POLICE LOCATE MISSING PAIR IN KIDNAPING

Franklin Park Servants Who Left Night Lindbergh Child Was Stolen Are To Be Questioned Today.

Hopewell, N. J., March 18.—(AP)—Police at the Lindbergh home announced today that the two Franklin Park servants who disappeared the day after the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby had been located and were to be questioned.

The pair were cook and butler for the C. Leander Lightfoots and the circumstances of their sudden departure caused the Lightfoots to make a report to police investigating the kidnaping.

They said the servants, known to them as Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thornberg, left at a moment's notice with the statement that Thornberg's mother was dying in Germany. After they had gone the Lightfoots missed some rough wood similar to that used in the ladder chisel like one found beneath the Lindbergh nursery window.

Chisel Found The chisel was found at the Lightfoot home yesterday and it was generally believed that the missing servants had been dropped as a result of this.

But the official bulletin issued this morning by H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police, revealed that the investigation was still on and had already resulted in location of the missing pair.

It also disclosed that the servants were known to police by another name than Thornberg.

"Henry Johnson (the suitor of the baby's nurse who was questioned and who is now held for immigration officials) has been questioned by investigators from this office as to the whereabouts of Paul Engenstober, alias 'Thornberg,' Schwarzkopf's statement read.

"Our investigators are still out checking on the story related by Mr. Lightfoot and until such time as they return and report their findings it will be impossible to inform you of anything definite concerning the Engenstober.

"Whether or not there is any connection between their sudden departure and the circumstances of the kidnaping is to be determined.

The Engenstober has been located and investigators will question this morning. As soon as our investigators have heard their story and informed of the circumstances we will communicate information to the press representatives.

Schwarzkopf also told of a statement by a student at a Princeton preparatory school that on the day

CAMPAIGN TO SELL WHEAT IN EUROPE

Secretary Hyde Is Studying Plan To Get Rid of Our Surplus Stock.

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—Official contemplation of an "intensive sales campaign" by the United States to place some of the country's huge surplus of wheat and cotton in European and other countries was reported today by Secretary Hyde.

The agriculture secretary told newspapermen that although plans for such a campaign were at present nebulous, there was a definite "hope" some such procedure could be followed in lifting the weight of these enormous surpluses from the American market.

Conferences on the possibilities are being held in official Washington, ranging from the White House to Capitol Hill.

A possibility that part of the $200,000,000 Farm Loan fund of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation might be employed in such a surplus selling campaign also was voiced today by Hyde. A resolution to make this fund immediately available has been adopted by the Senate and sent to the House.

Hyde said that before anything definite could be done toward disposing of the wheat and cotton held by the stabilization corporations it would be necessary to determine exactly what the conditions were abroad concerning these two products.

Walters is an expert at hunger strikes having undertaken them here and abroad. His protest while specifically directed at his own joblessness is also against general unemployment. He is growing weaker but he says, feeling no hunger.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT, SINGER, IS DEAD

Famous Tenor Passes Away In Monte Carlo—Had Been Ill Long Time.

Paris, March 18.—(AP)—Chauncey Olcott, noted American singer, died at Monte Carlo this morning.

He was born in Buffalo, N. Y., July 21, 1860. Although his greatest fame in the United States was as a singer of Irish ballads Olcott first appeared on the stage as a member of a minstrel troupe. He also achieved a considerable reputation in comic opera roles.

In more recent years, before his retirement, he specialized in romantic comedy, clinging to the Celtic tradition that had grown up about him. "My Wild Irish Rose," which achieved a tremendous popularity from one end of the country to the other in its "time was one of his most famous ballads. It was in Irish rollicking Irish lyrics, that his public liked him best.

Started in 1886 Olcott made his debut on the legitimate stage as Pablo in "Pepi" at the old Union Square theater in New York in 1886. Then he played in "The Old Homestead" famous rural American comedy drama in which William Hodges played famously. The play ran two years, from 1888 to 1890, which was an unusually long engagement for that period.

He had suffered from anemia for the past 11 years and was reported in a dying condition yesterday. He died this morning at the villa at Monte Carlo where his wife and son had been caring for him.

To Be Buried in U. S. Mrs. Olcott said the funeral would be in New York and she hoped to sail with the body from Villefranche tomorrow.

In 1891 Olcott first appeared on the stage in London. He met with great success there as in the United States. He returned to America after a short time and devoted himself chiefly to light comedies some of them written especially for him. It was in these that he traveled from end of the country and his name and his songs known to householders in the remotest sections.

He played in "The Heart of Paddy Whack" from 1914 to 1916 and starred in "Machuhalla" from 1919 to 1921.

Passengers Saved as Liner is Wrecked on Bermuda Reef

The Canadian steamship Prince David was doomed when this striking picture was taken, showing the big liner listing badly after striking a reef ten miles off the Northeast breakers of Bermuda. Eighty passengers were taken off in lifeboats and picked up by another liner while the Prince David, its bottom torn out, slowly went down with but little hope for salvage.

GAMEST KID IN NATION LOSES FIGHT FOR LIFE

Clarence Hastings Spent 177 Days in a Respirator Following an Attack of Infantile Paralysis.

Syracuse, N. Y., March 18.—(AP)—Friends of Clarence Hastings: The lad you called "The Gamest Kid in America" is dead.

The 14-year-old boy, whose fight for life was known in all parts of the country, died at City hospital this morning of infantile paralysis complicated by the shock of an operation on Tuesday for an abdominal obstruction. He had spent 177 days in a respirator.

Almost to the very end, freckle-faced Clarence smiled his infectious smile. While nurses and doctors stood around the breathing apparatus this morning and watched his life ebb away, he turned his head and said: "Please shut off the machines. They're making too much noise." Just after he died a telegram

VIOLENCE FLARES IN MINING AREA

Homes Wrecked by Strikers But No One Hurt—Militia Being Mobilized.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 18.—(AP)—Violence flared intermittently today in sections of the mining district in which an unauthorized anthracite strike is in progress.

Homes in Wyoming, Dursey and Taylor counties were damaged by dynamite blasts although no one was injured. Several automobiles containing Pittston Company mine officials were stoned and the occupants suffered bruises and cuts.

Bricks to which were attached threatening notes were hurled through doors and windows of four Port Griffith homes.

Police attributed the disorders to strikers seeking reprisal of miners who refused to join the walkout. The strikers are dissatisfied because of containing wage cuts.

Three more collieries, that previously refused to join the strike were idle today as pickets succeeded in preventing men from working. Fifty pickets were arrested at the Marvin colliery.

State troopers are being mobilized in barracks and sub-stations in the Luzerne-Lackawanna county area prepared for open violence.

"DRYS" MUM ON HURLEY'S VIEW ON DRY PLANK

War Secretary Predicts That Republicans Will Adopt a More Liberal Platform During Convention.

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—Republican prohibitionists were silent today on the prediction in Chicago by Secretary Hurley that the Republican National convention in June would adopt a "more liberal" platform on prohibition.

Senators Smoot of Utah, and Borah of Idaho, who helped draw the rigid enforcement plank in 1928, refused to comment on the war secretary's forecast, but it was recalled that the Idahoan made a prophesy of his own a few weeks ago that the 1932 prohibition plank would be similar to that of four years ago.

Coolidge As Keynote Reports that Calvin Coolidge was being discussed as a possible keynote for the convention were discounted in high Republican circles. One administration spokesman termed them "absurd."

The arrangements committee will select a key-note at Chicago, April 9, but it is expected one will be agreed on before then. Charles G. Dawes is still being mentioned for the assignment, although he has been represented as rejecting it when it was first offered to him.

POWERS IS SILENT AS HANGING NEARS

"Bluebeard" To Die On Gallows Tonight—Lawyer Tries To Procure a Stay.

Moundville, W. Va., March 18.—(AP)—Harry F. Powers, who wooed women by mail and then killed them was ready to die tonight on the scaffold.

While his attorney, J. Ed Law, sought a last minute stay of execution, the pudgy "Bluebeard" said he didn't think the move would "do much good."

Law, during the past few days has been frantically seeking to halt the hanging through various devices. Yesterday he telephoned Governor Conley to ask a stay to allow appeal to the United States Supreme Court. The plea was denied.

Three times the State Supreme Court refused to intervene and Judge William Baker, in the United States District Court at Clarksburg denied a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Given Opportunity Governor Conley followed the State Supreme Court in saying every opportunity had been given Powers to present evidence which might save him and that nothing

PUBLIC INCREASES ITS INVESTMENTS

Despite Depression Stocks Are Being Bought More Than Ever Now.

New York, March 18.—(AP)—The Stock Market collapse of 1929 and the subsequent fading of security prices have apparently failed to blunt the growing appetite of the investment public for common stocks of leading American companies.

The annual reports of large companies issued so far show an increase in number of stockholders. Many executives say more people hold stocks in this country today than ever before.

The reports also lend color to the frequent assertion that the recession in market values has resulted in removing control of many companies from the hands of the few to the multitude.

Among the concerns whose 1931 statements show an increase in stockholders are American Telephone, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse Electric and Borden Company.

American Telephone at the year end had 644,903 stockholders against 567,694 the year before. General Motors came second with 313,117 against 263,528. U. S. Steel drew up third with 223,272 against 189,990.

STATE DEPARTMENT DENIES REPORT ON "RED" RECOGNITION

MINORITY REPORTS ON ELECTION CASE

Democratic Senators Say That Bankhead Was Legally Elected in Alabama.

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—A flat denial came from State Department officials today that this government is contemplating any modification of the policy of non-recognition of Russia.

Dispatches from Moscow relating that a report was in circulation there that the United States might alter its policy because of conditions in the Far East were received with surprise.

There has been no change in the policy since the Soviet government came into existence in 1917. From time to time since it was laid down, recognition of the Soviet government has been advocated by various individuals or business interests, but in no case has it reached the proportions of a general concentration of favorable opinion.

Senator Borah of Idaho has been one of the most outstanding advocates in the Senate. While the government has adhered rigidly to this policy, the Treasury has had occasion to complain against the general importation of Russian products.

Only a few days ago Secretary Mills decided the Treasury would follow past policy and pass upon each cargo from Russia on its merits instead of holding that all shipments were barred under the provisions that forbid the importation of goods made by convict or forced labor.

MOSCOW REPORTS Moscow, March 18.—(AP)—All Moscow morning newspapers gave prominent place today to a dispatch to the Tass News Agency from London saying well-informed circles there were following with interest a report that the United States might change its policy toward recognition of the Soviet Union in connection with events in the Far East.

The report said some quarters in Washington made no attempt to conceal a desire to improve American-Russian relations in order "to balance forces in the Far East" and that undoubtedly American public opinion in favor of the continuance of non-recognition was greatly weakened.

The Soviet government, it may be said, would welcome any Washington action toward recognition but it is not likely to take the initiative again unless assured any proposals it might make would stand a fairly good show of being accepted as a basis for discussions.

OPINION CHANGING ON WAGE SLASHING

Congressman Says That Demand Now Is For Cuts All Along the Line.

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—A change of sentiment in Congress for drastic salary cuts for government workers "fall down the line" was attributed today by Representative Byrns (D., Tenn.), to "lobbying activities of certain postal employees."

Byrns, chairman of the special House economy committee, said the change was due largely to the action of the postal employees who caused the defeat of a proposal to prevent automatic salary increases for Treasury and Postoffice Department workers.

The economy committee is preparing a bill to limit government employment to 4,000,000 and an increase from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually. Whether it will apply to all employees or to those with substantial salaries has not been determined.

Byrns said "demands for wage cuts in the lower brackets have increased ten fold."

Meanwhile, hearings before a Senate committee on the Borah bill to cut salaries of farm board members and officials of organizations under the board were continued until tomorrow at the request of Chairman Stone of the Farm Board.

The Borah measure seeks to cut pay of the board members from $12,000 to $9,000 and limit salaries of officials of the organizations under it to $15,000.

SALES TAX FOES OFFER NEW PLAN

Suggest That Revenue Be Raised By Taxing Heavily the Nation's Wealthy.

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—Opponents of the sales tax succeeded today in putting into the new revenue raising bill a proposal to dig more deeply into the incomes of the wealthy than the House ways and means committee had proposed.

The House accepted amendments by Representative LaGuardia (R., N. Y.), leader of the independents opposing the sales tax, which would increase the rates upon incomes of more than $5,000 a year to seven per cent from the present five. The committee had recommended that these be taxed six per cent.

The House also approved increases from 1 1/2 per cent to 2 per cent on incomes of $4,000 and an increase from three to four per cent on the second $4,000 as recommended by the committee.

Raise 20 Million Acting Chairman Crisp estimated it would raise $20,000,000 in a full calendar year.

The action was taken shortly after the House began reading the bill for amendment.

A little earlier the ways and means committee had decided not to impose a tax on copper imports as a tax would necessitate the revision of a number of tariff schedules. This decision leaves $11,000,000 of revenue yet to be provided for if the bill is to raise the amount the committee estimates will be necessary to balance the budget.

Gets Two Weeks of Life For Murder Information

Ossining, N. Y., March 18.—(AP)—Peter Sardin, 28, bought two weeks of life and paid for it with "inside dope" on six murders.

As they were getting him ready to step in the electric chair last night for killing Frank Zappo during a Brooklyn holdup, he said: "Get me a reprieve and I'll tell the district attorney plenty."

Three assistant district attorneys from New York talked with him, flashed the word to Albany, and back came Governor Roosevelt's order for a 14-day reprieve.

POLICE LOCATE MISSING PAIR IN KIDNAPING

(Continued From Page 1.) of the kidnaping, March 1, the student saw an automobile drawn to one side of the Lindbergh lane. The student said there were ladders laid across the tops of the seats but he did not take the license number of the car nor did he notice the driver closely enough to be able to give any description.

PROBERS QUESTION WALKER'S DOCTOR

Schroeder Refuses To Tell What Was Asked By Seabury's Assistant.

New York, March 18.—(AP)—Dr. William J. Schroeder, Jr., personal physician to Mayor James J. Walker and chairman of the Department of Sanitation, appeared at the headquarters of the Hofstadter legislative committee today in answer to a subpoena.

He was taken before Assemblyman Hamilton F. Potter, vice chairman of the committee, for private questioning by Irving Ben Cooper, associate counsel.

The subpoena was issued for Dr. Schroeder after Charles S. Hand had been examined informally for more than two hours yesterday by Samuel Seabury, counsel to the committee.

Hand resigned last week as a member of the board of sanitation because, he said, of "illegal acts" of Dr. Schroeder.

Questioned for Hour Dr. Schroeder was questioned for more than an hour. Cooper, the commissioner answered all questions except a few which he could not completely answer without referring to certain records.

He agreed to complete his answers to those questions by letter as soon as he has consulted the records.

The physician declined to discuss either his examination or the resignation of Hand.

"What is there to say?" he countered questioners. "Everyone has done enough talking."

It is probable he will appear again on Wednesday, although his appearance is subject to a telephone call of confirmation.

