yourself."

GEM-THIEVES SENTENCED

New Haven, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Three youths who confessed to having robbed a jewelry salesman in a New York hotel room December 22, today received sentences in the state prison after entering pleas of guilty of bringing stolen articles to the state.

They are Joseph Serrano, 26, William C. Rogers, 23, and George R. Wilson, 22. They were arrested here December 26 and police said, confessed they had lured John Lerner of New York to a hotel room, and robbed him of cash and jewelry valued at approximately $2,500.

The trio had originally announced their intention of pleading not guilty and taking a jury trial, but changed their pleas as court convened this morning. Serrano was sentenced to one to three years, while Rogers and Wilson were given from two to four years.

YOUTH NEEDS FRIEND

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Fred Kroesky, 19, of New Haven, Conn., needs a friend badly and unless one appears soon he will go to the Federal reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio.

Federal Judge Robert C. Baltzell today sentenced the Connecticut youth to a year and a day for violation of the National motor theft act. The court said, however, that if a friend appears to whom the youth can be paroled, sentence would be suspended.

Kroesky is charged with having stolen an automobile in Pennsylvania and to have driven it to Evansville, Indiana, where he stole another machine. He was arrested and sentenced to the State Reformatory and served several months. He was re-arrested by Federal authorities following his release.

MAURY'S BIRTH

On January 14, 1806, Mathew Maury, an American naval officer who was the first to give a complete description of the Gulf Stream and to mark out specific routes to be followed in crossing the Atlantic, was born in Spotsylvania county, Virginia.

When 19 he was appointed a midshipman in the navy and a year later was made an officer on the Vicennes during her voyage around the world. Crippled for life by fracturing his leg, in 1839, Maury was appointed to the Naval Observatory and Hydrographic office in Washington. There he prepared works that proved of great benefit to navigators.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he offered his services to the Confederacy, and was sent on a mission to Europe, where he remained until the conclusion of peace. He then went to Mexico and was appointed emigration commissioner by Emperor Maximilian. Upon the overthrow of the imperial regime Maury returned to the United States and became professor of physics at Virginia Military Institute.

"I don't want to go," said Ginger darkly. "I'm not the type to go tripping from resort to resort. I can't flirt with people until I've known them from the cradle up and understand their line. These piazza peters who offer you a flask for life in the first intermission give me a pain in the neck. I don't want to go any place. I want to do something."

"I say so too, Ginger," said Wesley.

Ginger had a bank account of her own now, founded on a check for $5000 given her by Phil when she was graduated from high school. Gone were the days of flying in a panic to the kitchen to gather together scraps and remnants of food to be stretched into a meal for three or four, and expanded again at the last minute to provide for the inevitable unexpected guest.

There was a cook at Doorndee, a large Scotch woman, to whom Phil had taken a fancy on a trip abroad and, in the offhand way of rich people, had imported for private use. Goblins, her name was, but Ginger, her innate spirit of democracy rebelling at the proletarian discard of a formal, pretentious name, had shortened it to an affectionate "Gooby."

Why Go To College?

Ginger had always been a bit unusual, and her sudden acquisition of wealth with its accompanying prestige had done nothing to render her more-to-be-expected. In the first place, although it was certainly the proper thing to do, she refused to go to college.

"Go to college?" she queried blandly. "What for? I am neither going to teach school nor marry a minister."

"But a little cultural background," suggested her father mildly.

Ginger's grin disconcerted him. "Listen, precious," she said, the post-graduate preachers who comprise the faculty at Wesleyan are far more up on orthodoxy than they are on culture. They know a lot more about the Discipline than about the Fine Arts. I was brought up on the Bible and oatmeal porridge. Just like they were. And in some res-

VERDICT IN WELLS BOY'S DEATH VOIDED

Supreme Court Orders Retrial of Suit Resulting From Truck Tragedy.

The verdict of $6,250 awarded last May to Henry A. Wells formerly of this town, now of Rockville, father of Robert Ellisworth Wells, twelve year old boy who was one of three killed on June 26, 1928, when a truck on which he was returning from work on a tobacco plantation in Ellington turned over and burned, has been nullified by the Supreme Court of Errors. Mr. Wells sued Max and Paul Lavitt, owners of the plantation, as administrator of the estate of his son, Joseph Radville, who owned and drove the truck under the contract with the Lavitts, was sent to prison for negligence in overloading the vehicle with about twenty plantation hands. Mr. Wells suit alleged that the plantation owners shared in this negligence.

Find Judge Erred
When the verdict in Mr. Wells' favor was rendered last May the defendants moved that it be set aside. This motion was denied by Judge Alfred C. Baldwin and the case was taken to the Supreme Court. Yesterday the Supreme Court handed down a decision ruling that Judge Baldwin erred in refusing to vacate the verdict and ordering a new trial.

The court ruled that the verdict is invalid because the plaintiff did not give notice to the employer within six months after the accident nor bring suit within that length of time. Rather than accept the provisions of the compensation act, the boy's father, on December 16, 1929, returned his son's wages to the Lavitts and notified them that the minor's contract of employment was voided. This was more than a year after the accident. Max Lavitt refused to accept the return of the money. The Supreme Court holds that neither party had withdrawn from the provisions of the workmen's compensation act and therefore the plaintiff had not properly elected to bring action at law.

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP.)—Cardinal Hayes was confined to his bed today with a cold which developed Saturday and which has caused him to cancel several engagements. His physicians said he probably would remain at home for several days.

Floating Ox-Carts Carry Explorers Into South American Wilds for Oil

By T. S. GARRETT

Buenos Aires.—(AP.)—Application of the "amphibian" principle to ox-carts will mark the fourth expedition of Captain Luigi Longobardi to the central wildernesses of South America.

The Italian explorer stopped here on route to Lima, Peru, whence his party will head eastward through the Upper Amazon region. Then the group will turn south to penetrate the Grand Chaco territory of Paraguay and Argentina.

Oil is one of the principal magnets for this year's trek. The captain says it oozes out of the ground in western Brazil and that natives smear it over their bodies to discourage mosquitoes from attacking them.

The observation was made in 1928 but not much could be done about the discovery then, because eighteen of the twenty members of the expedition were drowned. The leader and one companion finally reached Santos, Brazil, after two years in the wilderness.

This year the party's equipment will include apparatus for petroleum exploration and testing. It also will embrace antidotes for snake bites and remedies for typhoid.

A complete radio outfit, with both sending and receiving sets, will keep the explorers in touch with civilization.

The ox-carts will be boat-like affairs with low, demountable wheels. Oxen will drag them on land. On the rivers they will travel under either oars or sails.

There will be four of these "amphibian carts," with 42 draught animals for motive power. The party will also have 30 horses and a number of dogs. The human contingent will number 39.

Starting from Lima, the expedition will pass along the Brazilian frontiers of Peru and Ecuador, then strike for the Amazon river, following this to its junction with the Madeira. From this point the party will turn southward to the Chaco, a vast, undefined forest wilderness, portions of which lie in Bolivia, Paraguay, Brazil and Argentina.

Capt. Longobardi visited this region first in 1923. He went out again in 1925 and 1928. On his third expedition he was held captive for a time by Indians of the interior.

When a gang leader has an erratic employe on the payroll it is customary to lay him out rather than off.

"We are lassoed fast by American finance," says Lloyd George. So now the British will probably say, "To be or knot to be."

Capt. Luigi Longobardi, Italian explorer (inset), drew this map of the proposed route for his fourth expedition to the Grand Chaco, a vast forest region in the interior of South America.

BITTER STRUGGLE STARTS OVER BRITISH SCHOOLS

London, Jan. 14.—(AP.)—A bitter struggle over primary education appeared today as a possibility in connection with the government's education bill, which would raise the school-leaving age from 14 to 15 years. The bill would not become applicable until next year.

One of the chief results of the measure would be the necessity for providing additional school buildings. Many schools throughout the country still belong to religious bodies although the teachers are paid by the state.

The Catholics in particular and other denominations are pressing for additional government grants towards maintaining the school buildings and in return are preparing to surrender some rights concerning the appointment of teachers. The grant of public moneys for maintenance of sectarian schools has always been strongly resisted in some quarters.

When the Conservative government passed the first education act allowing grants to denominational schools, many fervid opponents declared to pay the portion of local taxes which they believed represented the amount devoted to sectarian education. Some resisted to the point of going to jail. The movement eventually died out but the opposition to the grants remains strong.

The problem affects 11,000 out of the 20,000 elementary schools in the country.

TO BUILD PARK

Glen Cove, N. Y., Jan. 14.—(AP.)—To enlarge the holdings out of which he intends to create a shore front park in memory of his wife for residents of Glen Cove and Locust Valley, J. P. Morgan has purchased the $250,000 estate of John S. Appleby, New York millionaire, at Glen Cove landing.

Mr. Morgan first offered the park to Glen Cove in 1928. It will be one of the finest in the United States when it is completed. Mrs. Morgan died at Glen Cove in August, 1925.

The financier, who has been spending a few days at his estate, will leave Friday by rail for Florida with a party of Boston friends for a month's cruise aboard his yacht Corsair, which left last week for Jacksonville. Later he will return north for a brief stay and in March he will board his yacht again at some Italian port for a Mediterranean cruise.

START FROM HARTFORD
Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP.)—Four Navy scouting planes take off on Friday from Hartford, Conn., on the first lap of a transcontinental flight.

On arrival on the west coast, after stops at Cleveland and Chicago, the planes will join the cruiser Chicago, now 10,000-ton vessel under construction at the Mare Island Navy Yard. Lieutenant Commander H. E. Halland of Fargo, N. D., commands the planes. The other three will be piloted by Lieutenants T. B. Nesbitt of Forest City, Ark., H. E. Sears of Beverly, Mass., and O. W. Pate of Hawkinsville, Ga.

FACIAL DEFORMITIES CAN BE ELIMINATED

New Orleans, Jan. 14.—(AP.)—There's no need to go through life with a facial deformity now, Dr. Gordon B. New, of the University of Minnesota, told the closing session of the American College of Surgeons group meeting here.

In reconstructing a destroyed ear or nose, explained Dr. New, the foundation of cartilage usually is obtained from the ribs of the patient over which tissue and skin are grafted to produce almost a perfect member. A shattered jaw or cheekbone can be rebuilt from a piece taken off the hip.

With the use of talking pictures Dr. George W. Crile, of Cleveland, explained that the thyroid gland by capturing the iodine that goes into the body in food transforms the iodine molecules in such a manner as to make the cell membranes permeable, thus exerting a major influence on the growth of the body.

When performing normally, he said, the thyroid maintains a steady metabolism or bodily activity through oxidation, the permeability of the cell membranes permitting all organisms to function properly.

Demonstrating difficulty and delicate operations for hernia in another picture, Dr. P. E. Truesdale, of Fall River, Mass., described hernia of the diaphragm as demonstrating the need for care in contact with motor nerves.

Danger of this type of hernia, he said, is increasing because of frequent automobile accidents.

Personality, Not Beauty, Is Big Factor Today In Screen Success, Still Cameraman Finds.

By DAN THOMAS NEA Service Writer

Hollywood.—Beauty today takes second or third place among the necessary qualifications for screen success.

Personality is the big factor. In fact, it is so important that it must stand out even in portraits, according to Preston Duncan, Hollywood's leading portrait photographer.

"In the old days we used to photograph girls so as to make them look as beautiful as possible," Duncan declares. "Every line that added to a girl's beauty was emphasized. But now personality must be evident in portraits just as it is one the screen as girls often get or lose jobs from the way they look in still photographs.

"To me that means concentrating upon the eyes and letting the rest of the face take care of itself as I believe personality is expressed more through the eyes and voice than in any other way. And of course we can't put a voice in still pictures."

Ann Harding, one of our most popular stars today, is a perfect example of the point brought out by Duncan. Ann is referred to as a beautiful woman. Yet when closely analyzed she isn't beautiful at all. But she has such a tremendous personality that she appears to be beautiful.

