YALE AND HARVARD DIVIDE TWO RACES

Eli Freshmen Win By Three Lengths But Cantabs Jayvees Edge Rivals; Varsity Crews Pull Oars Tonight.

Regatta Course, New London, June 24.—(AP)—Stroked by a leather muscled young dynamo, "Gus" Parker, a surprisingly powerful Harvard junior varsity swept through the wind-swept waters of the Thames this morning to conquer a highly favored Yale eight, atone for the earlier defeat of the Crimson freshmen, and scramble the dope completely for the four-mile varsity climax of the ancient regatta this evening.

So strong was the wind and so rough the water, that the course for the annual morning preliminaries had to be shifted from downtown to up the river, the distance shortened to one and one-half miles and the start of the program delayed almost two hours.

Crowd Is Smaller While far fewer than the usual throngs of regatta day shivered in a biting wind that swept down the river from a surprisingly decisive three lengths victory over a Crimson boatload that was rated their equal. Overcoming a quarter length margin Harvard opened at the start, the Eli youngsters raced steadily away, increasing the lead at each quarter until the full lengths of open water showed at the finish.

Even more surprising however, was the conquest of the Harvard junior varsity that completely outdistanced the Cantab crew in a different complexion on the varsity due scheduled for 6:15 p. m. (E. S. T.)

Never relinquishing a tiny edge gained at the start, having a typical Harvard "front piece" factor stroked a freewheeling Yale eight that was badly washed out at the finish, John Atwood of Springfield, No. 5 in the Yale boat, collapsed at the finish.

The experts rating the Harvard varsity a full ten lengths better than its own junior varsity, predicted that Yale would race away with the varsity struggle. The Yale Jayvees considered nowhere's near ten lengths worse than the Yale varsity were expected to trounce the Harvard Jayvees by several lengths.

Regatta Course, New London, June 24.—(AP)—Yale and Harvard split even in the first two races of the 70th regatta between the two famous universities on the Thames today. Yale won the opening event, the freshmen race, by three lengths but Harvard came back to win the junior varsity by a length.

Both races were rowed over a course of a mile and a half, instead of the customary two miles because of a stiff head wind which made

ALLEN TO DIRECT PUBLICITY WORK

Former Senator From Kansas Appointed By President Hoover For Post.

Washington, June 24.—(AP)—At the request of President Hoover, Henry J. Allen, former Senator from Kansas, today agreed to handle publicity for the Republican presidential campaign.

After a conference with the President, Allen said principal publicity headquarters would be established in Chicago and branch offices in Washington and New York.

He indicated present plans call for James L. West, publicity director for the National committee, to head the activities in Washington.

Allen will take over his post at once.

The Kansas was director of publicity for Mr. Hoover in 1928.

Shortly after the election of Charles Curtis to the vice presidency Allen was appointed to succeed him as senator from Kansas, but was defeated the following year by Senator McGill, a Democrat.

Since that time he has served with the St. Lawrence river commission and as assistant to Charles C. Dawes, former president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

HERRIOT, VON PAPAN CONFER ON DEBTS

Important Meeting Which May Have Decisive Effect On Reparations.

Lausanne, Switzerland, June 24.—(AP)—Important Franco-German negotiations which may have a decisive effect on the reparations conference here opened today with a half-hour conversation between Chancellor von Papen of Germany and Premier Herriot of France.

Their chief problem is to discover how far each can go by way of compromise on the various economic proposals which each side has advanced.

Before their meeting ended they called in a score of associates and after two hours the statesmen left the conference room arm in arm.

M. Herriot, paraphrasing an old poem by Heine said: "Die Luft ist kuehl aber es dunkelt nicht." (The air is cool but it is not getting dark.)

German Finances During this session Count Scherwin von Krosigk, the German minister of finance, submitted a detailed explanation of the bad state of the German finances.

He learned the fundamentals at issue were not approached, however, and that the Franco-German discussions will continue.

The Belgian delegation outlined this morning a plan which was submitted to the Germans yesterday.

This would set up a great German public utility trust administered by the Bank for International Settlements as trustee and also envisaged an international credit institution to aid the Danubian countries.

Further, the plan would provide for a gradual lowering of tariffs on the principle of the arrangement between Belgium and the Netherlands, who have agreed to make progressive cuts in their tariffs over a period of years until a stipulated level is reached.

Senator Moses (R., N. H.) after a conference with Mr. Hoover said he had talked politics. Asked what lines the conference had taken, he replied only that it took "political lines."