POWERS IS SILENT AS HANGING NEARS

had been offered which would offset the verdict of the court which found him guilty of slaying Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, of Northboro, Mass.

Powers was also indicted for killing Mrs. Asta Buick Elchert and her three children, of Park Ridge, Ill.

All five bodies were found buried in a ditch near the Powers Quiet Dell home. The condemned man maintains he is innocent, that the killings were the work of two other men who have not been located.

While preparations were being made for the execution at 9 o'clock tonight, Powers refused in his cell to discuss the affair. He said yesterday he had written a song which would be published and the proceeds given to his wife. He seems to have overcome his nervousness.

Mrs. Charles Fleming, of Northboro, Mass., sister of Mrs. Lemke, has asked to be admitted to the hanging, but her plea is expected to be denied.

Has Written Song Powers whined away the last hours of life today putting the finishing touches on his song.

"Till Wait for You, Dear Heart,"—that is the title of the song, he wrote as he waited in the death house at West Virginia penitentiary.

The Rev. E. M. Giesey, Protestant chaplain of the prison, assisted him in recopying the words and music.

The slayer continues to protest he is innocent of the killings. He is not afraid to die, he said, but feels that it is "unfair" that a respite has not been granted to permit an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Powers heard the governor's decision refusing a respite in the death cell this morning after a good night's sleep.

The prisoner said he will not ask for special food for his last meal this evening, but will be content with the usual prison fare for the condemned.

Usually a prison quartet sings as the death march to the gallows is made and other prisoners visit the doomed in the hours before death. Powers wants neither music nor visitors, he said.

(Continued from Page 1.) cans, it did not follow that the vote cast at or any precinct must be discarded.

"The very fact that irregularities were general in character and in kind over the state negatives the idea of a fraudulent conspiracy, and negatives any inference of fraud to be drawn therefrom," they said.

"It indicates a general custom or manner of conducting elections rather than the presence of any evil intentions or wicked motives."

REV. HUGH SHIELDS WILL BE BANQUET HUMORIST

Ridgefield Clergyman With Reputation As Funster Engaged For Chamber Affair.

Rev. Hugh Shields of Ridgefield, one of the best known humorists in Connecticut, has been obtained as the second speaker at the thirty-first annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce, which will be held at the Masonic Temple on Tuesday evening, April 5, it was announced today by Thomas J. Rogers, chairman of the speakers and entertainment committee. Senator Hiram Bingham will be the other speaker.

Rev. Mr. Shields was recommended to the committee by several members of the Chamber, who have heard him speak. So enthusiastic were the recommendations that the committee lost little time in obtaining his services. Mr. Shields is pastor of the First Congregational church in Ridgefield and served as representative of that city in the General Assembly last year. He has no need of a press agent's ballyhoo as his versatility and naturalness as a humorist are recognized throughout the state. His talk is usually of a half hour's duration and at the last annual banquet of the Glastonbury Chamber of Commerce he kept the gathering in laughter every moment. He usually ends up in a humorous story with a moral that never fails to strike home.

Tickets for the banquet went on sale at the Chamber office today, single tickets being priced at $2.50 and a pair at $5. Last year nearly three hundred persons attended the banquet and arrangements are being made to handle a similar number this year. Reservations for choice tables will be made in the order in which they are received.

The banquet will open at 6:30 o'clock. Urbano Osano will cater, which is assurance that the menu will be the best ever. Al Behrend's orchestra will furnish music during dinner and will play for dancing from 10 to 12 o'clock.

What is there to say?" he countered questioners. "Everyone has done enough talking."

It is probable he will appear again on Wednesday, although his appearance is subject to a telephone call of confirmation.

Delavan, Wis., March 18.—(AP)—Four men robbed the State Bank of Delavan of about $7,000 today after holding W. E. Topping, president of the institution, prisoner in his home most of the night.

The robbers handcuffed Mrs. Topping and her daughter, Molly Joy, 6, to fixtures in the bathroom before taking Topping to the bank.

While the robbery was in progress, four bank employees entered and were covered by the robbers' pistols. The men escaped in an automobile they told Topping they had stolen.

The men appeared at the Topping residence about 8:30 o'clock last night, gained entrance by a ruse and remained all night.

The Coal City bank was declared sound, but a constant drain of deposits had been noted in recent weeks.

During the remainder of the year, the orchestra appears at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago, from which they broadcast over national networks.

The Leviathans are now making a tour of New England.

COPELAND'S CHARGES

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—The Senate today sent back to committee the re-nomination of Fred A. Bradley as collector of customs at Buffalo for a further investigation of charges of dereliction of duty and law violation.

The action was taken without a record vote after Senator Copeland (D. N. Y.) had called attention to charges made by Buffalo residents that Bradley, a leading Republican of that section, consorts with bootleggers, profits by the admission of contraband and puts his eyes to violations of the customs laws.

"In short," Copeland said, "it is alleged he conspires against the welfare of his country and is a party to the undermining of law and order."

ATTACKED BY NEGRO

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—Mrs. Anita Doyle was seriously injured today by a negro who attacked her with an axe when she refused to give him food and clothing.

Employees at the hospital to which she was taken said Mrs. Doyle and her six year old son were alone in her home in a Washington suburb near Takoma Park when the negro came to the door and asked first for food, then for clothing.

When she refused, he forced his way into the house and struck her several times on the head and shoulders.

When police arrived he was conscious. The first question he asked them was "Will I live?"

NEWSPAPERMAN DIES

Worcester, Mass., March 18.—(AP)—J. Colby Adams, 74, widely known newspaperman died in the Union Printers' home in Colorado Springs. When Austin P. Cristy founded the Worcester Telegram 46 years ago Mr. Adams was his foreman and directed the printing of the first copy of that paper.

SPRING OPENINGS ATTRACT CROWDS

Sub-normal temperature failed to keep the early Spring shoppers from Main street stores here last night. While the Spring spirit was dampened somewhat, due to cold weather and sickness, rampant in nearly all sections of town, many stores showing complete lines of new fashions held open house for the first-nighters. Promise of better weather today is expected to bring out large crowds to view the large and new Spring stocks at the lowest prices on record today.

Last night the dress and millinery shops received initial attention from the advance guard of shoppers. Windows blazed with lights, showing the new dresses, coats, and millinery, and against a background of contrasting color designs in black and white, blue, green and tans with potted plants and palms adding the necessary touch of Spring.

All merchants cooperating in the annual Manchester Spring Opening were optimistic last night, that with a break in the weather about due, local shoppers will take advantage of the most complete showing of Spring merchandise stocked for local customers since before the World War.

While the Spring Opening has always been a magnet for women, men and young men will find to their advantage that suits, shirts, neckwear, hats, shoes and topcoats were never lower priced, or the quality and workmanship so prime.

Today and Tomorrow All stores cooperating in the Spring Opening will have their windows lighted tonight and tomorrow night will again have fashion shows with living models. Last night's initial showing of new styles was practical and sensible to conform with present economic conditions and spectacular effects being conspicuously by its absence.

New colors, styles, special lighting and the new "dress up" spirit are all a part of Spring just breaking after the long indoor season.

ASKS PROBE ON FISH

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—Senator Walsh (D. Mass.) announced today that at his request the tariff commission has determined to make an investigation of competitive conditions in the fish industry.

Walsh said he asked for the inquiry because of the "threatened extinction of the swordfish industry in Massachusetts because of imports from Japan."

Although the commission has authority to make no more than a spy report increase in rates, which would amount to only one cent a pound, Walsh said the investigation would prove useful as a basis for future tariff action.

The Senator said he had asked the study include all competing frozen fish from Japan and Russia.

W. J. CAREY DIES

New Haven, March 18.—(AP)—William J. Carey, 27, employed in the circulation department of the New Haven Register for the last ten years died in a hospital last night. He was operated on a week ago.

HOSPITAL'S ADMISSIONS RECORD TOPPED TODAY

Patients At Institution Number 73 This Morning—Pneumonia Illnesses Many. A new record for admissions to the Manchester Memorial Hospital for the past year was made this morning when 73 patients were listed in the hospital office. The nearest approach to this number in the past 12 months was 72 patients several months ago. The increase has been caused by the prevailing epidemic of broncho and lobar pneumonia, grip, and the above average number of surgical and medical cases. Three extra nurses have been engaged by Superintendent Jane J. Aldrich until the peak has been reached.

The hospital is fitted to care for a maximum of 66 patients and every available section of the hospital has been utilized during the past two weeks since the census has remained close to 70 patients.

The staff of nurses has been working steadily and efficiently to reduce the number of patients under their care. Five births have been reported at the hospital in the last 24 hours in addition to the general run of cases.

Direct Purchasing. The Self-Serve to feature goods at direct purchasing power enables discounts below the average merchants. On a recent Saturday 1750 pounds of butter was sold. Fresh fruits are to be found in the Self-Serve from many states and several foreign countries.

Sugar is one of the big items at Hale's. Two tons is the average Saturday sale. Two thousand loaves of bread, including 25 different kinds is an average days business.

Twenty-six thousand people could stand at one time under the roof of St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

MARVELOUS MANHATTAN

New York—In the 77-story Chrysler tower which enshrines his father's chest of tools—hand made, because the senior Chrysler had no money to buy ready made tools in 1896—Walter P. Chrysler, Jr., has found a home for his artistic enterprises.

Young Chrysler, who will be 23 on May 27, dreams of achievements in the world of art which, like his father's building, will be monumental.

He was fashioning figures in bronze at 9, and has since studied abroad. He is ambitious to do creative work, of course. But he has found that it is possible to express his artistry as a publisher and a patron.

He has just opened a public art gallery on the ground floor, which he describes as a logical expansion of his publishing house high up in the tower, so far devoted to the production of fine limited editions.

Three of his de luxe editions of famous classics recently were selected as among the fifty choicest books of the year by the American Institute of Graphic Art. This was the maximum of recognition to any one publisher.

He illustrated his edition of the inferno of Dante Alighieri with seven engravings of William Blake never used before, and found a subscriber for every book despite the financial pinch.

To Seek Talent The youthful publisher will not content his attention to the classics altogether. He told me he will be on the look-out for talented new writers, as well as unrecognized but deserving artists whose work he will exhibit in his gallery.

He is so tremendously proud of the attention merited by the opening of his gallery that it would be no surprise to see him branch out into still more enterprises.

"All phases of art are too much related to be segregated," he says. Alejandro de Canedo, 29-year-old native of Mexico City, was chosen as the first artist to show in the gallery. His exhibition was under the auspices of Genaro Estrada, Mexico's ambassador to Spain and former Mexican foreign minister.

It was New York's first opportunity to see this young man's work displayed, though he had gained recognition through European showings.

Persons who are irked by the outrageous distortions of most of the modernists in art, went to see De Canedo's pencil portraits and applauded lustily.

In them they found a classical clarity and an amazingly beautiful technique. The Mexican explains that he uses pencil instead of colors because he wants his technique to stand judgment in severe black and white.

"I am modern but follow tradition," De Canedo explains. He has sought to escape a classification of my work according to any period or nationality.

Father Collects Art, Too Getting back to the Chryslers, Walter P. Sr., has humored his son in his ambitions, for the father, too, has a keen appreciation of art. He has prized collections of precious tapestries, rugs and prints.

But there is nothing the senior Chrysler takes more pride in than that set of tools he made by hand. The chest stands open so that all may see, and each device is stamped with the name, "Walter P. Chrysler."

GUARD OFFICIALS HOME Wilmington, Del., March 18.—A police guard was maintained today at the home of J. Simpson Dean, assistant treasurer of the Du Pont Company after receipt of not which threatened the life of one of the three Dean children.

The threat, police said, was made over the phone to a nursemaid of the children Wednesday night. She reported a gruff voice said "One of Mr. Dean's three children will be kidnapped unless we get some money" and when she started to reply the connection was broken.

REPORT MURDER PLOT

Sydney, N. S. W., March 18.—(AP)—Government officials were disturbed today by a warning of a plot to overthrow Premier J. T. Lang of New South Wales when the new Sydney harbor bridge is opened tomorrow and throws him overboard from the span, 175 feet above the water.

The warning came from A. C. Willis, agent-general for New South Wales in London, who said the plot had been hatched by the Australian "New Guard," an organization of workmen and war veterans which is opposed to Premier Lang's Socialist policies.

Police here said they regarded the message as an elaborate hoax, but in London Mr. Willis said he had sent it and that his information came from an unimpeachable source. The premier will be protected by a special police guard during the ceremony on the bridge.

How's She Hitting?

Quite an extensive list of commandments face the automobile driver. These, if observed, will result in longer car life and cheaper operating cost.

The average driver pilots his car mechanically with no thought of whether he is doing right or wrong. If the car runs all right, it suits his purpose; if not, he takes it to a garage man and has it repaired.

Many of these repair bills could be eliminated if he would check over his driving, pick out the faults and correct them.

There are 12 or more mechanical details of a car which are used in driving and which are under direct control of the motorist. The misuse and abuse of them are costly.

The little matter of starting a cold motor is of major importance. On a cold morning the engine should be turned over by the starter several times before the ignition is turned on. This loosens the stiffened oil and does not rob the battery of power it needs to turn over the stiff motor.

Pull the choke out all the way and turn on the ignition. As soon as the engine fires, push the choke in all the way and close the throttle in a point where the engine will not race. If the motor threatens to pull the choke out again until the engine spins evenly and then immediately push it back.

This intelligent use of the choke prevents gasoline from flooding into the cylinders and finding its way past the pistons to thin the oil in the crankcase.

Some drivers turn off the ignition of their car when going down hill. This is sometimes done when the engine is hot, as it tends to cool the motor. But it also allows raw gasoline to be drawn into the cylinders to destroy oil in the cylinder walls.

In using the accelerator pedal, never push it down suddenly when you want to speed up. This has the effect of choking the engine. When you want to speed up, press the accelerator gradually until you reach the desired speed. On a long run at high speeds, raise the foot off the pedal now and then. You will find that your momentum is sufficient to carry you along with less gas at the rate of speed you desire.

Keep your foot off the clutch when driving. The slightest pressure on the pedal will put a strain on it which will soon develop into trouble.

Handle the gear changes lightly. The heavy hand on the gear lever always results in rapidly worn gears. Seek to make changes without clearing the gears. Feet work into various positions. If the gears are hard to change, release your clutch, speed up the engine, and try again.

Keep your eye on the engine heat indicator. This little dial has been installed on the instrument board or radiator cap for a purpose.

Summer driving calls for constant inspection of this indicator. On hot days the water in the radiator and engine heats rapidly. If the indicator rises past the danger mark, see if you have enough water in the radiator. If you have, trouble lies in the timing, clogged water system, or inefficient water pump.

BIG LIQUOR ORDER

Helsingfors, Finland, March 18.—Finland has ordered approximately 225,000 bottles of "hard liquor" in preparation for April 5, when its prohibition law goes into the discard, following a popular referendum early this year.

The order includes 75,000 bottles of Scotch Whiskey and twice that amount of French brandy. Besides this, it was announced, "a far larger quantity" of spirits has been brought in from nearby Estonia.

