GLAD TO LEARN
 A letter in yesterday's Open Forum of the Herald signed by Thomas Flavell and criticizing this newspaper's suggestion that more economical forms of unemployment relief may eventually become necessary doubtless represents the feelings of a great many worthy people.

Mr. Flavell is evidently indignant at a suggestion which he interprets as justifying the theory that society owes the jobless person nothing but the barest of subsistence such as men provide for their cattle. He appears to believe that the Herald could better occupy itself in demanding that foreign bond profiteers and other harvesters of great gains be taxed ruthlessly enough to provide for the decent maintenance of the unemployed.

We can assure Mr. Flavell that he himself would be in no degree less satisfied with such a condition as we tried to picture than the Herald would be. He cannot regard such a condition with apprehension greater than ours. But usually it takes something more than a burning sense of injustice to correct any wrong and so far as we can see the present situation is no exception. It would require something considerably more effective than even a confiscatory tax on the incomes of the great profiteers to make possible the maintenance in idleness of a quarter of the people of the United States on the scale of living to which they have been accustomed.

The labors of three-fourths of the people cannot, as a matter of fact, produce enough of usable wealth to supply all the people each with all the usable wealth he has been accustomed, in times of prosperity, to have.

There is a very general disposition on the part of snappy thinkers to jump at the conclusion that, because a handful of people are known to hog a tremendously greater share of the profits of industry and trade than they can justify lay claim to, they are getting away with most of the increase in wealth. In truth, out of the enormous national turnover each year the total amount thus taken is a mere flea bite—a few score or a few hundreds of millions at the most. If it were all taken away from the grabbers it wouldn't help much in the solution of the great economic problem.

national defense and other costly functions of government, we should have to dig into our national capital for the money with which to pay for them. Perhaps we could borrow it from Germany.

Even if Mr. Flavell will admit that there is hardly any way of managing to maintain the unemployed at the rate of $2,000 a family it is to be suspected that he would insist that half of such an amount would be rather penurious. At least until he stops to consider that such a responsibility would consume half of the nation's net income—fifty per cent of the economic savings of ninety millions of people including the handful of profiteers and multimillionaires along with the vast mass of the country's farmers and industrial workers.

So that, after all, this business of Jacksheparding from the rich and endowing the poor isn't after all, so simple as it looks. It might be ever so right but it wouldn't amount to much.

The real trouble with such times as this is that we are liable to eat up our cake faster than we are baking it. And until we find some way of firing the ovens again and supplying them we're not going to do ourselves much good, as a whole, by insisting on radically different divisions of the loaf.

This economic machine that we have built is a queer contraption. It has any number of foolish gadgets and it jolts and rattles and stalls. But unless we are prepared to drive it onto the junk heap and design a new and better one it might be a good idea to nurse it along as well as we can. Otherwise what shall we ride in while the new one is being invented? Or are we not to ride at all?

It takes a deal of patience to be a citizen of this blundering old world without having spells of seeing red and going off on our muscle. But it's the only one we really know and the only way most folks know of getting along in it is to do the best they can. It was in hope of doing the best we can with the machinery we have, and without being like the dog in the fable and dropping the bone for the shadow, that we suggested that perhaps we had better do the best we can in the provision of unemployment relief. If, however, Mr. Flavell or anybody else can show us how we can all continue to live the life of prosperity together in days of substantial adversity we shall be happier than we have been, since October 1929. And we promise to root like the dickens for his scheme. But it has got to make sense.

STRUCTIVE cause, taken no single action to indicate that he possesses an idea bearing on major economic questions. He has been utterly disappointing to hundreds of thousands of people who, four years ago, were almost wildly his admirers.

The religious prejudice against Smith is an ugly and changeless fact that might have been verbalized by a popular rally to a great champion of some promising economic cause. But the "Happy Warrior" has proven a terrific flop in the latter aspect while the other angle of the situation remains "as was." Any mill-run candidate, though possessing no more attractive ideas than Smith on economic improvement but at least free from the influence of Southern Democratic doctrinal prejudices, would be more than likely to poll more votes and carry more states next fall.

If Al's "thinking it over" means that he is thinking over ways and means of getting the nomination every Republican rooster in the country will unite in hoping that he thinks successfully.

HEROES OF GARBAGE
 There should be a poem written and a song composed in honor of the Hartford garbage collectors.

One hundred and eighty-one men, probably most of them heads of families, labor faithfully at that extremely useful but not very pleasant job 300 days a year, rain or shine, blow hot or cold. No one does his job better and the efforts of a great many public servants could be dispensed with more comfortably.

Yet these men have just offered to take a pay cut from $4.50 a day to $3 in order to get into line with the necessity for reduced municipal expenditures. To our way of thinking they are the outstanding heroes of the hour.

Their example is respectfully called to the notice of some millions of white collar job holders in municipal and state governments and in federal employ; most of whose services could be suspended without serious effect affecting the well being of anybody but themselves. And imagine a modern American city without garbage gatherers!