Hollywood has become so used to hearing about squabbles among stars, directors and executives while a picture is in production that such items rapidly are losing their news value. Even a star walking off a set in a huff wouldn't cause more than a passing comment. But it is something to talk about when a picture is finished right on schedule and there has been no trouble. Consequently, Charley Murray and George Slukey have found themselves "copy" of some importance. These two comedians have made several films together of late and every single one of them has been turned out without a bit of trouble.

And here's a new racket tried by four extras in the hope of getting a job. Two young men and two girls dashed up to a studio gate in a taxicab. All were in evening clothes and all wore make-up. They started to rush past the gateman with a breathless, "We have just received a hurry call for the 'Hook, Line and Sinker' ball room set."

"Yeah," drawled the gateman. "That picture was finished 10 days ago." The four hopefuls didn't get inside the studio. This story from the Radio Pictures studio is another one of the reasons why editors are baldheaded. "Richard Dix declares that reports of his near escape from death in a taxicab accident in New York were absolutely correct except for a few minor details. "The Radio Pictures star was not in New York, but in Bakersfield, Calif., on location. "It wasn't a taxicab, but an ox cart in which he was riding. "He didn't save himself by jumping on the radiator, but grabbed one of the oxen by the nose and halted the team." And so on and on through several sheets of paper.

Without doubt the evening was an education in itself, showing how the intricate process of manufacturing is solved and turned into the most simple of operations by machinery that handles practically every step from the time the felpar is dumped from the freight cars into the first crushing machine, to when the finished product, packed in cartons, rolls on a belt to the warehouse.

The entire plant with the exception of the machine shop was in operation and employees of the firm acted as guides, the Get-Together members forming groups of twenty-five to make the tour of inspection easier. Nearly an hour was spent in witnessing the step by step process attendant to the manufacture of Bon Ami in both cake and powder form.

Bon Ami in cake form is turned out at the rate of 50,000 cakes a day. After the Bon Ami is made it is allowed to harden for four or five days then cut into cake size and stamped with the name "Bon Ami." It is then allowed to stand in drying rooms from four to five weeks before it is wrapped and made up in cartons of 36 cakes.

The Bon Ami powder is manufactured at the rate of 3,600 packages a day and is put up in cartons of eighteen packages. The liquid soap which is added to the felpar is made at the plant as are also the boxes, wrappings, cartons, etc.

Warner, N. H., Jan. 14.—(AP.)—George H. Sargent, 64, bibliographer, magazine writer and author, died today at his home here. He began his career as a newspaperman in St. Paul in 1887. In 1890 he became city editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, a position he held for five years, leaving to become connected with the Boston Transcript in 1895. Since that time he has made many contributions as a bibliographer and author. Among his works were "The French Revolution," "Napoleon in Literature and Caricature," "Ingrams and Aphorisms of Oscar Wilde" and "English Notes—A Review."

The announcements adds that it is hoped in the near future to obtain a 12,000 mile air service from San Francisco to India. It is intended later to add an 8,000 mile African route. The announcement promises fourteen day service between San Francisco and India and not over eleven day service between New York and India.

For several days members of the feminist organization Partida de la Porra—literally "Party of the Stupid Women"—have sat outside the palace and administered spankings to Cuban women of a revolutionary turn of mind who demonstrated against President Machado. True, to their precedent the women left the car and attempted to spank the quartet, believing them to be of their own sex. A short but active encounter followed after which one of the feminists was taken to a hospital and the others fled, soundly spanked. CHENEY EMPLOYEES SEE BON AMI MADE

Get Together Club Members Guests of Orford Soap Co. At Local Plant.

The Orford Soap Company, more familiarly known as the Bon Ami, was host last night to nearly 225 members of the Get-Together Club of Cheney Brothers. The occasion also marked the annual election of officers and the entire slate as presented at the last meeting was elected on one ballot cast by the secretary. The new president is Karl Johnson, who succeeds John Reinhart.

A chicken a la King dinner was served by Osano, assisted by the Spinning and Dressing Departments. The gathering took place in one of the rooms in the main part of the Bon Ami plant, and the blue-green glow cast by the Cooper-Hewitt lighting system added a touch of novelty to the affair. All business pertaining to the Get-Together Club was suspended, with the exception of the election of officers, the remainder of the slate being as follows: first vice-president, George Rowless; second vice president, Frank Hicking; third vice president, Walter Tedford; secretary, Herbert McCann; assistant secretary, Frank J. Moloney; treasurer, Raymond Bidwell; commissary, Melville Stacey; Speaker's committee, U. J. Lupien.

After the dinner, W. W. Robertson, president of the Orford Soap Company, spoke a few words of welcome and invited the club to inspect the plant and learn how the famous "it hasn't scratched yet" product is manufactured. The entire plant with the exception of the machine shop was in operation and employees of the firm acted as guides, the Get-Together members forming groups of twenty-five to make the tour of inspection easier. Town of Manchester Was Podunk Wedding Present Mathias Spiess of 23 West Center street, this town, of whom there is no better informed man in this section respecting Indians and their customs, throws light on the Podunk controversy of which Lowell Thomas has spoken on the air recently. Some time ago Thomas, spokesman on the air for the Literary Digest, took occasion to tell his listeners that Podunk was a fictitious town—a place conceived only in the minds of writers and comedians when they needed a rural village site to use for color. The noted reporter and world-traveler knows now that he was playing with dynamite when he made the careless statement regarding Podunk.

Brave Fighters Just to make the matter clear in the mind of the voted broadcaster, Mr. Spiess wrote, giving the interesting story of the Podunk Indians, one of the bravest if not the Spartan tribe of all the American Indians. When the ferocious Mohicans invaded New England from the north, driving all before them and exacting tribute from all the river tribes, they found a Tartar in the Podunks of Manchester and vicinity. Fitted against tremendous odds, the Podunks fought until the very last, preferring death before capture and extinction before submission. The records show that the Podunks of this region did not give in to the invaders and they preserved their tribal hunting grounds in this section.

Where They Live According to an Indian map of what is now Connecticut, prepared by Mr. Spiess, the Podunk tribe lived in a large section of land east of the Connecticut river roughly comprising what is now Hartford County east of the river. East Hartford was then a large Podunk Indian village and there are at least five Podunk Indian cemeteries in the immediate vicinity of East Hartford.

Manchester was part of the Podunk tribal nation. There is an interesting bit of history contained in Mr. Spiess's history of Manchester in this connection. Historical Present "Saugunok, the daughter of Araramet, the last chief of the Podunk tribe, married Attawanook, also called Nautahon, who was known among the white settlers as Joshua Sachem. After Joshua's marriage to Saugunok (dark star) Araramet gave to the wedded pair all his land in Podunk which included Manchester. Chief Joseph sold the "five-mile tract" now Manchester to the settlers in 1672. To this day a small settlement in "Pleasant Valley" so-called is known as Podunk. This is all that is left to bear the name in this section. Original Podunk The history of the Podunk Indians is very interesting reading as contained in the History of Manchester. With the westward drift of civilization, the name Podunk was given to other villages and settlements throughout the United States. But the original Podunk, backed by historians of Connecticut is in our own back yard.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A sweeping reorganization of the state government and reforms in banking and insurance laws to prevent a recurrence of the recent failure of many banks and large insurance companies, were recommended by Governor Harvey Parrell today in his message to the Forty-eighth General Assembly. The governor said an investigation had convinced him the state banking and insurance departments had not functioned properly for the protection of the public in the recent financial crisis. He said failure to function properly, however, was due mainly to "precedents set in these departments" and added that "not all bank failures have been due to misadministration of the law" but mainly to world-wide economic conditions. The only specific remedial legislation he recommended was a measure to prohibit investment of insurance funds in stocks of banks and other stocks subject to assessment.

Moody, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Two cows and two heifers perished early today in a fire which leveled a large barn owned by Maurice Mager. A new automobile, a large amount of hay and farm implements were also destroyed. Damage was estimated at between $5,000 and $6,000. Flames spread to a nearby dwelling but were quickly extinguished before much damage resulted to the building. The diameter and circumference of the earth were calculated by Eratosthenes—a Greek—240 years B. C.

TRIFLING CITIZEN HERE TO BE PUT TO TRIAL

Breach of Promise Case Involving Well Known People To Be Heard in High School Hall.

For some time, it is alleged, one of our prominent citizens has paid more or less attention to a young and beautiful widow of this community; forgetting, or at least not heeding the advice of the immortal Mr. Weller to his son, Samuel, "to beware of viders."

He now claims that he was not serious in his attentions, and that he was in no way attached to the lady in question. Be that as it may, the widow became attached to him, and as he now seems to have lost interest in the matter, she has attached his property, which is a form of attachment he does not appreciate. The result is he finds himself defendant in a first-class breach of promise suit, and his questionable attitude will be given an airing in court in the near future.

The parties involved are so prominent that it is feared no ordinary court room would accommodate the vast crowd desirous of hearing the evidence, so the trial will be held in High School Hall Wednesday evening, January 28, under the auspices of Nutmeg Forest, T. C. L. and Masonic Social club for whose benefit the proceeds will be devoted.

The committee having the matter in charge has engaged E. V. Newton of the Newton Entertainment Bureau of Worcester to complete arrangements and personally conduct the trial, and there is sure to be fun without limit. The trial will be conducted according to regular rules of court procedure, and interesting and startling events are sure to develop.

Fastest Transport Plane Built for Army Air Corps

Dayton, O.—(AP)—A bullet-nosed monoplane, said to be the fastest transport ship in the world, has been completed for the army air corps. Built by the Detroit aircraft corporation, it has been timed in flight at 205 miles an hour though official figures will be determined in tests here at Wright field by army pilots. With places for a pilot and passenger, fuel tanks occupy most of the cabin with a gasoline supply claimed to be sufficient for a 2,500-mile flight and placing practically any military base in the United States or possessions in reach from a central point within 10 hours without stop.

The basic design is that of standard Lockheed planes similar to the one owned by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh but differing from it in being a high-wing cabin model instead of a low-wing open cockpit ship. It has a new type landing gear which does away with all but two exposed struts, a streamlined tail wheel, "pants" on the landing wheels, new motor accessories including a 10-1 supercharger, and changes in the cowling covering the single air-cooled motor. The circular fuselage tapers at the tail to a point so that the ship, minus its wings and landing gear, resembles a monster torpedo pulled along by the motor in its nose. Designed for transporting personnel and military supplies, the ship is not equipped with machine guns or other armament but would depend upon pursuit planes for protection in combat zones.

OTHER FELLOWS JOB
 The news story on another page telling of the visit of the Get-Together Club of the Cheney Mills to the plant of the Orford Soap Company to witness the processes of production of the famous Bon Ami cleanser, touches an aspect of American industrial life which very seldom receives a thought. Perhaps it might be called "The Social Side of Industry." If so the social side is the shadowy side.

have very considerable jingo elements on the same cause. Should the industrial and agricultural crisis in this country continue for a year or two probably we should have plenty of war wishers here as well. It would not be a very nice way to get rid of the jobless. Also it would cost enormously in money and in actual wealth. Probably the next great war would cost the United States fifty billions, twice as much as the last one.

We submit these unpleasant reflections to those folks who think that we must, at any cost of human suffering, muddle through the mire of depression without any lightening of their pockets.

If the heavy tax paying class in the United States were to be directly faced by the frank alternative of getting rid of employment by the conversion of several billions of the nation's capital to a peaceable solution of the problem, or getting rid of it by the process of war at a cost ten times as great, they would probably abandon the notion that you can buy a ten dollar machine for a penny. We may have to build some pretty expensive machinery to bring about a real stabilization of employment and business. We submit that it will be preferable to the process of war, any way you look at it.

more than doubtful that they are the best possible three for the job.

DOUBLE JEOPARDY
 This newspaper has never been convinced that the repeal of the state liquor enforcement act, which some opponents of prohibition in Connecticut are advocating, would be a wise proceeding. If, however, we are to have any more cases like that of the Saybrook rum runners there will be plenty of demand for such a repeal; and those who urge that action will not be lacking in good grounds for argument.