OH, MAN! THESE NEW EASTER OUTFITS—! Bright New Fabrics Garb the Material-minded, Shirts Are as Fine as Silk, Scarfs Are Fit to Be Tied, and Broad-Shouldered Clothes Make the Man.

This top coat (left) follows the fashion for form-fitting clothes and the figure and is of a new Scottish fabric, with a darker wide-waled stripe in its tweed weave. For a suit that will make other men ask, "Who is your tailor?" a young man may select this Easter single-breasted suit, with moderately pointed lapels, two-button fastening and rounded edges to the coat. This gray English worsted suit (right) goes well with white shirt, collar and handkerchief and a natty foulard tie, with some rich blues against a light gray background. The hat is the new higher crowned gray felt, with snap brim and a rather wide black banding.

Queer Twists In Day's News

Nashua, N. H.—Here's a thief with a new outfit for Easter—and an old one which will be swelled for funerals. Creeping by night into a cleaning and dyeing shop, he stumbled right into a vat of black dye. Then he climbed out and stole six suits, all size 38.

Kansas City—After five men had identified a defendant as a robber, a jury took only ten minutes to acquit him. "I hope," said Judge Southern to the jurors, "that none of you is held up on your way home."

Dodge City, Kas.—Young Mr. W. P. Franse now knows his dog won't stand any nonsense. W. P., who is three, hit his pet during a romp. The dog promptly lifted his paw and slapped the lad, producing a shiner.

Detroit—This will be good news for those who yearn for gnus. The bottom has dropped out of the wild beast market. The price of a guaranteed gnus dropped to $200 at the Detroit Zoo's bargain sale. Nice ferocious gnus are only $150.

New York—American women stand in mortal terror lest people stare at their hats, says Robert Dudley. "They haven't the spirit of adventure in clothes. A Parisienne doesn't mind people staring at her. She is insulted if they don't."

POLISH CITIES USE CANDLES IN STRIKE AGAINST LIGHT RATE

Warsaw.—(AP)—Tallow candles and old-fashioned kerosene lamps have come into their own again in many Polish cities which are boycotting electricity in order to force reduced rates.

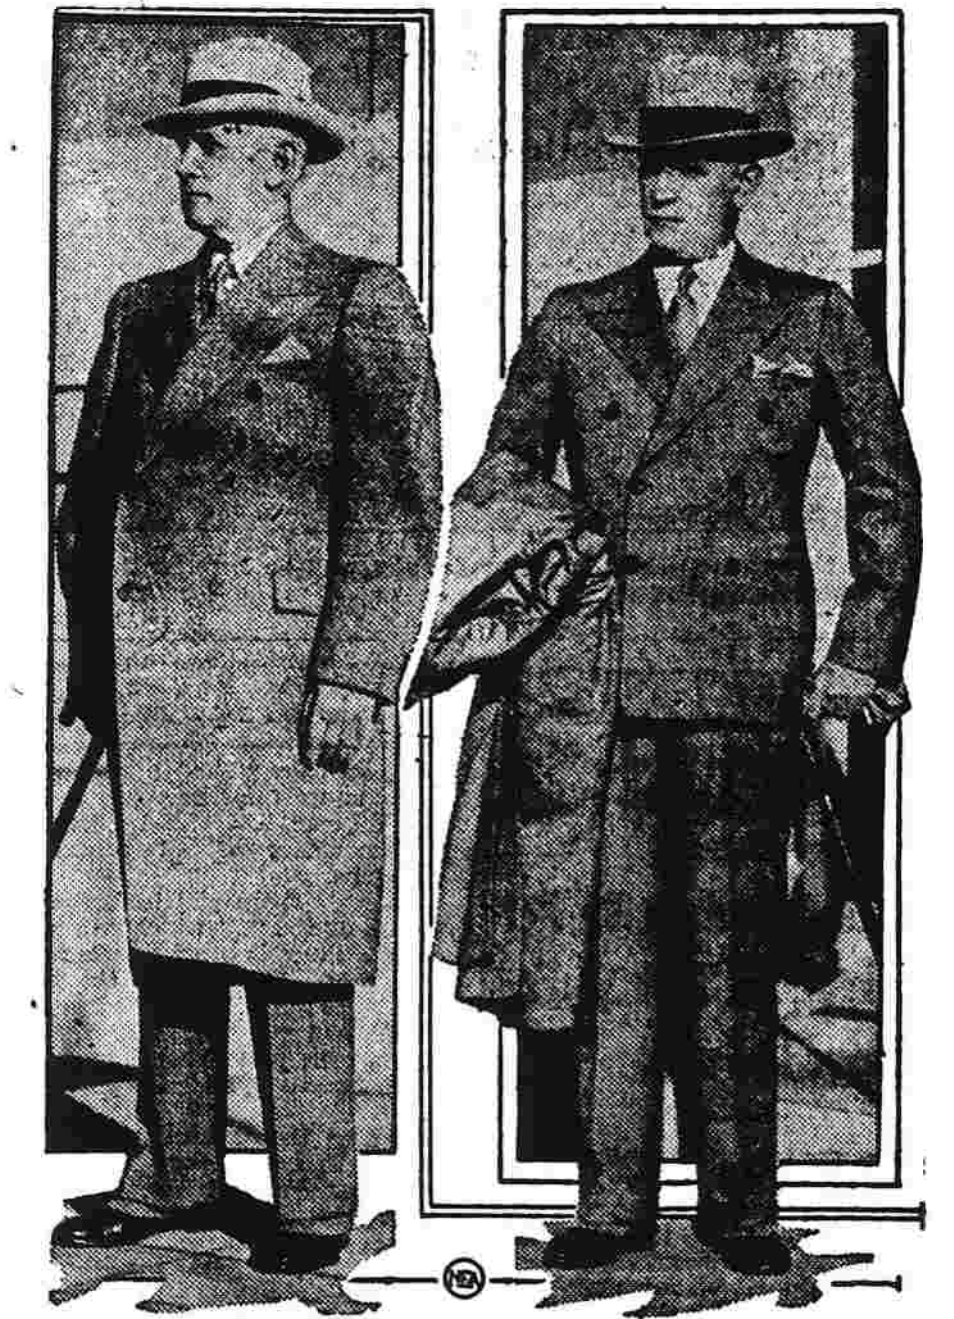

Piotrkow, near Warsaw, with some 40,000 inhabitants, was the first to start the strike. All movies were closed and the entire population returned to candles and kerosene.

Tomaszow, a large factory town in the Lodz province, as well as Kalisz and Premysl have also gone on strike. Czestochowa, with more than 100,000 inhabitants, is about to follow suit and Vilno is also considering a boycott.

Potrkow and Kalisz, where the strike is complete, are almost in darkness.

FLEET BOTTLED UP

St. Johns, N. F., March 18.—(AP)—The sealing fleet was bottled up tight today with the government steamer Kyle, out of St. Johns to the aid of the sealer Ranger, hard and fast in an ice jam 40 miles from her destination.

This suit (right) for the older business man is of small, almost invisibly checked English worsted, in dark gray, and is double-breasted. With it is worn an even more finely checked silver gray four-in-hand, with handkerchief to match, a gray felt Homberg hat, darker gray suede gloves. And he carries a cherry walking stick. His overcoat (left) is the new longer length, also made double-breasted, with lapels much like the coat. It is a new novelty jacket, in a small circular patterned weave, and is made with flap jackets and buttons exactly matching the coat.

DECISION IS RESERVED IN PISCH-HOHER SUIT

Defendant Admits Refusing To Marry Plaintiff Without Share In Property. Judge Allyn L. Brown of the Superior Court in Hartford reserved his decision yesterday at the conclusion of the damage suit brought by Miss Julia Pisch of 10 Franklin street, East Hartford, against Frank Hoher of Lake street, Manchester Green, in which Miss Pisch claims she gave him considerable money during a period in which she believed herself legally married to him, only to later learn that there had been no legal union.

Miss Pisch claims that matters came to a head when her "husband" demanded that she turn over her property to him after which they would be legally married. Hoher told the court, that Miss Pisch knew that the marriage license they obtained at the local town clerk's office did not legalize their living-together as man and wife. He admitted that he refused to marry her because she would not divide her property with him.

Miss Pisch claimed she loaned Hoher $679.50 and turned over her weekly pay envelope to him during the time they lived together. She is suing him for recovery of this money, which is understood to have been used to meet a mortgage payment. Atty. J. J. Burke acted for Miss Pisch and Atty. W. M. Harney represented Hoher.

PARROT DISEASE NOW REPORTABLE

State Health Council Includes It In Sanitary Code — Many Cases In Other States.

Psittacosis, generally referred to as "Parrot Disease," has been included among the diseases reportable to the State Department of Health, bringing the total number of reportable diseases in this state to forty-four, the Connecticut Public Health Council announced today in calling the attention of public health officials to new regulations concerning it which have been incorporated in the Sanitary Code.

The new regulations declare psittacosis to be a communicable disease and therefore subject to compulsory report. They list the incubation period of the disease from five to twenty-one days and the minimum period of communicability any time during the clinical course of the disease. They require local health officers to report suspected cases to the department by telephone or telegraph. Other regulations govern isolation, disinfection, health officer's right to prevent infected persons from leaving his jurisdictions and funerals of those dying from the disease.

Psittacosis is contracted from parrots, parakeets and love birds and is caused by filterable virus, the germ being too small to be seen under a microscope. It thus belongs to a group of diseases which include measles, chickenpox, smallpox, influenza, infantile paralysis, rabies and several others.

The only known means of prevention is to avoid contact with parrots and parakeets which might be infected, since a parrot may remain a carrier for a considerable period before the disease develops. Thus, in the purchase of these birds it is well to make certain that they have been in this country for some time without being ill and that during this time they have not been in contact with other birds that were ill.

Only a few cases of psittacosis have occurred in Connecticut, the last one being about one year ago. Recently, however, cases have been reported in several states, including New York, which makes caution in the purchase of bird pets of this type advisable.

CATCH RECORD PERCH IN SALMON RIVER

What is considered by State Fish Culturist Eben Cobb to be the largest yellow perch ever taken in Connecticut was found in the catch of carp netters operating under State permit on the Salmon River near Leville. County Game Warden Ray Brittingham, of Middletown, checked on the catch of the netters, discovered the huge perch and placed it in a fish transportation can. When weighed it tipped the scales at four and one-half pounds. The perch was placed in a small pond at Middletown where it will be held by the State Board of Fisheries and Game for brood stock.

The State is endeavoring to rid the Salmon River, Connecticut's finest shad spawning water, of spawning-eating carp and all game fish taken in the process are being placed in ponds open to public fishing.

TWO RICH YOUTHS LOST SEVEN WEEKS

Leave Harvard College Dormitory At 4:50 A. M. and Never Seen Since.

Boston, March 18.—(AP)—Nearly seven weeks ago, two young men, Floyd J. Stewart and Nathaniel E. Jones, students in good standing at the Harvard School of Business Administration, disappeared from their regular lodgings in Cambridge.

Since 4:50 a. m., January 31, not a single real clue has been discovered to account for their disappearance or indicate where they went. One of the most intense police searches the nation has known has failed to give even a hint of their fate.

Hope of finding them now hinges on the discovery of Jones's light convertible coupe, but that vanished with the young men.

The young men are members of families of wealth and position. Stewart's father is James Josiah Stewart of Garden City, Kansas, high official of a utilities holding company and prominent in banking circles. Jones's father is Nathaniel R. Jones, president of a widely known firm of Boston silk merchants who makes his home in Billerica, Mass.

Stewart and Jones were both 23 years old, considered reliable, level-headed and conservative by those who knew them.

Mid-year examinations had just been concluded. The young men had passed them and were excused from the usual study requirements during the succeeding week. They had been out with friends on the night before their disappearance but apparently had gone to their separate rooms in the dormitories. Shortly before 5 a. m., Jones was reported to have called Stewart from bed. Stewart was said to have slipped under clothing over his pajamas and left with his friend. That was the last ever seen of them. It was estimated that the pair had less than $40 between them.

The quest at first was not pressed vigorously, but, as days lengthened into a week, college authorities as well as the families became alarmed.

Nation Wide Search The aid of police throughout the country and in Havana and Montreal was enlisted. Everything that appeared to be a clue was run to earth without result. One report from the Montreal police appeared to be a possible explanation of some of the men's movements. A waiter in a Montreal cafe said he served two young men answering Jones's and Stewart's descriptions a few days after they disappeared. He said they told him they were Harvard students, resting after passing examinations, and that they were returning to the United States. They had a small coupe with United States plates. A pawn broker said a man resembling Jones had pawned a raccoon coat in Montreal at about the same time. The waiter later identified a photograph of Jones as one of the men he had seen.

But nothing ever came of this clue. A half hundred Boston society girls who knew the men were questioned. An actress, 200 college mates, and others who knew them, were helpless to aid. Today, the police are as lacking in tangible information as the week after they disappeared.

WITHDRAWS NAME

Boston, March 18.—(AP)—The name of J. C. Joseph Flamand, French consul at Boston, was withdrawn today from the Roosevelt pledged slate to be entered in the Massachusetts primary for the selection of delegates to the Democratic national convention.

Announcement of the withdrawal was made by Mayor James M. Curley, leader of those supporting Governor Roosevelt in Massachusetts for the presidential nomination. Curley indicated a protest against the candidacy of Flamand had been lodged with the French Embassy at Washington.

Flamand's successor on the slate was not announced. Curley pointed out in his announcement that Flamand was a naturalized citizen and charged the protest was a part of pressure brought to bear by opponents of Roosevelt to remove prominent Democrats from his slate. The Curley group will oppose a delegation pledged to Alfred E. Smith and headed by Governor Joseph B. Ely and U. S. Senators Walsh and Coddige.

FOUR BURN TO DEATH

Paulboro, N. J., March 18.—(AP)—While their frantic mother fought to rescue them, four children were burned to death by fire which destroyed their home early today.

The dead: Teresa Bell, 15. Mary Bell, 8. Ruth Bell, 5. William Bell, 8 months. Mrs. Lillian Bell, mother of the baby and step-mother of the others, was forcibly restrained by neighbors from rushing back into the blazing structure when she discovered the children had not followed her out as she supposed. The father of the children, John Bell, was working in a linoleum factory nearby at the start of the fire and was held back when he tried to enter the burning building. Both he and Mrs. Bell required medical treatment.

WOMEN SHOCK SENATORS

Paris, March 18.—(AP) Things were going along smoothly in the Senate this afternoon until a blast on a tin whistle made the statesmen jump in their chairs. The Suffragists were back again.

"We pay the taxes, why can't we vote?" shouted four of them from a gallery, punctuating their chorus with whistles from their whistles.

A couple of ushers took them to the nearest police station. Meanwhile in the Chamber of Deputies the committee brought back the controversial electoral reform bill, providing for universal suffrage, virtually in the same form in which the Senate rejected it at the last session. The new measure would give women the vote on Jan. 1, 1933. It is opposed by the Radical Socialists and the Socialists, with the government party remaining neutral.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(A Nervous Family)

Question: V. K. writes: "I have been drinking coffee three times a day ever since I was a child. Do you think that is the reason I am nervous? Everyone in our family is nervous. Do you think we inherited it from our parents? How can we cure this condition?"