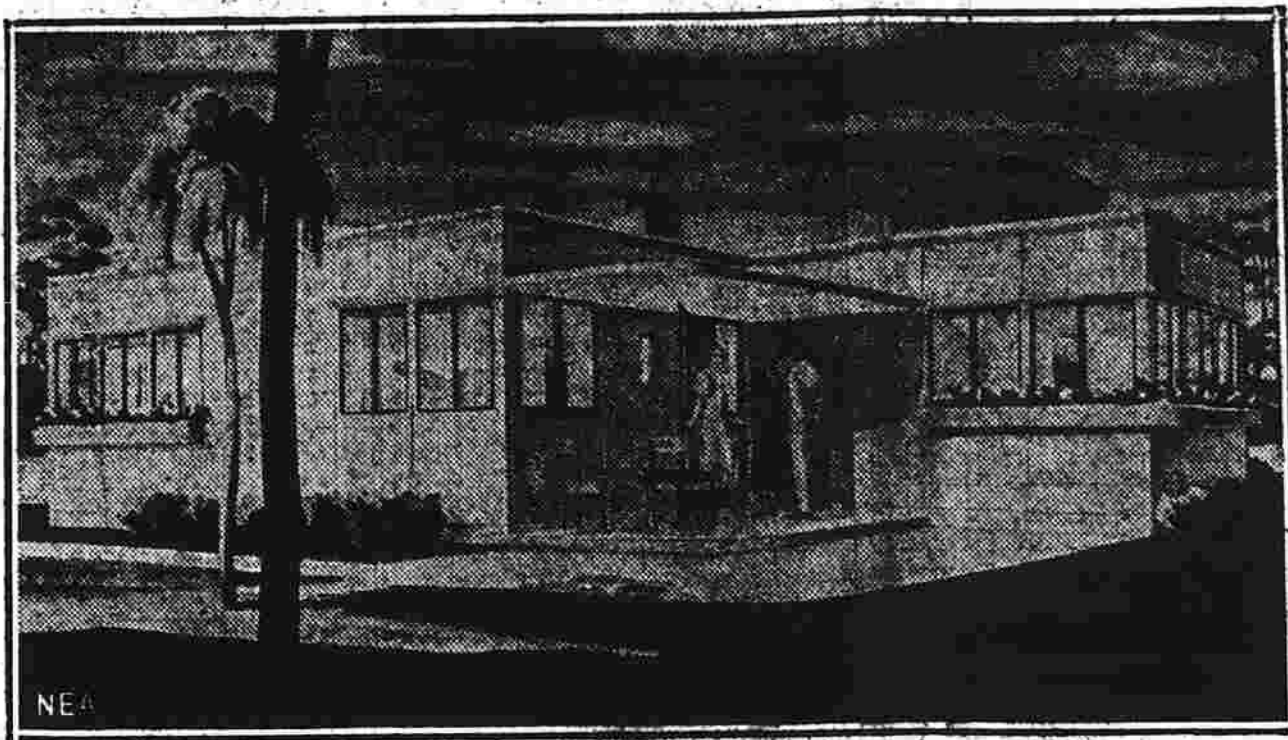

Ray Benjamin, of California, who has been in the capital for some time supposedly as an aide to the president, conferred with Walter H. Newton, White House secretary in charge of political affairs. As usual, he said upon his departure he "never talked to newspaper men."

The president also saw William Mila, a Detroit banker, Eugene Meyer, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, Senator Hastings (R., Del.) and Henry Allen, former Senator from Kansas, who is now with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"Fordized" Houses to Be Sold Like Automobiles

Soon you may be able to buy a home as you would an automobile—from an agency dealer, on time payments, and with a trade-in value. For the "mass production" of one-story steel houses, like the one sketched above, is planned by a new corporation formed in New York. The houses are to be made of pressed steel with five and six rooms. Completely equipped with electric refrigeration, heating units, plumbing and wiring, the structures would be sold for $3600 and less at rates of $30 a month.

ANTI-ROOSEVELT FEELING IS GROWING IN CHICAGO

Other Candidates Unite To Oppose Elimination of Two-Thirds Rule Which May Balk N. Y. Governor's Program.

Chicago, June 24.—(AP)—Anti-Roosevelt warriors from half a dozen presidential camps rallied today around the two-thirds standards of the Roosevelt campaign to oppose the confident march of the Rooseveltians against it.

Threats of a Third Party came from both this dispute and the row over the platform. Governor Murray of Oklahoma, one of the presidential contenders, said abrogation of the rule would mean the breakdown of the party.

A university president told the resolutions committee failure to take a clear, unequivocal stand on the economic issues would result in a new party being set up.

From the followers of most of the presidential candidates who have opened quarters, including Garner, Byrd, Smith and Traylor, there came protests against abolition of the rule. Senator Glass of Virginia, one of the party stalwarts, joined in them.

James A. Farley, leader for Franklin D. Roosevelt, said, however, his group already had counted

PRESIDENT IS BUSY PLANNING CAMPAIGN

Sees Number of Leaders To Talk About Finances and Other Political Matters.

Washington, June 24.—(AP)—The White House today stirred with political activity as President Hoover and his aides engaged in a busy round of conferences.

Joseph P. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican National committee, conferred with White House aides and reported later he felt more optimistic over the collection of campaign funds.

Nutt said he believed the prohibition plank would aid in obtaining contributions.

He mentioned Elias Strawn of Chicago as possible chairman for campaign contributions in Illinois, and said he hoped to obtain the services of Jeremiah Milbank of New York as eastern treasurer.

Little effort will be made to collect funds in the south, he said.

Talks Politics Senator Moses (R., N. H.) after a conference with Mr. Hoover said he had talked politics. Asked what lines the conference had taken, he replied only that it took "political lines."

Well Known Citizen Passes Away At Hospital—Was Socialistic Leader.

William H. Schildge, one of Manchester's well known citizens, died at a hospital here today.

Mr. Schildge was a prominent Socialist and Union Labor leader for many years, died at the Manchester Memorial hospital late last night following a shock which he suffered May 29. He was a native of Manchester and had lived here nearly all of his 70 years.

At Hospital 3 Weeks The unexpectedness of his passing adds to the shock which the news gives the community. Although confined to the hospital a little over three weeks, Mr. Schildge was not considered to be in a very serious condition. In fact plans had been made for his return home within a week or two. Yesterday morning it became necessary to place a day nurse in attendance but as late as 8 o'clock last night when the family visited him there was no indication that the end was but a few hours away.

Mr. Schildge chatted with his wife, son and daughter and even talked about coming home. Less than four hours later he was dead. The end came at 11:25 with all immediate members of the family at his bedside. His passing was peaceful. During his stay in the hospital, Mr. Schildge spent most of his time reading history books.

