SMALL HOME SHRUBS PLANTING OUTLINED

Manchester Garden Club Has Large and Enthusiastic Meeting.

Thomas H. Desmond, Simsbury landscape architect, who has many friends in town, addressed a large audience of the Manchester Garden club members and others at the Center Church House last night. He devoted his time entirely to black-board illustrations of planting small home sites, and illustrated effectively in black and white how shrubs, ornamental trees, terraces, formal gardens, lattices and other garden accessories can be used to beautify modern as well as old-fashioned homes and grounds. His audience followed him with the closest interest as he sketched and charted, and worked out each individual problem in a natural, pleasing manner. Fine buildings came first, he said, then fine gardens, but it was not until about 1900 when the people of this country began to appreciate and develop their home surroundings. Flower beds were geometric, and stiff and used to ornament the lawn in front of homes. Gradually the feeling for planned design and outdoor living rooms, not open to public view, in the English style, supplanted the old-fashioned, formal planting, and less and less attention was paid to the foreground, except for foundation planting around the house. Mr. Desmond neither discussed deciduous or evergreen shrubs, his aim being to effect a harmonious whole, to screen ugly fences, buildings, or errors in grading and location. He by shrubs and trees tending to make the home grounds more livable. Mr. Desmond answered a number of questions while on the platform and after the meeting. Asked for his advice as to the Garden Club's donation of a new group of public buildings on North Main street, he said the club should pay for a planning plan and endeavor to put it up to the various nurseries in town to donate shrubbery and trees. He took occasion to urge the gardeners to attend the thirteenth national flower and garden show which opens Saturday, April 2 at 2 p. m. at the State Armory in Hartford and continues to April 10 at 11 p. m., inclusive. He said the magnitude and beauty of the varieties of scia alone would be well worth the effort. The local garden club will have a small exhibit at the show, in the squad room. The committee is composed of the president, Mrs. John R. Lowe, Mrs. Clifford Cheney and Miss Mary Chapman. Mrs. Lowe is also managing the staging committee for the big show. The attendance prize donated by Miss Mary Chapman was won by Mrs. Edward Lewis of Woodbridge street.

EXPLAINS MYSTERY

Toronto.—Prof. John M'Lennan, of the University of Toronto, offers the following explanation of why electricity will flow along a wire: When an electron enters a wire it charges into an atom, drives out one of its electrons, and takes the latter's place. The expelled electron jostles another atom in the same way, with the result that when one electron enters a wire, one electron, but not the same one, comes out at the other end. Clear, isn't it?

INDIAN MURDERER GOES ON TRIAL

Globe, Ariz., March 15.—(AP)—A grizzled Apache patriarch, known in government records only as "H-4," came face to face with his 21-year-old son, Mac Gbney Seymour, in a Federal Court room today and for the first time since the body of Henrietta Schmeidler was found the younger Apache charged with killing her showed emotion.

Staccato Apache mopped and crinkled as more than two score Indians filed through the court room to be sworn as witnesses in the murder trial.

Seymour, accused of killing Miss Schmeidler, Columbia University student, while she was doing research work in the Apache country, looked under the steady gaze of the Indians and lost his stoicism under the searching look of his aged father.

Mrs. H-4, Seymour's mother, stood beside him, but did not look at him. She kept her eyes on the floor as Seymour wiped his eyes with a handkerchief. Most of the Indian witnesses were called by nursemaid, Apache names being unpronounceable on a white man's tongue.

The government depended upon five witnesses to establish its case. A star witness will be J. A. Street, El Paso, Tex., Department of Justice agent, who testified that the Apache obtained evidence which brought about Seymour's arrest.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

MANCHESTER LOSES BOTH ITS DEBATES

Argument Here Very Close But Local Teams Get No Votes From Judges.

A good-sized audience in high school hall last evening heard Meriden High School receive the judges' decision over Manchester High in a closely contested debate that the points were very close in each case. It was the general opinion that Meriden excelled in delivery and in smoothness of the more speeches. Their platform work was particularly effective. In rebuttal, the place where Manchester teams have generally been at their best, the local speakers appeared to have the advantage last evening.

The subject for discussion was a timely one: Resolved that the several states should enact legislation providing for compulsory unemployment insurance. Manchester defended the affirmative, perhaps the more difficult side since it meant the proposal of an innovation. Betty Quimby was the first speaker and after a few words of welcome to the Meriden team, she proceeded to show that present conditions demanded some sort of action. The haphazard contributions are not able to provide the unemployed with suitable necessities of life. Compulsory unemployment insurance would consist of building up a fund from the combined contributions of workers and employers which could be available for relief in times of adversity.

Frederick Gilke of Meriden in a finished manner showed that the principle of unemployment insurance was not new. He pointed out that no actual tables were available and no means were at hand to figure the probable needs from an unemployment fund. James Toman continued the debate for Manchester and argued that unemployment insurance would benefit the worker, the employer and the several states. He showed why the plan must be compulsory in order to ensure universal action and to protect those firms in which the plan would be enforced. He insisted that the action of having workman and employer both contributing to a common fund or cause would help to make a better understanding between labor and capital. Octavia Seabers, Meriden's second speaker, had a breezy manner which interested the audience. She maintained that capital would be tied up and that such a fund could only be invested in a limited field of securities. She thought that unemployment insurance would take the responsibility of saving away from the worker and tend to make him careless about planning for the future.

Merrill Rubinow in closing the case of Manchester showed that there were several schemes of unemployment insurance which were in operation in this country among some of the large concerns and that some states already had passed legislation providing for such insurance. He showed that England and Germany and certain other foreign countries had such a plan and that the United States could profit from the experience of these countries.

Ernest Lewis was the last Meriden speaker and he argued that unemployment insurance would not in any way help the present situation. The laborers want work not a dole. He accused the affirmative of not presenting any clear-cut plan of operation and he pointed out that the rebuttal speeches were all short, three minutes each except the last two which were four minutes long. Betty Quimby and James Toman were very effective in rebuttal, the former with a Babson report of March 14th and the latter with a statement that actuarial tables were not available when workmen's compensation was started but that they could be secured after a period of experimentation. The Meriden speakers in rebuttal spent their time in denouncing that the affirmative show a plan and be more definite in the effects which were to be expected. Ernest Lewis made a summary of the debate and accused the pathos of the audience and avoiding the real evidence in the case. Merrill Rubinow closed the debate with a summary and showed that the technical objections of the negative would not put bread into the mouths of the starving unemployed.

Superintendent F. A. Verplanck presided at the debate and received the votes of the judges. The judges were Principal J. Wendall Yeo of Plainville High School, Paul Stoddard of Bulkeley High School, Hartford, and Miss Andrews of Woodrow Wilson High School in Middletown. At Meriden the judge for the Meriden-Middletown debate were Attorney George Lesnech of Manchester, James George of Cheney Brothers, South Manchester and Charles E. Perry of the History department of Hartford Public High School.

Since Meriden won their debate in Meriden against Middletown by a 3-0 decision they took back home with them the H. Wales Lines cup which Manchester has won for the past two years. In fact the defeats last evening were the first that Mr. Jenkins' teams have received since he has been coaching debating here. The team composed of George Marlow, John Lloyd and Stuart Joslin which defended the negative for Manchester at Middletown lost by a 3-0 decision.

East Hartford again won in the other triangle of the C. C. I. L. defeating West Hartford at West Hartford and Bristol at home, in each case receiving a 3-0 verdict. This means that Meriden and East Hartford will clash tomorrow evening, the negative of each school in this instance debating at home. Last year East Hartford won from Manchester in the league finals and obtained the first leg on the new C. C. I. trophy, an oak plaque with silver mountings.

Following the debate last evening the guests from Meriden and a few from Manchester closely connected with debating gathered in the school library for informal refreshments. The girls from Meriden's cooking classes served a dainty lunch at table appropriately decorated with St. Patrick's Day colors and ornaments. Mr. Fahey, coach of the Meriden team, and Principal Quimby exchanged pleasantries after which the Meriden team took the trophy and sped home to continue their celebration with their other winning team.

The high school orchestra played several selections before the opening of the debate and again entertained the audience at intervals during the speakers were preparing their rebuttals.

The H-Y meeting at Center Church House will be held at 7:30 this evening. A local speaker has been secured and refreshments will follow the address.

Mrs. Blanche Feder, director of physical education for girls, announced to day that the next and final interscholastic basketball game for girls would be played next week Tuesday against the varsity of William Hall High School of West Hartford. The honorary team for Manchester will practice twice this week in further preparation for this game. After the game the local girls will serve refreshments to their visitors and an informal social hour will be enjoyed at the East Side Rec.

Principal Quimby, as president of the C. C. I. L. will go to Bristol tomorrow to present the basketball trophy, one of the largest and most expensive of the various C. C. I. L. awards. Manchester, with its victories of last year, is the only other school to have its name engraved on the silver base.

The Sophomore-Freshman Dramatic Club admitted eleven new members today, making a total of fifty. At present the club is working for the success of their first major production, "The Arrival of Kitty," a comedy in 3 acts to be presented Friday evening at the High School Auditorium. Each member is busy engaged in writing a one act play, and the best will be coached by the author and presented at their annual party which comes next month.

GREED OF BANKERS CAUSED AMERICAN SECURITY LOSSES

competition among bankers for foreign loans rivaling that of the United States. The precautions and productivity were forgotten and only profits remembered. "The blame for what has happened," the Californian said, "may in part be laid at the door of the American public, who have been taught not only confidence in their bankers but something like reverence for them."

His Figures Johnson listed a depreciation of $742,000,000 to the American public in loans of $1,600,000,000 to European countries and a depreciation of $1,175,000,000 out of $1,600,000,000 of loans to Latin American countries.

"It is utterly inconceivable," he said, "that international bankers did not know what the best informed public opinion of Latin America was fully cognizant of. "The bankers simply did not heed the facts. They gave no thought to the impoverishment of American citizens who trusted them. "They acted, apparently, only for the profits. They were perfectly willing by their loans to maintain dictators in power and to be party to the suppression of every natural right of citizens of South American republics.