Answer: Your family are probably all coffee drinkers because they are nervous. A nervous disposition may be inherited and become worse because children are liable to copy the habits of their parents. It is not likely that coffee causes nervousness but it is true that many nervous people seem to get a satisfaction from using tea or coffee. There are many causes of nervousness, differing in each case. Find out the cause in your own case and in this way the cure is suggested.

(Reducing)

Question: Miss Frances W. writes: "I have been following your instructions for the orange juice fast, except that I seem unable to resist 'peeing' between meals, a habit I have always had, and I have gained three pounds this week. But I want to lose 15 or 20 pounds. Also, I wish especially to reduce my hips. Are there any special exercises for that?"

Answer: If you wish to get the best results from the use of the orange juice fast, you must avoid taking any other food. You will have good results within a short time if you will stick to this regimen. The best method for reducing the hips are the deep knee bending exercise and walking.

De Valera—Ireland's New President Makes Dramatic Escape From Prison A Ballad-Singing Gardener And Two Colleens Make A Page Of History

Editor's Note: This is the second of three stories on the romantic life story of the Irish Free State's new president, Eamonn de Valera, born of a Spanish father and Irish mother at Leagrave street and 42d street, on the site of the present Chrysler building in New York City.

By MILTON BRONNER European Manager, NEA Service

Dublin, March 18.—Had Victor Herbert lived, he might have fulfilled his ambition to write an opera on Eamonn de Valera's dramatic escape from England's famous old Lincoln goal.

In all the colorful career of de Valera, the new president of the Irish Free State, there is no other event quite so romantic. There are a few more colorful events in history.

An Irish ballad singer who stood outside the prison walls and sang instructions to de Valera in Gaelic, and pretty Irish girls who flirted with warders to get them out of the way while the jail delivery was being effected were among the leading characters in this drama.

Easter Rebellion It took place two years after de Valera had been sentenced to death before a British firing squad for his part in Dublin's bloody Easter Week rebellion in 1916.

Though many other Irish revolutionary leaders were summarily shot, de Valera's death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment because he had been born in New York and therefore was, perhaps, an American citizen. His citizenship status was never made exactly clear, but there was sufficient protest on this ground to cause the British to hesitate.

De Valera served about a year of his life sentence, and was released in June, 1917, under the general amnesty act. He immediately set about reorganizing and extending the Irish independence party, known as the Sinn Fein, which was closely allied with the Irish Republican Army. As the result, he was re-imprisoned in May, 1918, on charges of plotting another Irish uprising.

On Feb. 3, 1918, came his dramatic escape from Lincoln goal.

How that escape was planned Sean O'Connell, prominent Sinn Fein leader, told the story while in Paris that same year to ask the Peace Conference to recognize the "Provisional Government of the Irish Republic."

Sean O'Connell, prominent Sinn Fein leader, told the story while in Paris that same year to ask the Peace Conference to recognize the "Provisional Government of the Irish Republic."

He said, had secretly discussed the delivery in January, and appointed a committee to take charge of the release of de Valera and his incarcerated political comrades.

The committee, O'Connell related, selected for the job a number of men "who had been tried by fire and who would not be too timid in case there was gun play."

A survey of the prison convinced them that a forcible coup would be futile; the place was surrounded by barbed wire entanglements and patrolled by armed guards.

"The next move," said O'Connell, "was to communicate with de Valera, which was very difficult. However, one Sinn Fein started working on a garden plot, of which there were several near the prison. He attracted de Valera's attention one day by singing Sinn Fein songs in Gaelic, in which he told the leader that an attempt would be made to rescue him. The warder's suspicions were not aroused because it was not uncommon for Irish workmen to be about the prison."

The Irish ballad singer returned several days later and sang a ballad, in Gaelic, in which he told de Valera that the rear exit of the prison, was the most feasible for the attempt and asked de Valera to get an impression of the key to the rear gate. In some way, de Valera got the key's impression, wrapped it in a paper with a stone and threw it to the ballad singer in the garden plot. A key was made by the accomplices.

"Belong to the Rescue But the sentries" at the rear of the prison were a graver menace to the plans of the committee. So a telegram was sent to Dublin for two highly cultured young women, both university graduates, who arrayed themselves as shop-girls and came to London.

To flirt with the soldiers and soon came to know most of the guards," O'Connell related. "De Valera was informed by code in a letter that Feb. 3 was the date set for his escape. The attempt was to be made when the prisoners were taken to the rear yard at 4 p. m. for their three-hour exercise period.

"In the dusk, shortly after 4 o'clock, the girls appeared and enticed the guards from the rear of the prison as far as possible. Then two Sinn Feiners cut a path through the barbed wire.

"At 5 o'clock, de Valera, with McGarry and Milroy (two Sinn Feiners who escaped with de Valera) sauntered to the back gate. Their friends outside crept up and opened the gate with the false key, while the sentries continued their flirtation with the girls. An automobile was waiting and it was whisked to London—while the police chased four decoy motor cars that the committee had sent into the vicinity for that purpose."

"That Irish girls played a part in de Valera's escape from Lincoln goal has since been denied by Harry Boland, later secretary of the Sinn Fein. But this is the story as O'Connell told it in Paris less than a month after the event.

Escaped to America de Valera fled to America to raise $2,000,000 for them that of Erskine Childers, who had been the most powerful influence over de Valera. On Dec. 8, when the Dail assembled to choose a senate, as provided by the new constitution, President Cosgrave announced that one member of the Dail had been shot dead and another wounded on the way to the meeting. Next morning four of the leading irregulars who were in prison were shot without trial, by way of reprisal. Among them was Rory O'Connor.

By the end of January, 1923, prisoners in the jails numbered 10,000. In May, 1923, de Valera called upon his followers to abandon their hostilities and dump their arms in concealment. The sound of firing in the streets ceased, peace returned. The resumption of normal civil life in Ireland may be dated from that time.

Through fire and blood, and with the aid of England's protecting arm, the Free State had survived. De Valera was done—but not for long, as events were to prove.

NEXT: De Valera again takes up the war for a free Ireland, independent of Britain. . . . The third and concluding chapter of the new Irish president's romantic life.

Dramatic incidents that marked Eamonn de Valera's escape from England's Lincoln goal are pictured here. Also shown are de Valera as he appeared about the time of that incident, and Mrs. de Valera, his wife.

The Irish "republic" by selling bonds among Irish-Americans. He is said to have disguised himself and shipped as a stoker. He presented himself as president of the Irish "republic," which had been formed early in 1919 when a large number of members of parliament elected for Irish constituencies had styled themselves the Dail Eireann (the Assembly of Ireland) and declared a republic in existence and chosen a president and ministers.

By the act of 1920, the British government capitulated to the extent that it set up the Irish Free State, composed of 26 counties in southern Ireland. The Free State was given a dominion status like that of Canada, but not independence. Six passive counties in northern Ireland were made into a separate union, and their parliament was formally opened by the king in June, 1921.

In December of 1921, southern Ireland and Arthur Griffith agreed to the Free State treaty after de Valera had withdrawn from the negotiations. When, in 1922, the Dail finally accepted the treaty by the narrow margin of 64 to 57, de Valera resigned the presidency and Griffith was elected by only two votes.

Civil War Follows De Valera predicted that acceptance of the Free State treaty would cause civil war in Ireland. Accordingly, in 1922, the Dail finally accepted the treaty by the narrow margin of 64 to 57, de Valera resigned the presidency and Griffith was elected by only two votes.

There was assassination after assassination in bitter guerrilla warfare. Apparently, rival leaders were tried (in their absence) at some sort of hearing, the death penalty voted on them and gunmen sent out to perform the "executions."

The war was as bitter on one side as on the other. It was a grim era of shots and screams, when ambush followed ambush, reprisal followed reprisal, and men were murdered in sight of their families in their homes at night. English soldiers, rushed to aid the Free State, likewise distinguished themselves with their heavy-handed methods.

Sir Henry Wilson was murdered in London by two Irishmen who had served in the British army. Michael Collins, commander-in-chief of the Free State Army, was killed from ambush in County Cork. Rory O'Connor was captured after he had blown up the Four Courts building with all its records. De Valera, who had joined the insurgents, escaped.

De Valera fled to the country, finding refuge in the bleak homes of peasants who were loyal to his cause. He lived as a hunted man, with an outlaw. Communication with him was tedious and difficult. News came by the military messengers. Unlicensed carrying of a revolver was a capital offense. So were many other things. Executions continued, among them that of Erskine Childers, who had been the most powerful influence over de Valera. On Dec. 8, when the Dail assembled to choose a senate, as provided by the new constitution, President Cosgrave announced that one member of the Dail had been shot dead and another wounded on the way to the meeting. Next morning four of the leading irregulars who were in prison were shot without trial, by way of reprisal. Among them was Rory O'Connor.

By the end of January, 1923, prisoners in the jails numbered 10,000. In May, 1923, de Valera called upon his followers to abandon their hostilities and dump their arms in concealment. The sound of firing in the streets ceased, peace returned. The resumption of normal civil life in Ireland may be dated from that time.

Through fire and blood, and with the aid of England's protecting arm, the Free State had survived. De Valera was done—but not for long, as events were to prove.

NEXT: De Valera again takes up the war for a free Ireland, independent of Britain. . . . The third and concluding chapter of the new Irish president's romantic life.

CLEVER SEAGULLS

Faterson, N. J., March 18.—(AP) Motorists along the Rope Ferry road, which runs through Niantic, on occasions are enabled to gain a perfect view of gulls ingeniously transforming mussels into a state where they may be eaten by the birds.

The flats at the mouth of the Niantic river are at times practically free from water and numerous mussels then show there. The gulls carry the mussels aloft. High in the air the mussels are released and the shells break up on contact with rocks or the surface of highway.

MURDER PLOT FOILED

Washington, March 18.—(AP)—An alleged murder plot against officials of a labor union was foiled last night by an eleven hour police raid in which four men and a woman were arrested.

The plotters, police announced, had intended to kill C. E. Haury, representative of the International Union of Operating Engineers later in the night when he left an executive meeting of the union.

John Fossehl, president of the organization and Frank E. Langdon, editor of the Union's journal were to have been murdered later.

Police said they obtained evidence of the attempt by listening in on conversations of the group.

Trouble in the union, police said, was due to alleged discrimination in the order in which employment is assigned. The union designates members available for each job as it offers.

Those arrested are George McSullen, 47, Chicago, and Walter Reed, Mrs. Kay Reed, Ed Johnson and Bert Wilson, carpenter, all of Washington.

Fighting between Armenian and Turkish troops was reported from Armenia.

Artillery bombardments from German guns on the western front became general. This was taken as an effort to screen the movement of German troops for a major offensive expected to begin within a week.

GERMANS SUGGEST SCRAP IRON CURE FOR SHIPPING ILLS

Hamburg, Germany.—(AP)—The world-wide economic crisis has a stranglehold on Germany's merchant marine.

In an effort to cure the paralysis of the merchant fleet and to provide some relief of unemployment, the government proposes to convert thousands of tons of seaworthy shipping into scrap iron.

Most of the 90 German tramp steamer companies are suffering greatly from the business stagnation. High tariff barriers of various countries settled the fate of the German foreign fleet, representing almost 700,000 tons out of a total capacity of 4,200,000 tons.

Shipowners petitioned the government to extend a long-term credit. The authorities declined on the ground that credits do not insure recovery.

It is the ministry of transportation's plan to prevent the sale of a part of this laid-up tonnage which, they fear, would otherwise, under some foreign flag, appear as competitors of what remains of the German merchant marine.

So the ministry advocates tons of shipping. A "scrapping premium" of $5 to $7 a ton is to be paid to the owners.

Wouldn't it be great if the politicians would stop talking so much about what they're going to do and tell us "who" instead?

TELEPHONE MANNERS

The telephone is possibly the most important of all the great modern inventions since the railroad supplanted the stage coach and the freight wagon. At the same time it is the unfair and most unmannerly institution that ever escaped criticism on the score of deportment.

A person whom we may call A, desiring to see another person who may be described as B on business, leaves his own place, makes his way at cost of some effort and possible discomfort to the place of the second party, waits until B is at leisure and finally makes his contact. He has seated himself beside his host's desk and has spoken perhaps half a sentence toward explanation of his business—and it very well may be that the business is entirely to the advantage of B and not the caller—when the telephone bell rings. Some other person, it may be C, to whom the idea of talking to B did not occur until long after it did to A, and who then lacked the interest to make the trip to B's office, demands his attention. So A sits twiddling his fingers while C has his conversation with B, and then takes the leavings of the conversational dish, so to speak.

Now if C, like A, had had the courtesy and the interest to visit B in his place of business and had arrived after A, as he certainly would have done, he would have had to wait his turn to see B. He would never in the world have thought of breaking in on A and B's conversation and demanding to be heard first; if he had he would have been told, almost certainly, where he got off. Everybody concerned would have recognized the impoliteness and illbreeding of such a performance.

Yet in countless thousands of instances every day just such breaches of courtesy go on over the telephone. And hardly anybody seems to realize the unfairness and rudeness of it all.

It is easy enough to imagine a quite different code of telephone manners that might now be in universal use if we had only stopped to think, at the beginning of telephonic service, where the practice of its use was liable to lead us. If in those days the early users of the phone had, as they very well might, started their conversations with the simple courtesy of asking whether the listener was at liberty to talk at that moment—as he would if he were entering in person his home or his office—we might all be doing that sort of thing now instead of expecting our auditor to leave whatever he may be doing or abandoning direct conversation he may be carrying on, to talk to us or to listen to us, over the wire.

This is merely a reflection. We don't intend to attempt to start a reform in the abominable manners enough to enable us, when we are gradually trying to work up spunk enough to enable us, when we are talking to somebody who has come to this office to see us, and we are called on the phone, to answer: "You'll have to pardon me; I am already in conversation; will you call again, please, or let me call you back?"

And if we ever do that we know exactly what the fellow on the other end is going to say to himself. He is going to tell us to go straight to some place. Just as though the fault were ours.

KUMMEL SHIPS

Those who have always lacked in respect for giant dirigibles, regarding them as great gawky things suited only to a wireless universe when there is no wireless universe and altogether the most extensive agglomerations of weaknesses that ever was patched together since the world began, may have reason to change their minds. Now that boogers for the dirigible builders are beginning to talk about airships as big as the Akron—and even in the face of the national deficit to set on foot schemes for a government subsidy for the big bladders—we really seem to be on our way somewhere.

The professed purpose of the airship people being to establish a line to bridge the Atlantic, the doubling of the size of the Akron suggests a very simple way of doing just that thing. All you have to do is to build that ship and then another twice as long and keep that system up till you have doubled twelve times and, behold, you will have a dirigible so big that you can anchor one end of it at New York and the other end at Liverpool—and there's your bridge. Then maybe you can run automobiles from one end to the other, or railroad trains, or hoof it. Anyhow the Atlantic is bridged. Of course the thing would blow away pretty soon and a few hundreds of thousands of persons would go with it. But that would only open the market for another dirigible—and there are still plenty of people.