Well Read He was an unusually well read man and included in his extensive library at his home at 137 Spruce street, he had the expensive works of many internationally famous writers from many foreign countries. It was Mr. Schildge's habit to read extensively every morning, both before and during breakfast, then enter his printing shop for a long day's work after which he usually topped off the day with another book.

Use Soap Bubbles to Test Strength of Skyscrapers

New Haven, Conn., June 24.—(AP)—Soap bubbles can be used to test the strength of a skyscraper's steel beams.

Prof. F. A. Cushman of the University of Michigan explained to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers today a method he has developed to determine the shearing stresses in torsion, or twisting, and bending of metal cross sections.

By his soap bubble apparatus, he has determined that torsion stress is as much as 50 per cent greater than hitherto believed. Thus, entirely new computations may be established in structural engineering.

Over an opening, the exact size and shape of the cross section of the thicker white torsion stress he is determining. Prof. Cushman stretches a film of soap. Then he forces air underneath to round the film slightly, giving the effect of part of the surface of a bubble.

With a pointer he makes a contour of the film by a series of dots in much the same manner as a surveyor draws a contour map of a hill.

The slope of the soap film at the boundary is used in determining the shearing stress, for its mathematical equation is the same as that of the cross section of the steel beam or bar.

The process is similar for finding the shearing stress of a beam subjected to bending, except that air is not forced underneath the surface, which is irregular instead of flat.

SUICIDE VERDICT IN FERGUSON CASE

First Woman Elected To New Hampshire Senate, Kills Herself.

Bristol, N. H., June 24.—(AP)—Her health today was believed the cause of the suicide of Mrs. E. Maude Ferguson, first woman elected to the New Hampshire State Senate and a delegate to the Republican National convention last week.

She was found shot through the heart in the yard of her home last night at 11:30 p. m. by Dr. W. R. Gardner of Plymouth. The verdict of suicide.

Mrs. Ferguson had been in poor health for some months and while a delegate to the Republican convention had, for that reason, been unable to attend. Her body was found by her husband. A pistol was lying nearby.

She had been active in New Hampshire politics since women were enfranchised in that state in 1912. She served several terms on the Bristol school board and in 1926 was elected a State Representative.

In 1930 she won a three-cornered fight for the Republican nomination for State Senator from the Fifth New Hampshire District. Endorsed by the Democratic Party also, she was unanimously elected to the Senate. Her work in that body has been quiet but outstanding.

She was born in Danvers, Mass., 48 years ago. She leaves her husband, Samuel Ferguson, a road and building contractor.

WIND FELS TREE ON CAR, ONE HURT

Mrs. Emma M. Glover of This Town Injured—Lights Out As Wires Break Down.

A windstorm of hurricane proportions swept out of the northwest at 8 o'clock last night accompanied by a slight shower. The storm was preceded by heavy black clouds against a background of sickly yellow dust clouds which had swept down the Connecticut river valley, picking up the heavy dust bank as it progressed.

Tree Hits Car During the height of the storm a large maple tree, 40 inches in diameter, was blown across the highway near the home of Arthur C. Woodruff at the top of McLean Hill on Tolland Turnpike, striking an automobile being driven towards Manchester by Walter L. Royal, 75, of Hartford. With Royal at the time was Mrs. Emma M. Glover, of 449 Main street, who was cut on the face and nose by broken glass. The heavy limb crushed in the radiator hood and demolished the windshield, and the steering wheel was snapped off.

Mrs. Glover was taken to the Manchester Memorial hospital where her injuries were treated. Immediately after the accident at McLean Hill a call was made to the town highway department, and Fred Lewis with two town employees drove to the scene of the accident and cut the large tree up into short lengths with cross-cut

REVOLUTION IN SIAM; ROYAL FAMILY SEIZED

Would Deny Al Smith Floor At Convention

Nashville, Tenn., June 24.—(AP)—J. M. Gardenhire, a delegate to the Democratic National convention, announced today that he would sponsor a resolution to deny Governor Alfred E. Smith the privileges of the convention floor and to declare him ineligible as a presidential candidate "unless and until he assures the delegates that he will abide the action of the convention and support its nominee."

Gardenhire, councillor general of Tennessee and a Smith supporter four years ago, issued a statement, attacking the former governor for his "remarkable interview" in Chicago a few days ago "in which he declined to say whether or not he would support the nominee for President to be made at the Democratic convention in Chicago next week."

"The Democrats of the nation," Gardenhire added, "must have been amazed and shocked" at the interview.

His statement: "It is almost unbelievable that former Governor Smith would assume such an attitude, especially in view of the fact that he has been showered with favors and honors at the hands of the Democratic Party."

The statement continued: "It is almost unbelievable that former Governor Smith would assume such an attitude, especially in view of the fact that he has been showered with favors and honors at the hands of the Democratic Party."

"It is high time to deal vigorously with a man who seeks to thwart the will of the majority of the party and who obviously intends to wreck it unless he can coerce the party into accepting his will with reference to candidate and platform."

Constitutional Monarchy Established—King and Queen Held As Army and Navy Mutinies—Bangkok Quiet and Only One Man Killed—Revolt Comes As Complete Surprise.

Bangkok, Siam, June 24.—A constitutional monarchy was established in Siam today after a sudden but brief revolution in which only one man was killed.

The Army and Navy rebelled without warning and the city was taken completely by surprise as mutinous troops poured into the streets afoot and in military tanks. A number of them had machine guns.

Berlin, June 24.—(AP)—Margareta Eisdorf, German woman fier, telephoned the newspaper Vossische Zeitung from Bangkok, Siam saying the army had mutinied and seized the royal family as hostages to insure the success of a revolution.

The royal palace was surrounded by host troops and rebellious soldiers thronged the streets, she said.