"Indeed, they contributed the money in some instances, for the destruction of liberty itself, and heavy upon them is the responsibility not only for the financial ruin of a vast number of American citizens, but for the destruction of personal and political rights in Latin American states."

Concealed Facts Johnson said the bankers "not only concealed the facts and violated the fiduciary relationship, which should have been held inviolate, but to give a false appearance to the value of some of their loans, they deliberately 'rigged' the market."

"Among the sad lessons" the American people have learned in the last two years, he said, was "that their government is little concerned with them."

He said the State Department's statement that it had "no objection" to the loans gave Americans the impression that their rights had been safeguarded.

He cited a letter written by a commerce department official in 1927 to one of its representatives in South America saying "we are builders, promoters, even propagandists, although never to such an extent that we fail to recognize and point out the difficulties."

"Behind a governmental policy such as this," Johnson commented, "the worst of international bankers may hide and the meaneast exploiters may skulk."

MOONEY DECISION San Francisco, March 15.—(AP)—Governor James Rolph, Jr., of California will be given a report on the merits of Tom Mooney's application for pardon by April 1, Judge Matt I. Sullivan announced last night.

said by police to have been engaged in the liquor running business, was shot to death in a truck at a lonely spot on Pearl Lake road, Waterbury. The truck was owned by Amico and a relative, Joseph Sabatino, say police. Authorities maintain that Rolli, conferring at the lonely rendezvous with several other men associated with the underworld, was murdered during an argument. There was no one at the scene when the body was found.

Amico was arrested immediately but maintained his innocence or any knowledge of the crime. Sabatino disappeared and was later traced to Italy. He is a fugitive from justice, believed to be hiding in Europe. Five men, who were seen talking with Rolli at the rendezvous a short time before the murder, were traced to a nearby town by means of car markers. Every one of the five had fled from their homes and have never been heard of since by police who still seek them. Amico, held for some time, was eventually released and no one was ever brought to trial for the murder.

Amico was arrested here last night by three Waterbury detectives as he returned to his home which has been under surveillance since Sunday.

A huge steel drydock, 584 feet long and 117 feet wide, has finally reached its destination at Wellingford, N. Z., after starting from England five months ago. The dock, weighing 17,000 tons, was towed 13,500 miles by two tugs.

TOWN HARD HIT BY INFLUENZA

Doctors Warned That Cases of "Flu" Must Be Reported To the State.

Manchester is hard hit this week with an epidemic of colds, grip, influenza and pneumonia. Hardly a home or office but has one or more persons on the sick list from one of the above diseases. Four cases of pneumonia were reported to the Board of Health yesterday and it was learned from unofficial sources that there are several cases of influenza in town.

Dr. D. C. Y. Moore has sent out notices to all physicians today calling to their attention the requirements of the Sanitary Code of the state in part which requires them to report any cases of influenza that comes to their notice.

The Regulation Regulation No. 3 of the Sanitary Code lists influenza as a communicable disease and regulates No. 20 in force reaches further that influenza has been established, the home or apartment where the disease exists shall be placarded and the affected person shall be effectively isolated without quarantine. The code states further that influenza has been established, the home or apartment where the disease exists shall be placarded and the affected person shall be effectively isolated without quarantine. The code states further that influenza has been established, the home or apartment where the disease exists shall be placarded and the affected person shall be effectively isolated without quarantine.

Due to the existing conditions, many families in which there is sickness have called their physicians in consultation on less serious diseases than are prevalent at this time, but owing to financial straits many cases warranting the attention of physicians have been treated at home. Lack of proper diet, undue nervous strain and the cold weather of March has taken heavy toll.

Abide by Rules People are warned to abide by the simple rules governing the treatment of all current diseases. Rest, freedom from worry, proper food and elimination, fresh air, moderate exercise during convalescence are by far the best weapons in stamping out grip, influenza and will go a long way towards stamping out an epidemic. Associate Evelyn Tedford read the scripture lesson. At 8:00 the members of the Senior Club held their monthly meeting; those taking part in the minstrel held a rehearsal, and the rest of the members took care of the work of addressing envelopes for the Easter issue of the Parish Messenger.

Last Monday night's meeting was in charge of the Junior members. The service of worship included the usual hymns and prayer, a reading, "The Forgotten Father," by Alice Aitken, and the scripture lesson which was portrayed by the following: Doris Turkington, Edna Kennedy, Dorothy Jensen, Edith Brown and Eleanor Keish. Edith Thrasher conducted the worship service. Miss Lena Crosscup, diocesan chairman of younger members, and Miss M. Brock, diocesan chairman of worship, were guests of the branch for the evening. Under their direction discussions were held on some of the problems of the present-day younger members. This discussion was presented in the form of three short dramas, as follows:

First: "Helping Mother," Saturday; Margaret Ulbrich and Eleanor Keish; second, "Attending Public Dances," Dorothy Jensen, Alice Aitken and Edna Cordy; third, Late Hour "Dates" Unchaperoned, Dorothy Wirtalla and Doris Turkington.

The purpose of the discussions was to receive the younger members' viewpoints concerning the parents' attitude toward attending public dances and late hour appointments with fellow classmates. This was one of the most interesting meetings of the year. Following the discussions, refreshments were served under the direction of Annie Summerville and Edna Kennedy.

Rehearsals are being held for the minstrel to be given by the society Wednesday evening, March 30 in the parish house. Associate Gertrude Liddon is general chairman.

There will be no meeting of the society next Monday, being Holy Week.

EMERGENCY PROJECTS CONSIDERED BY BOARD

Home Gardens and Rochester Anti-Hoarding Plan Are Given Study Here.

Two plans for the further alleviation of unemployment were discussed at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Manchester Emergency Employment Association, Inc., held yesterday afternoon at the office of President F. A. Verplanck but no action was taken pending further study of both projects. Another meeting of the board will be held Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock at Mr. Verplanck's office.

A home garden campaign similar to that made during the World War was one of the projects discussed. The other was presented by representatives of Dilworth-Cornell Post of the American Legion, being a Rochester Rochester Plan, headed by Commander John Jenney, Adjutant Victor Bronkie and Michael McDonnell of the Legion met with the directors and were asked to obtain additional information on the plan and present it Friday afternoon.

The board felt that a committee should be appointed to handle the organization of a home garden project for the unemployed, whereby they might raise vegetables this spring for home consumption. The Rochester Plan is not regarded favorably by the board in that it does not aid unemployment but is more of an anti-hoarding campaign. The main feature of the plan is to conduct a house to house campaign and obtain pledges of the people to spend a certain amount of money during a stated period of time.

A force of Chinese troops which was sent against them ended by joining the insurgent ranks themselves.

That I emphatically deny; there is not the slightest foundation for that statement. In fact this bill would reverse the intent of the original law."

"The purpose of the original law was to lessen, not to increase, the power of supervision," Potter asserted. "It was the intent of Congress to leave to railroad companies the same power they already had under state laws."

CRAWFISHING

One of the hardest things in the world for a chronic struggler to understand is the frame of mind of the big business fellow who, when his plans go awry, takes a shot at himself with a pistol or jumps out of a high window.

Too much business undoubtedly lay at the roots of both these self killings. Krueger was too young to take this way out of his difficulties. If he had been trained in the taking of Hickings as most of the human race he would have been ashamed to duck his responsibilities when there was plenty of time in which to rehabilitate himself.

They take themselves altogether too seriously, these big business chaps. They really get the notion, while everything is booming and their programs are going along swimmingly, that they are somehow pretty much the whole works.

It's pretty poor sportsmanship, when one finds that his play has flopped, to sneak out before the show is over. And it displays a sorry lack of imagination. Many a flop has been turned into a success in the last act. Just plain natural curiosity, backed by a tiny measure of courage, ought to be enough to make the promoter willing to see it out to the fall of the curtain.

SECTIONALISM Yesterday's vote in the national House of Representatives on the Beck-Linthicum resolution sets forth the sectionalism of prohibition in a particularly clear light. Republicans from all parts of the country voted for the proposal to recall the resolution from committee and debate it on its merits on the floor.

And yet unless the Republican party watches out it will be made to appear, in the coming Presidential campaign, as the sponsor and protector of prohibition while the Democratic party will pose as the champion of reform of the prohibitory laws.

There is no political strength to the dry party in the North, the East, the Midwest and the West, with the single exception of the state of Kansas. And these are the areas in which the Republicans must win their strength if anywhere.

What earthly sense is there, in the face of such a situation, in any Republican catering to the dry vote anywhere? It can gain the party nothing in the dry South, it may lose it everything in the wet North.

PART OF WISDOM It is a rather curious situation that has developed with relation to Sherwood Island, that Westport shore area which belongs to the state but whose development has been retarded for seventeen years by the exertion of influence in the interest of moguls who do not want the public so close to their estates.

This Fairfield County Organization cannot be ignored. It must be put in a position, before the fall elections, where it can positively guarantee the development of Sherwood Island. Otherwise, such is the temper of the voters in that part of the state, that the party will inevitably encounter an even worse revolt than that of 1930, when Representative Schuyler Merritt lost his seat in Congress and every city and some of the towns in the county went overwhelmingly Democratic in indignation over its mismanagement in the state Legislature.

It isn't going to be any too easy a task for the Republicans to carry Connecticut next fall, at best. It wouldn't be even remotely possible to carry it with Fairfield county gone unanimously insurgent. The Republican County Organization strategy was excellent. It has done the right thing in declaring for Sherwood Island. The next step is to give that hot-in-the-collar constituency some valid assurance, before next November, that the County Organization will be able to deliver the goods.

NEW GAME BOSS Arthur L. Clark of Boston, who has just been appointed superintendent of the State Board of Fisheries and Game, came to his position with the best of recommendations supplied by the history of his preparation for the job. The Commissioners are to be congratulated on adhering to the principle of selecting the best man for the position, wherever found. It is to be hoped, and there is every reason to expect, that Mr. Clark will prove to be that man.

After all, the superintendent of Fisheries and Game, in this state, becomes, if he measures up to his opportunities and responsibilities, very largely the commission itself. He is in a place of very considerable power—and he needs a well balanced head, besides a deal of fish and game lore, to insure that the power be wisely employed.