This is the case where the State Police, instead of notifying the federal authorities that the landing of a rum ship at Saybrook was to be expected, devoted several weeks of their time to watching for the vessel and then staged a big raid in which 28 men were arrested and the ship seized.

Now the state has prosecuted these men, convicted them and fined them. And promptly, in the court room, the federal authorities have arrested each of them over again and plan to prosecute them in turn for the identical offenses for which Connecticut law has already punished them.

If this is the way the state enforcement act is going to operate, if it is to carry with it double jeopardy for offenders prosecuted under it, then the advocates of repeal are liable to find plenty of supporters.

Perhaps, however, a better solution would be legislative action restricting the State Police to the duties for which they were organized, which distinctly was not to usurp the duties of the Coast Guard in the essentially federal business of preventing rum smuggling from abroad.

Health and Diet Advice

SOME RULES IN THE CURE OF TUBERCULOSIS

In the treatment of tuberculosis it is well to remember that the lungs act as eliminative organs to throw out poisonous gases. The other three channels of elimination for bodily toxins are the skin, kidneys and bowels. In order to rest the lungs from their burden of acting as an eliminative organ it is well to increase the throwing out of toxins through all of the other excretory channels.

Sunbathing and sponge baths help in aiding skin elimination. A patient should drink plenty of water to supply the kidneys with plenty of fluid for their work. The bowels must be kept open with enemias if the patient does not have at least two bowel movements daily. Energy should not be wasted spending too many hours at brainwork or study, and thus using up too much energy through the mental processes, which energy is needed in the physical body to digest and assimilate food or to be used in taking the necessary physical exercise. Vital energy should not be wasted through outbursts of temper or through any of the other destructive emotions.

I have found it advisable to exclude milk, starches and sugars from the diet of the tubercular. Daily sunbaths are especially beneficial when the lungs are affected by tuberculosis. Every avenue for the waste of nervous energy must be conserved and the patient must practice various means for increasing his strength. A certain amount of rest, especially during the afternoon or when there is any rise of temperature is essential at the beginning of the cure.

The sleeping quarters should be where the air is fresh but not cold enough to be irritating to the delicate lung tissue, for the virtue of the fresh air lies in its abundance of oxygen and not in its temperature. The patient should not become over heated. And it is not good to lie in the sun for too long so that the body becomes unduly warm.

The patient should not be discouraged because of the loss of weight necessary at the beginning of the treatment, as a vigorous elimination of toxins is essential at the start and the weight will come only when the disease is overcome and the building up process begins.

The calisthenic exercises should consist mostly of the "setting up" exercises. All exercises of the arms and chest should be avoided. When the fever is not high a short walk should be taken and this should be increased gradually each day as the strength permits. No other exercise is as fruitful of good results as walking for gaining the stamina which is necessary for overcoming tuberculosis. Complete daily regimen tomorrow.

NO CHARITY
 Our neighbor, the Middletown Press is typical of a very large and distinct body of editorial expression when, speaking of the reduction or cancellation of war debts, it says:

Few believe, however, that their country is ready for such an exhibition of consideration for the troubles of others. At least, not at present. But there is a growing conviction, disclosed by the constant discussion, that the wisdom of such action should at least invite consideration.

What merit is there in thus camouflaging the situation? It strikes us as something very like hypocrisy to talk about reducing or cancelling the war debts out of "consideration for the troubles of others." Consideration for the troubles of others has nothing whatever to do with the advocacy of debt revision by such business authorities as Chairman Wiggin of the Chase bank. Debt cancellation is being advocated right now solely out of consideration for the troubles of the United States of America, which is discovering that the mere collection of all the money in the world would do it no good whatever if, thereby, world trade were to be utterly paralyzed.

It was through no especial softness of heart, no maudlin pity for suffering Europe, that many Americans—including this newspaper—years ago advocated practical or actual cancellation; it was through a lively sense of the evils to America bound to result from a stubborn attempt to collect them—some of which we are now experiencing.

If the United States in the end finds itself under the necessity of chucking those debts into an international jackpot for the restoration of the world's economic stability, let us at least be sporting enough to admit that we are making the contribution for our own good as much as anybody's and not take the name of Sweet Charity in vain.

IN NEW YORK
 New York, Jan. 14.—Opening a book that arrived with the customary bundle of Christmas presents, I turned carelessly to a page and began to read:

"Just about the time a man learns the size of his shoes, he dies at the age of 65."

It was a paragraph in Kin Hubbard's annual Christmas booklet.

The strange part of it, this just about writes that philosophical humorist's own biography.

A group of vaudeville folk stood, as usual, not far from the stage entrance of the Palace Theater, which is every variety player's goal. They had been bumming dimes for some hours. Toward the late afternoon, one of their kind walked up. He was looking well fed and slightly prosperous. He was one of those acrobats in one of those program opening tumbling numbers. Word buzzed around that he had had but a couple of small out-of-town engagements in several months.

"How do you manage to look so prosperous?" asked a hungry actor.

"Well, I might as well confess—there was a midget act on the bill. And we ate the midgets."

Off and on, we have been writing pieces about the various swanky and expensive parties which have helped keep money in circulation.

But the last word at concerns a holiday gathering held at Wilmington, Del., by the Du Ponts. This fabulously wealthy family wired New York and retained Guy Lombardo and his band. And the cost, I am told was $6000.

Pretty soft, no—a few jazz rhythms for six thousand berries?

And speaking of this Lombardo, there's a lad who brought himself and his players out of obscurity in less than three years. They came down from Canada, where they titled themselves the Royal Canadians, and got a job in a little known night resort in Chicago.

Three months after he reached New York, as leader of a hotel band he had been signed up by a tobacco concern for a radio program. The players have not changed. There are, of course, the three brothers—Guy, Carmen and Lebert.

One of Broadway's beggars is quoted as saying that things are so tough that he takes I. O. U.'s, now.

Radio's latest headlines on the big circuits are two gents who call themselves Gene and Glenn, and they've come to the "big town" from Cleveland. There they were gabbled up as the only act on the air that had a chance to equal the great success of Amos and Andy.

The applause of the middle west was heard some weeks ago, when WEAF's scouts trotted them to the Manhattan 26-station tie-up.

And just by way of introduction, since your likely to hear from them a great deal soon, they are Gene Carroll and Glenn Rowell. The characters they have created are Jake and Lena—that is Gene plays both these roles, and the straight part of himself, while his partner thumps the piano and sings. They were entertainers and theater duffers for some time before catching on as broadcasting attractions, with Chicago as their pioneer stamping ground—even as Amos and Andy.

POWER BOARD
 The Senate seems to have been clearly defeated in its attempt to reopen the matter of the approval of the nominations of three members of the federal Power Commission after they had taken office and begun the performance of their duties. President Hoover has obtained a complete tactical victory over the Senate in this instance. Whether it is a strategical victory or not is another question.

It is very much to be doubted whether the Insurgent and Democratic senators who voted to ask the President to resubmit the names of the commissioners to the Senate would have him so well pleased to have him comply as they are with his refusal, backed up, as it has been, by a somewhat superfluous enthusiastic defense of the commissioners and of their action in displacing two subordinate officers who have been especially active in what was at least an apparent effort to block corporate aggressions upon the rights of the country.

What the Senate coalition wanted, in this case, was campaign material to be used next year against Mr. Hoover. It seems to have gotten it, for one may be sure that all the unpleasant implications in this case have been carefully filed away for use in 1932.

We are still of the opinion that the wisest course for the President would have been, while denying absolutely the right of the Senate to call back these nominations, to let the controversial commissioners know that their resignations in the interest of harmony would be acceptable. Surely these three are not the only trio of men in the country capable of serving on the power commission; in view of their peculiar attitude toward the subordinates in the case it is perhaps

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
 (Mental Poisoning)
 Question: W. L. J. asks: "Is there such a thing as mental poison? If so, will you explain the process from the brain to the nervous system?"
 Answer: There is no doubt that destructive emotions, such as worry, anger, fear and anxiety will produce poisonous substances within the blood. I have written numerous articles dealing with the value of a mental calmness for maintaining health. It is believed that the ductless glands are active in the formation of some of these toxic substances. This is your room for mental scientific investigation about "mental poisons."

(Eggs)
 Question: E. M. writes: "I wish you would write something about eggs—when they should be eaten only when strictly fresh, or not at all. This subject is a continued bone of contention in our home. Dad seems to think that store eggs are all right, while I emphatically do not."
 Answer: Eggs should be as fresh as possible, although in cold storage eggs may be preserved in good condition for a long time. During the cold weather store eggs may remain in a wholesome condition much longer than in summer. Any bad odor or unusual appearance of the egg should cause it to be discarded.

(Plants in Sick Room)
 Question: Reader asks: "Will you please tell me if house plants are in any way injurious to a sick person?"
 Answer: Most green leaf plants are not injurious to a sick person; in fact, during the day they throw off oxygen and are really beneficial. However, the odor from some flowering plants may be oppressive to the patient. At night a small amount of carbon dioxide is thrown from the leaves of plants, but not enough to be injurious.

ONE SURE WAY
 There is one very sure way of curing unemployment. It will always be possible to get rid of the unemployed by burying them. Of course it would be in conformity with human custom to kill them first. And again human custom would require that they be killed in such a way as not to too greatly shock the sensibilities of the survivors and not to react too dangerously upon their political leaders. That way is easily at hand in the form of war.

When a number of countries, in the past, have found themselves with a lot of idle men on their hands, instead of applying themselves to the problem of correcting economic lesions so that there would be jobs for all hands, they have generally solved the puzzle by going to war with each other. After the rumpus was over there has generally been something for every pair of hands to do because there were so few pairs of hands left and so much destruction to be replaced.

According to available information there is a very considerable element in Germany right now in favor of that kind of a solution of the unemployment situation. The youthful Hitlerites know nothing about war at first hand but they know a great deal about joblessness and they are in a mood to resort to the former in order to get rid of the latter.

VETERANS' HOSPITALS
 Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP.)—Jobs for able bodied veterans, as well as hospitals for their less fortunate comrades, will come from the Veterans Bureau building program.

Pending projects call for an outlay of $10,000,000 during the next three months and the bureau estimated today that 4,100 men will be employed. In calling for bids, it is asking the contractors to give preference to veterans and to local labor. The request is accompanied, however, by a warning that the employment of veterans must not be made the basis for claims of increased construction costs.

Many of the contractors themselves are veterans, the Bureau estimating that upwards of 60 per cent of the bidders once bore arms. Labor on various Bureau projects runs from 40 to 60 per cent veterans.

 Representation through reapportionment on the basis of the 1930 census simply because of those aliens seem to me to have a very clear case.

"I don't think the amendment will receive much consideration at this session, but it is going to be a very live subject. The people are just beginning to catch on. Most of the various states with large alien populations limit representation to citizenship. New York state, for instance, explicitly excludes aliens from its inhabitants who are to be represented. But New York gets three or four more congressmen than it should have, taking them from other states, because it has so many aliens."

"Perhaps 25 congressmen are now allotted to states with large alien populations, whose seats really belong to states where American citizens are in large proportion to the number of unnaturalized aliens. And as matters stand now, it is quite easy to imagine the aliens living in one large city—unable themselves to cast a vote—to decide who shall be president of the United States. For the aliens are also represented in the electoral college. I don't see how any loyal citizen can oppose the amendment."

Many States Would Lose
 Using the 1920 census figures, Capper says his amendment would have caused the loss of one or more congressmen to New York, Massachusetts (2), California, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. States which would have been one congressman to the gain one or two through reapportionment—were Kansas, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma. The effect of the Capper amendment, using 1930 census figures, has not yet been computed by states.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER
 BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer.

Washington.—Those "backward states" that Senator Joe Grundy of Pennsylvania used to talk about are now coming to the fore in the House of Representatives and consequently in the electoral college. It is being cheated in those bodies. Capper is a publisher of many publications with wide rural circulations and has long devoted himself to agricultural interests.