Washington.—Notes from our nation's capital: One hates to get personal, but when this writer first set out for Washington, which was several years ago, he was advised by a distinguished veteran editor that it was just too bad because no one ever read Washington news. . . . Well, if that was true then, one fears that it isn't entirely true now. If there is any reader whom a Washington correspondent can't interest in one way or another, one dares him to write and explain. . . . Probably never was a time when so many folks were looking toward Washington with the hope that the government do something, or refrain from doing something. Certainly never was a time when members of Congress were getting so many letters about this, that and the other thing. . . . The unemployed all look toward Washington with the hope that something can be done which will either provide more jobs or give relief. The employed either look here with the hope that something will be done to make their jobs more safe or with the prayer that the government will make any slips that might make conditions worse. The employers either demand something from the White House or Congress which will stimulate or bolster up special interests or protest against legislative projects in which they have no faith.

The dregs have their eyes on Washington every day of the week and convene here with loud cheers for their friends and dire threats for their enemies. The wets and their pleas for repeal and look here longingly for a strong vote for repeal or modification in this session of Congress—or anything else that will inspire hope. . . . The labor organizations, with millions of members, concentrate here for a fight in the Senate against a couple of new federal judges as well as for several bills. . . . The bankers yelp for—and get—federal loans. Also, their depositors and borrowers, all during the day. The laborer usually requires less sleep than the brain worker who does not supplement his mental activity with sufficient physical exercise.

Study out these simple forerunners of disease and you will find it an interesting and profitable way to learn how to avoid the more serious consequences of acute disease and you will avoid those small hygienic errors which, if repeated day after day and year after year, lead to a lowering of vital resistance and an accumulation of dangerous toxins in the system.

Health and Diet Advice
 By DR. FRANK McCUE

THE DISEASE SOIL
 Just as economists realize that our present depression is the inevitable result of the conditions which preceded it, doctors are coming to realize that a disease in the human body is always preceded by errors and habits which are largely preventable. The attention of medical science in the past has largely been devoted to overcoming diseases of the contagious type, and almost the only measures which have been devised for preventing disease up to a short time ago dealt entirely with this class of illness.

Modern physicians are beginning to realize the importance of preventing the type of disorders which might be called habit diseases; that is, diseases which are brought on by wrong habits of living, bad environments and hygienic causes. Serious chronic disorders do not develop suddenly but are the result of small daily indiscretions which, like water constantly dropping upon stone, will finally wear away the hardest constitution. One does not instantly become sick with chills and fever and the body is not abruptly thrown into the painful upheaval of an acute illness. There are symptoms and warnings which have constantly presented themselves to the patient long before the sickness shaped itself into a disorder which might be called by a special name. After the disease reaches the state where the symptoms of fever and chills are present, the diagnosis is usually simple enough. Your doctor, after ascertaining your symptoms, can give the disorder a name, but it is far more important to study the pre-disease symptoms and in this way prevent the actual sick spell.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

ENROLLMENT AT HIGH SCHOOL BREAKS RECORD

Exactly 1,180 Students in Institution Now, Highest in History of the School.

The semi-annual school enumeration was taken in the high school today. We now have the largest high school in the history of the town, exactly 1,180 students. This is an increase of 127 over the registration on September 2 last fall. The total enrollment by classes as compared with the opening day is now as follows:

Sep. 2, '31 Feb. 5, '32	179
Seniors, 1932	166
Juniors, 1932	235
Sophomores, 1932	284
Freshmen, 1932 A	71
Freshmen, 1932 B	266
Freshmen, 1932 A	107
Post Graduates	27
Totals	1180

It will be seen that nearly all classes have increased a little except the Post Graduates group which at one time numbered thirty-nine students. Mr. Bailey, director of Vocational Guidance, has been successful in placing a considerable number of the post graduates into part time, or full time employment.

The actual room seating capacity of the school numbers 1154. The seating of the 1180 now in attendance is made possible by having the cooperative students use one set of desks at the High School in the morning and another group use the same desks in the afternoon while the first group is at Trade School. No attempt has been made to provide homeroom seats for the Post Graduate students as they attend, in many cases, only part time and at certain specified classes.

The teachers have met to discuss the situation of this large increase at mid-year by adding considerably to their teaching loads. The school officials rearranged the school program so that some of the teachers have increased the numbers of divisions in size.

The average teaching division now numbers nearly thirty students in each division. It was found necessary to add one new teaching position, that of a teacher in general science, natural science for non college preparatory students, and biology. Mrs. Elsie Emery has been secured to fill this position for the remainder of the year. Mrs. Emery has recently completed five years of teaching in East Hartford and is a graduate of University of New Hampshire and has taught in the High Schools of Meriden, New Hampshire, Claremont, Stevens High, Laconia and East Hartford.

Edson M. Bailey, is confined to his home with a severe cold. Mrs. Hugh Greer is substituting in his book-keeping classes. Carl D. Anderson, Turts A. B., is assisting in the supervision of the study hall. Mr. Anderson is a graduate of M. H. S. in 1912.