Perhaps it might not be a bad idea for the new superintendent, as he comes to his Connecticut job, to give a hard look at the economic situation, followed by a half hour's consideration of the question whether the first duty of the Board of Fisheries and Game, at such a time as this, lies more in the direction of supplying tame trout and tame pheasants or in that of stocking the ponds and watercourses of the state with hardy and prolific food fishes. The right decision on that point might prove an excellent jumping off place for any new man in this job.

HI-JACK STORY The inventiveness of Tablodia hasn't done itself full justice in the matter of the Lindbergh baby. With the scene set with all the requisite personnel and the props, with shadow shots of underworld characters fitting across a mysterious background of darkness already introduced, thanks to the activities of the Lindbergh's family friends, what is the matter with the imagination of the tabs when it hasn't occurred to them to have the Lindbergh baby hi-jacked. Maybe once, maybe two or three times. Why else hasn't the child been turned up? Why haven't the shady personages of gangland long before this found the baby? The question to be asked in reply, Yankee fashion, is: How do we know they haven't found him? And if they did find him, what would they be liable to do about it—bring him back to his parents? Or snatch him from the snatchers and put up the price?

There are plenty of names to juggle with in this case—Rosan, Spitala, Scotty Gow, and so on. Any scenario writer could supply the materials. Surely the tabs are overlooking a bet.

MAFIA-RACKETEERS Some of our neighbor newspapers have suddenly discovered a resemblance between a Hartford racket murder and the operations of the Sicilian Mafia. Why this should be regarded as a discovery at all is hard to understand. We had supposed that the trail of the racket and the racket murder had been so straight, from New Orleans in 1890 to Chicago, Detroit and New York, in 1932, that the relationship was obvious to all men.

There is nothing at all new in this business of the racket and racket killings. It has been going on for generations in Sicily. It went on in New Orleans forty-odd years ago. Booze didn't enter into it but extortion, muscling in, terrorist murders and killings of reprisal did. But down there the racketeers, then described only as Mafiosi, made the mistake of killing Dave Hennessy, chief of police, whom the town loved. Eleven conspirators were acquitted by a jury terrorized at probable Mafia vengeance. But before they were at liberty 900 New Orleans citizens, including many of the leading men of the community, marched to the police station and shot the whole eleven dead in their cells. One of them was a millionaire.

New Orleans has been amazingly clear of the racket ever since.

IN NEW YORK

HALLELUJAH AND WHOOPEE! New York, March 15.—Manhattan's laugh-of-the-minute concerns the casting of Texas Guinan for the role of "Sister Almee" in a play dealing with the life of a go-getting feminine evangelist.

This is not the first time these two most spectacular "showmen" have found their names linked on the same program. Several years ago, when Almee Semple McPherson arrived in New York to clean up the wicked city, Texas Guinan was operating one of Broadway's hottest spots. When Almee opened her tabernacle sessions, Texas arrived with some of her girls and gave "the little girl a hand."

The incident attracted so much attention that Tex decided to keep the publicity boiling. So she invited Almee to come over and see what the hotcha night life was like. So Almee showed up at the naughty, naughty spots and a good time seems to have been had by all.

The report went around that Almee and Tex became pretty chummy and parted the best of friends. So when Charles Hopkins was casting about for someone to play the dramatic soul-saver, he immediately thought of Tex. No wonder they're chuckling.

Tough Times for Tex Incidentally, La Guinan has been spinning about like a carnival carousel for the past couple of years. Once the "queen of Broadway"—so-called—Texas has taken a lot of bumping from the jesters.

Broadway heard some time ago that she had "tangled" once too often with a certain high police official of New York. Raided several times, she moved into a hotel to get by the 3 o'clock curfew ruling. Her flip defiance, wisecracked from the club floor and in the news paragraphs, resulted in a series of packings.

The Broadway night-club zone has never been particularly healthy for Texas from that time. She tried the roadhouse circuit and then moved on to Paris, only to be routed back home. She tried a road tour with a hamstringing troupe of snappy girls. She reappeared in Chicago, only to be raided on New Year's Eve when a clean-up halted gay preparations.

CURING BY CAUSING DISEASE

It sounds foolish to try to cure one disease with another, yet this is a method which nature has been using for thousands of years. It was a method well-known to Hippocrates and Galen, the fathers of medicine, but not as well understood by many of their followers.

ONE DISEASE FOR ANOTHER. Various schools of medicine have always tried to discover remedies for bringing about a cure of chronic ailments. Medicines have not proven very effective except for relieving symptoms. Within the last fifty years a great deal of experimentation has been going on in an attempt to accomplish the cure of specific diseases by producing in the patient another disease, different from the one from which he has been suffering.

There is, of course, nothing disgraceful about it when a cabinet member has a subordinate write his speeches. All cabinet officials have subordinates for that purpose. But the fact is seldom publicly disclosed.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (Diet in Manual Labor) Question: Jared W. asks: "Do you think that a man working at the machine trade can get enough nourishment from a diet that consists of one grapefruit, four slices of wholewheat toast with a handful of dates for breakfast; a handful of peanut salad for lunch, and a raw vegetable salad for dinner, consisting of carrots, cabbage, celery, beets and spinach?"

eliminate treatments will easily bring about the same change gradually without the need of bringing on violent fever or illness. The percentage of cures effected through these methods is even greater than by the other method of curing one disease by another.

Traditions of Other Lands Are Built Into New Church

Centuries of traditions are built into Christ Church Cranbrook in Bloomfield Hills, near Detroit. The church is new, consecrated in 1928. But arts and crafts of centuries from many foreign lands have given it a venerable mellowness.

Two eggs, 1 cup bread flour, 1 scant cup milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon melted butter, 1 Heat oven to 450 degrees Fahrenheit. Mix and sift flour and salt. Beat eggs slightly in a bowl with a Dover beater. Add melted butter and continue to beat until the mixture is smooth and full of bubbles. Heat muffin pans until hissing hot and grease them thoroughly. Fill each pan half full of pop-over batter and place at once in preheated oven. Bake for twenty minutes at this temperature, then lower the temperature to 350 degrees F. and continue baking for twenty minutes. Turn off heat and let stand in oven for five minutes. Serve at once.

Washington, March 15.—(AP)—Today is the last day for filing income tax returns on last year's earnings. Here are important facts: Every single person with $1,500 or more net income, every married couple or family head with $3,500 or more net income and every person or couple with $5,000 or more gross income must file a return. These returns must be made even though exemptions and deductions may save the makers from paying tax.

"If anybody says to a man, 'You drive like a woman,' let him answer, 'I'm proud of it.'" "Statistics compiled by the American Automobile Association prove that women are safer automobile drivers than men. This is not surprising, though the men may be skeptical. One reason women are the careful sex is that they realize the cost of human life."

HOFSTADTER PROBE IS AGAIN UNDER WAY

New York, March 15.—(AP)—Public hearings of the Hofstadter legislative committee were resumed today after a lapse of more than two months.

Before introducing evidence to support his statement that the hearings would show actual conditions of various public offices in the Bronx, Samuel Seabury, counsel to the committee, read into the record a rule laid down by Governor Roosevelt in the removal hearing of former Sheriff Thomas M. Farley. In effect this rule was that public officers having a scale of living and bank deposits far exceeding their official incomes, must give reasonable explanations of the sources of their deposits under inquiry.

Seabury stated the governor's rule has had direct bearing on the character of proof previously presented and "may have bearing on future evidence to be presented before the committee."

Paris, March 15.—(AP)—Jacques Rouché, director of the famous Paris Opera, resigned today, and the rumor that the opera may be closed because of financial difficulties circulated again.

The director reported a $10,000 monthly deficit and said only an immediate grant of $300,000 for complete modernization of the opera house would enable continuance of the company. The ministries of public instruction and Beaux Arts declined to comment on the resignation.

Middletown, March 15.—(AP)—Solomon Schwartz and Isadore Peckeroff, both of Moodus were acquitted by Judge Frank P. McEvoy today of charges of arson and conspiracy.

N. DAKOTA PRIMARY

Bismark, N. D., March 15.—(AP)—Governor Roosevelt's strength as Democratic presidential candidate received its first test in a state west of the Hudson river, in North Dakota's primary today.

The contest for the control of ten Democratic delegates to the party's national convention at Chicago in June was the high light of the election. Aligned against Roosevelt were the picturesque Governor of Oklahoma, William H. "Alfalfa" Bill Murray. It was the first primary in which Murray figured since announcing his presidential ambitions.

The spotlight on the Republican side rested on the skirmish of Hoover and anti-Hoover forces. The choice here was between 11 delegates pledged to the president and an opposing set instructed against him by the non-partisan league but pledged to no other candidate.

ROBB LOSES OFFSET CLAIM ON 2 LOANS

Court Rules He Must Pay Notes Which He Maintained Commission Canceled.

Judgment in favor of Benjamin B. Wilson, formerly of Foster street and now of Bolton, against Wallace D. Robb, local insurance and real estate agent, was returned in the amount of $1,834.50 in a decision filed in Superior Court yesterday by Judge Edwin C. Di-kenson. Wilson brought civil action on two counts asking damages of $1,750.

The plaintiff charged that on January 1, 1927, the defendant by his note promised to pay the plaintiff the sum of $1,000, on demand, with interest at six per cent per annum for value received, and also that on March 16, 1927, the defendant by his note promised to pay the plaintiff the sum of $250 on demand, with interest at six per cent per annum for value received. The notes were given as security for personal loans. Attorney George C. Lessner represented Wilson and Attorney William S. Hyde appeared for Robb.

The memorandum of decision filed by Judge Dickenson was as follows: "The plaintiff is the payee and holder of two notes and presents them in evidence as unpaid. The defendant claims payment and the burden is upon him to prove it. He relies on the first count upon a claimed agreement by which the plaintiff was to credit him with $1,000 for procuring certain real estate of which he had the sale as broker for $1,000 less than the price asked."

"The plaintiff denies the agreement and that he did either the sale or the purchase of the property at the price asked by the owner. The owner testifies that he asked $15,000 but sold for $14,000 with the agreement with the defendant that he would not have to pay any commission or expenses."