Thus far he is the most conspicuous figure in the ranks of those who would amend the constitution so that representation in the House would be based on the number of citizens rather than the number of persons in any state. He is the author of such an amendment, now pending before the Senate judiciary committee.

"If ever there was just cause for a constitutional amendment, we have it now," Capper says. "I don't see how anyone can contend that unnaturalized citizens are entitled to representation in the House at the expense of American citizens in other states who are thereby deprived of their proper share of it. The large cities, with alien populations, have thus far shown opposition of course, but the states—mostly agricultural states, such as Kansas, which lose one—who lose representation through reapportionment on the basis of the 1930 census simply because of those aliens seem to me to have a very clear case."

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, on the other hand, admits that the west may get the best break in the Senate but says that, because of the present system which permits representation of aliens in the House of Representatives and consequently in the electoral college, it is being cheated in those bodies. Capper is a publisher of many publications with wide rural circulations and has long devoted himself to agricultural interests.

Republican leaders have urged the appointment of Representative Franklin Fort, above, of New Jersey, to the White House secretaryship that is being vacated by George Akerson. A former secretary of the Republican National Committee, Fort was defeated by Dwight W. Morrow for the Republican senatorial nomination in New Jersey last year.

ROCKVILLE

Albertus Morgan proved himself a real hero when he saved four boys, ranging from the ages of ten to twelve years, from drowning in the pond in the rear of the Leader office on Tuesday afternoon about 7 o'clock. The boys were Joseph Kawalewski, Roy Prentiss, Joseph Rich and Frank Mack. Two other boys, Richard Gworek and Herbert Lee, were also in the party but they escaped with wet feet.

Morgan who is about twenty-five years old, is employed as a railroad section hand and was nearby when the accident occurred. As soon as he saw their predicament he immediately got a large iron hook and assisted them one by one to the bank. This was no easy task. The last of the four saved was young Kawalewski, who was under the ice some minutes before he could be brought in.

While the good work of Mr. Morgan was going on, "Bill" Smith who figured in several rescues during the summer was employed as a railroad section hand and was nearby when the accident occurred. As soon as he saw their predicament he immediately got a large iron hook and assisted them one by one to the bank.

The boys in their excitement reported that still another boy was in the pond, and Kenneth E. Sullivan, managing editor of the Leader, immediately called the telephone operator who assisted him in sending the Fire Department officials and members, Police Captain Tobin and Dr. J. E. Flaherty to the scene. The latter immediately took the boys to their homes and medical attention was given at the Assistant Fire Chief William Conrady, Carl Conrady, Charles Feistel, Henry Walker, members of the department and Carl Lemek were the first on the scene and they were later joined by Fire Chief George E. Milne, who dragged around the section where the accident occurred, until dark, but with no results.

In checking up the authorities now believe that all boys have been accounted for, and no child had been reported missing from home up until a late hour.

Albertus Morgan is being highly commended by those who were at the scene of the accident, as he risked his own life for others.

The quick response of the firemen and officials and their excellent work in assisting in dragging the icy waters at the risk of their own health, shows these brave men are always at the service of the people of the community.

The boys have been warned constantly of the danger of playing on the ice, but the warning was not heeded.

Injured in Accident
Andrew Neel of 35 Park street, foreman of the diving department at the Springville mill of the Hockanum Mills Company and Mrs. Neel are confined to their home as the result of injuries received when the auto in which they were riding skidded on the slippery road in Danielson on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Neel were on their way to Pawtucket, R. I., when the accident happened. The auto fell over on one side, pinning Mr. Neel, who was driving, underneath the car and it was nearly half an hour before he could be released. He was found to have a broken elbow, a scalp wound and internal injuries. Mrs. Neel was badly bruised and shaken up.

A pet bull dog also figured in the accident and has two injured paws, which are receiving medical care.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

The meeting opened with flag ceremony and opening exercises led by Senior Patrol Leader T. Cowles. A short patrol meeting followed...

Attendance of late has been well with the exception of the Panther patrol. $1.10 was collected in dues and this helped to defer expenses on the past hikes.

Last Saturday the troop had a swell hike to Bolton Notch pond where skating and hockey games were enjoyed by the 14 scouts who attended.

Scouts who are second class or higher in rank can now have access to the troop's merit badges pamphlets which have been bought for this purpose.

We are very sorry to hear that our Assistant Scoutmaster Edward Lewis has been having bad luck and ill health lately and hopes that he will speedily recover and return as he has proved invaluable as a leader and has been missed greatly at the past several meetings.

There will be swimming for boys in the troop and leaders over night this week either Wednesday at 8:15 at the Rec. All boys will be notified in advance by patrol leaders.

to secure his own happiness in his own way, so long as he does not interfere with like rights of others or the recognized sanctions of society...

Attacking "Federal agrandizement" Governor Ritchie said "the surprising thing is that this tendency should have progressed so long and extended so far without being halted by a demand that the country return to the safe harbor of the constitution and the bill of rights and that we be free men and free women again."

Machine Age The replacement of men by machines, he said, has resulted in an increased flow of goods from our factories, with a consequent need for additional export trade.

With these factors contributing materially, unemployment has become greater than ever before, and of what aid is it, let me pause to ask, that our country is dedicated to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" if our men and women are without employment which is necessary for food, lodging and self-respect?

Up To Business "Sometime, somehow the problem of unemployment will be answered," said Governor Ritchie. "What necessary now is for business to recognize that primarily the problem belongs to it and not the state. It should work out and take over the problems of labor turnover and involuntary unemployment. Industry should evolve its own forms of prevention and put the burden of this on its own economic surplus."

Any, I enter upon my fourth term as governor with the conviction that in spite of drought and depression our future will be even more glorious than our past. There is so much that can be done to make this a greater and better nation and more and more being done. In the doing of it I like to see that Maryland is both an example and an inspiration.

Here we believe that government should mind its own business. We believe that the people who are the least governed are best governed. We think you cannot make people temperate by passing a prohibition law and that you cannot make industry prosperous by putting up a tariff wall which drives manufacturers to other countries. We do

TRADE SCHOOL SYSTEM FAVORED BY PAINTERS

New Britain, Jan. 14.—(AP)—F. C. Pitsch, president of the Connecticut Council, Inc. of the International Society of Master Painters and Decorators, Inc., stressed the importance of the state trade school system at the opening of the 24th annual convention of the council in this city today.

The annual report of the international vice president, E. M. Walsh, of New Haven, was read. Representatives of the paint and allied manufacturers spoke this afternoon. A reception to officers and delegates will be held this evening.

destroyed and it was feared that some of the inhabitants may have been killed. Then the volcano belched flame and smoke hurling rocks down upon the fleeing populace. One of them struck a fifteen-year-old girl who was killed. Her younger brother was reported missing.

It was in this same region that earthquakes and landslides struck on Christmas eve, destroying one of the little villages in the Andes foothills. Relief parties organized here were on the way to the stricken areas.

TO CURB BORERS

Washington, Jan. 14.—(AP)—An appropriation of $210,000 for control and prevention of the European corn borer was added to the agriculture supply bill today by the Senate appropriations committee, in reporting the House-approved measure to the Senate.

Other additions included $30,000 for tobacco market news service; $50,000 for blaster rust control in the National forests; $28,000 for Bureau of Plant Industry investigations of the production of annual crops of high quality fruits; $10,000 for field laboratory for naval stores research work; and $10,180 for airway work by the Weather Bureau from Boston to Washington, D. Huge Paintings for Los Angeles Near Completion in London Studio

London, (AP)—Mural paintings, believed the largest produced in several centuries, have reached their final stage in the studio here of Dean Cornwell, American artist. But he still has a year's work ahead of him, although he and his assistants have been at the task since 1927.

The huge pictures are destined to be hung in the Los Angeles public library. They depict the colorful history of Southern California from the time of discovery, through the era of Spanish missions, the days of forty-niners, and finally the beginnings of the modern city.

The 250 figures in the series, each twice its natural height and all drawn to scale, have been finished. The task now is to transfer these to the big canvases that are to adorn the walls of the library. The commission must be finished by February, 1932.

"I must have sketched at least a thousand poses before I found the right ones to make the entire set move smoothly," said Cornwell. "All details had to be co-ordinated so the finished work would be decorative, instead of merely illustrative."

The set consists of twelve panels. The four large ones, each 40 feet square, show figures twice their natural height, the first depicting the era of discovery in the 16th century.

The second shows the mission age and the third the active colonization period, with the clipper ship, the covered wagon and finally the locomotive bringing settlers who push the Spanish element out of the far corner of the picture.

The fourth of the big panels portrays the beginnings of Los Angeles. The complimentary panels, eight in number, treat of the development of native arts and industries under the tutelage of the mission padres. Weaving, pottery making and olive culture are given treatment in these.

Cornwell was born in Louisville, Ky., 38 years ago. He started his art work on Chicago newspapers and married Mildred Kirkham of Evanston while both worked on the Chicago Tribune. Later he went in for magazine illustrating in New York.

RECEIVER APPOINTED

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A receiver was appointed today by Federal Judge F. G. Caffery for Schulte-United, Inc., a subsidiary of the Schulte cigar stores group and controlling a chain of ninety-seven stores dealing in men's and women's clothing.

Three creditors with aggregate claims of $3,000 filed a petition asking that the corporation be put into bankruptcy. Robert T. Lewis, attorney for Schulte-United 50-Cent to $1 Stores, Inc., joined in the request and the receiver was named without opposition after counsel for Schulte-United, Inc., said it was in need of a receivership to conserve assets for the benefit of creditors and stockholders.

He said the board had not asked for a receiver but he was authorized to approve the receivership motion. The petition for a receiver estimated assets of the corporation at $9,000,000 and liabilities at $16,000,000. The Irving Trust Company was named receiver.

DR. D. C. Y. MOORE HEADS RED CROSS CHAPTER

Local Quota in Drought Relief Stated As Being $4,000—Believe Mistake Made. Dr. D. C. Y. Moore was elected chairman of Manchester Chapter of the American Red Cross at the postponed annual meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce office yesterday afternoon.

A telegram from the National Red Cross headquarters announcing Manchester's quota to aid the drought stricken areas as $4,000 was read. It was felt by the members present that this amount was a mistake and should have been $400. The matter of raising the quota, after the correct figure had been ascertained, will be left to the chairman, who will call a special meeting of the chapter for the purpose. The nominating committee consisted of Dr. Robert Knapp, chairman; John L. Reinartz, and Mrs. Charles Holman.

PARTY LINES CHANGING IN FRENCH PARLIAMENT

Paris, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Political observers professed today to see a distinct party realignment in the Chamber of Deputies as a result of yesterday's election of Fernand Bouisson as president of the House for 1931. Parliament was not in session, Premier Steeg having warned off until Friday, sixteen interpellations one of which is concerned with the Oustric bank case and includes a charge that the government tried to block investigation of that scandal.

During the brief interim commentators renewed predictions that the Steeg Cabinet would not last long, pointing to Bouisson's election as an indication of strengthening party lines which may sweep the premier's support clear of the Left. Center allies which upheld him despite his acceptance of the Socialist support he must have for a majority.

Meanwhile there was an effort in the chamber itself to unite the Center groups in a strong concentration party. Today Foreign Minister Paul Reynaud issued a statement urging an entente between these groups and the Right Wing Radical Socialists, warning that "the peril today is a Socialist peril."

PYTHIAN SISTERS HERE SEAT THEIR OFFICERS

"Square Pies" Feature Luncheon During Social Hour—Mrs. Chambers In Charge.

Memoria Temple, Pythian Sisters, seated its officers for 1931 at its meeting in Odd Fellows hall last evening. Guests from Damon Temple of Rockville were present. The ceremony was in charge of District Deputy Mrs. Frances Chambers, who is the present senior of the grand lodge. Past Chiefs Mrs. Annie Alley and Mrs. Gladys Clarke assisted Mrs. Chambers. At the conclusion of the installation Mrs. Myrtle Armstrong presented a gift to Mrs. Chambers in behalf of the Temple and Mrs. Chambers gave small tokens of remembrance to her aides.