Red Letter Days have been counting up fast and furiously of late, what with the basketball game with Bristol high tonight, the Prom tomorrow evening, and the "Fishes of Penance" which is to be presented by the combined Glee Clubs next Thursday and Friday. In order that the students of Manchester high might get into the full sway of all this excitement which is about to occur, a rousing rally assembly was held yesterday afternoon. The members of the Pep Club, with the help of a few members of the faculty, put on a fine program. Mr. Kelly was in charge of a short skit which was presented by the following people: Mr. Quimby, Coach Clarke, Jimmy O'Leary, Gunnar Johnson, Beatrice Perret, Eddie Lithwinski, and Johnny Lerch.

Beatrice Perret, dressed in a long black gown with a black hood and labeled on the back with the word "Defeat", entered upon the scene right in back of Eddie Lithwinski who represented the members of the school body. Eddie didn't seem to like the idea of Defeat trailing him very well, so he asked the Shadow where "Victory" might be found. "Victory can be found," said the Shadow, "where there is a group of boys who never shirk and are never late. Is your school team made up of such boys?"

"Perhaps I can answer that question for you," said Mr. Quimby, who appeared on the stage at this time. "The five boys who are going to play against Bristol tomorrow night are boys who work hard in their studies, are seldom late and attend school regularly. They are boys who have cooperated with the school and of whom the members of the school may well be proud."

As the various questions of whether the boys on the team were cooperative, which was answered by John Lerch, Captain of the Team, whether the "fishes" stood in back of the team, etc., were asked by the shadow of Eddie Lithwinski, they were answered favorably by different members of the school or faculty. It remains to be seen after this fine rally whether Bristol will out-play Manchester again or not. So far as the members of the school are concerned Bristol hasn't a chance! The doors over at the Army are to be opened at six o'clock sharp and as about 1,000 at 3ants from Bristol are to be present, it is advisable to get there early.

A new, and very fine, school song has been composed by Harold Turk-

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD—IT PAYS

FASHION DECREES
FINGERTIP TINTS

Platinum to Be Popular Color
This Year; China Doll
Complexion the Latest.

New York, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Fashionable fingertips should be platinum this year, whether they tap typewriter keys or pluck leisurely the petals from iced artichokes.

A former concert singer who because an automobile accident mangled her voice has turned to beauty culture, has decreed this. She has announced to the American Beauty Congress now in session that the vogue of the platinum blonde and the current mode of matching cosmetics with costumes demands this new feminine conceit.

Whether the vogue of the platinum blonde will continue through the spring season is a doubt, however, that is all but graying the hair of many beauty specialists.

Some women are already going through the tortuous period of letting their hair get back to its natural color, while others are dousing it with a brunette tint. One woman startled a society gathering the other night by appearing with blue fox locks, exactly matching the huge fur collar of her evening wrap. And wigs of feathers or lacquered hair are still worn by the sensation-alists.

China Doll Make-Up
R. A. Clarke a member of the board of directors of the American Beauty Congress said there is a tendency to get back the China doll complexion which distinguished the colonial beauty.

Brunettes, blondes and redheads, he advises to be themselves. The natural coloring of each type being recommended as the most attractive. For those with olive skin, a light ivory powder and a mildly bright lipstick are suggested, and for those who are fair, a light powder with soft peach or rose tints is the thing. While some argue that rouge should be worn high to "build the face up" to meet the season's high-perched hats, most beauticians insist that the natural contour of the face should not be changed.

The natural line of the eyebrow should also be followed. Tweezed eyebrows, or eyebrows arched with the aid of any eyebrow pencil, are absolutely passe.

EXPECT A ROLL CALL ON AID FOR JOBLESS

Washington, Feb. 5.—(AP)—A Senate roll call on direct Federal aid to the unemployed was promulgated today as the House recessed out of respect to two of its members who died.

The Senate made the LaFollette-Costigan measure to appropriate $375,000,000 for relief the order of business, with an early vote. It faces formidable opposition, however.

Ten minutes after it convened at noon the House adjourned out of respect to Representatives Quin of Mississippi and Rutherford of Georgia, who died early today.

House committees completed hearings on tax legislation, approved an old wage pension bill, and heard Major General Foulis, chief of the Army Air Corps, advocate a rough overhauling of "out of date" national defense legislation and defense machinery.

A Senate finance sub-committee was appointed to hold hearings on the Wheeler bill for free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, which was advocated by William Jennings Bryan.

Another Senate committee continued hearings on farm legislation.

SINKING OF TUSCANIA

On Feb. 5, 1918, the British ship Tuscania, carrying American troops, was sunk by a submarine off the north coast of Ireland.

There were 2170 American soldiers aboard. First reports said that there were 82 known dead and 216 missing. However, 164 bodies were later washed ashore on the Scottish coast and buried there. At that time 80 or more had not been identified.

A number of the crew were killed in the explosion in the engine room. The soldiers were mostly National Guardsmen from Michigan and Wisconsin.