"No written memorandum, receipt or account is in evidence of an agreement of the parties as to this transaction. The defendant's story does not seem probable. If the plaintiff was not willing to pay the owner $15,000 for the property it is not likely he would be willing to pay the owner $14,000 and the defendant $1,000 to obtain it."

"The defense to the second count is a claim for credit for commission for trading the same property later. The defendant contends it was agreed he was to receive a commission of $600 for this and only received $100. The plaintiff contends there was an agreed commission of $200, that $700 was paid by the other party to the defendant as the plaintiff's broker, that the defendant retained $100 of this and later paid $100 by the two checks for fifty dollars each."

"The absence of any evidence of a demand for either note or for a request that credit be endorsed upon them, the fact that the defendant with a deposit on the second transaction in his hands turned over $100 to the plaintiff, not to mention the general impression received on trial leads me to believe in the plaintiff's story of the transaction."

"The defendant claims credit for premiums on two automobile insurance policies issued by the plaintiff amounting to $138.45. It is proved by one, amounting to $97. Judgment is directed for the plaintiff on the first count for $1,307.50."

"Credit of $97 is given the defendant on the second count and judgment is directed on that count for the plaintiff for $227."

Rochester, Minn., March 15.—(AP)—The condition of James A. Reed, former United States Senator from Missouri, was described by his physician as "very satisfactory" today.

The newest innovation in the motion picture business is a three-reel comedy being developed by Mack Sennett, who has for years held aloft the torch of humor with comic and vaudeville gags of hearty laughter. This new type comedy is calculated to be of sufficient generosity as to make the so-called necessity of double features to fill an evening's program no longer a necessity.

The first of the new comedies lasts 20 minutes. Under the title, "Heavens! My Husband!", it was favorably received on Broadway last week. It's an Andy Clyde offer built along the lines of feature technique, with no padding, smooth continuity, no repetition of gags, and a real theme to interest the patron.

The recent showing of "After Tomorrow" with Charles Farrell and Miss Helen Hayes, and the recent showing of "Sunny Side Up" and people are again asking when Charlie will be teamed with Janet Gaynor. The answer is "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" which is scheduled for release on April 24. If Connecticut lives up to its usual reputation for punctuality in the motion picture line, it should be seen in nearby theaters on or before that date.

KILLED FOR MONEY

Bridgeport, March 15.—(AP)—Officials investigating the slaying of Frank Buda, 50, whose charred body was found in the ruins of an Easton barn, blamed the crime today on Buda's habit of carrying a large sum of money.

Joseph Journey, a friend of the slain man, has been formally charged with murder and will be arraigned next Monday afternoon.

"Police said Buda had $5,000 on his person when he left home last night to negotiate the purchase of a farm. He had planned to pay the money as a deposit, officials learned. An attempt was made police believe, to burn Buda's body after he had been shot in the head."

SCHOFIELD ACQUITTED

Waterbury, March 15.—(AP)—Joseph S. Schofield of Hartford, former Waterbury stock broker, was formally acquitted today of a charge of embezzlement by agent when his case was called this morning, before Judge Frederick M. Peasley in the Superior Criminal Court. Schofield was not in court. The Superior Court entered the not guilty verdict under orders of two judges.

Schofield was convicted here in February of 1931 on two counts of embezzlement by agent after the state had nolledd two other counts. Judge Peasley imposed a 1 to 4 year term in the State Prison from which the stock broker took an appeal. Schofield was then released in bonds pending the outcome.

The Supreme Court declared the evidence failed to convict Schofield but rather indicated he was innocent of any crime.

LINDY SEIZED RIFLE WHEN TOLD THE NEWS

Detailed Account of What Happened First Hour After the Baby Was Kidnaped.

(Copyright 1932 By AP) New York, March 15.—(AP)—When two weeks ago tonight the nurse Betty Gow cried out to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh "the baby is gone" his first act was to seize his rifle and rush into the Sourland thickets in search of the kidnapers.

A detailed account of the hectic hours when Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr. was snatched from his crib by abductors as yet undisclosed, was made known today. Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Morrow, was one of the three persons closely involved in the events of that night. The others were her husband and the baby's nurse, Mrs. Lindbergh's story as learned from a trustworthy source was as follows:

On Saturday afternoon Feb. 27 she and the baby arrived for a week end at Hopewell after a three weeks absence. Although the Lindberghs had made frequent week end trips to Hopewell they had stayed at the Morrow home on the previous two week ends. Colonel Lindbergh arrived later that day.

Visits Drug Store In the evening the baby developed a cold, which grew worse in the next two days. Wheatley, the butler was sent to a drug store for medicine and chatted with the clerk who said he had similar illness at home. Later he went to the store to buy a thermometer, telling who ever waited on him it was to take a child's temperature.

On Tuesday morning when the cold still lingered, Mrs. Lindbergh summoned Betty Gow from Englewood and she arrived about 1:30 p. m. With Betty attending to the child the mother went for a walk in the afternoon and returned about 5 p. m.

Betty sewed an extra flannel shirt for the child and he was put to bed about 7:30 p. m. When he was snugly tucked away Mrs. Lindbergh left his room before Betty. The window had not yet been opened and the lights were still on.

Baby Asleep About a half hour later while Mrs. Lindbergh was sitting at her desk in the living room down stairs Betty stopped on her way to the kitchen to say that the child had gone to sleep.

Writing and listening for the sound of Colonel Lindbergh's car, Mrs. Lindbergh once thought she heard car wheels on the gravel driveway outside. She listened and concluded she was mistaken, for it was not until 20 minutes or so later that she heard his car really approach.

They had dinner, sat by the living room fire for a short time, then Mrs. Lindbergh went to her room and the colonel settled down to read. Getting ready for bed, Mrs. Lindbergh found she had left her tooth powder in the baby's bathroom. She went and got it without switching on the light.

TO COMMEMORATE KOCH ANNIVERSARY

Discoverer of Tuberculosis Germ—March 24, 1882, Discovery Date.

Hartford, March 15—Plans were perfected yesterday for the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the announcement by Robert Koch of his discovery of the germ of tuberculosis, March 24, 1882, according to an announcement made by Dr. Stephen J. Maher, chairman of the State Tuberculosis Commission, at a meeting in the State Office Building at Hartford yesterday.
Teachers in the schools of the state will be asked to tell their classes about the importance of this discovery, which was followed by the development of preventive methods so that the death rate from tuberculosis in the United States has been reduced from about 300 per 100,000 in Koch's day to 73 at present.
To Be Nationwide
The Koch anniversary celebration is to be nationwide and tuberculosis associations all over the country will point out how great is the debt of modern bacteriology to methods devised and used by Koch.
"Without the knowledge that a specific microbe causes the disease" continued Dr. Maher, "it would be impossible to be sure that we are preventing tuberculosis when we show sick people how to stop infecting others."
The object of this campaign," continued Dr. Maher, "is to combine the best resources of the community to strike at the root of this preventable disease. It is generally believed that every case comes from another. We know how to stop its spread by breaking the contact between the sick and the well. We only need to apply the knowledge we now have in order to make enormous inroads on a disease which still kills more people between 15 and 45 than any other ailment."
To Help Sufferers
"With the aid of physicians, nurses, teachers, social workers, and the help of health departments, an effort is to be made this year to find the source of every case of tuberculosis, to help that new case to obtain treatment, and to show him how to live so that danger of contagion to others is removed. The public is to be asked to cooperate by lending every possible assistance to the work. Members of families in which there is a case of tuberculosis should arrange for a thorough medical examination, because usually the known case comes from an unknown case in the family. Many cases of tuberculosis are unknown to themselves and to others; an examination, often an x-ray, is the only way that a member of such a family may be certain he is not in danger."
Up To Individuals
"The organized tuberculosis movement is to be no faster to have its ultimate triumph than the average person in the community will permit. There is no disease known to man which lends itself to defeat so easily as tuberculosis does on the application of intelligent knowledge. It is to be a disgrace to have a family in which there is a case of tuberculosis. Little children are most susceptible."

SIDE GLANCES AT WASHINGTON

George Clark

JOHN WALSH OF MONTANA IN A CHARACTERISTIC POSE

AN EVER PRESENT FIGURE ON THE SENATE FLOOR—JIM WATSON, MAJORITY LEADER, WORKS TO KEEP THE PARTY IN LINE

A BOOK A DAY

BY BRUCE CATTON
WHY 1919 WAS A YEAR OF CHAOS
How would you tell the story of the year 1919? How would you go about it to picture the madness, the folly, the sense of being uprooted, of being adrift on shoreless seas that filled the atmosphere in those days? John Dos Passos has done it, in his new novel, "1919," by telling the stories of half a dozen American lives. He mixes them up, chapter by chapter and episode by episode; he struts in fragments of newspaper headlines and stories, and smashes from his own memories; and he begins all of his stories years before the war, so that he does not actually reach the post-war era until his novel is nearly finished. It is a motley and interesting follow the sense of the war, a wandering sailor from Chesapeake Bay, the self-conscious young ass from Harvard, the luckless rancher's daughter from Texas, the stuffed-shirt of a public relations counselor from New York, the pathetically obtuse young doughty on the loose in Paris—these, and others, move through the book, each in a different way presenting a facet of the tragic, catastrophic year after the Armistice. The picture isn't especially pretty, any more than was the rush of the Gaderene swine over the precipice in Galliee—an affair which, Mr. Dos Passos seems to think, the actions of human society in 1919 strangely resembled. But it hits you like a sock on the jaw. The book is formless, disconnected, hard to read, and I don't think it comes up to Mr. Dos Passos' "The 42nd Parallel." But if you start it I don't think you'll put it down unmissed. For you may enlarge on this author's abundant defects all you wish; his books have power, his characters are living people, and he has something to say. And you can't exactly say that all our popular modern novelists. "1919" is published by Harcourt, Brace and Co., and costs $2.50.