The officers are: Past chief, Mrs. Sarah DeVarney; most excellent chief, Mrs. Mamie Dickinson; senior, Mrs. Iva Ingraham; junior, Mrs. Helen Henry; manager, Mrs. Cross Samlow; secretary, Mrs. Mary Hills; guard, Mrs. Sigrid M. Dean; captain of the degree staff, Mrs. Gladys Clarke; pianist, Mrs. Ada Peckham; representative to the grand lodge, Mrs. Myrtle Armstrong; alternate, Mrs. Annie Alley. There were three years, Mrs. Annie Weeder and Mrs. Ada Peckham.

The social committee under the direction of Mrs. Carrie Samlow served a buffet lunch after the business, a feature of which was the serving of "square pies," which were made for the first time yesterday by one of Manchester's newest industries located in the former Herald building on Hilliard street. The Pythian Sisters were therefore the first organization in town to make use of these tasty portions so convenient for group serving. They were neatly wrapped up in wax paper and square pasteboard containers, labeled according to the fillings, which in the assortment last night included cherry, raisin, pineapple, lemon, apple and mince. They created quite an interest among the women and many favorable comments were made about them.

NO SALARY FOR JOB

Norwalk, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Attorney Cramer C. Hegeman got a job from the City Council last night — but the appointment had its complications.

The vote to choose him for the clerkship of the Small Claims Court was 9-3. Councilman Rufus J. Smith objected, having suddenly realized that he had voted the wrong way. Instead of a 4-4 tie, which Mayor Anson F. Keeler would have dissolved by voting against Hegeman, Councilman Smith's miscalculation upset the apple cart.

And then the council deprived the job of any salary. On a motion to authorize the board of estimate to meet and appropriate $1,500 as salary for the clerk of the Small Claims Court, Mr. Smith voted to his own satisfaction, the 4-4 tie resulted and the mayor broke the deadlock by voting down the motion. Attorney Hegeman doesn't know whether or not he wants the job today.

Murder At Bridge

by ANNE AUSTIN author of "THE BLACK PIGEON", "THE AVEGING PARROT" and "MURDER BACKSTAIRS" ©1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

"BONNIE" DUNDEE is in New York investigating the murders of JUANITA SELIM and DEXTER SPRAGUE, and learns from SERENA HART, successful stage star, that Nita married in 1918, was soon deserted, but not divorced. In 1922, a picture of Nita appeared with a story about the suicide of ANITA LEE, which was syndicated in Hamilton.

Nita comes to Hamilton, after showing strange excitement over pictures of Hamilton people, and deposits $10,000 in cash, Dundee wonders if this were "back allomony" from a husband who had married after he thought she was dead. Four of Dundee's possible suspects married between 1922 and the time of Nita's death—JUDGE MARSHALL, owner of the death wheel; JOHN DRAKE, TRACEY MILES and PETER DUNLAP.

An attempt is made on Dundee's life by means of an ingenious mechanical contrivance, in order to prevent Dundee's telling, anyone what he has found out in New York, and Dundee immediately guesses that the other two murderers were mechanical too. At the Selim house, he finds that the gun was undoubtedly fired from a big bronze lamp with a spherical shade, which was connected with the wires leading to a bell in Nita's room, which rang in the maid's room in the basement. In the basement, Dundee finds traces of the connection, although the murderer has had opportunity to remove the more obvious traces of his work.

After he is fully confident he knows how Nita was killed, he drops in on PENNY CRAIN, who is playing bridge with her mother. Idly he forms with the wooden letters the names of all the guests at Nita Selim's unfortunate bridge party, and suddenly forms a new name. He now knows who killed Nita.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLVII "I fall to see any necessity for all this secrecy and hocuspocus," District Attorney Sanderson probed irritably. "Why the devil don't you come clean and give us the low-down—if you have it!—on this miserable business, instead of high-handedly summoning Captain Strawn to us both?"

Before Dundee could answer, Captain Strawn came to his assistance. "I worked with this boy for pretty near a year, Bill, and never yet did he fail to make good when he said he had a pot on to boil. If he says it will boil over this evening, provided we help him, boil over it will, or I don't know Bonnie Dundee.

"Sanderson scowled, but capitulated. "All right! What do you want?" "Thanks, Chief! And thanks, Captain!" Dundee cried, with heartfelt gratitude. "First, I want to be excused from attending the adjournment, and secondly, I want two murders, scheduled for three o'clock today."

"O. K.," Sanderson agreed shortly. "Second, after about an hour of routine stuff, I wish you'd ask for another adjournment, and for the time being, on the plea that important developments are expected today."

"O. K. again!" "Third, I'd like you personally to request the appearance of every each of the murders in your office this afternoon at four o'clock—so the whole bunch will be kept together and have no chance to go to their homes or anywhere else until I am ready for them. If you're unable to do this, I'll have to ask you to bring them during the investigations, you want to question everyone personally."

"Do you want all the servants brought here, too?" Sanderson asked. "None but Lydia Carr," Dundee answered. "After about an hour's innocuous questioning, please invite them to accompany you to the Selim house. For that—and he pointed to the pot which was scheduled to boil over. "I'd like everybody to be there by 5:15."

"Where do I come in?" Captain Strawn demanded, almost jealously looking for a New York gunner. "I suppose you have plenty of plainclothesmen at your disposal?" Dundee asked, and was instantly sorry he had reminded his former chief of the collapse of his cherished and satisfying theory.

"Plenty," Strawn answered gruffly. "How many will you need?" "Enough to keep every person on Mr. Sanderson's invitation list under strictest observation until—the pot boils over," Dundee replied.

"When do you want them to get on the job?" "As soon as they can do so, after you get back to your office."

"Are they to follow the whole gang clear out to the Selim house?" "Most decidedly! After the unwilling guests are safely within the house, your boys must guard the premises so that no one leaves without permission."

"That's all as good as done," Strawn assured him. "Now—about them inquiries you asked me to make yesterday of the secretary of the American Legion. He drew a scrap of paper from his breast pocket. "I find that John Drake, Peter Dunlap and Clive Hammond were all in service, in the 1st Division, which was held up late in January, 1918, for nearly two weeks in Hoboken, before the War Department could get transports to send 'em to France. Miles, who enlisted the day war was declared, was wounded and shipped home late in 1917. He was discharged as unfit for further service—spinal operation—from a New Jersey base hospital on Jan. 12, 1918. Furthermore, Judge Marshall was in New York the whole winter of 1917-18, attached to the Red Cross in some legal capacity. He donated his services and—" "All that doesn't matter now, Captain, but thanks just the same," Dundee interrupted. "Now if you will both excuse me, I've got a lot of work to do before five o'clock today!"

Dundee had not exaggerated. That Monday was one of the busiest days he had ever spent in all the 27 years of Dundee's life. He began rather strangely, by visiting half a dozen of Hamilton's hardware stores, exhibiting a peculiar instrument and making annoying inquiries as to when and to whom it had been sold. But at his sixth port of call success so completely rewarded his efforts that he was jubilant when he bade the mystified proprietor good day, a signed statement reposing in his wallet.

"Two other calls—both in office buildings—look up only an hour of his time, and a taxicab delivered him at police headquarters just as the factory whistles were sirening the news that it was 12 o'clock.

He was lucky enough to find the fingerprint expert, Carraway, in his cubbyhole of an office, his desk almost crowded out by immense filing cabinets. Five minutes later Dundee sat at that desk, photographs of Dexter Sprague's dead body, just as it had been discovered on the floor of the trophy room in the Miles home, and a labeled set of fingerprints spread out before him.

"You're sure there can have been no mistake?" Dundee asked. "No chance that these fingerprint photographs were reversed when the prints were made?"

"Not a chance—with my system!" Carraway retorted positively. "These prints are genuine. You take these photographs? . . . You have copies, I presume?"

"It was half-past two o'clock when Dundee, after a much needed lunch, parked his car in the driveway of one of the most splendid homes overlooking Mirror Lake—a home whose master and mistress were now attending an inquest into two murders. . . .

Half and hour later he climbed into his room, again, his head spinning. "Did I say ingenious?" he mumbled. . . . He drove directly to the Selim house, for he had much to do before the arrival of Sanderson's compulsory guests at 5:15.

His first visit there was to a small room in the basement—a dark cubbyhole next to the coal room. He had locked it carefully after exploring it the day before, if he said he had a pot on to boil. If he says it will boil over this evening, provided we help him, boil over it will, or I don't know Bonnie Dundee.

"Sanderson scowled, but capitulated. "All right! What do you want?" "Thanks, Chief! And thanks, Captain!" Dundee cried, with heartfelt gratitude. "First, I want to be excused from attending the adjournment, and secondly, I want two murders, scheduled for three o'clock today."

"O. K.," Sanderson agreed shortly. "Second, after about an hour of routine stuff, I wish you'd ask for another adjournment, and for the time being, on the plea that important developments are expected today."

"O. K. again!" "Third, I'd like you personally to request the appearance of every each of the murders in your office this afternoon at four o'clock—so the whole bunch will be kept together and have no chance to go to their homes or anywhere else until I am ready for them. If you're unable to do this, I'll have to ask you to bring them during the investigations, you want to question everyone personally."

"Do you want all the servants brought here, too?" Sanderson asked. "None but Lydia Carr," Dundee answered. "After about an hour's innocuous questioning, please invite them to accompany you to the Selim house. For that—and he pointed to the pot which was scheduled to boil over. "I'd like everybody to be there by 5:15."

"Where do I come in?" Captain Strawn demanded, almost jealously looking for a New York gunner. "I suppose you have plenty of plainclothesmen at your disposal?" Dundee asked, and was instantly sorry he had reminded his former chief of the collapse of his cherished and satisfying theory.

"Plenty," Strawn answered gruffly. "How many will you need?" "Enough to keep every person on Mr. Sanderson's invitation list under strictest observation until—the pot boils over," Dundee replied.

"When do you want them to get on the job?" "As soon as they can do so, after you get back to your office."

"Are they to follow the whole gang clear out to the Selim house?" "Most decidedly! After the unwilling guests are safely within the house, your boys must guard the premises so that no one leaves without permission."

"That's all as good as done," Strawn assured him. "Now—about them inquiries you asked me to make yesterday of the secretary of the American Legion. He drew a scrap of paper from his breast pocket. "I find that John Drake, Peter Dunlap and Clive Hammond were all in service, in the 1st Division, which was held up late in January, 1918, for nearly two weeks in Hoboken, before the War Department could get transports to send 'em to France. Miles, who enlisted the day war was declared, was wounded and shipped home late in 1917. He was discharged as unfit for further service—spinal operation—from a New Jersey base hospital on Jan. 12, 1918. Furthermore, Judge Marshall was in New York the whole winter of 1917-18, attached to the Red Cross in some upon the widened brown eyes of Penny Crain! "Dad!" the girl breathed; then, joyously: "Oh, Dad! You've come home!"

But Dundee halted the reconciliation with a stern word of command. "Please join the group in the corner, Mr. Crain!"

Regardless of the ensuing hubbub Dundee strode into the dining room, where Tracey Miles stood at the sideboard, pouring whiskey from an almost empty decanter into a small glass.

"May I drink the Scotch Tracey has poured for me, Dr. Dundee?" Mrs. Dunlap asked shakily, leaning against the big round table.

"Yes, but—silence, please!" he cried, as there came the first faint, tinkling notes of Juanita, from Nita's musical powder box, penetrating the thin wall between the bedroom and dining room.

"As I have said," the detective spoke loudly and clearly above the tinkle of music, "everything is now exactly as it was when Nita Selim was murdered! Permit me to show you all how that murder was accomplished!"

A chair at the bridge table was overturned. Lois Dunlap almost choked on her drink of Scotch. Women screamed. In a few seconds every person in the living room, including the district attorney and Strawn, was huddled in the wide opening into the dining room. Their eyes fixed in horror upon Bonnie Dundee.