Later King Prajadhipok and the other members of the royal family were removed to a warship.

Army tanks rumbled through the streets in the hands of the rebels and machine gun squads were frequently to be seen.

Freiulein von Eisdorf flew from Germany to Thailand last summer and was on the way back to Berlin by air when she crashed in Siam last April. She was slightly injured and her plane was wrecked.

Freiulein von Eisdorf said the rebellion apparently would result in the formation of a new party, which was joined by the Army and Navy. It came as a complete surprise and when she telephoned the leaders had not been identified.

The rebels issued a proclamation warning that opposition would result only in endangering lives of the royal hostages. The mass of the people appeared to be taking no part in the movement.

Siam, in the native tongue is Thai, which means land of the free but it is an absolute monarchy and King Prajadhipok, who recently visited the United States, is the supreme power of the land.

He appoints the ministers and all the other high government officials and he may remove them whenever he sees fit. There is no party government and no Parliament, and the King is his own prime minister. Usually, however, he consults with a Supreme Council and a Cabinet on important matters.

Prajadhipok succeeded to the throne on the death of his brother, Rama VI, in 1925. He is the seventh monarch of the present dynasty.

There is a good sized army in Siam and every able bodied man is liable to two years service in the regular army with longer periods in the three reserve forces. In the standing army are two divisions, each with two regiments of infantry, one of artillery and one of cavalry. The aviation corps is employed chiefly in the development of civil flying. The army recently acquired ten tanks.

Has Five Gunboats The navy consists of five gunboats, three destroyers, four torpedo boats, the royal yacht and a number of small craft. In all there are about 4,800 officers and men on the active list and a reserve of about 20,000.

King Prajadhipok spent some time in the United States in the spring of 1931 and underwent an operation for cataract at White Plains, N. Y. With him were Queen Ramba, her parents, Prince and Princess Savasi, an uncle and aunt and several servants.

Prince Subba Savasi, brother of the Queen, is ruler of Siam. He now, having arrived this month, is making a study of the American political system and of American police methods.

First Interview King Prajadhipok, during his sojourn in the United States, discussed his relationship to his people in the first interview ever granted by him since he ascended the throne in 1935.

"In the first place," he said, "I am the King of Siam. From old times the King of Siam has been the father of his people. In fact, the old word for King, chosen when the people won their independence and adopted the name 'Thai'—free for themselves, was 'Prajadhipok'—the Country." In Siam, King Rama VII, the King, the father in a patriarchal family.

Majority Will Be Against Changing the Two Thirds Parley Rule.

By W. J. G. MYERS

Chicago, June 24.—(AP)—Although bound by the unit rule to vote for the presidential candidacy of Alfred E. Smith, Connecticut delegates to the Democratic convention will be free to express their personal preference on the question of abrogating the two thirds regulation.

If Franklin D. Roosevelt's managers force a vote on this proposition next week, a minority of Connecticut's 18 votes is expected to favor the change in the 100 year old rule. The state convention gave the delegates no instructions on any issue but the presidential contest and ordered them to vote as a unit only on that question. Smith controls 9-1-4 votes in the group which would probably be cast against eliminating the regulation, and Roosevelt supporters hold 6-1-4 votes.

Let By Governor
The other half vote is controlled by Governor W. L. Cross, head of the delegation and David A. Wilson, state chairman, who have been regarded as neutral in pre-convention battles. How they stand on the question of the two thirds rule has not been made public.

A similar division might be expected in deciding between Joutett Shouse and Senator Walsh of Montana for permanent chairman of the convention.

Archibald McNeil of Bridgeport, National committeeman, attended today's session of the committee. A Roosevelt backer he will not have a vote in the convention as he was not chosen a delegate or alternate. However in his official capacity he has been in charge of plans for housing and entertaining the Connecticut delegation which will arrive late Sunday.

Dolan Contact Man
Dr. Edward G. Dolan of Manchester who is among the Connecticut delegates on the scene early, was appointed contact man among New England delegates in behalf of Roosevelt. After a conference with James A. Farley, the New York governor's manager, Dr. Dolan said the latter was confident of winning the contest over the permanent chairmanship and on changing the two-thirds rule.

Alfred N. Phillips, Jr. of Stamford, a delegate at large who is aiding the Smith forces in pre-convention activities, said:

"I personally have the abiding conviction that Smith will be nominated and elected."
He expressed the belief that several western and middle western delegations would follow the lead of eastern groups supporting Smith and would swing their votes to the 1928 nominee.

P. U. C. HEARINGS

Hartford, June 24.—(AP)—The State Public Utilities board today heard three applications of the New England Transportation Co., for approval of proposed bus routes. The first is a proposed motor bus route from Hazardville to Broad Brook to Melrose and East Windsor, terminating at the railroad station in Hartford and to replace a gas mail car service discontinued by the railroad June 5.

The company also is operating on a temporary certificate from Rockville to Hartford, replacing rail service from Willimantic to Hartford, and desires a permanent certificate. The third petition was for authority to cross the bridge over the Connecticut river between Warehouse Point and Windsor Locks, thus connecting existing lines on the east and west sides of the river between Springfield and Hartford.

DESPONDENT, KILLS SELF

Southington, June 24.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Frisch, 52, committed suicide today by shooting herself in the right temple. Her husband, Charles Frisch, found the body and a note saying she had been despondent over ill health.

Although two shots had been fired from the revolver only one took effect and police were investigating to determine what had become of the other bullet.

RECEIVER APPOINTED

New Haven, June 24.—(AP)—Thomas J. Ryan was appointed receiver of the Hamden Bank & Trust Company today by Judge John Richards Booth to replace the closed Mechanics Bank. Bond was set at $50,000.