Hartford, March 15—Plans were perfected yesterday for the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the announcement by Robert Koch of his discovery of the germ of tuberculosis, March 24, 1882, according to an announcement made by Dr. Stephen J. Maher, chairman of the State Tuberculosis Commission, at a meeting in the State Office Building at Hartford yesterday.
Teachers in the schools of the state will be asked to tell their classes about the importance of this discovery, which was followed by the development of preventive methods so that the death rate from tuberculosis in the United States has been reduced from about 300 per 100,000 in Koch's day to 73 at present.
To Be Nationwide
The Koch anniversary celebration is to be nationwide and tuberculosis associations all over the country will point out how great is the debt of modern bacteriology to methods devised and used by Koch.
"Without the knowledge that a specific microbe causes the disease" continued Dr. Maher, "it would be impossible to be sure that we are preventing tuberculosis when we show sick people how to stop infecting others."
The object of this campaign," continued Dr. Maher, "is to combine the best resources of the community to strike at the root of this preventable disease. It is generally believed that every case comes from another. We know how to stop its spread by breaking the contact between the sick and the well. We only need to apply the knowledge we now have in order to make enormous inroads on a disease which still kills more people between 15 and 45 than any other ailment."
To Help Sufferers
"With the aid of physicians, nurses, teachers, social workers, and the help of health departments, an effort is to be made this year to find the source of every case of tuberculosis, to help that new case to obtain treatment, and to show him how to live so that danger of contagion to others is removed. The public is to be asked to cooperate by lending every possible assistance to the work. Members of families in which there is a case of tuberculosis should arrange for a thorough medical examination, because usually the known case comes from an unknown case in the family. Many cases of tuberculosis are unknown to themselves and to others; an examination, often an x-ray, is the only way that a member of such a family may be certain he is not in danger."
Up To Individuals
"The organized tuberculosis movement is to be no faster to have its ultimate triumph than the average person in the community will permit. There is no disease known to man which lends itself to defeat so easily as tuberculosis does on the application of intelligent knowledge. It is to be a disgrace to have a family in which there is a case of tuberculosis. Little children are most susceptible."

That "Hottest Story"---! It Drew More Newspaper Men to the Lindbergh Estate than Were Needed to Cover the Whole World War

Newspaper reporters interview Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State Police.

BY DEXTER H. TEED NEA Service Writer Hopewell, N. J.—When old Paul Gebhart grudgingly responded to an excited pounding on the door of his luncheon room a few hours after midnight on March 2, he little realized that he was admitting the vanguard of an army of newspapermen outnumbering four or five to one the correspondents with the American army during the World War.

And so they came. Photographers lug cameras, tripods and bulky boxes of flashlight bulbs. Reporters by the score, some in high-powered cars, but hot one with luggage, because of the speed with which they had been despatched.

Headquarters were established in Gebhart's restaurant, a ram-shackle three-story building. The Lindbergh home is three miles away, but this is the nearest place where telephones, food and shelter to catch forty winks are available. It is a wild scramble for news.

The little railroad station has been transformed into a beehive of activity. Special telegraph wires, scores of instruments and round-trip tickets are being sold.

Miss Nancy Jane Bacon, mother of Mrs. Frank Stoddard of Wapping, is visiting her daughter Mrs. James O. Case of Simsbury, for a few days. Edward J. Wells, Sr., aged 90, one of East Windsor's oldest residents, died at his home last Saturday.

clock shifts of operators have been installed there. There is no waiting in the waiting room. It is jammed with reporters at temporary benches, pounding out stories for the wires. Gebhart's is jammed one minute and empty the next. Even the wild est rumors have to be investigated and each hot tip sends the news men rushing over the roads to run down clues.

Frequently farmers aroused from sleep in the hours after midnight greet the newspaper men with ready shotguns and refuse to talk until reporters prove their identities. When it looks as if a big "break" is imminent pilots are whisked to the improvised airport on Peter Voorhees' farm, airplane motors are warmed up and preparations made to fly latest pictures to New York or elsewhere.

As many as eight are sleeping in one room on the upper floors of the lunch room. Others are quartered in private homes. Still others nap where they happen to be—and take no chances of missing a "break."

The situation in Trenton, 11 miles away, is somewhat quieter. There those covering the case meet in a bare room in the State House, having only chairs and tables as furniture. A lieutenant of state police obtains questions from the reporters Major Charles A. Schoffel, deputy superintendent of state police, at the Lindbergh home, asks the questions and reads the replies to the newspaper men.

The dime-a-dance girl

By Joan Clayton

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ELLEN ROSSITER, beautiful 20-year-old, falls in love with LARRY HARROWGATE, young artist whom she meets at Dreamland where she works as a dance hall hostess. Larry is engaged to ELIZABETH BOWES, debutante, but pays Ellen attention until his fiancée returns from Europe.

From a sense of gratitude Ellen agrees to marry STEVEN BARCLAY, a kind and wealthy man of 57, who has paid hospital expenses for her brother, MIKE, injured in a street accident. He finds a job for BERT ARMSTEAD, ready to do the work of a man, and agrees to provide for her mother, MOLLY ROSSITER.

Barclay has been married and divorced. Scandal accompanied his divorce from LEDA GRAYSON, dancer, and, fearing that she will be revived, he and Ellen agree to be married secretly, the marriage to be announced after they sail for Europe. Barclay wishes to settle a fortune on Ellen. They go to the offices of LOUIN SYMES, his attorney, but the papers are not signed after the ceremony.

Barclay and Ellen, Bert and Myra are married in a double ceremony in Connecticut. Hardly have they left the church when Symes arrives, demanding to see Barclay. The minister does not know where the couple have gone.

Barclay and Ellen drive to Barclay's Long Island home. Ellen is terrified at being alone with her husband. She sees in a newspaper that Larry Harrowgate's engagement to Elizabeth Bowes is broken.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

The words fell on Ellen's heart like so many separate blows. Too late now—forever too late for it to be of any consequence to her—Larry Harrowgate was free. Oh, it was impossibly cruel that he should have been free at the very hour she was saying the words that bound her for life.

The newspaper dropped from Ellen's hands and into the fire.

The nightmarer went on and on. Presently Steven returned to the room and she heard herself talking to him. She was scarcely conscious of what she was saying. She understood that Larry must have gone to the apartment two nights before to tell her he was free. Her mother must have sent him away.

Ellen raised one hand with a trembling gesture and in the firelight saw the frosty sparkle of her wedding ring. It was true then. She was married. This was no evil dream from which she would awake.

"Are you tired, my darling?" Steven asked.

"No, not tired," she said. "Not tired at all."

She followed him to the enclosed veranda where supper had been laid for two. She acknowledged the introduction to Fergus, the only servant on the place, and thought vaguely that she disliked him. The butler moved about, saying "madame" this, and "madame" that, until she could have screamed with the reiteration of the fact that she was Steven's wife. Wild, impossible fancies assailed her. She thought of throwing herself on Steven's mercy—begging him to let her go. No. She could not do that.

In time she would forget. She must forget. She was Steven's wife now. Only this morning she had promised to cleave unto him through sickness and health, through poverty and riches. There was no escape from those solemn vows.

She heard whispering tree branches against the window panes, the lapping of invisible water, the sleepy, occasional chirp of a nestling bird. Outside were fireflies drifting to and fro. Outside was the velvet blackness of a perfect night. Inside the table gleamed with candlelight shining on fine old silver and china and touching the purple of hot-house grapes. Across the table Steven smiled at her, so proud and confident, so serene and sure of her love.

She could not break his heart. She must try to remember, she thought sardonically, that if her own heart broke it broke amid pleasant surroundings. This was the life of which she had dreamed. She had it now. What blind fools girls were and what a fool she herself had been. There was no one else to blame. Not even her mother.

Ellen knew she herself had decided that love could be made to yield to affection and gratitude, to ease and luxury.

She must be a good sport, play out her chosen cards. She was too generous-hearted to make a niggardly surrender. Steven deserved the very best that she could give. Under his affectionate regard Ellen forced herself to eat and to respond, as best she could, to his mood of deep and quiet happiness. It almost brought the tears she had held back when she saw how very little of herself it took to make him happy.

When he bent across the table to kiss her Ellen's lips were willing, fresh and young. She knew something was lacking from that kiss that never would be replaced by Steven did not know. His arms lightened about her. His voice filled with passion as he whispered that she was his own.

Somewhere she heard the ringing of a telephone and felt an inward gasp of regret as he turned to answer it. Her husband frowned, saw the queer, unfamiliar look fade from his eyes.

"It's Symes again, I imagine," he told her irritably. "He's called a dozen times today. Fergus told me."

Ellen felt a dull surprise.

"You haven't talked to him?"

"I'm not going to. He's not to spoil my first evening with my bride. Oh, Ellen, Ellen—"

Again the girl was swept with fear. Steven was her husband. He had a right to use that possessive, caressing tone. She belonged to him.

Fergus appeared on the veranda.

"It was Mr. Symes calling, sir," he said to Steven. "I told him you were not to be here tonight, as you informed me, but he was considerably upset. He said it was imperative for him to see you, sir."

"It's always imperative for him to see me," Steven grumbled. "This time he'll have to wait until morning. I'll stop at his office before we sail."

"Very well, sir."

Fergus was gone with one curling, sidewise glance at Ellen—a fleeting glance that seemed to the girl to convey contempt and condemnation, as if Fergus thought she had no right to be sitting at Steven Barclay's table.

"I don't like that man," she said sharply.

"Then he's lost his job," Steven told her.

"Oh, I don't want that!" she protested, dismayed. "It's only that he makes me nervous."

She arose from the table and went to one of the windows, pulled aside the silken curtain and stared out at the night. Soon Steven was at her side.

"Would you like to see your new home now?" he asked. "You haven't even seen half of it."

"I would."

He led her through the vast house snapping on lights and snapping off lights, showing her one perfect room after another. There were flowers everywhere cut from the gardens and hot-houses of the estate. Everywhere there was evidence of luxury and taste.

Last of all Steven showed her the suite that was to be her own—a pale pink bedroom, a golden living room, a tiny dressing room that was all mirrors and a bath with a sunken tub. Her traveling case had been unpacked and put away as though she were to spend weeks here instead of one night.

On the dressing table lay her familiar brushes. Lying across the bed were the pale peach pajamas and a negligee, overlapping the silver mules on the floor.