The Tuscania was torpedoed in the early morning. Two torpedoes were launched at the ship, but one passed astern. Rescue work was done by British destroyers and trawlers.

WOULD BAN CRUISES

Washington, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Bans on "cruises to nowhere" by foreign vessels operating out of United States ports would be established under legislation introduced today in the Senate and House.

Senator White (R., Maine), and Chairman Davis of the House Merchant Marine committee, introduced the bills. They also would prohibit foreign ships from switching to the West Indies winter trade.

The so-called "cruises to nowhere" take passengers from one port on a voyage and return to discharge the passengers at the same port from which they embarked.

THE BOOK SURVEY

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Writer

T. R. Ybarra . . . a sane estimation of "Hindenburg" — the Man With Three Lives.

Paul von Hindenburg was in his sixties, a retired general of infantry, when the World War broke out. He had already, so to speak, lived one life—a long, active and useful one. Having finished it, he was waiting placidly for death.

With the war he began a second life—as legendary hero of Germany's armies, a returned Barbarossa, an incarnate Wotan smiling the fatherland's enemies. For four years this second life continued, ending only with the armistice.

Then, years later, began his third life, when he was made president of the German republic. And here, perhaps, his services were greatest of all. He preserved the republic, checkmated the monarchists, gave such statesmen as Stresemann and Brüning the support without which they could not have carried out their policies.

That, briefly, is the way T. H. Ybarra sums the man up in "Hindenburg—the Man With Three Lives," published this month by Duffield and Green at $3. It makes an engrossing book and provides a clear and, I think, very sane picture of the famous old warrior-statesman.

In his discussion of the war days Mr. Ybarra is less fortunate than he might be, and he shows a tendency here and there to do Von Hindenburg's private soliloquizing for him. But in the main his book is sober and well-grounded, and it makes exceedingly timely and interesting reading.

An Escaped Convict, and What He Escaped From

"I am Fugitive From a Georgian Chain Gang," by Robert E. Burns, is not pleasant reading. Mr. Burns, who escaped from Georgia's medieval prison system several years ago, established himself as a magazine editor in Chicago, was captured and sent back to prison and finally escaped again, tells all about his experiences and exposes the chain gang system pretty clearly as a dismal relic of barbarism.

Yet it is his description of chain gang life that makes one shudder; it is his story of how Georgia's ruling officials, when he had been captured, insisted on throwing him back into prison again despite the fact that he had amply proven his right to be considered a useful member of free society. That is his real indictment against his captors—that they insisted on vengeance instead of humanity.

The book will keep you interested from start to finish. It will, also, arouse your indignation. It is published by the Vanguard Press, and costs $2.50.

A Little Debunking for Those Naval Experts

In "The Navy: Defense or Portent," Charles A. Beard takes the naval expert apart to see what makes him tick, and demonstrates that the creature is far from infallible. He begins by showing how Germany went astray because it failed to keep a check-rein on Tirpitz's big-navy idea at the dawn of the century, and intimates that the same sort of crew is spreading its influence in the United States.

His discussion of the ineffable Mr. Shearer and the Navy League is devastating; so, too, are his comments on the admirals who clamor for a big navy without following their own arguments through to a logical conclusion.

All in all, his little book is an extremely useful bit of ammunition for those who would like to get on the firing line against naval jingoism.

It is published by Harpers, and sells for $2.

A Good Book on Early American Civilization

A book which should have been reviewed much earlier, but which is given a new timeliness by the recent archaeological discoveries on Monte Alban in Mexico, is "Columbus Came Late," by Gregory Mason. Here is a very well-handled summary of the known facts and principal theories about the ancient civilizations of the New World; and Mr. Mason is so enthusiastic about his subject, and writes with such an infectious swing, that his book ought to arouse a new interest in American antiquities among people who have never bothered about such things before.

Occasionally his enthusiasm runs away with him a bit, to be sure; but for the most part he keeps his feet on the ground, and it is greatly to his credit that he has made such a dusty-dry subject as archaeology become interesting, even exciting, for the lay reader.

"Columbus Came Late" is published by the Century Co. at $4.

HOLD NEGRO SUSPECT

New York, Feb. 5.—(AP)—A 51-year-old negro moving van helper faced arraignment today on a charge of suspicion in the garrotting of five-year-old Florence McDonnell. He is Frederick O. Hicks, of Brooklyn.

The child's body was found yesterday in a cellar near her home in Brooklyn. Rubber covered radio wire was bound tightly around her neck. She had been missing since Wednesday.

Throughout several hours of questioning he steadfastly and vehemently denied any knowledge of the killing. He said he knew the McDonnell family.

Hicks was arrested, however, after telling police he had seen Florence walking along the street late Wednesday afternoon.

BLAST KILLED 18

Marcus Hook, Pa., Feb. 5.—(AP)—With the mess-boy of the oil tanker Bidwell still missing, authorities today listed 18 lives as having been lost in the explosions and fire on the vessel.