GEMS BASEBALL TEAM DINES AT OASIS CLUB

Members Impressed With Unusual Spectacle During Wind Storm On River Last Evening.

Probably nowhere did the severe wind storm of last night present a more striking spectacle than was viewed from the Oasis Club on the Connecticut river at Hockanum where Manchester and Hartford members of the Gems baseball team were gathered for a banquet prior to the opening of the Hartford twilight league next Tuesday evening.

The gale swept across Brainard Field which is used for aviation quarters raising a blinding cloud of sand that carried as far down the river as the eye could see. This scene was on the west shore of the river which was so rough that only one boat ventured past the point during the height of the storm. The wind billowed the tops of shade grown tobacco netting until it resembled ocean waves. So strong was the gale along the club front that it was difficult to maintain one's balance. Overhead an airplane was having a tough time trying to land and finally gave up the idea at Brainard Field because of the sand and went to the East Hartford field.

Miss Steiner catered for the banquet serving one of the famous broiled steak dinners. The party was "thrown" by Bill Savitt, sponsor of the Gems who have won the city title for two successive years. Present from Manchester were Tommy Staples, Francis Wallcut, Arthur St. John, Jack Stratton, Ernie Dowd, Tom Stowe, Archie Kilpatrick, Nick Angelo and Otto Andriol. After the dinner there was a program of speech-making in which everyone present had to rise and say, at least, a few words.

FLORIDA TURNS TO CELERY CROP, REAPS PROFITS

Sanford, Fla. (AP)—Florida's lowlands are yielding a golden harvest for farmers who have turned to celery as a cash crop. Although the season has been considered by celery growers as an "off year," upwards of $5,000,000 has poured into farmers' pockets for the approximately 8,000 car loads of celery shipped out of the state. Sanford, which ordinarily ships about 20 per cent of the nation's crop, sent out this spring about 5,000 cars, by rail, truck and water—the rail shipment being 4,980 cars. Rail shipments from the state totaled 7,902 cars.

Florida and California have been neck and neck in celery shipments for the past decade, with New York state third and Michigan fourth. Florida and California begin harvesting their crops in February and end shipments by the middle of May. The New York and Michigan crops are ready for harvest during the summer.

Sanford has been for many years the leading celery shipping center of Florida. Sarasota, however, has forged to the front within the past few years, and this season shipped nearly 25 per cent of the state's crop.

One Grower Ships 1,179 Cars
The total shipments from Sarasota county were in round numbers, 1,800 cars, with 1,179 cars produced by a single grower—the Palmer Farms. The Palmers have spent large sums draining and adapting their large tract to celery production and this year's crop, while not so large as that of last year, has brought good returns, through cooperative selling.

Florida growers this season shipped their celery to markets as far west as Denver, north to Duluth and Detroit and east to New York and Portland, Me. Later in the year Michigan and New York celery probably will be offered on Florida markets.

The idea that money makes money brought on speculation and the depression, an economist says. And the idea that nothing can make money keeps the depression here.

$700,000 STATE'S FUNDS ARE IN CLOSED BANKS

But It Is So Close To End of Fiscal Year That It Causes Little Worry.

Hartford, June 24.—(AP)—Connecticut now has a total of $770,000 on deposit in the banks of the State closed during the last year, the closing of the Mechanics Bank of New Haven increasing the previous total of $620,000 by $150,000. This tying up of such a large amount of the State's funds might be embarrassing were it not for the fact that the State is now so close to the end of its fiscal year. The State now has on hand in its general fund a total of $1,100,000 and much of this is in the closed banks. The entire total of course is not to be considered as of the general fund account, for the highway department had on June 1 a balance of $5,969,543.39 and of this sum a portion of the State's money in closed banks will be applied.

POSTAL RATE RAISE

Washington, June 24.—(AP)—The Senate today passed a bill to increase postal insurance and collect-on-delivery rates, which the Post Office Department estimated would yield $2,500,000 annual revenue. The measure provides for graduated increases in all but the minimum rates now charged, and adds a 30 cent rate for insurance up to $100 value and 35 cents up to $200. The present schedule stops at 25 cents for articles valued at not more than $100.

The collect-on-delivery service rate is charged from 15 cents for collections up to $50 to 17 cents for collections up to $25, and 22 cents between $25 and $50.

The Senate also substituted for another House bill increasing money order fees its own measure giving the postmaster general blanket authority to revise the rates as he deems necessary.

DOLLAR BILL BLOCKED

Washington, June 24.—(AP)—Senator Reed, (R., Pa.) blocked consideration of the Glass substitute for the Goldborough dollar stabilization bill today when it was reached on the calendar.

The substitute sponsored by Senator Glass (D., Va.) would permit expansion of the currency by about one billion dollars. The Goldborough bill passed by the House would direct the Federal Reserve Board to restore the 1921-29 purchasing power of the dollar by its open market operations.

Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, asked for immediate action on the bill saying the necessity for controlled expansion of the currency generally was recognized.

Senator Reed said the bill would give the circulating privilege to 14,000,000,000 in outstanding bonds and objected.

Robinson and Senator Fletcher (D., Fla.) replied it would extend the circulating privilege to only 11,000,000,000 of bonds.

FINAL HONOR ROLL AT H. S. ANNOUNCED

List of Honor Students For Complete Year Named For the First Time.

Although the report cards have been distributed to the students of the high school, there were, at the last minute, adding of marks etc. that prevented the Honor Roll from being announced before today.

It was impossible for a student to receive his card until all of his school books had been returned and all of bills were paid in full.

For this reason many students, who have not attended to these last minute details, are still in doubt as to whether they have made the Honor Roll or not.