"I'm sorry you'll have to do without a maid in my life?"

"Do you realize, Steven, that I've never had a maid in my life?"

He had seated himself in her golden living room. She knew he meant that she should sit beside him, but she was too restless to do anything except stand. She moved about nervously in a state of excitement which she tried to conceal.

Steven knew that she was not at ease and asked if he should leave her for awhile. She understood that he thought she was near tears from homesickness and the strangeness of it all.

"No, don't go away," she told him. "Let's go some where and dance and dance and dance!"

She saw that he was disappointed but she could not help it. It was only 11 o'clock. She was remembering that at Dreamland she had often danced until nearly dawn.

Steven suggested a popular supper club.

"I'm sorry about the Country Club," he said apologetically. "You'd like it much better there. But I'm afraid we'd see people I know and we must wait until later. Anyhow, you want to dance and dance and dance."

"I do," she said again.

Ellen was disappointed with the supper club. Steven had wanted a private room. She yielded to his wishes although she really wished to be with the gay and rowdy crowd outside.

Presently the manager brought champagne in a bucket of cracked ice. Ellen had never tasted it before and Steven watched amusingly as she sipped the pale, amber liquid to her lips. He made a wry face at his first sip and left the remainder of the glass unfinished. But Ellen thought the champagne delicious.

Her troubles began to lose substance and she became really gay. Steven was so accustomed to women who were practiced drinkers that he thought her gawdy spontaneity and was glad they had come to dance.

After a while when he was called away to the telephone Ellen poured a great deal of champagne for herself and drank it. She knew she was attempting to escape reality and that she must keep that knowledge from Steven. But the important thing was to escape! When he returned, a worried frown between his eyes and told her that Symes had called the house again it did not seem important or even interesting.

She hardly remembers the hours as they passed. She hardly realized they were leaving and that Steven, deep circles of fatigue beneath his eyes, was adjusting her silver cape about her shoulders, paying a check and leading her through a brightly lighted room filled with noisy people.

Out in the cold night air her head cleared instantly. Her fears were back. Silently she got into the car and was silent as they drove away.

"All right, Ellen?" Steven asked. She thrust cold hands into her cuffs so that she should not claim them. "I'm all right," she said, adding in a shamed voice, "I took some of the champagne when you were out of the room."

He laughed and called her an audacious child.

They were back at the house again, stealing like conspirators into the great dark living room and up the stairs. He was whispering to her in the darkness, intimately, tenderly.

Steven left her at her bedroom door. "I'll come back to you, my darling," he whispered.

YOUR CHILDREN

—Devil Vines—

There is a tropical vine called the devil vine. It is a graceful thing with a beautiful and unusual flower.

The reason for the unflattering name of the "devil vine" is this: It asserts itself wherever it happens to be growing, and twists and twines around other vegetation until it smothers out life. People who have gardens weed out this usurper wherever it puts in an appearance, because it refuses to allow more generous flowers to surpass it.

Flowers are wonderfully like people and in observing this determined but delicate-looking bit of flora I found its counterpart in children.

There is a type of child who resembles this devil vine. Quite unconsciously he, or she, subjugates all other children with whom he associates by sheer force of personality and will.

So Leaders Are Made

It is not uncomplimentary to him—of such stuff are great men and women made. They are born leaders and it seems that humanity needs people who are leaders. But the mature leader of mature people is a different matter from the self-imposed and often selfish child who usurps other children's rights and personalities.

I know of one family where the second child, a girl, happened to be born with all the qualities of leadership. She was brilliant, likeable, and determined.

In a few years her older brother and her younger sister were at a stage when their own development had ceased. They bowed to her rule, began to think and act as she acted, patterned everything they did after her. Of course in the process they lost their own self-confidence and had to refer to her for advice constantly. By the time she was grown this brother and other sister were entirely dependent on her. Her parents, too, had become spiritually atrophied, and conformed to the stronger will of their child.

Sometimes this is not a bad thing, if the other members of the family are real weaklings. But too often it is a process that destroys wonderful natures. It takes advantage of generosity usually and turns every kind impulse to its own ends.

Five cars were required to carry flowers at a recent gangster funeral. But only one car was required to carry surviving gangsters!

Properly supervised competitive sports for children of grade school age nearly always include a "warming up" period. This should always be the case when the sport to be engaged in is a strenuous one.

The same rules apply for children as for grown-ups in regard to fatigue. While many children may seem almost tireless, the fact may be that they are chronic sufferers from fatigue.

They should be taught to rest after strenuous exertion and to engage in no more sports than their bodies are capable of handling without strain.

Children physically below normal should not be allowed to participate in the more strenuous sports. If they follow a systematic program of play, they will frequently develop greater strength and may soon be able to join their playmates in the more arduous games.

Another fact that should be kept in mind in sports for children is that they cannot devote all of their energy to play, since there must always be a surplus to permit them to grow until they have reached full development.

For that reason, continued and prolonged playing of the more strenuous sports should be curtailed for all but the most robust children.

If these simple rules are followed, the normal child may participate in and enjoy the sports ordinarily outlined in grade school and playground programs without ill effects.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

by Alicia Hart

BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

—Pat Yourself!—

If you have an aversion to slapping your own face and neck, for massage's sake, invest in a commercial puffer.

There are many good kinds upon the market. Some cost plenty but others come at small price and are a wonderful help. They have rubber patting ends and spring-like handles so that you merely wield them gently, as you might a wand, and they bring beauty to you. Provided, of course, you keep on wielding them. There is no short cut to beauty. You need perseverance and a genuine desire to improve your appearance. In addition to these contrivances made now to aid massage. There are vacuum gadgets that lift the flesh, by suction, and invigorate circulation. There are rollers of all kinds and some of them are cute and neat and helpful.

Merely buying any one of these doesn't turn the trick. You should make it a point to make yourself really pay for it so much a day, just to encourage yourself to get our money's worth.

The advantage of most of these articles is that they make massage easier. They do the hard work with a mere twist of your wrist to help them. And they are fun to use. It is much nicer to see one of those little round puffers going at the matter of making you beautiful than to see you slap yourself.

In the second place, they are much more efficacious. There is nothing like the way they can round over your cheek's contour, then sink sideways to do justice to those lines down towards your mouth. They get at those lines between your eyes, and they certainly are a help at getting under your chin. For instead of having to twist our arms this way and that, you merely twist the handle of the puffer and there you are, slapping upwards and backwards, with little effort.

Is she a "MAN HUNTER"?

Do you know how to recognize girls who are "Man Hunters"? Can you tell at a glance the type of young woman who considers every man fair game in the hunt for a husband? Here are some tests that will guide you:

- | | | |
|---|-----|----|
| 1. Does she flutter her eyelashes when she smiles? | yes | no |
| 2. Does she hum the words of sentimental songs when dancing? | yes | no |
| 3. Does she inquire about a man's salary or financial standing before accepting a date? | yes | no |
| 4. Does she use heavy, exotic perfumes? | yes | no |
| 5. Can she pass a mirror without looking into it? | yes | no |
| 6. Would she pass up a Greta Garbo movie for one starring Clark Gable? | yes | no |
| 7. Does she gaze at a man over the rim of her glass while drinking? | yes | no |
| 8. Is she helpless about trifles when a man is present? | yes | no |
| 9. Would she rather sit in the moonlight than dance? | yes | no |

If the answers are "yes" to five or more of these questions the girl in the case is a "man hunter." If the answers are "no" to five or more of these questions she's probably a "man hunter"—but cleverer!

Reds Get Herman In Baseball Swap

Brooklyn Gives Up Gilbert, Lombardi and Herman For Stripp, Cucinello and Sukeforth; Both Figure Advantage.

New York, March 15.—(AP)—Over night the Brooklyn Dodgers seem to have built themselves into formidable contenders for the National League championship. Their big trade with the Cincinnati Reds enabled the Dodgers to plug up two gaping holes in the infield with sacrifice of batting power, even though they did part with Floyd Cavendish, (Babe) Herman, the temperamental outfielder, and one of the best natural hitters in the game.

The Robins threw in Wally Gilbert and Ernesto Lombardi with Herman and received from the Reds Tony Cucinello, Joe Stripp and Clyde Sukeforth.

Boiled down, the trade amounted to an exchange of Cucinello for Herman. Stripp and Gilbert as third basemen; Sukeforth and Lombardi catchers. So it becomes a trade of a second baseman, Cucinello for an outfielder, Herman.

On the surface that would appear to be a fairly even trade, Herman fell off to 313 last season and Cucinello hit 315 but an analysis would indicate Brooklyn will be helped much more than Cincinnati. Manager Max Carey now can put on an infield which will have Del Bissonette at first, Cucinello at second and Glenn Wright at shortstop and Stripp at third.

The Dodgers perhaps will miss the colorful Herman from the outfield but they previously had added Hack Wilson, a powerful batsman himself and hitter with a much better run batted in record than Herman. Wilson then will fill out outfield post and Frank (Lefty) O'Doul another. The third will probably go to either Johnny Frederick or Ike Boone.

HOWLEY CONFIDENT
Tampa, Fla., March 15.—(AP)—The camp of the Cincinnati Reds today buzzed with confidence as Manager Dan Howley expanded on the prospect of climbing out of the National League cellar as a result of the club's sensational six player swap with Brooklyn.

The deal brings to Redland the asserted services of Outfielder Floyd (Babe) Herman, one of the league's heaviest hitters, catcher Ernest Lombardi and third baseman Walter Gilbert in exchange for Tony Cucinello and Joe Stripp infielders and Clyde Sukeforth, backstop.

Having already displayed signs of improvement, the Cincinnati club in Howley's opinion now is in a position to go out and slug with any team in the league without getting any the worst of it.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

WHICH WILL IT BE?
Pepper Martin, hero? Or clown?
The other day Branch Rickey, master mind of the champion Cardinals, announced that "the wraps" would be taken off the young man whose deeds of daring-do in the last world series earned him the sobriquet of "the Wild Horse of the Osage."

But after critically inspecting the performance of Pepper in training camp, it is almost safe to bet that when "the wraps" are removed, instead of a Wild Horse, there may be just a Shetland pony underneath.