He spoke again, his voice very clear, but slow and weighted with a dreadful significance: "Mrs. Dunlap, step on the bell beneath the dining table!"

Lois Dunlap dropped the empty whiskey glass, her pleasant face going blank with amazement. "Step on that bell, Mrs. Dunlap—just as you did before!"

As if hypnotized, Lois Dunlap began to grope with the toe of her right pump for the slight bulge under the rug which indicated the position of the bell used for summoning the maid from the kitchen. With a strange cry Tracey Miles lunged across the few feet which separated the woman and himself, seized her arm and whirled her violently away from the table.

"Do you want to kill my wife, too?" he panted, his usually florid face the color of putty. (To Be Continued)

Girl Author Hopes To Pay College Costs By Writing

Paxton, Ill. —(AP)—Thelma Lentz, 19, author of three novels, hopes to "write her way" through the University of Illinois. She expects to meet expenses of a college education through the sale of her writings. Just now she is finishing a fourth story. Miss Lentz was 16 when her first work, a story for young girls, was published. Three years before she sold a short movie scenario, but the company that bought it went bankrupt before it could be produced. Friends discouraged her, explaining they had "known people who had written for years and had nothing published."

THELMA LENTZ

"I told them you never knew till you tried," the girl said. "Imagine their surprise—and mine—when the first publisher accepted my first story."

"I write because I like it and because I need the money. When I enter Illinois next autumn I'll be entirely dependent upon what I can earn from writing."

"Some day I may write sophisticated novels, but for the present I prefer to stick to stories for young readers, because I know more about that."

Miss Lentz was reared, together with two brothers and a sister, by a widowed mother. Household facilities for a novelist were limited—and she wrote her stories with a pencil on a small board held in her lap.

Daughter of Lloyd George Sets Own Parliament Styles

London. —(AP)—Megan Lloyd George, like her distinguished father, is an individualist. Most of the women members of Parliament have adopted a sort of formal uniform which they wear on the floor—but not Megan. She dresses to please herself and is full of surprises.

Lady Astor, the first woman member of Parliament, started the uniform idea and for several years has worn dresses of dark blue or black with white collar and cuffs, and a close-fitting black toque, serviceable, but yet chic.

The Countess of Iveigh, Lady Noel-Buxton and Mary A. Hamilton have followed her example. But Miss Lloyd George, charmingly petite and youthful, appears dressed in gooseberry green, cerise and maroon.

Daily Health Service Hints on How to Keep Well by World Famed Authority

OVERWORK DURING THE DAY MAY BRING RESTLESSNESS AT NIGHT BY DR. MORRIS FISHBELN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

The speed of modern life is such as to drive human beings to their capacity of endurance. It seems doubtful that there is any complaint so frequently made as that of being tired. Physicians have come to realize that fatigue creates physical disturbance in the body, sometimes difficult to evaluate. Fatigue may be the result not only of too much physical action but also of too much mental action.

Dr. W. R. P. Emerson emphasizes the fact that the human being is the only animal that does not rest whenever there is an opportunity. The adult may realize the need of rest and create rules for his conduct to provide it. The child may not realize the need of rest and the adult must make sure that he gets the rest that he requires.

Physicians recognize the difference between physical tiredness and nerve tiredness. There are some physiologic tests of muscle tiredness, but so far as is known the evaluation of nerve tiredness must be a psychologic evaluation. The person who is nerve tired is irritable, his judgment is not to be trusted, he becomes careless in walking and in driving, so that there are more accidents after four o'clock in the afternoon than in the early morning.

The feeling of fatigue interferes with skill, with artistic appreciation, with attention, and with the ability to respond to stimulation. The person who overdoes during the day is restless at night; he cannot sleep because his mind is still occupied with the irritations. The approach of overfatigue is insidious. There may be headaches, nervous indigestion, pain in various parts of the body, an impaired memory and inability to concentrate.

Scientific medicine recognizes now that some people are dynamic and others sluggish. A dynamic individual drives himself to the point of exhaustion in an effort to accomplish his end. He reaches a state of exhaustion without realizing that he is tired.

The sluggish individual works on slowly and carefully and seems to be tired all the time. In an effort to establish the type, one may measure the basal metabolism, the vital capacity and study other physiologic reactions. Most important, however, is a study of the habits of the individual in order to determine his output of energy during an ordinary working day.

SNOW IN ATLANTA Atlanta, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A light snow began falling in Atlanta early today and the mercury sank to 28 degrees. The forecast said freezing temperatures would extend perhaps to the coast. Snow also was experienced for several hours yesterday in Little Rock, Ark., and blanketed the ground at Fayetteville, Ark.

ANOTHER SAFETY PLAN As a means of ridding streets and highways of unsafe automobile, the American Motorists Association is urging the adoption of compulsory automobile inspection. This inspection would assign unit cars to junk heaps.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Bartor. ©1931 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

Is the sweet old custom of reading aloud passing? I fear it is, and in case I am right I venture this opinion, that we are losing one of the strongest cables that ever bound the family bridge together.

Why is it? Are parents too busy or too tired to read to their children any more. Or simply too bored, too impatient? We shan't settle that here but like the jokester who couldn't swear over the telephone, "we can think, can't we?" Yes, we can think and do.

The children as a class are not being read to as they used to be. But perhaps not all these parents, who perennially play bridge or go to a movie or a dance or a night club at the expense of children's companionship are to be blamed, and incidentally I believe in recreation for parents absolutely. Aren't the children unwittingly robbing themselves of their parents' company by preferring the radio and the movie?

I believe it is as broad as it is long, perhaps a little broader, for it is only too true that many children consider their parents dull and boring compared to the wise cracks and crooning radio entertainers, and the eye-fests of the movies. And parents rather than the children are filled with a decided sense of uselessness and inferiority and say, "What's the use?"

Value in Radio and Films Again incidentally let me say that the radio and the movie have a decided place in the child's life. They learn from them both if intelligently chosen and administered. But the picture and the movie, which both parents and children are pulled away to opposite extremes without even a handclasp across this chasm. And how is the divine spark of family life so swiftly preserved without this hand-clasp, a meeting on common ground, an understanding and a sympathy in a mutual interest.

Believe that reading aloud is the happiest field for the establishment of an armistice. Fathers can read to their boys stories of new adventure, and very, very subtly work in occasionally those classics we wish them to hear and know about that they would not take the trouble to read themselves. But this is getting away from the argument and on to dangerous ground at that. For if the reading is suspected of containing medicine, even with a sugar coating, there may be a stampede.

The idea is companionship, and to that end I should select, if I were a father reading to my sons, or any parent reading to the entire family, the things of mutual enjoyment and interest.

That little hour after dinner before lessons, or company, might be set aside these winter evenings for the family reading hour. Like a plant sending out a new root, there will be a corresponding branch above in the sun. Reading together brings conversation. Ideas begin to run parallel, interests fall in line.

The hand-clasp across the gulf isn't it worth reaching for? The years pass and the children and the father will soon be too big. Or will they? Some of the most remarkable families of adults that I know read aloud to each other. One who can do it—one who can listen—marks of the gentleman and the lady.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

What accessories, I often am asked, are really necessary for the bath? Faced with reality, I must honestly answer that your own hands to scrub with, a good soap, water and a towel actually are all you really need.

However, most of you are used to at least a washrag. Moreover, your face, neck and ears with your bare hands, you won't do a good job of it without one.

Therefore, washrags should be added to the necessities. Commercial washrags must be chosen for their suppleness and must be thin enough to let you get into your ears with them. Three folds of fine cheesecloth, stitched and bound together, make an excellent washrag. Nothing comes as close to the softness of old linen cloth.

In addition to the washrags, the majority of us, I must admit, like something in the way of a brush or a sponge to stimulate circulation while we scrub. Nothing is quite like the scrubbing mittens, if you get used to them. They are made of a fine sponge, cut in squarish mitten shape without a thumb and lined with cotton so you can get a good grip on them and they will not scratch your hands while you scrub.

The idea is to use them much the way a man uses a couple of military brushes, alternating the left and right hand in quick succession. They really stimulate the circulation, without scratching too much, and have been known to improve the texture of skin in a few weeks time. In addition to such mittens, there are many bath sponges, long-handled brushes and other bathing equipment that you may call necessities because you have found them suitable and usable. Manicure and pedicure brushes for the hands and feet, respectively, are of course to be included. Face brushes are a matter of individual taste. If you keep your skin perfectly clean, well massaged, you will not need one.

What size and kind of towel to use is an individual matter. I know some women who will not consider themselves bathed if they do not have one of the huge, Eurodo not have one of the huge, Eurodo not have one of the huge, Euro

Japanese make a cult of the bath that Americans might do well to copy. Not that they do not head and shower, but the rest of the world in our bathroom equipment. We are, but just how to make the most of all the loveliness that is ours in the name of modern plumbing and pastel coloring is our problem.

The Japanese scrub mightily with soap and brushes and rinse several times before they climb into the bathtubs for their soak, which is the last rite in the bath. There is no question but that they are clean before they begin.

Swiftest, Easiest Way To End Bilious Spell When you neglect those first symptoms of constipation—a bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness, the wheezy system soon suffers. Appetite lags. Digestion slows up. You become headachy, dizzy, bilious. It's easy to correct sluggish bowel action! Take a candy Cascaret tonight. See how quickly—and pleasantly—the bowels are activated! All the souring waste is gently propelled from the system. Regular and complete bowel action is restored.

Cascarets are made from pure castor, a substance which doctors agree actually stimulates bowel muscles. All drug stores have Cascarets. 10c.—Adv.

REMEMBERS HIS DOG

Chicago, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A dog owned by the late Dr. Garrett van Zandt, is going to lead anything but a dog's life.

This was revealed today by Attorney Harold Heitz, who made public in detail the specifications of the "Love Me, Love My Dog" will of Dr. van Zandt, who bequeathed an estate estimated to be worth between $60,000 and $100,000 to Miss Marie Alcheizer, provided she gave the same treatment to Rex as the animal had received from his master.

"Dr. van Zandt's attitude toward Rex was the same as that toward a human being," the attorney said. "The dog had his chair and plate at the table at meals. Spices and seasoning unpalatable to the dog were omitted from his diet. But otherwise he had course for course with the family."

Rec Five Overcomes Springfield In Final Quarter

McCann Leads Rally As Locals Win, 39-29

Visitation Leads Until Nadler's Eye Is Injured In Fourth Quarter; Dowd and Farr Take Leading Roles In Attaining Cherished Victory.

A final quarter spurt by the Recreation Center quieted paved the way for Manchester to defeat the crack Springfield Visitation Club here last night 39 to 29. The visitors took the lead at the start and in front until the Rec Five rallied over the final ten minute stretch.

"Hank" McCann was the spark-plug of the attack that carried Manchester to victory. He put on a burst of speed in the final quarter that had the visitors bewildered as they sought in vain to stop him. McCann's passing and pivoting were as good, if not even better than his shooting and that's saying something.

"Ding" Farr was also instrumental in the Rec rally, tossing in four baskets in the second half, the same total as McCann collected. Farr, in his usual elusive manner, slipped away free under the Springfield basket several times to score on neat passes from Holland, Waterman, McCann and Nye.

No one played better last night than Billy Dowd, especially during the first half when he kept the Rec in the running by spectacular long shots. Three heaves from Dowd's fingertips prevented Springfield from attaining a commanding lead in the first half which, thanks to Billy, ended 15-13 in favor of the visitors.

Crowd Not Excited
Although fast only in spurts, the game was interesting because of the closeness of the score. The crowd did not seem to get excited, however, until the Rec began to come to life in the final quarter. Then the fans began to cheer. Before that, one would have almost thought the gallery was composed of deaf and dumb mutes.

Springfield was one of the two teams to beat the Rec in an even dozen games and they brought down a strong team last night in anticipation of another victory. Even Jerry Conway was in the lineup. This had not been expected as Jerry was injured in an automobile accident while the Visitation was on a recent trip to Plymouth to play.