At any rate there were 23 students on the "A" and 157 on the "B" making a total of 179 which is unusually fine considering that it was the last marking period and vacation was not far away.

STATE ALONE GIVES TRADES EDUCATION

Director of Vocational Schools in State Speaks At Graduation Here.

Connecticut is the only state in the Union that provides free education through its state trade schools.

"Although in history Connecticut is referred to as being conservative, it is by no means conservative in its education," declared the speaker.

"At the present time this state exports materials worth about two and a half times more than the value of imported materials.

"Jobs have been created in the past few years which up to that time were never heard of.

New York, June 24.—Reduction in the New York Federal Reserve bank rediscount rate to 2½ per cent leaves an unusually wide spread between the local rate and those of the eleven other reserve banks, which continue uniformly at 3½ per cent. In banking quarters it is expected that this disparity will narrow eventually by reductions in the rates of the interior reserve banks.

Stockholders of the Corticelli Silk Co. will meet on June 29 at New London, Conn., to ratify a merger of the company with the Belding Hemingway Co. It was announced today. Bank loans of the United Gas Corp. amounting to $21,250,000 have been extended one year from July 30, the maturity date, it was announced today. Electric Power and Light Co., which controls United Gas, in the twelve months ended April 30 earned 88 cents a share on the common stock outstanding at the end of the period, compared with $2.86 a share for the previous twelve months.

The executive committee of American Ice Co. has decided to recommend quarterly dividend of the regular common stock at the directors' meeting next week, says President Charles C. Small. The company anticipates a less favorable showing for the first half of 1932 than was made in 1931, but expects earnings will "substantially more than cover dividend requirements this year."

REMOVE 45 PATIENTS DURING HOSPITAL FIRE

Bennington, Vt., June 23.—(AP)—Fire following an explosion swept the Putnam Memorial hospital here this afternoon.

Forty-five patients were removed by firemen amid scenes of confusion.

Because of the location of the institution on the top of a high hill, it was hard to get water on the burning structure.

The fire was first discovered burning under the roof of the two-story brick structure and doctors and nurses immediately began the evacuation of the patients. Firemen and operators joined in the removal work upon their arrival and all patients were checked as they were taken out.

The building is located on a high hill and firemen were handicapped by lack of water pressure. A high wind was blowing and the firemen were fearful they would be unable to save the hospital.