Great stuff, those dirigibles! It has always seemed to us that the imagination that conceived them must have been fed on kummel—that, too, is great stuff, for creating funny ideas.

FEDERAL PAY CUTS

Perhaps the most important economy measure proposed or likely to be proposed by this Congress is the federal salary bill now in preparation by the special House Economy Committee, bi-partisan group set up in deference to President Hoover's suggestion. The exact terms of the bill have not yet been determined but it is known that a flat reduction in all federal salaries, Army and Navy pay excepted, of something like 10 per cent, with heavier cuts in salaries of $10,000 and more, including those of members of Congress, is contemplated.

It is assumed that the proposal will not be much to the liking of President Hoover, whose extreme reluctance to admit the usefulness of pay reductions is well known, but neither the importance of the bill itself nor of the President's expected opposition to it is to be measured by any mere consideration of the extent of the anticipated saving or of the reduction's direct effect on federal employees.

The whole structure of resistance to reduction of salaries of public servants has its real base in the fact that no attempt to economize in this direction has ever been made in the federal government. States take their cue from Washington, municipalities take their cue from their state capitals. City hall groups point to the fact that the federal government belittles the benefit and decries the wisdom of pay cuts. Trades unions employ government employees as an argument.

Whether the proposed salary reductions, if adopted, will net a saving of $60,000,000 a year as their supporters contend or not more than half of that, which is said to be the White House view, it is difficult to imagine any step possible to take that would be more far reaching in its influence for readjustment. If the people see Congress cutting its own salaries twenty per cent they can hardly escape conviction that reducing the pay of public officials and servants has become a matter of vital importance to the country in its efforts to rehabilitate itself.

INGENIOUS

An ingenious idea suggested by the North Dakota primaries is advanced by one Connecticut commentator who is dubious about the support of Western states being of much if any actual benefit to Governor Roosevelt in his aspirations to become the Democratic Presidential candidate. This observer suspects that the more of such dry states as North Dakota line up for Roosevelt the more the Eastern Democrats will presently be wondering how comes this great popularity of the presumably wet Roosevelt among the prohibitionists of the West; that, as a matter of fact, the Eastern Democracy may soon begin to lose confidence in the Rooseveltian position with relation to the Eighteenth amendment and Volsteadism.

This indicates smart thinking. But it seems to us, at the same time, to take too much for granted. It assumes the genuine aridity of many of these Western states when, as a matter of fact, it is extremely doubtful if there is a single one of them, outside of Kansas, a majority of whose voters would not privately, if not openly, prefer to have a President who was at least liberal in his position toward prohibition.

North Dakota itself, it must be remembered, figured in the last Literary Digest poll previous to the present one as more than two to one in favor of modification or repeal and it is worth recalling that its lex-tremely dry Senator Walsh a year or so ago announced that hereafter he would permit himself to be guided by the wishes of his constituents in prohibitory matters.

It is really improbable that there are any bona fide dry states in the West, any more, with the possible exception of Kansas.

JUST A GESTURE

Not many Connecticut people, in all probability, will be deeply impressed by Representative Lonergan's expressed attitude on the sales tax proposal. He says he intends to vote against that provision of the tax bill and in defense of his position says: "What we ought to do is eliminate the manufacturers' tax and substitute a tax on 2.75 per cent beer. Such a proposal will be made and I propose to vote for it." That is all very well as a gesture. If there were the remotest possibility of such a substitution prevailing Mr. Lonergan's position would be well worth taking and the people of his district, irrespective of party, would very generally applaud his action. But the Congressman knows, of course, that there is no such possibility and that the choice is not between a beer tax and a sales tax but between a sales tax and complete failure of the effort to balance the national budget. It is, emphatically, no proper occasion for wet gestures.

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

Washington—Most of the dope shovellers are confidently taking the Senate of the next Congress away from the Republicans and giving it to the Democrats.

It is generally felt that Democratic control in the upper branch is even more likely than in the House, which is already Democratic by a small majority.

If President Hoover is re-elected he probably will carry a House majority along with him, but the election set-up of next November for the Senate is such that a marked Republican trend is to be required if the present Republican majority of one man in that chamber is to be preserved.

Only One Dem Doubtful
 The important feature of the set-up, as conditions are now, is that while 13 Republican senators come up for re-election and only 15 Democrats, several of the Republican seats appear to be in distinct danger while only one of the Democrats whose terms expire in 1933 appears to have much to worry about.

Some of the Republicans represent states where their own re-election—or election of another Republican—will be a matter of course. But most of the Democrats up are from the south, where the same goes for their party.

The only Democratic senator whose re-election seems problematical is McGill of Kansas. His election depends on such factors as the identity of his Republican opponent, the extent to which Kansas is discontented and his own ability to convince the state he made no error in electing a Democrat.

Other Democrats whose seats are at stake are Tydings of Maryland, Black of Alabama, Bulkeley of Ohio, Morrison of North Carolina, Fletcher of Florida, Thomas of Oklahoma, Hawes of Missouri (who has announced he will retire), Barkley of Kentucky, Mrs. Caraway of Arkansas (not expected to run), Smith of South Carolina, Hayden of Arizona, Broussard of Louisiana (whom Huey Long has promised to retire in favor of another Democrat), Wagner of New York and George of Georgia.

Watson in Danger
 Republican Leader Jim Watson of Indiana is likely to have to depend on his own personal popularity to pull him through, for there were big Democratic victories in Indiana at the last congressional election. Other Republicans who will be in some apparent danger in case they are renominated are thought to include:

Glenn of Illinois, whose state went Democratic for Senator J. Ham Lewis by a majority of 700,000 in the 1930 election.

Barbour of New Jersey, now filling by appointment the vacancy left by Dwight Morrow's death. New Jersey recently discarded a Republican governor in favor of a Democrat whom it elected by a very large majority.

Bingham of Connecticut who, though he has doubtless been attracting home support by his vigorous espousal of wet measures in this session, has to worry about the fact that his constituency elected a Democratic governor the last time it had a chance to vote.

Waterman of Colorado, facing a drive of Democrats to put another Colorado Democrat in the Senate alongside Costigan.

Jones Faces Shift Fight
 Jones of Washington, who has been hearing rumors of discontent from back home and probably will be opposed by Scott Bullitt, a strong wet Democrat.

Moses of New Hampshire, popular at home, will undoubtedly be returned unless there is a Democratic landslide. Other seemingly safe Republicans who must campaign this year are Davis of Pennsylvania, Smoot of Utah, Norbeck of South Dakota, Stetson of Oregon, Thomas of Idaho, Brookhart of Iowa, Nye of North Dakota, Oddie of Nevada, Dale of Vermont and Blaine of Wisconsin.

Democrats and Republicans, nearly every member up for re-election, are now trying to put on a very special act in Congress for the benefit of their constituents.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

WRY-NECK OR TORTICOLLIS

While our necks are not as freely movable as those of birds, we, nevertheless, use our necks quite a bit for turning our heads during ordinary action, as any person who wakes up in the morning with a stiff neck can testify. A stiff neck is quite an uncomfortable experience while it lasts. Fortunately in most instances the stiffness leaves after a few hours, but in some cases it may persist for several days. One does not notice how much one moves the neck until such stiffness occurs; then every movement of the body seems to affect the neck, causing discomfort.

Usually with any form of stiff neck or wry neck only one side is affected, the muscles being stiff and contracted most frequently on the right side. Babies are sometimes born with this trouble, although it may not be noticed until the child is several years of age because at first the neck is comparatively short. Adults may sometimes develop wry neck or torticollis in a very chronic form so that, instead of disappearing within a few hours or days, the trouble persists over a period of months or years. It may also appear in an intermittent form, occurring at fairly regular intervals.

The muscle most often affected is the sterno-mastoid, so-called because the lower end of it is attached to the upper part of the sternum or breast bone and the upper end is attached to the prominent lump on the skull just behind the ear. You can feel this muscle at the side of your neck when you turn your head to the opposite side. It is so strong that, when it becomes violently contracted, as in torticollis, it pulls the ear towards the shoulder of the affected side. Undoubtedly in most cases this contraction is caused by rheumatic toxins setting in the muscle due to exposure to a cold draft. When one wakes up in the morning with a stiff neck, the usual cause is a strained position during sleep which may have caused a pressure either upon the muscle or the nerves supplying it. These forms are readily benefited through the application of heat to relax the muscles and the use of chiropractic or osteopathic manipulations to relieve any nerve pressure and increase the circulation of blood through the contracted muscle. Sometimes only one chiropractic or osteopathic manipulation will completely relieve the stiff neck, but, if the trouble continues for several days, it may become chronically irritated so that the results are slower and several treatments may be required. In other forms of torticollis, where the nerve supply of the neck muscles is affected, no such speed; results may be expected. The irritation may be either upon the muscle or the accessory nerve or in the part of the brain from which this nerve originates.

Those who are very nervous or suffer from hysteria may develop torticollis without any apparent affection of the nerves or muscles. In such cases the trouble with the neck usually appears following exposure to cold or a blow. One should begin treatment for torticollis at its first appearance regardless of the cause, because the longer the trouble exists, the greater is the tendency for the muscle to become more rigid and even atrophied. Where the trouble has continued for any length of time, I always advise an acid fruit fast in order to assist in the absorption of any toxins which may have settled in the affected region. The best home treatment is the application of heat and massage of the contracted muscles. If these heat treatments are not sufficient, one should always consult a doctor who is familiar with manipulative methods and other physio-therapy treatments.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
 (Dreaming)
 Question: Mrs. DeV. writes: "I would like to know the causes for dreaming at night and what to do to stop it. I dream every night and all night, and in the morning I feel as though I haven't had any rest. I don't eat before going to bed, and I don't have anything on my mind, as some have said are the causes of it."
 Answer: Dreaming is usually caused by indigestion, or by not obtaining enough exercise during the day.

(Mustard Greens)
 Question: Mrs. Ida May T. writes: "Tell me if it is safe to pick wild greens in the country and of the dietetic value of wild greens, especially wild mustard. Also, can you tell me why the wild mustard has such a strong taste even when very young and tender?"
 Answer: There are many wild greens that are safe to use if you have a knowledge of botany and understand how to pick out these greens. Wild mustard always tastes stronger than the cultivated variety. The food value of mustard greens is similar to spinach.

New York, March 18—Small use coming the New York sidewalks for copy while the Lindbergh baby is missing!
 You leave the subway at 42nd Street and walk into a mob that occupies the attention of cops afoot and mounted. It's the theater crowd and it's not following the usual sheep trails. They're standing four deep on the Broadway side and on the Seventh Avenue side, they're backed away back to the tightly breasted in Longacre Square. Their eyes are tilted, to a man, toward a ribbon race around the triangle that forms the Times Building. The ribbon spells out blissing words, each chasing the last—

"N-O . . . W-O-R-D . . . R-E-C-E-I-V-E-D . . ."

Women mutter to men and men mutter back to women. They stand and shiver, but they do not move. No attraction on Broadway could distract their taut attention. They wait more tensely than any gal and gallant comfortably seated in the New York theaters.

From the cheap theater seats in 42nd Street, barkers desert their posts to run to the corner, take a glimpse and run back . . . Their chant goes on just the same . . . "Big burlesque entertainment going on just inside . . ."

Three six-foot ballyhoo men from near-by movie houses forget their

Now it merely serves to remind the throngs of a certain Lone Eagle with hurt wings.

"Poor Lindy . . . Wonder what he's doing now? What he's thinking about!" . . .
 That's all the air circus means to the crowd . . .

But the stars aren't getting a tumble. A couple of reporters who have been to the New Jersey scene have happened in. What they have to say passes from table to table.

It travels down the street and up the street and into the speakeasy bars. The intellectuals around the Algonquin round table stop talking about the latest novel and play. They turn detective and advance theories. Famed fellows who were "newspapermen once themselves" sigh and wish they were "back in the game again."

The dime-a-dance girl

BY JOAN CLAYTON

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

ELLEN ROSSITER, beautiful 20-year-old, falls in love with LARRY HARROWGATE, young artist whom she meets at Dreamland, a dance hall where she works as hostess. Larry is engaged to ELIZABETH BOWES, debutante, but pays attention to Ellen until his fiancée returns from Europe.

Believing Larry is lost to her, Ellen agrees to marry STEVEN BARCLAY, 57 years old and wealthy, who has paid hospital expenses for her brother, MIKE, injured in a street accident. Ellen knows such a marriage will provide for her mother, MOLLY ROSSITER, and make it possible for her sister, MYRA, to marry BERT ARMSTRONG.

Barclay has been married and divorced. Scandal accompanied his divorce from LEDA GRAYSON, dancer, and, fearing this talk may be revived, he and Ellen agree to keep their marriage secret until they sail for Europe. Barclay wants to settle a fortune on Ellen but she persuades him to wait until after the ceremony. Barclay's lawyer, SYMES, regards Ellen as a gold-digger.

In a double marriage in a small Connecticut town, Barclay and Ellen and Myra and Armstead are married. Barclay and his bride drive to his Long Island home. The girl is terrified, knowing her marriage is to be a mistake. She reads in a newspaper that Larry's engagement to Elizabeth Bowes is broken.

That night when Barclay comes to her bedroom Ellen faints, recovers consciousness to find Barclay has suffered a heart attack. She calls for help. Doctors, nurses and SyMES, the lawyer, arrive. SyMES has been trying to reach Barclay all day. He tells Ellen the papers proving Barclay's divorce from Leda Grayson have been stolen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Symes looked at the white faced girl. He cleared his throat. "It's not so bad as all that," he said awkwardly.

"It's as bad as it can possibly be," Ellen declared passionately. "That I—that I should drag Steven's name through such a scandal—"

"Now you're being foolish, my dear," the lawyer protested. "Steven was one of my closest friends; you know that. But you and I must think now of your position. That is what Steven would want us to do."

He frowned, considering the practical aspects of the matter, and then spoke again.

"Unfortunately appearances count for a great deal in law," he began reluctantly. "Appearances are against you. Steven, in his anxiety to spare you disagreeable publicity, made the marriage appear—well rather unusual. He wanted to great pains to keep the marriage secret. The license that was not to be filed, the friends who weren't informed, the newspapers left in ignorance of his intended marriage. You can see how it looks."

"I can see," said the girl.

There was silence. Ellen's body trembled as though she were having a chill. Her tortured eyes did not leave the lawyer's face. "I'm imagining all this—it's not true—I'll wake up soon," she tried to tell herself. Then she would become conscious again of SyMES's troubled face.

She sat very still while the bitter thoughts thronged upon her. The marriage with Steven had been no marriage at all. The world would believe either that Steven had deceived an innocent girl with a mock marriage or that she, Ellen Rossiter, in her eagerness to capture a rich man, had been reckless of the fact that the man was the husband of another woman.