Seventeen bodies have been recovered from the decks and holds of the tanker, wrecked by four successive blasts early yesterday but A. B. Seleh, of Houston, Texas, has not been accounted for. He is believed to have perished in his quarters or been hurled overboard and drowned.

Three men and a woman are in hospitals critically burned. Company officials and the local coroner continued their investigations in an effort to determine the exact cause of the disaster. It was planned to have the ship taken to drydock for examination and repairs.

DIES FROM BURNS

Norwich, Feb. 5.—(AP)—George Auchinclose, 71, died at a hospital today from burns suffered January 28 when his bed caught fire from a small stove. Auchinclose, a cripple was found surrounded by flames when neighbors saw smoke pouring from his bedroom window.

Vacant Boxing Thrones Await New Occupants

New Ketchels, Grebs, Kilbanes and Wildes Are Needed in Fightland; Jones Can't Draw Satisfactory Gate.

There are a flock of vacant thrones in boxing waiting for some good journeymen battlers to come along. The newest addition to the list of chairs for rent is the featherweight class. When Bat Battalino was nudged out of his title by the scales in Cincinnati the other night, the number of vacancies, including the vacant vacancies and disputed monarchies, was increased to four.

One of these, the middleweight division, involves a peculiar case. Corilla Jones, recently declared champion by the N. B. A., happens to be a boy who might be called too good for his class. He is a great fighter, but doesn't draw. When Jimmie Johnston, matchmaker at Madison Square Garden, was asked to promote an elimination tournament in which the Memphis and Akron brunet might show his punch and color to New York, James dismissed the suggestion with a shrug.

"He wouldn't draw a dime," said the Old Boy Bandit of Broadway. And when the Old B. E. of B. says that you can almost bet he's right. Anyway, Johnston's opinion seems to have been substantiated by the gate in Milwaukee the night Gorilla won the N. B. A. recognition. Only 3500 turned out for the match, which was the final of an elimination series.

A flock of lads, likely and unlikely, some on the way up, but most of them on the way down, describes the featherweight situation. Kid Chocolate and Earl Mastro probably rank at the top of the list. Then there are Fidel La Barba, Tommy Paul,

Low Feldman, Freddie Miller, Neil Tarleton, Kid Francis, Johnny Pena and Eddie Shea. Except for Chocolate and Mastro, one of these is about as good, and about as bad, as the others.

Officially the light heavyweight and bantamweight seats of honor are supposed to be occupied. But Maxie Rosenbloom, the ranking light-heavy is not a young man you could call a standout. Distinctly he is no Loughran, though he is about the best of a bad lot.

The N. B. A. has been conducting a tournament in Chicago in the effort to get this throne rented out to somebody—and some of the names, not to mention the antics, of the aspirants in this affair would surprise you.

Al Brown still is supposed to be the bantamweight champ. But every time he turns a corner these days, some unknown bantam takes a fall out of him.

A few McGovern's, Kilbanes, Dundee, Berlenbachs, Grebs, Ketchels, and Wildes would help to simplify matters—but there aren't any more of those fellows around.

SUCH NERVE!

Fort Worth, Tex.—Jerrald Sizemore, 17, sat in peaceful thought in his automobile. With a start he stopped his dozing. Looking out of the windshield, he saw two youths working to unbolt one of the headlights. Sizemore jumped out of the car and the two youths ran. He managed to catch one of them, who was held on charges of tampering with an auto.

HIS BIG MISTAKE

Baltimore, Md.—Harry C. Liedlich will be more careful of the roads he picks from now on. He turned out to a railroad track, thinking it was an automobile highway. As he drove down the bumpy roadbed he saw a fast express rolling along toward him. He managed to leap out of his car before the train plowed into it, wrecking it completely.

MARVELOUS MANHATTAN

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York—Fifteen Bronx cheers! Somebody thinks I look collegiate. College students are discouraged from going to the public library to peruse books which may be available to them in their own school libraries. Probably this is because the huge reservoir of knowledge on Fifth avenue is so crowded most of the time.

Today I turned in cards for four philosophical treatises—dull stuff of the sort that makes most every college course in philosophy an insufferable bore. The card taker eyed me suspiciously, then referred me to a supervisor.

"Are you a student in any college?" the supervisor asked me. "Not knowing whether to feel flattered or flattened, I confessed that my pursuit of a Ph. D. ended some years back. Then he explained the attitude toward students.

"Maybe it was the books I asked for which subjected me to this examination rather than any rakish rah rah demeanor. Which serves me right for wanting to look into such tomes when I didn't have to.

Curtain Calls
A play which permitted Raquel Torres only the briefest sort of bow to Broadway was one of those wet firecrackers that gives all the critics a chance to get funny.

Right up to the eleventh hour, there was indecision about bringing the show into New York. But perhaps the crack that John Anderson got off about it made the production worth while, after all. He said: "By nine-fifteen, when the curtain had not yet gone up, it was not clear whether they were waiting for the Mayor, or had decided upon some similar way of postponing it indefinitely."