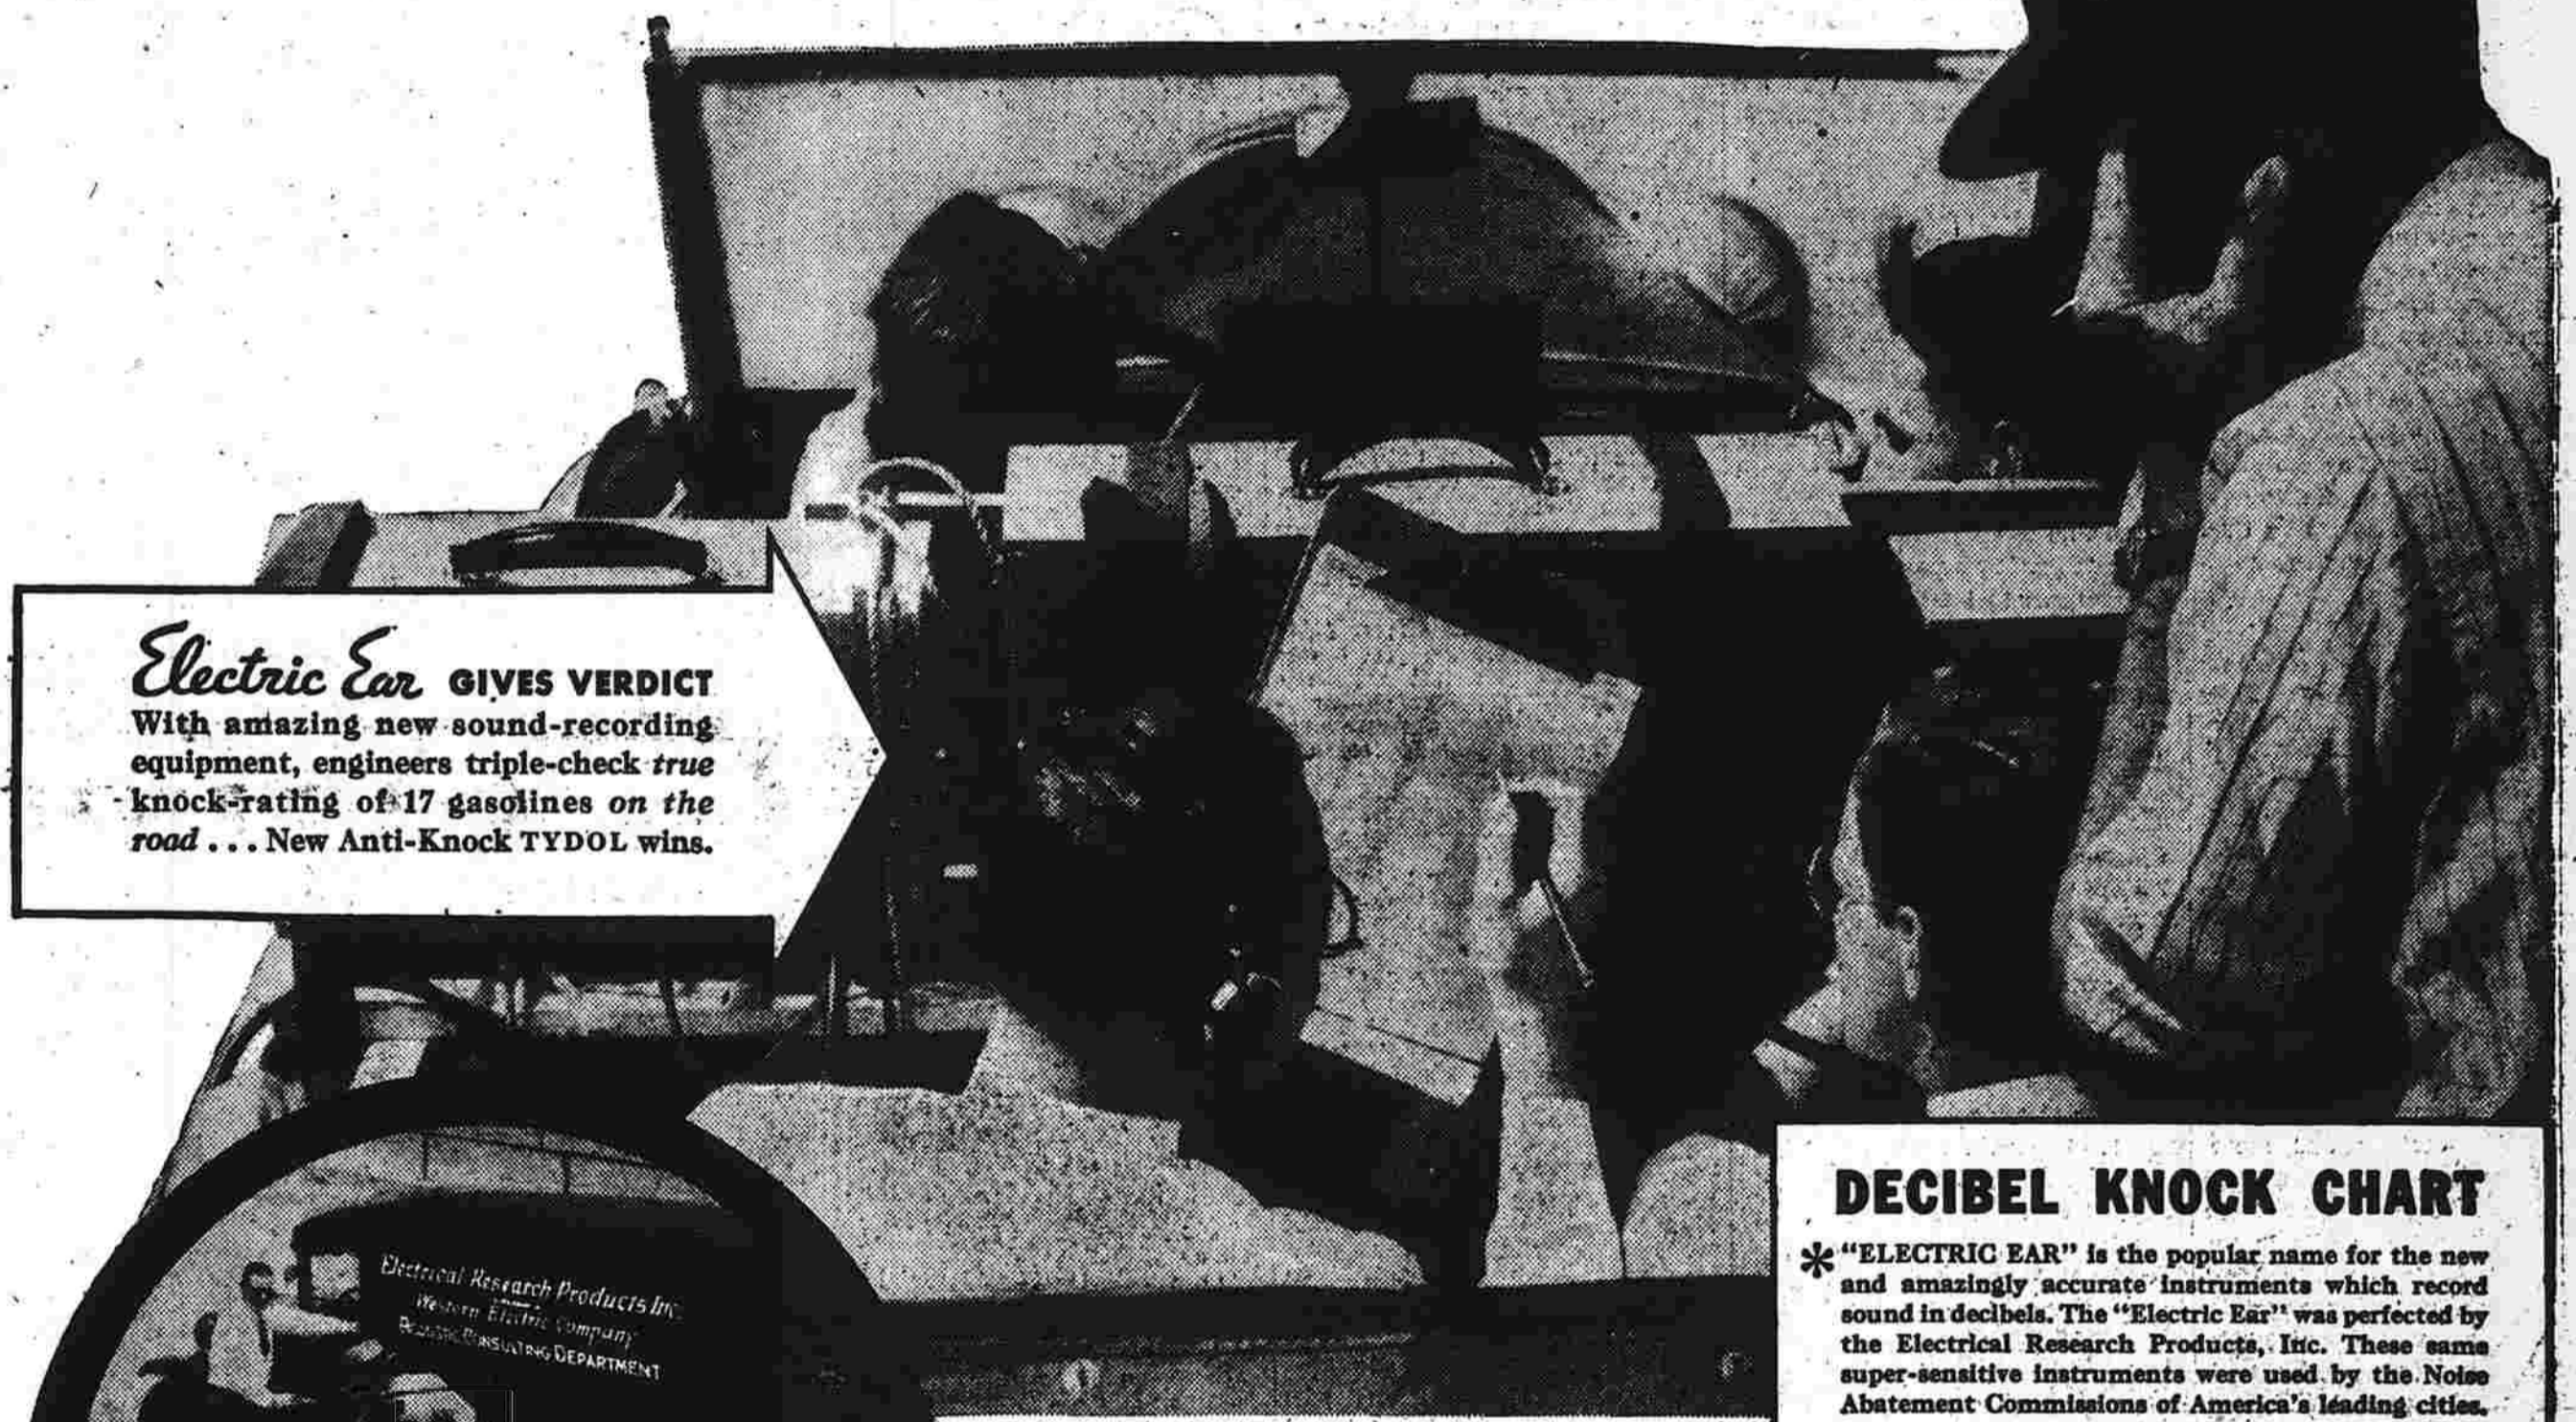

It was believed possible the fire started in the X-ray room on the second floor and ate its way into the partitions and up to the roof.

The hospital is a long structure with several connecting buildings.

Now they're saying that Al Capone's famous scar will be gone when he leaves Atlanta. Which proves again that "time" is the great healer.

Electric Ear picks anti-knock winner!

A DECIBEL is an engineering unit denoting volume and intensity of sound. In this test the lowest decibel rating (New Tydol) indicates the best anti-knock gasoline.

FRIDAY, JUNE 24.

OUR GUESTS

Manchester would need three hands if it were to grip in simultaneous greeting those of the three notable organizations foregathering here at this week-end. Lacking so many she must be content to extend the right hand of welcome, in the order of their comings and goings, to the Loyal Order of Moose already here assembled for their state convention and field day; to the Masonic Veterans Association, which will be here tomorrow for its sixty-second annual reunion and which will not stay half long enough for the pleasure of its hostess community; to the New England Conference of Lutheran Leagues, arriving tomorrow and remaining over Sunday for its sixteenth yearly convention.

To all these bodies and to their individual members Manchester presents assurance that they are pleased guests; that we are glad to have them here and are honored by their selection of this town as their meeting place.

Ladies and gentlemen of the Moose, the Masons and the Lutheran conference, the keys of the city, so to speak, are yours.

TWO-THIRDS RULE