If only Steven were alive—but Steven was dead! And because a cruel, grasping woman, had crept to Mexico and bribed a court, his name was to be dishonored and with it the name of the girl he loved.

"But the divorce was announced in all the newspapers nearly two years ago," Ellen said in a voice that was without life, without hope.

"I know it," SyMES agreed with a short laugh. "But you underestimated Miss Grayson's ingenuity. Steven announced the divorce. All the proceedings, if you remember, were kept secret. Miss Grayson was abroad at the time, had gone even before Steven went to Mexico. She's been dancing there ever since. I admit there has been a separation—a sort of 'trial' she calls it. But she's back in New York now to tell the world she never consented to a divorce."

"She even has an explanation for her long silence," he continued. "Says she knew nothing of the divorce until a few weeks ago, and then sailed at once to have it set aside. A bare-faced lie—but we can't prove it, I'm afraid."

Ellen said nothing at all. There was nothing at all to be said.

"If only Steven hadn't been such a rich man—" she heard SyMES's voice from a long way off.

"Can't we do anything?" she asked pitifully.

"We can save you from reporters for a while," he said, frowning. "We'll keep mum until the whole thing comes up in court."

"Why do we have to go to court?" Ellen cried.

"Leda Grayson will fight to the last ditch and be delighted at the chance."

"Fight for what? Steven loved me. She can't take that away!"

The girl's voice was courageous and steady now.

"She won't take the money either," SyMES responded grimly. "We have plenty of witnesses to his wishes. No matter how you come out in the fight to be recognized as his wife, you'll get the money. I have those settlements all drawn up. God, if I'd only let him sign them when he wanted to!"

"Unfortunately appearances count for a great deal in law," he began reluctantly. "Appearances are against you. Steven, in his anxiety to spare you disagreeable publicity, made the marriage appear—well rather unusual. He wanted to great pains to keep the marriage secret. The license that was not to be filed, the friends who weren't informed, the newspapers left in ignorance of his intended marriage. You can see how it looks."

Miss Grayson was abroad at the time, had gone even before Steven went to Mexico. She's been dancing there ever since. I admit there has been a separation—a sort of 'trial' she calls it. But she's back in New York now to tell the world she never consented to a divorce."

"She even has an explanation for her long silence," he continued. "Says she knew nothing of the divorce until a few weeks ago, and then sailed at once to have it set aside. A bare-faced lie—but we can't prove it, I'm afraid."

Ellen said nothing at all. There was nothing at all to be said.

"If only Steven hadn't been such a rich man—" she heard SyMES's voice from a long way off.

"Can't we do anything?" she asked pitifully.

"We can save you from reporters for a while," he said, frowning. "We'll keep mum until the whole thing comes up in court."

"Why do we have to go to court?" Ellen cried.

"Leda Grayson will fight to the last ditch and be delighted at the chance."

"Fight for what? Steven loved me. She can't take that away!"

The girl's voice was courageous and steady now.

"She won't take the money either," SyMES responded grimly. "We have plenty of witnesses to his wishes. No matter how you come out in the fight to be recognized as his wife, you'll get the money. I have those settlements all drawn up. God, if I'd only let him sign them when he wanted to!"

"Unfortunately appearances count for a great deal in law," he began reluctantly. "Appearances are against you. Steven, in his anxiety to spare you disagreeable publicity, made the marriage appear—well rather unusual. He wanted to great pains to keep the marriage secret. The license that was not to be filed, the friends who weren't informed, the newspapers left in ignorance of his intended marriage. You can see how it looks."

"I can see," said the girl.

There was silence. Ellen's body trembled as though she were having a chill. Her tortured eyes did not leave the lawyer's face. "I'm imagining all this—it's not true—I'll wake up soon," she tried to tell herself. Then she would become conscious again of SyMES's troubled face.

She sat very still while the bit-

Nine-Year Old Boy Became England's King

King Edward VI... as the 15-months-old Prince.

BY ALICE ROHRE

Surely every American child has either read Mark Twain's fascinating tale of The Prince and the Pauper, or has seen the play made from the book. The story is of the poor boy who so resembled the Prince that he was given royal honors while the real heir with whom he had changed clothes was thrown from the palace to live among the most wretched of his subjects.

The prince whose heart was touched by the misery of his people is the baby of today's picture. He was the only son of King Henry VIII of England and his sister was no other than Queen Elizabeth. Edward's mother was Lady Jane Seymour and Elizabeth's was Anne Boleyn. Prince Edward had another sister Mary who had still another mother, Catharine of Aragon. Henry had six wives, two of whom he divorced, thus causing the great rift between England and Rome. Two of them he beheaded. But Edward's mother, died when she gave her husband the greatest desire of his life—a son.

Not Like Father, Like Son Edward did not greatly resemble his arrogant, self-indulgent father, who regarded his son and heir with a sort of idolatry. Holbein's picture was painted when he was only fifteen months old and does not show the frail health which is so marked in later pictures. When you realize the restraint and formality which surrounded Edward the pained look in his face as he grew older is not surprising. Even at the time Holbein painted his baby portrait the tiny prince had his own household—a noble Lady housekeeper, a nurse, chamberlain, comptroller, almoner and even rockers of the royal cradle! Later on he had a whipping boy who if Edward behaved was given a good lashing in his stead. It is fortunate for the whipping boy that the Prince was well behaved.

Edward was thoughtful, studious and precocious. When he was eight years old he wrote to Archbishop Cramer in Latin. At nine he knew four books of Cato by heart as well as a great deal of the Bible. He didn't have much fun and before he was ten years old his father died and he became King of England.

About the only playmate he enjoyed, if so serious a little King could enjoy himself, was his beautiful young cousin, Lady Jane Grey.

MANY DISEASES DO NOT LESSEN INTELLIGENCE, SURVEY SHOWS

Some Ailments Sharpen Minds, Study Indicates

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

There is a general impression that the child with some chronic disease is likely to be less intelligent than the one who seems wholly normal from a physical point of view. Actually this direct correlation between physical health and mental ability cannot be sustained.

Intelligence tests currently used are planned to show not only the ability to learn, but also the ability to reason. A special investigator for the Medical Research Council of Great Britain determined to make a study of the relationship of disease to intelligence by examining children before they were ill, during their illness, during their convalescence and after recovery, and comparing these results with examinations of their healthy brothers and sisters.

The investigation revealed the fact that some diseases seem to bring about a lowering of intelligence and a tendency to misbehavior, whereas others seem even to sharpen the intelligence.

Investigations were also made of the relationship of physique and stature to intelligence. Altogether, 1077 children in a hospital in Glasgow were examined and their records compared with those of their brothers and sisters.

Children who were suffering from rheumatism, pneumonia, or kidney disorders, which do not seem to have any relationship to the brain, were found to be just as intelligent as their brothers and sisters, who were healthy.

Only in cases where the disease affected the glands of internal secretion or the brain was there any appreciable departure from normal intelligence.

The interesting fact was observed that the intelligence seemed to be improved during the acute stage of any illness probably due to the stimulation associated with fever and increased chemical activity in the body.

Children of higher intelligence had in general begun to walk and to talk earlier than those of lesser intelligence.

Another interesting observation was the correlation between height and intelligence, in that children of higher intelligence seemed to be slightly taller than the others. It must be remembered, however, that this study was made in Great Britain, and that a similar study made among races which are inclined to shorterness of stature might yield a different result. One question whether it would be found that the taller Japanese are any smarter than the shorter ones.

—WHEN JUNIOR "CATCHES COLD"—

The time to cure a cold is at the beginning. Of course, we know that no miracle can happen and that it usually takes several days to "run its course," as the saying goes. But to let a cold run on is very foolish, and to allow children to run around coughing with their noses all stopped up and looking and feeling miserable, without doing anything to help them, is unwise. More things get their start, including flu and grip, from common colds, than can well be estimated. For don't you see that what a cold does is to reduce the fighting power of the system?

I believe most mothers have their own panaceas for colds, at least they should have. Almost every woman with children has a regular course of procedure from her doctor to put into action when the child catches a cold. In its very first sign of a cold appears, there are several things that may help to route it. I am not giving any advice about these remedies here. They are for your doctor to prescribe. But common sense measures never conflict with dosage. And common sense says to do several things.

First of all, aid every eliminatory organ in the body to do its duty and more. A good physic is of course the first thing. We use castor oil and I do not know of anything better. If the doctor suggests another one follow his advice. Moreover some children simply cannot keep castor oil down.

An Aid to Perspiration The next thing is to help the skin pores to carry off toxins by perspiration. A good hot drink—we always go for hot lemonade—at bedtime is very efficacious. The child drinks it after he is undressed and ready for bed. Then he is rolled in a blanket, covered up in bed in a warm room and allowed to perspire. Hot drinks and blankets will usually do the work.

This helps to induce a heavy "sweat." Care must be taken that the child does not take more cold now, as his pores are all open, and the slightest chill will undo everything. After he has stopped perspiring, dry night clothes should be put on and the child should be kept warm and in bed in a warm room and allowed to perspire. Hot drinks and blankets will usually do the work.

If there is any temperature (you should have your own thermometer and master the easy task of reading it), I can only advise you to put the child to bed at once and get in touch with the doctor. A "temperature" means more than just a common cold and should have professional advice and attention at once.

—PLAN YOUR SPRING BEAUTY CAMPAIGN—

Powders, rouge and even creams have changed their colors slightly this spring. Have you changed yours yet?

One of the most interesting new adjuncts to beauty is a liquid powder base that comes in different colors, to match the powder that goes on over it. It is soft, pleasant to use and excellent for those who are inclined to have a dry skin.

Rouge has changed more even than powders. You don't have to match your general tone any more for rouge. Especially for evening. You can make yourself something quite different, if you learn the art of using different make-up for day and evening.

Powders changed this winter and now it is no longer unusual to see a lovely girl dusting green, blue or lavender powder over her face before she steps onto the dance floor.

Daytime powders have a little more tone to them than they had last year. The tendency of clothes and make-up is reflected in make-up. It is your own fault if you aren't a knockout at the next party.

If you have time hanging heavily on your hands, take a day just to look over new beauty products at your local stores. They will gladly show them to you. And explain how this and that should be used. There is something magic about trying out some new beauty touch.

New and very useful is the cream for your hands, available everywhere now.

There are several different brands. Some you use at night,

$50 SPANKING

Houston, Tex.—Paul Stephens, 26, was up before Judge Kinnerly on a charge of liquor law violation. "Did your father ever spank you, young man?" the judge asked Stephens. "Lots of times," the defendant replied. "I'm going to fine you $50, the spanking I'm giving you. I judge Kinnerly said. "That fine is think you need it!"

Why FAT Piles Up

Modern science has discovered a great cause of certain gland grows weak usually after 30. Then foods which once fed energy go largely to fat. People slow down and gain weight. Doctors, the world over, now combat that cause. People who consult them are keeping slender now.

Cheer for Housewives

Housewives would get a little encouragement in their daily tasks from a report just issued by the New York State Commission to Investigate Prison Administration and Construction. Miss Julia K. Jaffray, secretary of the National Commission on Prisons and Prison Labor, and the only woman on the New York Commission, sums it up this way:

"The general conception prevails that housework is the only occupation available for the defective woman. The fact really is that housework calls for a higher degree of mentality than many of these girls possess. A simple illustration is the way housework demands alertness to get meat, vegetables and dessert all cooked to the right point at the same time. Since this is so, defects should be put at farm work, especially vegetable gardening, poultry raising and at such simple things as knitting underwear for women in institutions."

Decide Town Court Title Tonight at the Armory

Rec and Guards Clash In Final Series Game; Neither Rules Favorite

Loss of Cotter To Rec Places Teams About On a Par; One Choice Seems As Good As the Other; Game Starts At 8:30; Gustafson Back In Guards' Lineup; Boyle To Start At Center For Rec; Both Teams Confident of Victory.

Manchester's basketball supremacy will be settled tonight when the Recreation Center and National Guard teams clash in the third and deciding game of their town championship series at the State Armory on Main street. Each has won one game, the Guards taking the first 38 to 37 at the Rec gym and the Rec five capturing the second 31 to 21 at the armory. General opinion seemed to install the Recreation as favorites early in the week but the loss of Jim Cotter, first string Rec center, through the untimely death of his mother, has left the outcome very much in doubt. As matters stand, one choice looks about as good as the other.

Casting aside for the moment all games this season except the two series contests, the Rec has displayed the best all-round brand of basketball, the Guards failing to reach their pre-series rating. Whether the Guards' so-called slump has been the direct result of superior play on the part of the Rec Five or not, will be disclosed tonight.

Rec Better So Far Outside of some very sensational basket tossing in the first game, the Guards have failed to impress particularly in the series. Their much vaunted pass-work has not been as good as it was earlier in the season and their defense has failed to stand up satisfactorily against the Rec's tricky passing attack which functions around its pivot play.

Tonight, however, the Guards may rise to top form and out-manoeuvre the Rec to win the town championship and thus erase the situation as it now stands. If they don't, there is no alternative but to regard the Rec as the better team. If the Guards prove the victor, then they, too, must be recognized in the same light.

Cotter No Allibi The mere fact that Cotter will not play, while it reduces the Rec's apparent advantage, is not sufficient to give an allibi in case the Rec is defeated. Although a dependable defense player, it is equally true that Cotter has not at any other time this season reached the height he attained in the series and series battle. All of which means there is no certainty he would repeat his brilliant play of last Friday if he were to take part in the final game.

The Rec must be prepared to rise or fall without Cotter. As cited yesterday the Rec won two games this season when Waterman, its outstanding star, was among the missing. The Rec has also won several games in which Cotter has not participated. The absence of Cotter provides Johnny Boyle with an excellent chance to make a name for himself. He will jump center for the Rec and will face Turkington, one of the Guards' mainstays who has limited to two field goals.

"Tonight or Never" Both the Rec and Guards have gone through strenuous practice sessions in preparation for their crucial battle and each realizes that it has a tough assignment on its hands. The Guards, smarting under the humiliation of last week's crushing defeat, are determined to "wreck the Rec" tonight and it will have to be tonight or never, so far as this season is concerned.

The Guards say they were over-confident last week and that the psychology of playing on their home floor with a capacity crowd present, made them a bit too sure of the final outcome. They sort of underestimated the ability of the Rec after beating them on their own floor the week previous. It will be a different story tonight, Manager Jimmy Neill declares.

Over-Confidence The Rec, on the other hand, is equally determined to trim the Guards by a score as impressive as the one last Friday. The Rec boys are still in a jubilant mood over their 31 to 21 victory and have high hopes of winning tonight but this time it will be the Rec rather than their opponents who will have to guard against over-confidence. Tonight's battle should be very close as both teams will fight for all they are worth. There will be no opportunity to take matters easy because neither team is a game in the lead. Both are tied and one slip may mean the loss of the coveted title and twenty per cent of the net receipts as well.