Mystery Plays Hit Town
Mystery plays with sliding panels and clanging fends got a late start on Broadway this year, but now that they've hit town, and at least one of them is a bit with audiences, there promises to be a deluge of 'em.

M. Zoe Zell, the Paris entrepreneur, must begin to wonder if New York's drama commentators are inclined to give him a gentle kidding. When he showed them "Mr. Papavert" the first time, they said he had a great theme but his staging and cast were inadequate. So M. Zell yanked the play off the boards, refusing a New Year's Eve performance, to doctor it up.

With certain revisions and what he considered a strengthened cast, M. Zell proudly paraded "Mr. Papavert" before the boys again, anticipating peans of praise. What he got from several of them was the suggestion he try once more, as the third time is very apt to be a charm.

Halsey Raines, who gets his livelihood out of the movie business, is author of a book burliesquing "The Bridge Battle of the Century." John Held, Jr., wrote the foreword for Raines, who is a Harvard man, by the way.

Sure, sure, New York has a Rotary club, Lions, Kiwanis, and—well, what have you in your town? The members have their luncheons, songs, speakers and "goals," but these activities don't count for so much as they do in melette Junction.

As for a Chamber of Commerce, the New York chamber was the first to be organized anywhere. Next April 15 it will be 164 years old.

New York—Old world atmosphere clings with slippery fingers to that upper East Side district known as Yorkville.
It is more in spirit than in physical aspect that the community suggests the lingering Central European influence, though its beer gardens and some curious little shops contribute to the foreign color.

continue to enforce the hearthside mores of the Fatherland. They are a substantial class and disorder in their midst is seldom heard of. They have their brew, of course; they can make it at home as no one else can, and prefer it to most of the bootleg stuff on tap.

Malt shops, aperies, bird stores and delicatessen, with choice cheeses and sausage to make your mouth water, dot the streets. One block in Yorkville is unique because, it has been pointed out, every modest need of a "human being from birth to death is supplied in its sixty odd shops—from cradles to shrouds.

The area has been invaded by some of the so-called "hot spots," where fiddle strings scream the rhythm of modern Manhattan at the sons and daughters of sedate burghers and fraus.

Under the shadow of the Third avenue L, "Two Gun" Crowley's body rested in a Yorkville undertaker's place when they brought it back from a hot spot of a different sort up at Sing Sing.

Yorkville mothers pushing their baby carriages stopped to wonder at the ironic fate of a neighborhood boy who followed the glittering mirage over a crime path to such a resting place.
On one side a small merchant's posters screamed of failure, and on the other a sign read "Junk."

Famous Folk
Raymond Hood, the brilliant architect of skyscrapers, doesn't like paintings well enough to have them in his home.
When Jessica Dragonette, unseen ofstage, sang in "The Miracle," her voice gave Chaliapin, the Russ basso, such a thrill that he sent a messenger back to tell her about it.
Adele Blood's little daughter is named Dawn Hope, and she's going

Heir To Mussolini's Power Seen In Former Naval Hero

Rome (AP)—Count Costanzo Ciano, Mussolini's minister of communications (post office, railroads, telegraph), enjoys three distinctions. He is most talked of as Il Duce's successor. He has had the longest official life of any of the premier's ministerial assistants, having held his office since 1924. And he is the only minister in any way related to his chief, for Mussolini does not believe in nepotism.
In addition, he is a sea fighter of great courage, to which half-a-dozen world war medals attest.
Several years ago someone asked Mussolini, "Your excellency, what is to happen to Italy after you are gone?"
"I have already provided for that," Mussolini replied.
Since then most people in Italy have believed he has designated Ciano as his successor. When a year ago Mussolini seemed on the point of creating the position of vice-premier, everyone said Ciano would get it.
Ciano and Mussolini have been very close personally. Ciano's son, Galesazzo, now consul-general in Shanghai, married Edda, Mussolini's two years ago. Mussolini was best man at the wedding of Ciano's daughter a few months ago. It was Ciano who was chosen to inform the premier of his brother Arnaldo's death.

Ciano, at 55, still looks the part he played in the world war—a sea captain. He has a sturdy body and a stern eye. He wears a few mustaches.
He spent 28 years in naval service, having entered the naval academy of Leghorn at the age of 15. In the war his most noted exploit was against the Austrian fleet bottled up in Buccari. He led three submarines through 90 miles of straits and canals under enemy guns, launched six destructive torpedoes against the fleet, and got off safely.
As minister of communication Ciano has modernized and increased the efficiency of Italian railroads. He made the public "rail conscious" and increased travel by ridiculous low week-end excursion rates.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

Skimpin' Jim from Brushville says that old time "innocent amusements" are still innocent, but they are no longer amusements.

By the time you swear you're his, Shivering and sighing And he vows his passion is Innate, undying— Lady, make a note of this: One Of You Is Lying.

Dentist (who had been drilling and drilling into a tooth)—Here's something queer. You said this tooth had never been filled, but I find flakes of gold on the point of my drill.

Patient (moaning and groaning)—I knew it. You've struck my back collar button.