When Pepper first came to bat this year against one of the bumptkins poured into a pitcher's uniform by the whim of Connie Mack, he got a big hand from the crowd assembled at Miami to watch the "spring world series." He struck out, swinging at a third one that he couldn't have hit with an anti-aircraft gun. Some harsh words in the bleachers sounded the bird.

Bookies Enjoyed Pepper
Mr. Mack's recruit pitchers must have wondered how long this big league business had been going on, and what says they were to have "held" in the minors, for they had an enjoyable afternoon just striking Mr. Martin out. When one of the Mackian batting practice hurlers was removed from the game along about the eighth inning, he pleaded with Head Coach Eddie Collins to be left in there just a little while longer so he could strike out Pepper the last time.

Not only did Martin spend the afternoon vainly stabbing at wild pitches, but his antics in the outfield were milder than anything but Tris Speaker. He fell down chasing several fly balls, which perhaps was just as well, as once he got near one and came within an inch of being smacked on the cone.

Tension Brought Hot Words
As evidence of the frame of mind in which the disapprobation of the crowd placed him, he quarreled violently with the umpire who called the third strike on him, the only good ball that had been offered him all afternoon—and flung his bat disgustfully toward the dugout.

During the afternoon, it became rather plain that Pepper was trying to get into the game. He was up to the reputation indicated by the cheers that welcomed his first appearance at bat. Ball players call this over-zealousness "pressing," and it is a bad habit to get into. It is a disease that often breaks out among fair ball players who suddenly find they have a curly wolf reputation to maintain.

Fleekie Fandom Forgets
Pepper is a fair ball player. He flared into explosive brilliance at a critical period—during a world series. It is becoming more and more apparent that he is on the way back to mediocrity. He has known how it feels to be great for an hour or so. Now he has the prospect of becoming ludicrous for a spell.

Horace Lisenbee, Red Sox pitcher, was the first casualty of the Boston season, cutting his foot on a piece of glass in a shower bath. The charge that the glass was a chip of Pete Donohue's arm could not be substantiated.

The village smithy believes Connie Mack's decision to swap out of the club which won three straight pennants took about as much thought as deciding not to draw to four aces.

REGULAR'S RATING COMES TO CAGER IN THIRD YEAR

Minneapolis.—(AP)—Little Ralph Engelbrecht won his varsity "M" in basketball at the University of Minnesota for two seasons, and was within three games of the end of his third term before he earned a "regular" berth.

In the Wisconsin game, ninth on the Gophers' Big Ten schedule, Engelbrecht came into his own and finished the season as a member of the starting five.

He hailed from Eau Claire, Wis., which made his effectiveness in the Wisconsin game doubly bitter for the low-ranking Badger quintet.

Out to Recapture Old Honors

Los Angeles, March 15.—(AP)—The big trade yesterday between the Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn today had revived hope that Floyd (Babe) Herman may yet become a member of the Chicago Cubs.

The Cubs need another outfielder who can hit and Manager Rogers Hornsby and President Veeck were reported to have conferred on approaching the Cincinnati club which now holds title to Herman. The former Dodger slugger says he has no intentions of signing with Cincinnati unless the Reds "pay the dough."

STAVNITSKY ENDS VERY GOOD SEASON

Manchester Boy Averages Three Baskets For 17 Game Schedule At Grove City.

Grove City College in Pennsylvania has closed its basketball season with nine victories against eight defeats but its co-captain, George Stavnitsky, has averaged three field goals a game from guard. He has one more year to play for Grove City.

This fine average is very good when one stops to consider that Stavnitsky has been handicapped all season by an injured knee. Three buckets a game is a "leg and a half," is not so bad. The Manchester boy was second high scorer on the team, being headed only by Laycock, the other captain.

Stavnitsky was selected as guard on the second All Tri-State team by the experts who make this selection annually. He was the only Grove City player mentioned and might have placed on the first team but for his knee injury.

Grove City's biggest feat was a 23 to 22 victory over Westminster, champs of the section, who later squared accounts winning 47 to 34. Westminster had an unusually powerful quintet and ran up scores of 60 points or better on some of the teams.

During the latter part of the season Coach Thorn made numerous shifts in his lineup due to the failure of some of his regulars to come through consistently. Stavnitsky played in every game of the 17 on schedule. He will return home here at Easter vacation time.

BRITON GIVES UP CASTLE BUT KEEPS RACING STABLE

London.—(AP)—Give up his home? Yes, "Horses? Never!" Which is the state of mind which has led Lord Londale to close Lower Castle, which he spent a lifetime in beautifying in order to economize.

But at the same time it has let him keep up his racing stable and announce that he expects during the coming flat racing season to win a few first class races with horses of his own breeding.

"I have to economize in every conceivable way," he said. "Close Lower Castle, let the shooting there and all I can to reduce expenditures."

Rec's Pivot Play Threatens Guards

Turkington Must Also Stop Cotter Else Rec Five May Retain Its Town Basketball Championship Friday Night.

The fate of the Rec and Guards Friday night in the third and deciding game of their town championship basketball series hinges around the Cotter-Turkington duel at the top position and the ability of the Guards to find some way of stopping the pivot play effectiveness of Waterman.

It was Cotter's aggressive work at center and Waterman's clever execution of the pivot that enabled the Rec to score such a decisive victory last Friday and thus deadlock the series. Cotter entered each of the first two games as a substitute for Boyle but he probably will be in the starting lineup Friday night as a reward for his brilliant work in leading the Rec to a 31 to 21 victory.

The secret of the Rec's victory was in the fact that they got the ball from the trap at center most of the time. This was especially so in the last half and as a result the Guards did not have their usual number of shots at the basket. Evidently the Guards still insist on the Turkington pivot play mania. Cotter and say that Friday night will settle his issue.

These same supporters of the Guards also voiced praise for Cotter whose work they admitted was unexpectedly good. Cotter has not been a dangerous scorer all season and the Guards did not take him seriously. Playing most of two games Cotter has held Turkington to one lone field goal and has made four himself. Turkington made one other field goal but that was at the expense of Boyle.

The Rec's offense, inspired by Cotter's energetic efforts, functioned chiefly around the aforementioned pivot play Coach Waterman has taught the Rec players. Most of the Rec players are able to go into the "slot" with some degree of success. It is Waterman and Far, especially the former, who are the most dangerous men in such a formation.

Puzzling Play
The pivot play is hard to stop when worked carefully. The defensive player usually stands directly back of the man waiting for the ball in the pivot position and then guards him as closely as possible. If it is necessary the defensive man to stand side of the man in the bucket for fear that the latter will catch a pass, turn the opposite way and dribble into the basket for a "sucker" shot.

Once in possession of the ball in the pivot, Waterman makes passes to one side or the other, his mates break past him cutting for the basket. When a player seems to have beaten the defense, Waterman feeds him the ball. Sometimes the offense employs what is known as a cut-off play to block the Guards from following his opponent and then an easy shot at the basket often results.

This is the play that the Guards must find some way to check more effectively. If Waterman makes passes to one side or the other, his mates break past him cutting for the basket. When a player seems to have beaten the defense, Waterman feeds him the ball. Sometimes the offense employs what is known as a cut-off play to block the Guards from following his opponent and then an easy shot at the basket often results.

Members of the Guards were considerably upset over such a suggestion and some of them finally became disgusted over being incessantly reminded of such a falsehood that they finally said, "All right, the honesty of the Guards' intentions. It is interesting to note that a relative of Coach Clarke was advised to bet on the Guards and lost money as a result.

Do You Remember?

One Year Ago Today—Boys Howdy, three-year-old son of Bubbling Over-Batter Cake, from the H. C. Hatch stable, led the field of 11 home in the first running of the $10,000 Cuban Grand National of a mile and one-eighth at Oriental Park, Havana.

Five Years Ago Today—Big Bill Tilden, America's top-ranking tennis player, swept into the quarter-finals of the southeastern tennis championships without losing a game. He erased two opponents in four love sets.

Tennis Gains Popularity With German Masses
Berlin.—(AP)—Tennis, confined largely to the upper set before the war, is becoming increasingly popular among the German masses.

Despite the depression, the 1931 turnover in equipment equalled that of 1930, some 123,000 dozen balls and 75,000 rackets having been sold. Membership of the junior clubs embraced by the German Tennis association increased by 21,000.

A reform long advocated by William T. Tilden, that all set balls, and not only those made in serving, shall be replayed, will be proposed at the next meeting of the association.

Hollers Before He's Hit
Dallas, Tex.—(AP)—The Dallas Stars can't understand "Hank" Bonura, hard-hitting first baseman. Bonura recently wrote the club from New Orleans that he probably wouldn't come to terms. His contract hadn't been mailed when the letter arrived.

Rec's Pivot Play Threatens Guards
The fate of the Rec and Guards Friday night in the third and deciding game of their town championship basketball series hinges around the Cotter-Turkington duel at the top position and the ability of the Guards to find some way of stopping the pivot play effectiveness of Waterman.

MIRROR USED TO REMOVE HITCH IN PITCHER'S SWING

Cincinnati, O.—(AP)—Taking a leaf from the book of rowing coaches, tennis players and other athletes who used a mirror to remove faults in their technique, Manager Dan Howley of the Cincinnati Reds thinks he has improved one of his hitters.

Edsel Crabtree, one of Cincinnati's best men in the outfield, batted under 300 last year. Although his speed kept him in the lineup, a hitch in his batting swing prevented him from being of great offensive value.

Try as he could, Crabtree couldn't get rid of the hitch. Then Manager Howley bought a mirror and told his outfielder to practice before it all winter. Now Crabtree reports that the hitch has disappeared.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, March 15.—(AP)—There are a few automobile manufacturers who still believe the motor industry will have a relatively good year in 1932, based upon its past experience of a weak upturn after two years of subnormal business. This confidence is not justified by the production and sales statistics in the first two months, but even the most conservative in the industry say that a great recovery is in the offing with surprising swiftness upon general improvement in economic conditions.

This is the 148th birthday of the Bank of New York Trust Company, the first bank in the city and the oldest bank in the country retaining its original name. The constitution of the bank was written by Alexander Hamilton, who personally read it to the original stockholders on March 15, 1784.