Forecast $1,000 Gross While the official gate receipts have not been given out, it has been learned from authoritative sources that the gross intake to date is between $700 and $750. The third game tonight will probably swell the gate beyond an even $1,000. The expenses of the three games will be less than $300 which means that about $700 will be split on the fifty-fifty percentage basis—$350 to the winning team and $280 to the loser, a difference of $140. From these amounts the two teams must deduct a certain percentage for the Recreation Center and two National Guard units.

Many of the members of both teams are not working and whatever money they receive from the series will come in very handy. Consequently they will be playing to

Local Sport Chatter

Interest in sports lives almost exclusively in the Rec-Guard title basketball game tonight. Tomorrow M. H. S. will be represented in the indoor track and field meet at Wesleyan.

Only two out of town players will participate in the basketball finals. They are Waterman of the Rec and Mattson of the Guards. Cotter is also from Hartford but he will not play owing to the death of his mother.

Wonder if the Guards will be able to put a fish-net around Farr tonight. The Rec captain has been the most dangerous scorer in the series. Several players have been assigned to his footsteps but none have successfully kept the trail hot.

The game between the House and Williams representatives of the West Side League ought to be a pip. It is the fifth of a series that stands two apiece.

If the Guards start off in their whirlwind fashion of a week ago tonight, the Rec may find it much more difficult to come back. It will be recalled that the Guards took an 8-2 lead before losing 31 to 21.

The Manchester Green team which recently challenged the Herald Newboys is composed of Callis, Johnson, Hanson, Gardner, Cole, Madden, LaTonte and Smith. Willard Eddy of Simsbury will probably work in the place of Clyde Waters of Bristol as co-referee in the Rec-Guards game tonight with Danny Ahearn of Middletown.

Al Boggioli will referee the preliminary. He won over Sher Blaisel on a toss of coin for the job. Williams and House's are playing the fifth and deciding game of their series.

TITLE AT STAKE

Chicago, March 18.—(AP)—Dave Mair of Milwaukee and George Nichols of Buffalo, N. A.'s elimination tournament.

Grand National Won By Forbra

Egremont Second, Shaun Golin Third; Sea Soldier Eighth In 93rd Running of Grand National Steeplechase At Aintree.

Aintree, Eng., March 18.—(AP)—Once again a rank outsider carried off the honors in the Grand National as the seven-year-old Forbra, one of the youngest horses ever entered in the race, defeated a field of 38 of the best jumpers of two continents in the 93rd running of the steeplechase classic at Aintree today.

Owned by W. Parsonage and quoted at 50 to 1 in the betting, Forbra finished the trying four and one-half miles, three lengths in front of Mrs. Ireland's Egremont, another long shot. W. H. Midwood's Shaun Golin, winner in 1930, but a 40 to 1 shot for today's race, was far back in third place.

Only nine horses finished the course. Heartbreak Hill, carrying the silks of Mrs. C. S. Bird, Jr., of New York and co-favorite with Grakle at 8 to 1, was the first American horse to complete the long journey over the 32 obstacles of water, brush and stone, in sixth place.

Sea Soldier, a son of the mighty Ken 'O' War owned by a Chicago syndicate of 10 wealthy sportsmen, was eighth. Sea Soldier was the only American-bred horse in the race. He ran an even race but lacked speed on the flat.

Heartbreak Hill was well up with the leaders for the first part of the trip but jumped badly at the treacherous Becher's Brook on the second time around the course, losing valuable ground.

Forbra won only one race this season, but because of a disqualification. The seven-year-old winner carried the light weight of 147 pounds and was ridden by jockey John Ramey. Egremont was ridden by E. Page, a London stock broker.

Through the last half mile, the race was strictly a duel between Forbra and Egremont with Shaun Golin far back out of contention for the winner's share of the 9,000 pound purse.

Forbra took the last jump in front but Egremont almost passed him in the run for the judges stand. The seven year old jumper had enough left, however, to beat Egremont by three lengths.

Heartbreak Hill was the only horse that figured in the official betting to defeat in the course. Sea Soldier was beautifully handled by Lex Wilson, Toronto jockey.

The American-bred jumper fenced perfectly, keeping about the same position throughout. Frequently Wilson avoided collisions with riderless horses by taking his mount low. K. C. B., which broke his leg at the water jump, was just ahead of Sea Soldier, when he fell.

Over 200,000 Present With the crowd numbering more than 200,000, the largest in the history of the race, the classic attracted world-wide interest through the national radio hookups. Millions of dollars were won through the Irish Hospital, the London Stock Exchange, and other sweepstakes.

New York, March 18.—(AP)—For the third time since the circuit was reorganized in 1911, the Princeton Tigers have won the championship of the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball league.

George, who went down in the paddock before the race to talk to the trainer of Grakle.

Grakle, the pre-race favorite until Heartbreak Hill moved up in the official betting yesterday, got away well but refused a jump on the first time over the course. Gregalach, the third choice at 12 to 1, managed to keep up with the leaders during the first two miles but fell soon after he passed the grand stand the first time. Winner in 1929 and runner-up last year, Gregalach carried the top weight of 175 pounds.

R. K. Mellon's Glangais, winner of the Grassland Downs steeplechase in Tennessee last year, fell early in the running while John Hay Whitney's American-owned Dusty Foot refused to take one of jumps.

Sea Soldier was sluggish all the way, said Jockey Wilson after the race in discussing the performance of the American-bred jumper.

"He never made a mistake, taking all of the big leaps with ease. But he took his own time and every time I hit him, he wanted to slow down. At the Canal Turn, where many of the big field came to grief, he took the jump almost from standing."

Trainer Len Carey contributed his horse's failure to his method of training. Sea Soldier summer brought him to England last summer.

"He's still the perfect jumper," said Carey, "and if I ever bring him over again for the national it will be just a few weeks before the race."

Sea Soldier will be shipped to America and his next race will be in the Maryland Hunt Cup.

Back of the first three horses were H. D. Brandt's Near East, Sir P. G. Lawson's Aspirant, Heartbreak Hill, Lord Glenapp's Annandale, Sea Soldier and Jesse Metcalfe's American owned Theras. Annandale, third last year, tossed her rider but was remounted.

WEST SIDES LOSE TO FELLOWCRAFT

Local Team Defeated 24 To 18 In Hartford; Di Mello Features.

The Fellowcraft Club of Hartford avenged their early season defeat at the hands of the West Sides last night in the Capitol city by defeating the locals in a hard fought battle by six points, 24-18.

The teams battled on even terms throughout the first three periods but De Mello's long shots in the final period were too much for the local boys and the West Siders went down to defeat.

The local lads defeated the Fellowcraft early in the season at the West Side Rec and the Fellowcraft victory evened the count last night. The Hartford gang will play the third and deciding game in Manchester later in the season. Di Mello was the star for Hartford, while the scoring of the locals was pretty evenly divided.

GOLF TOURNEY

Coral Gables, Fla., March 18.—(AP)—The kings of American golf teed off today in competition for $10,000 prize money in the Miami-Biltmore open tournament.

84th Race On Thames Tomorrow Morning; Course Shortened Quarter of a Mile To Avoid Construction Work.

Putney-on-Thames, England, March 18.—(AP)—Oxford and Cambridge meet again tomorrow on the Thames in their 84th oared crew race, first rowed in 1829. Cambridge is the favorite.

Oxford with early training hampered by influenza will be straining every muscle along the four mile course to halt the Cantab winning streak of eight consecutive victories.

Since the war the Oxonians have won but one race and are now behind in the total count, 40 victories to 42 for Cambridge. The 1877 race was a dead heat.

The course was shortened this year for the first time since 1844, the start being set above Putney bridge because of dangerous eddies around construction work on the bridge foundations.

The change took off a quarter mile or a minute of rowing time. It will be rowed this year in the morning starting at 10:20 a. m. (8:20 a. m. E. S. T.) upriver with the flood tide.

Waterbury—Leo Larivee, Boston, knocked out Billy Hood, England, 7.

St. Paul—Harry Dubinsky, Chicago, outpointed Tommy Grogan, Omaha, 10.

Miami, Fla.—Mickey Cohen, Denver, outpointed Jose Estrada, Mexico City, 10.

SCHOOL BOARD AGAIN POSTPONES MEETING

Illness of E. J. Murphy Causes Postponement—No Definite Date Set For Session.

The meeting of the town school board which was postponed from last Tuesday until 9 o'clock this morning was again postponed because of the inability of President E. J. Murphy to be present.

Mr. Murphy has given much time to the inspection of the schools, and has confided in the superintendent and his assistants and has talked to committeemen of the district so as to secure much valuable information that was to be presented to the board for their consideration as a means of cutting costs in the schools of Manchester.

Mr. Murphy was taken ill on Wednesday and during the afternoon went to his home and has since been confined to his bed. Because of his absence the meeting that was scheduled for this morning was postponed without date, or until such time as Mr. Murphy has recovered and is able to attend a meeting.

HIS HEALTH IMPROVED 40% AFTER USE OF KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

If you are constipated, read this letter which Mr. Murray had attested by Notary Public:

"Two months ago I commenced using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to relieve constipation. I am in better health today than I have been in years, due to the use of your wonderful bran. My bowels move regularly, and my general health has improved 40%." — George A. Murray, 288 K Street, South Boston, Mass.

Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN brings two things needed to correct common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.

How much better to use ALL-BRAN than to abuse your system with pills and drugs—often harmful.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation—in serious cases, with every meal. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Use as a cereal with milk or cream, or in cooking. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Lifting the Curtain On

The Crime Trust

How Organized Gang Lawlessness Has Become America's Newest Big Business.

HOW CAPONE'S GANG FUNCTIONS

The inside organization of Al Capone's highly efficient business concern as sketched by the Secret Six from findings of Alexander Jamie, director, and his staff. The gang organization is modeled along the lines of modern big business, and its men have found out. Details are fully described in the director's article herewith.

EDITOR'S NOTE: With public attention focused on organized crime through the daring kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, NEA Service and The Herald presents a series of five exclusive articles by Alexander Jamie, director of Chicago's Secret Six staff of gang hunters and probably the best informed criminal expert in America today. Writing for publication for the first time, Director Jamie tells in his opening article how Al Capone's gang, model of the underworld, operates.

BY ALEXANDER JAMIE, Director of the "Secret Six" of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Written especially for NEA Service and The Herald.

Most people are familiar with the rise of Al Capone from a hired gunman to his position as king of Chicago's underworld, but few people know how his widespread crime organization is operated with the efficiency of a huge business concern or how it was developed to its present magnitude.

This information has been obtained by the "Secret Six" during long investigation. It shows, admittedly, that Capone is somewhat of a business genius and that, in a legitimate line, his talents might have made him a highly successful merchant or banker.

The set-up of his organization differs little from that of the average large business concern. At the head is Capone, in a position corresponding to president; then two aides, corresponding to vice presidents; next a board of strategy, corresponding to a board of directors; then a business manager, who has under him various department managers for Capone's alcohol, vice, beer and gambling rackets.

Also there is a traffic manager who attends to liquor deliveries; a buildings division that establishes the gang's breweries and alcohol plants; collectors for each area and, finally, a sort of "company police force" composed of gunmen who see to it that the gang's rules are enforced.

How Enterprise Grew
In any rapidly growing enterprise the problems of control are complex. Capone was quick to recognize the need of an organization that would function efficiently and, at the same time, provide security for himself in the coveted position of master. He profited by the mistakes of his gangster predecessors, displaying unusual sagacity in personnel management.

During the years of expansion Capone was constantly on the alert, strengthening the weak parts of his organization and shifting or removing those who failed to function to his liking, just as the chief executive of any large business concern would do.

Thus Capone built up a powerful, though unique, organization. Much of his success was due to his business acumen, though some of it was due to his ability to put pressure on his rivals and his enemies with his hired gunmen. These men got results when attempted deals fell through.

As the result, there was built up in Chicago a highly-efficient and widespread underworld organization with revenues running into fabulous figures—and all in defiance of the law.

How It Operates
Though Capone is now in jail, his organization still functions. New aides have risen to take the places of those sent to prison by federal courts.
Here is a schematic picture of how it works today:
Capone, as dictator, has as his two aides a powerful labor racketeer in Chicago and an ex-convict. The latter might properly be described as field marshal.

Next comes the "Board of Strategy," corresponding somewhat to a board of directors. These are gang lieutenants, each in charge of a particular branch of the enterprise for which his training and experience best fit him, selected by Capone to function as executives. A member of this board also serves as business manager of the syndicate.
Next in line comes the "promoter and fixer" whose job is to deal with policemen and other officers who are willing to "listen to reason," and attend to the defense of members who happen to run afoul of the law; a "supervisor" who sees that the orders of the business manager are carried out and a "traffic manager" who supervises the deliveries of beer and liquor from Capone breweries and alcohol plants to speakeasies that buy his product.

Various Departments
The rest of the organization resolves itself into the following departments, each under a department head:

ALCOHOL DIVISION—Under the direction of a Sicilian leader; controls the production and distribution of all syndicate alcohol. Principally Italians and Sicilians are engaged in this branch of the industry.

BEER DIVISION—This is headed by Joe (Shrinking Violet) Fusco, now under indictment in federal court. Fusco has graduated from a beer hustler to a position where he regulates the manufacture, sale and delivery of beer to the thousands of speakeasies in Chicago and vicinity.

BUILDINGS DIVISION—Co-ordinated with the beer and alcohol divisions. Now ably managed by Bert Delaney, also under indictment in federal court. It provides suitable locations for breweries and distilleries, or "alky cooking plants" as the latter are known.
Method of operation: A "front man" calls upon a rental agency, ostensibly seeking a location for a small machine shop or factory. The lease is drawn and upon carpenters and other tradesmen arrive to make the necessary alterations.

A close observer may notice that during the night huge trucks come and go. Later, he would be curious enough to approach closer, expecting to hear the usual sounds of a machine shop, he may be surprised to hear the sound of escaping steam from a distillery or the hollow sound of racking machines in a brewery.

COLLECTIONS DIVISION—This is a complex division as it interlocks closely with all the revenue-producing groups. It also collects tribute from former independent gangs who now pay regularly to the Capone syndicate.

GAMBLING DIVISION—Supervises gambling houses, slot machines and thousands of the larger race track booking establishments in Chicago. Most of the big gambling places have in the same neighborhood several "sneak houses," or other locations to which they can move hurriedly if necessity requires.

VICE DIVISION—Has acquired control of many of the larger houses of prostitution and maintains a "booking service" for many of the call flats. Also supplies women to towns within 200-mile radius of Chicago.

Collectors
There are collectors for each area, operating under a collections division which, in turn, is under the direction of the "supervisor" and the business manager. They also collect from the old independent gangs. The remaining activities of the organization—such as bombings, etc.—are left to the Enforcement Division. This unit is composed of Italian and Sicilian gangsters associated with the operations of the other divisions to permit the placement of the responsibility for their direction upon any one head.
In a general way, however, their operations are directed by the "supervisor." The unit is composed of known gunmen, bombers and killers.

No killing is ever done by a gang official himself, but by these hired killers whom the underworld calls "gorillas." Nor does the syndicate operate any speakeasies of its own; it sells to speakeasy proprietors, often forcing them to buy its products by threats of violence or bombing.