Finger In Eye
After leaving with a two point lead at halftime, the Visitation came back on the floor and scored three times before the Rec could end the rally. At this point, it looked like another defeat for the Rec but Waterman went back into the line-up at forward to play Charlie Nadler who had been doing the early second half scoring. A few minutes later Waterman somehow or other stuck a finger in Nadler's eye and two time out periods were necessary before Nadler could resume play. The eye was badly swollen and thereafter the Rec pulled steadily ahead.

Waterman is a mighty valuable member of the Rec team. Manager Clune could afford to part with any player before Waterman. The Hartford man is the backbone of the team, as they used to say about Ruth and the Yankees. "As 'Ward' goes so goes the Rec." He is not a particularly good shot, but has common sense enough to realize the importance of passwork. Often when in good scoring position he will pass to a mate rather than try to gain glory for himself.

Ouch, It Hurts!
Waterman is also a very strong defensive man. It takes a classy player to get away from Waterman for very many baskets. The only trouble with "Ward" is his inclination to occasional surges of rough play. Yet, he is so foxy and clever that he seldom gets caught. Most of his violations are committed when he knows the referee's back is turned. He can play as foul-less as any of them if the officiating is real strict. One amusing incident connected with the game came when one of the visiting players stood behind Waterman during the tap plays at center and plucked hairs from his back much to the discontent of Waterman. The Rec leader didn't exactly pull hairs but he did enough else of a different nature to more than balance accounts.

It was announced that the New Britain National Guard next Tuesday night. This is one of the best teams in the state and will be a warm favorite to defeat the locals. The contest will mark the Rec's first bid for state championship recognition against a club of first water. Saturday night the Rec will go to Branford.

Beat Better Boys' Club of North End In Overtime Battle.

The Better Boy's Club of the North End came south last night to be beaten by the Crescents in an overtime game 14 to 12. A very close guarding game was played by both teams and many long shots were the result. At the end of the first half the score was 8 to 4 in favor of the Boy's Club. Simon and Flavell played well for the losers while E. Smith played well for the Crescents. Bill Edmonson's long shot just before the final whistle won for the Crescents.

Schmeling-Stribling Title Fight In June

Site To Be Selected From Jersey City, Detroit Or Chicago; Contract Calls For Winner To Meet Carnera In September.

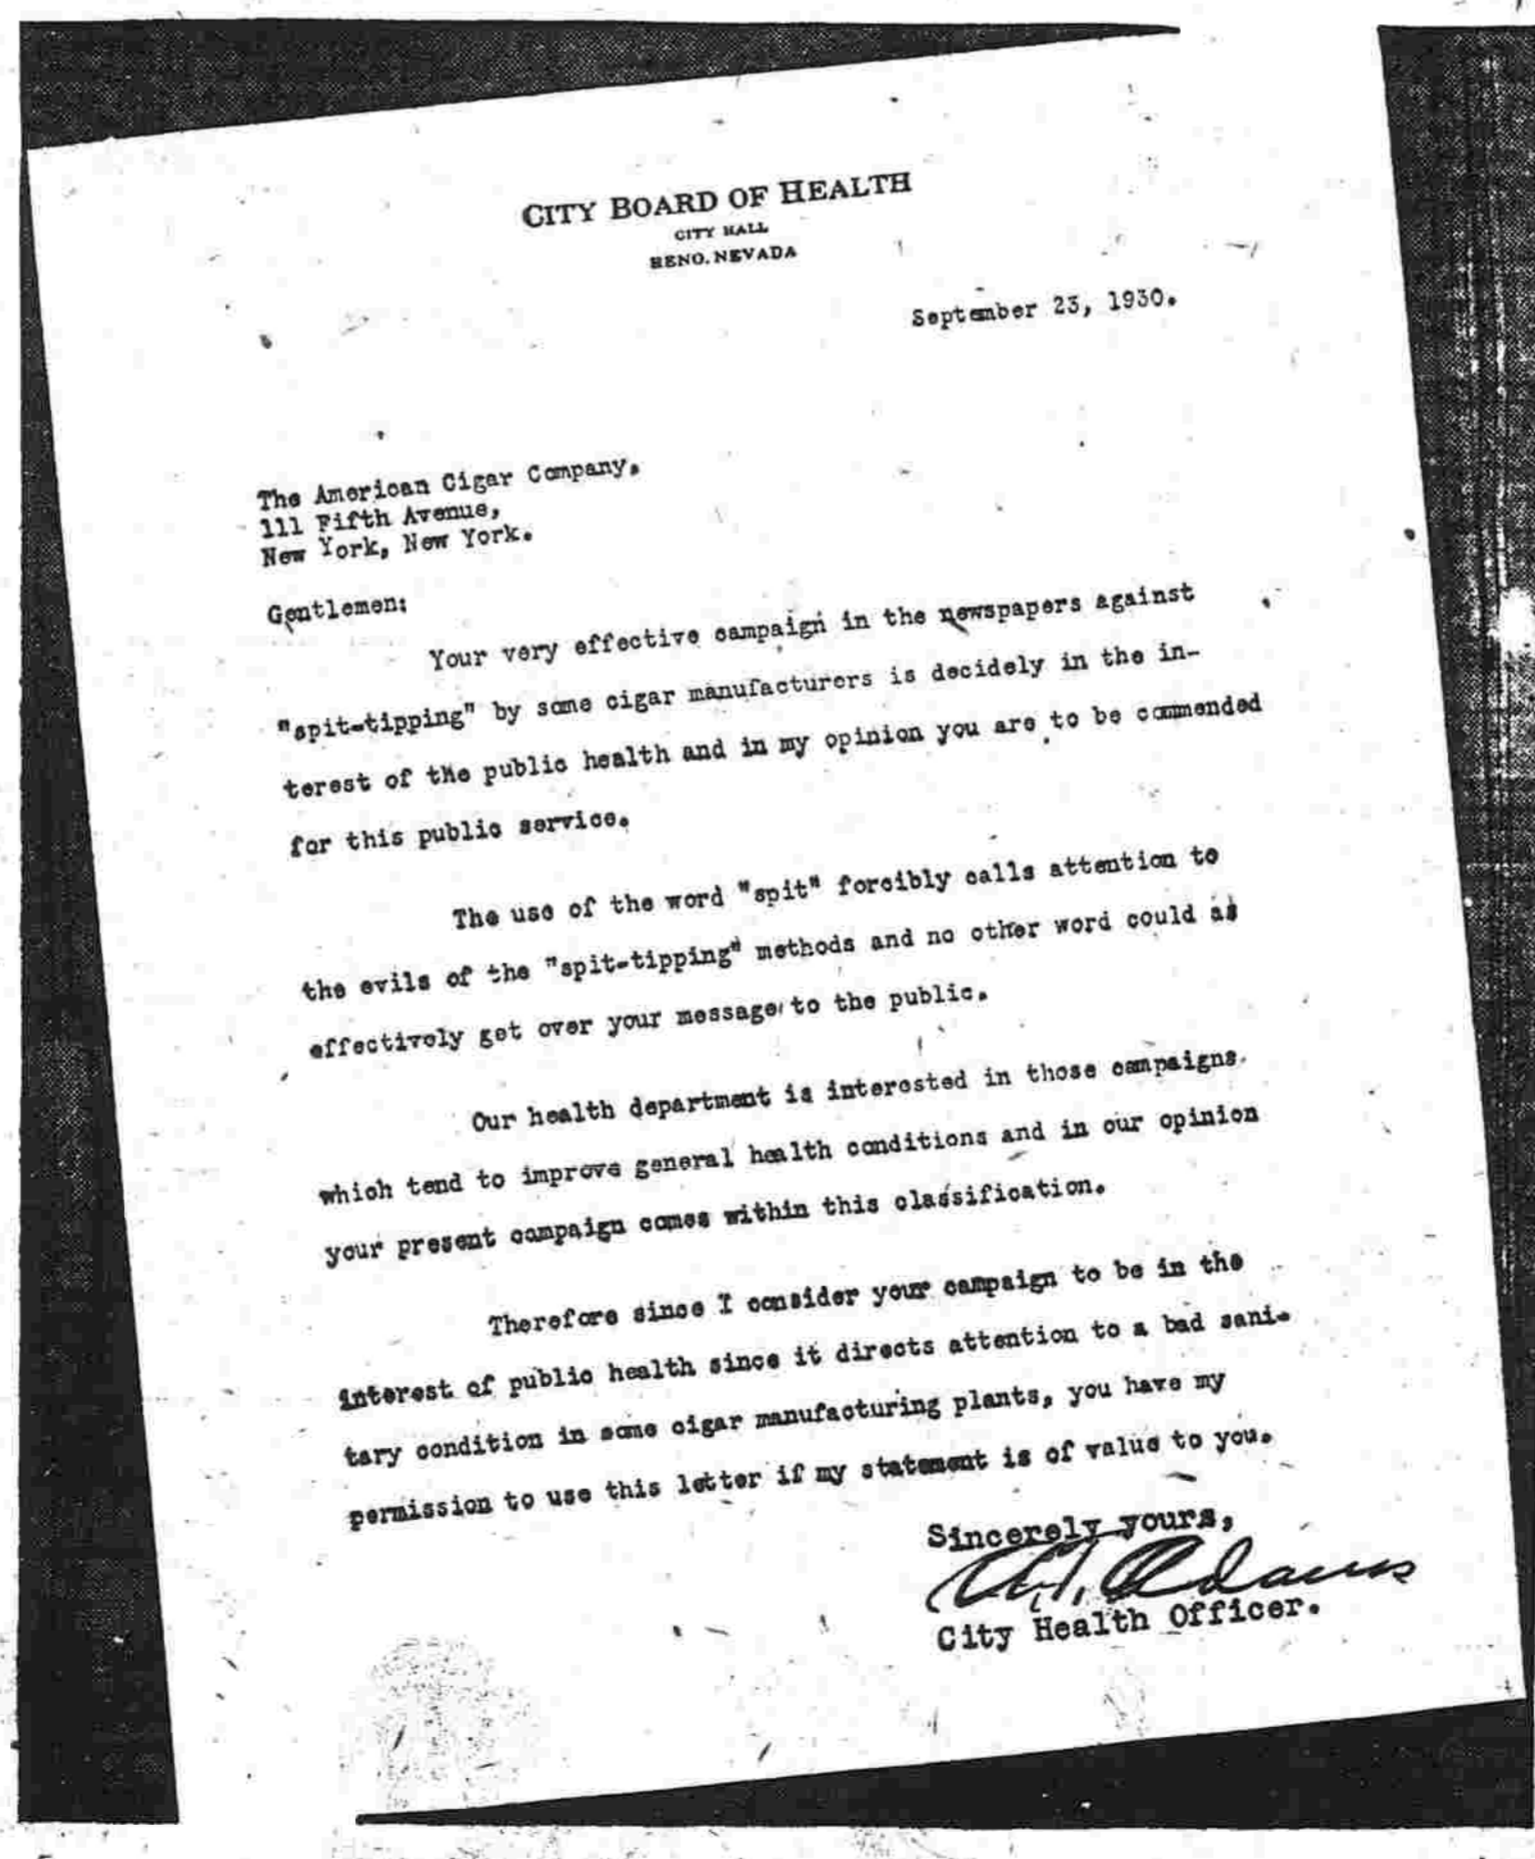

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Max Schmeling and W. L. (Young) Stribling have signed for a heavyweight title bout in June and thereby precipitated what developed into a bitter duel between the N. Y. State Athletic Association and Madison Square Garden Corporation.

Bill Carey president of the N. Y. Garden took so part in the proceeding in view of the commission rule forbidding promoters to deal with suspended boxers. Both Schmeling and Carnera are under ban in this state.

Carey insists however that the Illinois corporation is a separate, distinct organization and therefore eligible to negotiate with any boxer so long as there is no violation of the rules of the Illinois boxing commission. Whether the N. Y. commission would accept this explanation was considered doubtful by most observers.