In the list of larger creditors of the failed New York Stock Exchange and banking firm of Pynchon & Company, the name of Charles M. Schwab, steel master, appears with a claim of $22,091. The smallness of Mr. Schwab's claim is mildly surprising to Wall street in view of the fact that he had just before the Pynchon firm closed last year the Bethlehem Steel Company head had advanced large sums to a partner with whom he was on friendly terms to help the firm stave off failure.

Financial quarters had considerable difficulty endeavoring to explain what, if any, effect upon the speculative markets the vote upon prohibition in the House of Representatives had yesterday. Declines in shares and grains after publication of the news was interpreted by some observers as indicating a bearish response to the dry majority. On the other hand, this was difficult to reconcile with the widely accepted fact that the vote polled a larger vote than expected.

DRYS AND WETS CLAIM A VICTORY

MRS. BOOLE SPEAKS Columbus, Ohio, March 15.—(AP)—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, Women's Christian Temperance Union National president, said here today "we are fighting a war. Yesterday's prohibitionists probably could win again were the Eighteenth Amendment resubmitted to the people."

"But," she added smiling, "why should we take chances?" Mrs. Boole was here for a regional W. C. T. U. conference.

"It's like this," she explained, "we are fighting a war, Yesterday's Congressional lift, in which the House refused to consider the return of liquor control to the states, was a skirmish."

"That skirmish was at an outpost, figuratively speaking. We might have let them by to our trenches, which we may call the

NOTICE! REPUBLICAN CAUCUS

The Republican Electors of the Town of Manchester are requested to meet in caucus in High School Hall on Tuesday, March 22, 1932, at 8:00 O'clock P. M., for the purpose of electing delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held in Hartford, April 6 and 7, 1932, for the election of delegates to the Republican National Convention to be held at Chicago, Illinois, on June 14, 1932; and for the appointment of a Republican Town Committee.

By order of the Town Committee, WM. S. HYDE, Chairman.

Dated at Manchester, March 14th, 1932.

WORLD MOURNS EASTMAN DEATH, FEW RELATIVES

Not a Victory. Anti-prohibitionists are claiming a victory in yesterday's Congressional vote which denied House consideration of the return of State control by a 227 to 187 vote, but Mrs. Boole would "just like to know why."

"Thirty-three of those 187 votes," she said, were indicative not that the voters were wet, but that they merely were willing to allow the matter to be brought before the House again.

"And that," Mrs. Boole followed, eyes snapping, "would have got them there. Suppose we'd lost in the House? We'd still have stopped them again in the Senate."

Vigorous at an age when many women are taking life easy and leaving matters of state and of politics to sons, daughters and husbands, Mrs. Boole pulses with aggressive enthusiasm when describing the W. C. T. U.'s campaign for "law enforcement."

PLANE AND AUTO SPELL DEFEAT TO MOROCCAN TRIBES

Rabat, Morocco (AP)—The airplane and fast desert automobile are proving too much for the disadvised tribesmen of Morocco.

Slowly, but with inexorable pressure, the French are penetrating into southern Morocco, building lines of small forts and keeping watch over these outposts with airplanes.

The latest native stronghold to fall was the oasis of Tafilalet, south of the Great Atlas range and for many years a rallying point and hideout for desert outlaws.

French columns in automobiles, accompanied by large bodies of native partisans, swooped down upon the oasis at night, attacking from different directions. After a sharp battle, the attacking columns met in the center of the oasis.

French officials assert that this capture of this place is the most important single operation toward the pacification of Morocco since Abd el Krim, famous Rifian warrior, surrendered in 1926.

Turning From Piano To Easel Brings Gershwin Relaxation

WARDENS TO MEET

Hartford, March 15.—(AP)—Forest fire wardens from Hartford and Middlesex counties and from New Haven county east of the Naugatuck and Housatonic rivers, will meet tomorrow at Grange Hall in Southington for an all day discussion of forest fire fighting work. The meeting will begin at 10:30 with dinner to be served by the Grange.

George Gershwin, the musician (above), becomes George Gershwin, the painter (below), when the composer of "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Rhapsody No. 2" seeks relaxation. The latter composition has just been heard by eastern audiences. The painting with which Gershwin is shown is his first oil.

New York—George Gershwin, whose "Rhapsody No. 2" has just been presented before Boston and New York audiences by the Boston Symphony orchestra, has turned to painting as a diversion.

His first oil, a portrait, was completed in three days during a period when he was preparing for the premier of his new composition. Previously he had done some work in black and white.

"If I had decided to follow painting instead of music," Gershwin said in his sun-bathed penthouse apartment overlooking Riverside drive and the Hudson river, "I would have attempted to express myself in art just as I have expressed myself in music."

Gershwin, who achieved immense popularity through his "Rhapsody in Blue" and a string of musical comedy successes, including the current "Of Thee I Sing," believes that a man talented in one line of aesthetic endeavor also has talents in the allied arts and that an artist in one medium can find escape in another.

The walls of his modernistic apartment are covered with paintings—also conceived in the modernistic manner. Even one of his three pianos is of modern design.

Gershwin's new rhapsody, which originally was intended as incidental music for a motion picture but outgrew that first conception, contains a movement suggested by

The hose was splashing far and wide and Duncy very shortly cried, "Hey, turn it off. I've had enough. I guess I've swallowed 'bout a quart of water and it isn't sport. Don't turn the hose right in my face. I think that's rather mean." The baker then gave a command. "Come, Scouty, lend a hand. Give one turn to the faucet and the spray will shut right off. Then we will rub wet Duncy. He should be dry as he can be. If we should let him stand too long, I know he'll start coughing." "You bet," said Scouty. "I'll be quick." He found it wasn't any trick to do as he'd been asked to. Then wet Duncy cried, "Hurrah! I know I feel much better now. Gee, kindly get me dry somehow." Then he began to shiver and 'twas all that he could say. The baker brought a great big towel and shortly made poor Duncy howl. "Don't rub so hard," he shouted. "You will make me turn all red." "Oh, soon you'll think that this is great. 'Twill cause your blood to circulate. And then you will not catch a cold," the kindly baker said. The warning rubbing task was done and then kind Winky said, "I'll run and get a little flour sack which we'll let friend Duncy wear. Then we can hang his clothes to dry. They'll be all ready by and bye." Thus Duncy soon was dressed up and he didn't seem to care. Then came a treat for everyone. The baker said, "It would be fun to eat a batch of cookies. I'm as hungry as can be." He took a plate down from the shelf and said, "Here, Duncy, help yourself." The way they ate the cookies was a funny sight to see. SENSE AND NONSENSE

A PERFECT DAY

When you've started the day with a lot of pep.
 And you're awing to work with a springy step,
 As the tasks of the day you've planned;
 When you've pitched right in, in a merry way
 With the work that you found to do,
 With the brain so clear the meanest job
 Was as easy as falling off a log for you,
 And the feeling you have when you go to bed
 Is a feeling of great content,
 And this is the end of a perfect day,
 Of a day that has been well spent.

An Englishman and an Irishman, riding together, passed a galloway. Englishman—Where would you be if the galloway had its due. Irishman—Ridin' alone, I guess.

A merchant has a son, Bobby, who was stroking his cat before the fireplace in perfect content. The cat, also happy, began to purr loudly. Bobby gazed at her for a while, then suddenly seized her by the tail and dragged her roughly away from the hearth. His mother interposed: "You must not hurt your kitty, Bobby."

"I'm not," said Bobby, "but I've got to get her away from the fire. She is beginning to boil."

She—Why, I can't marry you. You're practically penniless.
 He—That's nothing. The Czar of Russia was Nicholas.

One afternoon a young girl informed her suitor that the next day would be her birthday, whereupon the suitor remarked that he would send her some roses, one rose for each year.

That night he wrote a note to the florist ordering delivery of 20 roses for the young woman. The florist himself filled the order and desiring to improve upon the note said to his clerk: "Here's an order from young Jones for 20 roses. He's one of my best customers so throw in ten more for good measure."

When a modern girl starts looking for her rings, the chances are they're right under her eyes. . . . It can't last much longer. Safety deposit boxes will hold only so much currency. . . . We may run into debt but we seldom come out of it faster than a crawl. . . . The trouble maker soon has trouble making a living. . . . Some plants need renovating. Also some men's minds, do, too. . . . Plowing under every third officeholder would reduce taxes. . . . In our forties we don't bounce as well as we did in our twenties. . . . Maybe the middle class is the one that doesn't know how to distill it and can't afford to buy it. . . . Most of us forget the lucky breaks and remember only the bad ones. A lot of birds are putting their own shoe strings into their shoes now to keep down the overhead. . . . Often it's the stuff they serve at a pre-dance dinner party that makes the orchestra sound so good.

Mrs. Smith is a violinist. Her daughter has a pet Air-dale named Pal. One day the mother was practicing for an appearance at a public meeting. Pal outside the window was giving a howling accompaniment. Finally the little girl came over to her mother and pleadingly said, "Oh, mother, won't you please play something that Pal doesn't know?"

The Man—Do you really mean that that brute got hold of you and kissed you against your will?
 The Girl—Yes!
 T. M.—But I don't see how he could. He's so much smaller than you.
 T. G.—Well, I can bend down, stupid, can't I?

Slightly Inebriated (to girl on Broadway)—Do you ever speak to strangers on the street?
 Sweet Little Dove—Oh, no.
 Slightly Inebriated—Well, then, shut up.

Bill—Who was the last man to box John L. Sullivan?
 Sill—The undertaker.

Hubby—I miss the old cuspidor since it's gone.
 Wifey—You missed it before. That's why it's gone.

All prices are to be coming down in this country except the costs of government at the expense of the people.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—
 Coolidge says the time has come for the people to take charge of their own affairs. That's just what the politicians are so afraid will happen.

Now that Mr. Raskob has said that Hoover is wet and Senator Borah has announced that the president is dry, the matter seems to be settled.

Adolf Hitler has taken the oath of allegiance to the German constitution. Could it be that he wants to be president or something?
 Sweden has advanced to fifth among shipbuilding nations, surpassing Germany in this respect.