Capone beer is sold to Chicago speakeasies at $5 a barrel. Federal prohibition officers have wrecked many of the gang's breweries and "alky cooking" plants—usually found in alleys in cheap industrial sections where neighbors, if any, are usually friendly and silent. But new joints spring up as fast as old ones are wrecked.

How Capone Advanced
This "big business" organization of today is practically all the fruits of the labor of Al Capone who, 12 years ago, was a minor hoodlum in Brooklyn. Prior to the time Capone rose to power the gang amounted to little.

In 1920, Capone was brought to Chicago from Brooklyn by Johnny Torrio, who had himself come from Brooklyn. Torrio was ambitious to succeed "Big Jim" Collomo—a former street sweeper—who had become Chicago's first gang chief by using his knowledge of the Mafia in Italy to foster early combinations of vice and gambling groups. Torrio was "Big Jim's" bodyguard, but envied his power.

In March, 1920, Collomo was killed in true gangster style. Then, in a speakeasy on S. Wabash avenue, Joe Howard was murdered and Al Brown, now known as Al Capone, was the suspect.

For a time it appeared that the career so auspiciously begun was about to be brought to a premature conclusion, but witness after witness suddenly suffered a lapse of memory and Al continued his march to underworld fame.

Al Becomes Gang King
The "glad hand murder" of Dion O'Bannon in his North Side flower shop brought the fury of the North Side mob on the head of Torrio and Torrio was compelled to abdicate from his new throne in favor of the youthful Alphonse.

Gang wars flamed, but eventually the remaining independents were forced into line with Capone's growing syndicate.

Many of the followers of "Bugs" Moran, who tried to succeed O'Bannon, were "taken for a ride" and their riddled bodies found in ditches. On St. Valentine's Day, 1929, the climax came. Seven of Moran's gangsters were lined up against a wall and shot down. That was enough for Moran. He admitted defeat and retired, leaving an Absolute Monarchy in Chicago kingdom with King Alphonse I gripping the bloody scepter.

NEXT: How organized crime is growing in the United States. . . . The far-reaching underworld "intelligence system." . . . The part that prohibition has played.

STRANGE INDEED!
Bloomington, Ill.—"Tis very seldom that two women are friends 50 years without having a quarrel or argument. Mrs. Joanne Rustermeier and Mrs. Julia Morath, however, have known each other for that length of time and haven't had as much as a "spat." Both are 70 years old and their birthdays fall on the same day. One is German and the other Irish, which, in itself, is generally cause enough for a quarrel.

BAY STATE'S CHARITY MUST BE RECOGNIZED

Massachusetts Doesn't Give Overcoats To Jobless Unless Others Know Of It.

A Connecticut man who is staying with Manchester friends is wearing an overcoat with a singular decoration. It appears that he was working in Massachusetts and lost his job. Listed with the unemployed, he was given work on some public outdoor construction. Having no overcoat the authorities supplied him with one. Then it was discovered that he was not a resident of the Bay State and he was discharged and told to return to this state, where he belonged. He came to this town. But since it is stamped in indelible ink on the back of the coat, below the collar, he hasn't been able to get rid of evidence that the coat was bestowed on him by the sovereign Commonwealth of Massachusetts. They don't propose, up there, that their generosity to the unemployed shall go unrecognized.

The British Museum has a piece of iron taken from the Pyramid of Gizeh, which is believed to date from 4,000 B. C., and an axe head of Egyptian manufacture dating from 1370 B. C.

LATEST STOCKS

New York, March 18.—(AP)—A flurry of selling centered in the public utility shares gave the Stock Market a jolt in the early trading today, but pressure lightened after midday, and the list recovered somewhat.

The sources of the selling were difficult to trace, an in some brokerage quarters, the view was held that bears were taking advantage of the uneasy state of mind arising from the approach of the general price level to the bottom of the trading area of recent months.

Shares of companies controlled by Electric Bond and Share, notably the issues of American and Foreign Power, Electric Power and Light, and American Power and Light, dropped about 2 to 4 points to new lows.

Source close to the management of Electric Bond and Share intimates that irresponsible rumors may have provoked much of the selling in that group.

Most brokerage quarters agreed that there had been a considerable increase in bearish activity, possibly attributable to the disagreement in the Senate banking and currency committee over the Glass banking bill, which was expected considerably to delay the Senate's investigation of the market bruisers.

Furthermore, it was pointed out that the time is now growing short before the Exchange's new regulations loaning goes into effect on

TONS OF DOCUMENTS SEIZED BY GOVERNMENT

Berlin, March 18.—(AP)—Police investigators were going over tons of documents seized yesterday in the nation-wide raids on National Socialist meeting places and today's administration newspapers had a good time poking fun at Adolf Hitler's Nazis.

Most of them thought it was a pretty good joke that the Nazis, as the police charged, should have chosen the code message, "Grandma Dead," as the signal for a general putch to seize the reins of government should Hitler fall of election at the April 10 presidential vote.

"Grandma Is Still Living," the newspapers said, in serious comment, the papers protested against the tactics employed by the National Socialists. The Nazi organs, on the other hand, protested the "highhanded methods" of the administration.

ALL YE PEOPLE, by Merle Colby: A really fascinating tale of the growth of America as the hero, John Bray, travels from his Vermont home to the Ohio country along with the people of the seventeen coast states infected with westward fever.

On horseback he is carried through cities, prairies, mountains and forests, while he and the reader together view the panorama of America's growth. What might have been just a tale of adventure has been made, through the skill of the author, into a magnificent record of one of the most stirring periods of our history.

Loeb-Leopold Attorney Attracted to Hawaii By Unusualness Of Crime

Chicago—(AP)—Clarence Darrow, identified with many "causes" in American courtrooms, has accepted his latest job with no display of altruistic or idealistic purpose.
The "winner" of the famous Loeb-Leopold and John T. Scopes trials is going to the defense of Mrs. Grace Fortescue and Lieut. Thomas H. Massie in Honolulu "because it's an unusual and spectacular case—and because I've never been to Hawaii."
"I don't like to talk much about the case until I've gone over the ground personally," Darrow said, "but certainly it's the only case of its kind I ever heard of, and should yield a wealth of interesting underlying facts not brought to public notice yet."
"My whole theory about crime is that there should be better understanding of its causes."
"Just as in medicine, where the up-to-date practice is to find out the root of ills and eradicate it instead of merely treating the effects, we should get at the background of crime in general—and find the deep-seated, underlying reasons behind an individual crime before venting public indignation."
"I've always been for the defense, and that's the reason. I think there are probably many things about the Honolulu case that haven't become at all generally known."
Four On Trial
Darrow was procured by Mrs. Fortescue's counsel to help in the trial scheduled to begin in Honolulu March 28. Two navy enlisted men, E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, are co-defendants with the former New York and Washington society mistress and her son-in-law, Lieut. Massie, in the slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, a native, last January 6.
The homicide, involving a spectacular automobile chase in which a police car caught one driven by Mrs. Fortescue, occupied also by Massie and Lord, and containing Kahahawai's sheet-wrapped body, was generally described as an "honor" killing.
Kahahawai was one of five men awaiting re-trial on charges of attacking Mrs. Thalia Massie, daughter of Mrs. Fortescue, last September. The first prosecution had been declared a mistrial when a jury of varied nationalities was unable to reach a verdict.
Glad To Take Case
Darrow, now 75 years old, says he welcomes this opportunity to add to his varied experiences as a "defender."
He regards the Loeb-Leopold case, in which he succeeded in obtaining life sentences rather than death for the two youthful "thrill murderers" of little Bobby Franks, as the most interesting in all his career.
"And I still have hopes that, eventually, that case will have some good effect on the public," he said.
The case of John T. Scopes, Dayton, Tenn., school teacher prosecuted because he taught the theory of evolution, Darrow believes "had more effect on people's views, enlightenment and liberality of thought" than any other case he has handled.

"That trial," he said, "served to nip in the bud a program of thought restriction that could best be described as 'a campaign to promote ignorance.' No other state wants to undertake such a thing again. It has done a great deal to liberalize the country in educational matters."

SEEKS SEPARATION
White Plains, N. Y., March 18.—(AP)—Mrs. Adelaide Stallings today asked $90 alimony and $500 counsel fees in a separation action against her husband George V. Stallings, animated film cartoonist.

Mrs. Stallings alleged he was "incessantly intoxicated and subject to alcoholic fits" wherein he would twist her wrists. She stated that he locked her up in a clothes closet once.

The couple was married April 14, 1917 and have two children. Superior Court Justice Frederick P. Close granted an application of the husband's counsel for an adjournment of the alimony hearing until March 30 on the condition that Stallings pay his wife $87.50 at once.

It is said that more persons disappear from Paris than from any other city in the world. About 820 were reported missing every day in 1931.

One-fifth of Florida's area is under water, geography tells us. And values of the other four-fifths used to be full of water.

TO MAKE JEWELRY IN GIFT SHOP WINDOW

Sterling silver pendants will be made by a factory representative in the windows of the Vanity Fair Gift Shop this afternoon and tomorrow. A complete stock of Easter cards, baskets and carts for the kiddies, candles, new shadow silhouettes, mottoes, table lamps, novelty cookie jars and many kinds of artificial flowers are now on display by this new store. All stocks of novelties and art objects are new and fresh. It will benefit anyone looking for the distinctively unusual in art goods.

DIES AFTER PARTY
New Haven, March 18.—(AP)—Lewis A. Seiberg, 38, of West Haven, died today, several hours after a drinking party at his home.
Coroner James J. Corrigan ordered an autopsy after West Haven officials had expressed the opinion death may have been caused by poisonous liquor.
Several other persons who drank the liquor, police said, suffered no ill effects.
Rio de Janeiro has opened its first automatic restaurant.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

To take things as they be— That's my philosophy. No use to holler, mope or cuss— If they was changed they might be wuss.

If rain is pourin' down, An' lightnin' buzzin' roun' I ain't a-learnin' we'll be hit. But grin thet I ain't out in it.

If I got deep in debt— It hasn't happened yet— And owed a man two dollars, Gee! Why I'd be glad it wasn't three.

If someone come along And tried to do me wrong, Why I should sort of take a whim To thank the Lord I wasn't him.

I never seen a night So dark there wasn't light Somewheres about if I took care To strike a match and find out where.

Customer—My dear, haven't you gained about ten pounds since the Christmas holidays? Her Friend—Yes, it was those darn plump puddings!

Quiz—What's the difference between a husband and an ice man? Quiz—My feeble brain won't answer.

Quiz—Well, a husband has only one wife while an ice man takes his pick.

A man was stranded on an unknown island. He was afraid of cannibals, so he moved very cautiously. As he was climbing up a small hill he heard a voice: "Who in hell trumped my ace?" The man lifted his eyes to the sky above and said: "Thank Heaven, there are Christians on this island."

Speaker—And where, I ask you is Julius Caesar? Where is Attila the Hun? Where are Moses, Oliver Cromwell, Charlemagne, Hannibal? Enthusiastic Usher—Stand up, boys, so's the gentleman can see you.

Mrs. Henry Peck—Let's see, what is the name of the man who so much was done towards promoting peace in the world? Henry—Reno, my dear.

Clem—Why do they call a sailboat she? Alex—Because it makes its best showing in the wind.

Pop—Today's Saturday, isn't it? Mom—Yeah. Pop—Hot dog! Funny papers tomorrow.

Newly Rich in Texas A clerk in a country store in a little town in East Texas sold a lease on his 40 acres for $10,000. One of his friends asked him what he was going to do, now that he was rich, and he replied, "Well, I put the check in the bank and they won't do anything about it until it clears. If I get the money, I'm going to quit work and try and get caught up with my catfishin'."

This story is told without comment and without attempting to point a moral. A little girl after Sunday school was asked by her mother, "What does your nice teacher do?" The answer was prompt and certain, "She just collects the money."

Friend—How did they treat you in Scotland? Visitor—Reluctantly.

Of course the man who blows his own horn, always thinks the rest of the band is playing the wrong piece. . . . How dependent we are on others; the reputation of ourselves and our businesses . . . at the mercy, say, of our errand boy or a casual talker. . . . There's just one consolation about both death and taxes. When you finish one you're through with the other. . . . The most envied bride in a younger set is one who has a sufficient number of dishes to serve three meals a day for three consecutive days without washing a single dish. . . . Man sweats in a woolen coat so milady may keep serenely cool in almost nothing.

ALL SHE NEEDED "What did your sister get with the $25,000 she inherited from your father last year?" "A husband."—L'Illustrate, Lausanne.

TIME WILL TELL Self-Made Man: They say that it takes three generations to make a gentleman. Sarcastic Miss: Your grandson will be all right then.—Answers.

SURE ENOUGH? "I hear you lent Peterson $25! What security have you?" "I'm sure I shall never get the money back!"—Vart Hem, Stockholm.

THE CROOK! "There are hundreds of ways of making money, but only one that's honest." "What's that?" "Ah, I thought you wouldn't know."—Passing Show.

SELF-DENIAL WEEK BEGINS ON SUNDAY

Salvationists Plan Special Observance Next Week — How It Originated.

"Two pounds of bread, one-quarter pound of butter, the nutrition of two pounds of soup bones, a few ounces of sugar and one-quarter pound of tea" was the self-denial of the Sergeant-Major of Croyden No. 1 in England many years ago. On this simple diet the Salvation Army soldier existed for the one week set apart by the organization for Christian effort for the furtherance of the Corps work.

This self-denial week, so well-known in the Army will open Sunday and will continue for seven days. General William Booth founded the custom in the year 1880 and it has continued in force in all Corps in all parts of the world from that time until the present. It was launched at that time to combat what was then known as "The Darkest England Scheme."

This plan called for the establishment of hostels for the friendless men and women, vocational institutions where both men and women would be engaged in tasks which enabled them to arrive at a self-supporting basis, homes for children, hospitals for the poor, food dispensaries, where the necessities of life could be purchased at cost and any quantity to suit the buyer's situation.

This scheme called for funds which were not available and William Booth made a direct appeal to his constituents in the ranks of the Army. Making an appeal involving such a vast sum of money to people of very ordinary means, would be indeed a very great problem for the champion of any worthy cause.

Still, William Booth knew full well the extremes that his faithful followers were willing to go to assist him in his noble endeavors, and they denied themselves of many items of food and wearing apparel and applied the funds saved therefrom to the Darkest England Scheme.

The Founder and his subordinates were distinctly impressed with the first Self Denial effort. While the first original objects of the effort have faded from the picture, the original principles have remained intact. What the Darkest England Scheme meant to England and the annual self denial of the Salvation Army means much to the poor and downtrodden all over the world today.

All money raised through the self denial effort is to be used for missionary operations in China and Korea. The financial needs this year in the United States is $90,000. This will provide re-enforcements, will develop social centers, meeting centers, training of native officers and missionary officer's furlough expenses, Korea alone will need $50,000. The total amount to be raised throughout the world is $740,000 the self-denial of Salvationists and their friends all over the world.