When the teacher asked when Lincoln and Washington were born, the "bright" pupil replied that both were on holidays.

The would-be-reformer was giving a few examples of strong-minded men.

Reformer—And another thing (exclaiming loudly) a man who can stop the tobacco habit can do anything.

Voice from rear of the hall—Except one thing!

Reformer—Well, sir, and what is that, my good friend?

Voice from rear of the hall—He can't stop boasting about it.

Riddles
What has four legs and one foot—A bed.

Spell Mississippi with five letters—E-t-e-r (River).

What is all over the house?—The roof.

What runs and runs and never gets tired?—A clock and water.

What kind of stones may one always find in water?—Wet ones.

Why is snow different from Sunday?—It can fall on any day of the year.

There were 42 cows in a pasture and 43 calves which belonged to the cows and none had twins, how could that be?—None was the name of a cow, she had twins.

What goes all over the house in the day and stands in the corner at night?—A broom.

What bird can lift the heaviest weight?—A crane.

What bird resembles a color?—Blue Jay.

After hearing the teacher read a fairy story, the class, the average age of which was six years, was asked some questions in regard to the story. One of which was, "What is an elf?"

Little Alice whose hand had waved frantically, was allowed to give the answer, and confidently explained that "A elf is a little elephant."

The fool and his money are soon parted. These days even some of the wise ones are being separated from their coin . . . By the time a man has sense enough not to be ashamed of the old folks he has children who are ashamed of him . . . The girls who quit the boyish bob, now have hair too long to shingle and too short to braid . . . If all the mechanical toys Santa Claus left were laid end to end it might be possible to find one that still works. . . It pays to be careful. Once in a while the barking dog has been known to bite.

A Stepping Stone
Let not some barrier stop or stay; For if you carry thru; Each block of granite in your way—Will prove a stepping stone for you!

She—You are an incorrigible flirt. Today I saw you with a woman I have never seen you with before.

He—That must have been my wife.

Golf Novice— (after her first stroke)—When do I use the putter? Instructor— Some time before dark, I hope.

Keep cool; practice self-control; don't argue—discuss; hold a tight rein over the three T's— Thought, Temper and Tongue, and you will have few regrets.