SUN BEAU AGUA CALIENTE PICK

If Kilmer Horse Cops He'll Top Big Red's $341,665 Total.

BY CLAIRE BURCKY
NEA Service Sports Writer
From a window in a spacious building on Arthur B. Hapco's Calburn Stud Farm in Bourbon county, Kentucky, can be heard the long neigh of a big red colt. It's a familiar sound, yet all doesn't seem as it should be; there is an apparent note of worry in the shrill whinny.

Investigation would disclose that the neigh belongs to Gallant Fox, greatest money-winning horse of all time as interpreted by the thoroughbred neighings would give you the low-down:

"Yes, Big Red is a trifle concerned. You see, his ears have picked up rumors that Sun Beau has designs on his all-time money winning record."

"Big Red's father, Sir Galahad III, whose quarters are right next door, has frequently tried to allay the youngster's fears with nickers of assurance that Sun Beau will not detract from his record. Even if he does, reasons Sir Galahad III, this record will lack the luster of yours. You campaigned only two short seasons while he has been at it four years. Still, it is apparent that Sun Beau is something of a nightmare to Big Red."

Expert dope does say that Gallant Fox has cause to worry. All tips point to Sun Beau in the Agua Caliente Handicap March 22—and this in spite of the fact that the talented son of Sun Briar-Beautiful Lady must shoulder 129 pounds, and possibly more.

Seventy-two are eligible for the second renewal of the Agua Caliente event and the weights range from Sun Beau's 129 pounds down to 90 pounds which four horses have been assigned. Willis Sharpe Kilmer's horse must carry 13 pounds more than Mike Hall, Easter Stokings, Crack Brigade and Challenger II.

Three additional pounds will be fastened to Sun Beau's saddle if he attends the New Orleans Handicap and wins. However, those closely associated with his handlers say he is an inveterate New Orleans fan and concentrates on Agua Caliente.

Many have questioned Owner Kilmer's wisdom in naming Sun Beau for the Baja California classic. They see in him an undisputed champion during the 1931 summer and fall campaigns. Kilmer should allow him to rest up during the winter, they contend.

But Sun Beau is credited with winning $265,819 — and there's where the rub comes. A victory in Agua Caliente, $140,000 affair, would add $100,000 for the winner, will bring Sun Beau's winnings to something like $366,000. Kilmer wants to see his thoroughbred overshadow the records of $341,665 won by Gallant Fox; $335,340 won by Ksar, French walter horse of several years ago; and $313,638 won by Zev in national and international campaigns.

Sun Beau's training workouts at the Fair Grounds in Columbia, S. C., are encouraging. To W. A. (Doc) Crawford, his trainer, Doc has followed the horse that Owner Kilmer plans to retire him to the stud at his New Market, Va., farm; following his final dash from the barrier March 22. It would appear, then, that whatever plans Sun Beau has made with regard to ousting Gallant Fox as the leading money winner of all time must be carried out that day at Agua Caliente.

CAWLEY-DONALDSON
Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Donaldson of 64 Fairfield street announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eleanor T. Donaldson, to Henry Joseph Cawley of Danbury. The ceremony took place January 12 at the Marble Collegiate church on Fifth avenue, and was performed by the Rev. Albert A. Lehinger.

The bride was formerly employed by the Hartford Fire Insurance Company, and the bridegroom is connected with The Medical Journal Publishing Company in New York City, where the young couple will make their home.

by ALAN GOULD ~ ASSOCIATED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

Ever since William (The Duke) Muldoon, as a young man in his early seventies, began an iron-handed rule of pugilism in New York, it has been customary to make heavyweight fights as complicated as possible.

The Schmeling-Sharkey-Stribling fuss is mere kindergarten stuff compared to the robust days when Jack Dempsey did the gabbing and Tex Rickard did the matchmaking. Rickard pulled the strings then and the big bouts had a habit of coming off, properly ballyhooed, but even the Texan had his troubles with Muldoon and the other Dukes of the State Athletic commission.

For years the cudgels were wielded in behalf of Harry Wills, who had strong political backing in New York. Dempsey never "feared" Wills, as many supposed. In fact the old "Mauler" would have preferred to battle the giant negro instead of the more cautious, elusive and troublesome Mr. Tunney. Wills, in the opinion of many unprejudiced critics, never saw the day that he was the equal of either Tunney or Dempsey.

The commission tried to bar Big Jess Willard's comeback, afterwards adopting an age-limit rule of 40 to keep the Kansas giant from further ring activity in New York. The two Dempsey-Tunney fights were forced out of New York, to the greater profit of those involved. Tunney, although a home-town product, was treated somewhat shabbily by the solons, although the Marine finally waged his last championship fight in New York.

Lake Placid seemed to have benefited him notably and his play was strong and steady throughout the competition. As suggested, the darkness which kept him three puts at the final green kept him out of a tie with Turnesa.

Johnny's nerv's also must be in pretty good shape. Going up to his ball after a long drive from the fourteenth tee in the second round, Johnny found a small but authentic rattlesnake coiled in front of the ball.

Johnny nearly stepped on the reptile according to spectators' accounts, and one man insisted that the rattler "snapped" at Johnny. He that as a tamer, another spectator, claiming familiarity with the habits and methods of rattlesnakes, borrowed Johnny's trusty niblick and decapitated the snake neatly.

Perhaps it is easier to keep your eye on a snake's head than on a golf ball.

GAS BUGGIES—A Change of Luck

THE ABOVE NOTE FROM AMY STARTED HEM OFF ON A FRANTIC SEARCH FOR CAPTAIN FOGG, AND A JOB, SO HE WOULDN'T HAVE TO TELL AMY HORN HAD FREED HIM. 2-14

I CAN'T LOCATE THE CAPTAIN AT ANY HOTEL IN TOWN. DOGGONE!! WHY DIDN'T I GET HIS ADDRESS WHEN I WAS WITH HIM!

THERE'S NO USE TRYING TO EXPLAIN THINGS TO AMY IN A LETTER. SHE'D NEVER GET MY SIDE OF IT. I'LL HAVE TO GO TO UTOPIA.

IT MEANS LOSING OUT ON FOGG'S REWARD FOR FINDING HIS WALLET... BUT I CAN'T STICK AROUND TILL HE CALLS.

LIFE IS JUST ONE TOUGH BREAK AFTER ANOTHER WHY... CAPTAIN FOGG!

SENSE AND NONSENSE

We Present
A youth of distracting physique
Recast from Athenian mould;
A plastic creation,
A reincarnation
Of one of the heroes of old.

A vigorous, sinewy bloke,
Unsuited of cutis and limb.
Both ways from the middle
As fit as a saddle,
Carnera has nothing on him.

He rises each morn with the sun,
Infected with pepper galore,
Forgetting his bare shanks
He capers like Fairbanks
All over the bed chamber floor.

When choosing your favorite son
From all of the muscular lads,
Remember that cutie
Of masculine beauty:
The Guy in the Underwear Ads.

Imitation may be the sincerest form of flattery, but in business its chief appeal is price. That of the genuine is service.

"Mother, home and heaven," seems to be giving away in the cities to "man," "hotels" and "high-balls."

A Chicago woman came into a lawyer's office and said to him:
Woman—I want a divorce.
Lawyer—Certainly. For a nominal fee I will institute proceedings, and should experience little difficulty in procuring it for you.
Woman—What do you call a
"nomina; fee?"
Lawyer—Five hundred dollars.
Woman—Nothing doing. I can have him shot for $10.00.

Common sense is so uncommon.

The Dotted Line: Some people

Grandma—It doesn't do much good to spank a girl after she's eighteen, nowadays.
Grandson—No, Granny, but its

Truth always has its enemies.
Those who are afraid of it and those who misunderstand it.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

another—Credit is one thing the less of it you need the more of it you can get.

Patient—I say, doctor, don't you think it would be a good idea if I were to pack up and go to some place where the climate is warmer?
Doctor—Good heavens! Isn't that just what I've been trying to prevent?

Too many people have the habit of doing a thing twice to get it done once.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

There have been some doubts expressed about the weight of Bert Metzger, the tiny guard whose poundage was officially listed on the programs during the football season at 155.
Pop Warner said the young man looked like he might weigh around 168... others referred to him as "that 100-pound guard who really weighs 165."
A showdown was held before the
All-Star game in Los Angeles recently... Metzger jumped on the scales publicly and tipped the beam at 149½.
Brute Jonas, the great Utah center, ate five pounds of food at a recent banquet for the squad... Fifty-three players ate 85 pounds of turkey, plus 48 pounds of pork, ham and sausage... averaging two pounds of meat per man... and of course there were the trimmings.

LITTLE JOE

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Soon Clowny cried, "I feel in trim to take a dandy little swim. Let's all try splashing in the Falls. I'll bet it will be fun. Our bathing suits are in the truck and that's what I call real good luck." And, toward the truck the little fellow started out to run.

"Hey! Wait!" the Travel Man cried out. "The thought you have is fine, no doubt, but you can't swim in such a place. That water beats down hard. I'm positive 't would hurt you all. 'Tis best to stand and watch it fall. We want no accidents because our whole trip would be marred."

"He's right," said Scouty. "Not for me! Right here I'm safe as I can be. Come back here and re-main with us. You might get lost again." "All right," mopped Clowny with a grin. "The swim is off and I give in. I thought it was a dandy hunch, but I'm wrong, now and then."

Soon Carpy said, "Let's take a nike. We'll see some sights that we will like. Perhaps we still can have a swim. A river's right near by." "Why, sure," the Travel Man replied. And to the stream the whole bunch hied. It was the old Zambesi. Clowny heaved a little sigh.

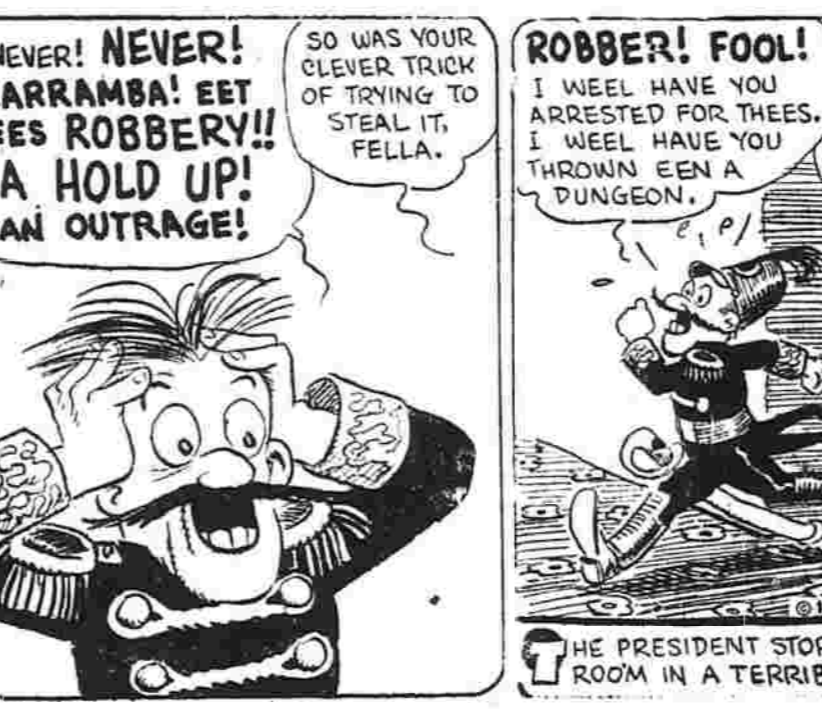

Said he, "That sure looks cool to me. And look, what is that, that I see?" The other Tines gazed down stream, and spied a queer canoe. A native maiden sat within. Upon her face there spread a grin. "She's friendly," said the Travel Man, "and coming this way, too!" The maiden paddled to the bank. The Travel Man said, "I will thank you, if you show these little lads the bracelets that you wear." She smiled and held her arm out straight. Wee Scouty cried, "Gee, they are great! I never saw so many and I'll bet they all are rare."

(The Tinymites camp out among the Zambesi, in the next story.)