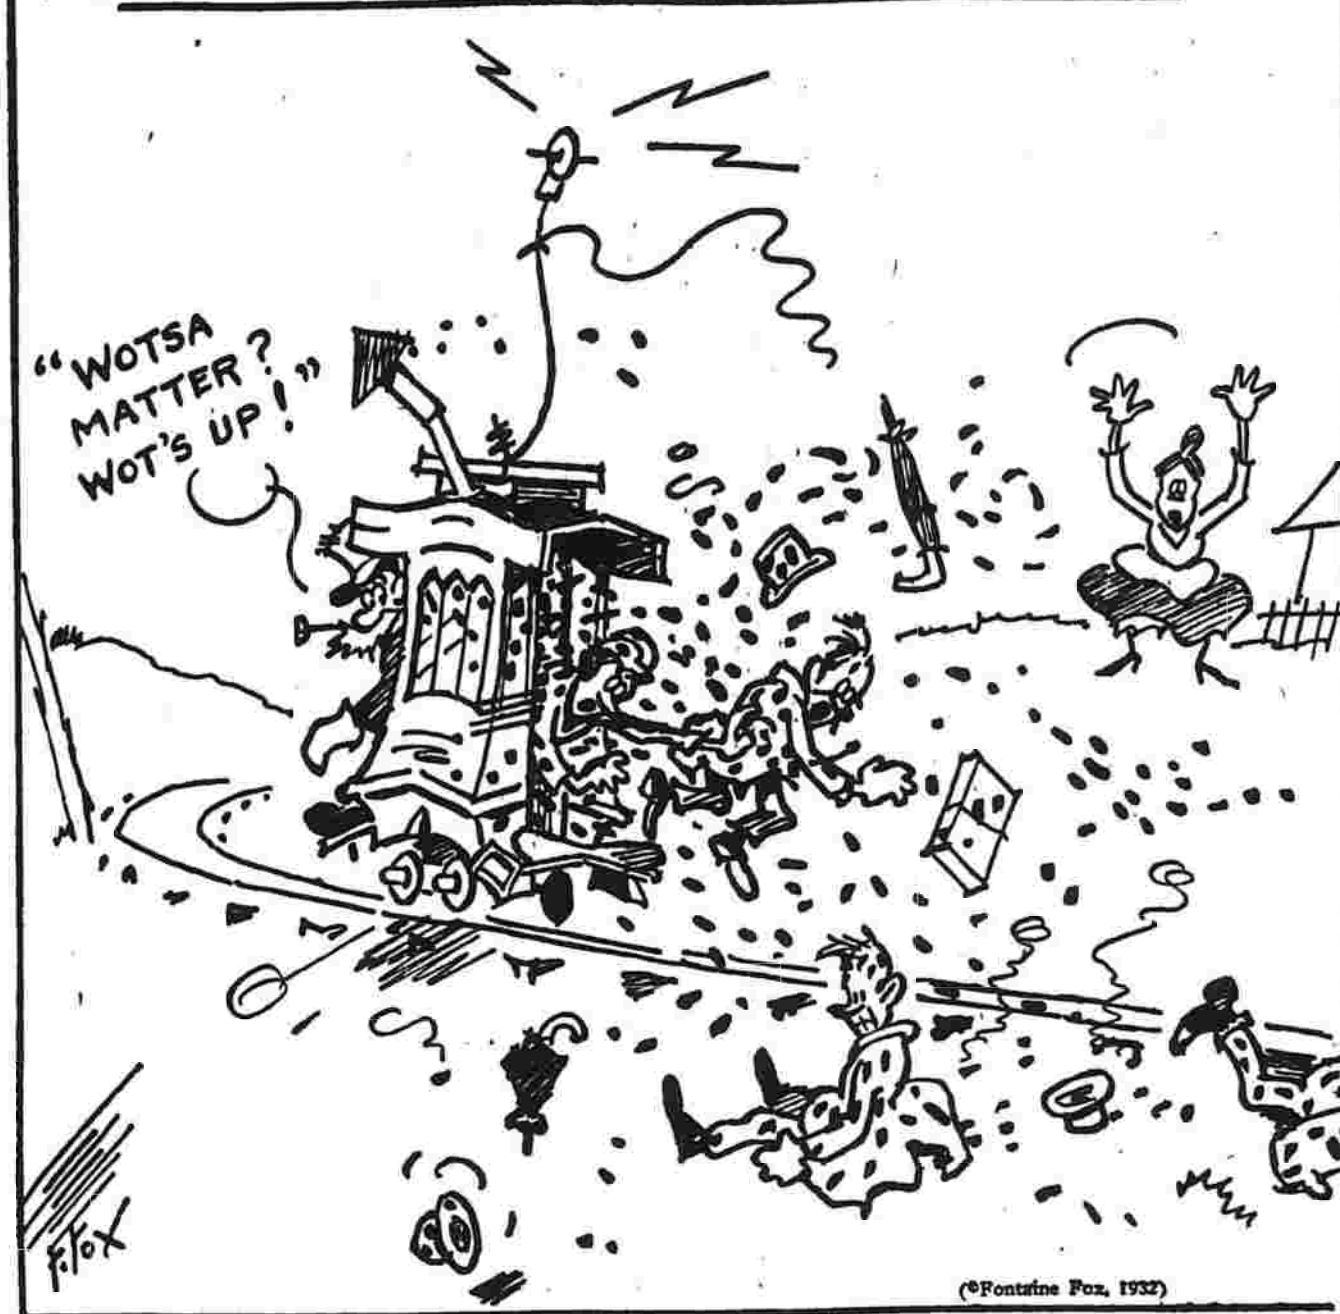

JUST A PAIN
London—A middle-aged man walked into the Chester Royal Infirmary and complained of strange pains in his stomach. Physicians took X-rays of the man's stomach and here's what they found: 145 nails, 23 pins and needles, 67 rivets and springs, 2 hob nails and 7 other metal articles. They operated on the patient, who is now convalescing on a more digestible diet.

SPECIAL PARKING PLANS FOR BALL

Area at Rear of Armory to Be Cleared of Snow and Illuminated For Monday.

Due to the restricting of parking on Haynes street, which adjoins the armory property, James O. McCaw who is a member of the general committee handling the Masonic Ball, has arranged to have the area in the rear of the State Armory cleared of snow and illuminated next Monday evening in connection with the parking facilities for the patrons of the ball. This innovation do doubt will facilitate parking and is intended to serve as a protection for the cars.

C. Leroy Norris who is vice chairman of the general committee, as well as chairman of the music committee reports that every detail is being properly attended to make the ball this year the best ever. He reports that Bill Dehey's Merry-makers of Pittsfield, Mass., who will furnish the music, is one of the most popular orchestras in this section of the country and doubtless will make a decided hit next Monday evening. The ball this year, as in the past, will be a formal affair and is generally attended by many out of town guests. Walter Waddell will handle the catering, and has provided a most appetizing menu. The service committee, of which John McLoughlin is

GIVE FINE COOPERATION IN FIGHTING FIRE

Highway Officials Get Sand Truck to Scene Quickly to Aid the Firemen.

Superintendent of Town Highways John Digney did a fine job in connection with the fire in the Park Building early Thursday morning. With hundreds of feet of hose out from several hydrants the entire street was covered with a fine coating of sand. It was just cold enough to freeze, making the walking and driving in that vicinity hazardous. The fire commissioners called the town highway superintendent asking if a truckload of sand could be sent to make driving and walking safe. Within twenty minutes a truckload of sand was on the scene and the entire area was made safe.

Cooperation between police, fire department and highway officials in this town is something to talk about. Instead of waiting on the usual "red tape" method of cooperation, town, fire and police officials step up and do the job without unnecessary long waits.