The two-thirds rule under which the national Democratic party operates in its conventions is not, as a good many people have come to believe, a hard and fast obligation fastened upon the party and impossible of release without a revolutionary coup perhaps involving extra-legality. It is merely a rule adopted a great many years ago—about a century and recurrently ever since—for a definite reason. The idea was that there were three distinct elements in the country, the East, the new West and the South, and that their interests were sometimes, and likely to be often, in more or less of conflict. For the purpose of insuring party adherence to national candidates it was deemed good sense to give each of these sections something of a veto power on nominations. For prudential reasons the party has adhered to that system ever since.

The rule could be got rid of the same as any other party rule, by convention vote. It would only be necessary for the rules committee or some individual delegate at the outset of the convention to propose the rule's abrogation; if there were a clear majority in favor of the abrogation the rule would be dispensed.

As a matter of fact, however, such action might be extremely hazardous to the group or faction that put it over. It would be to invite the wildest indignation on the part of the minority, a sure bid for a bolt. While the two-thirds rule has no more rigid position than any other rule, so far as its legality is concerned, it is a sort of sacred cow of the party and whoever pulled its tail would almost certainly get into trouble.

It is not to be anticipated, therefore, that the Roosevelt faction at Chicago will dare to wreck this tradition of the party for the sake of insuring to their candidate a nomination practically certain to result only in defeat.

MAY BE SURPRISE

Announcement of initial steps in the formation of a great housing corporation intended to revolutionize the whole system of residence building may very possibly prove to be the genesis of that "new industry" for which the business world has been straining its eyes ever since it became obvious that the building of automobiles could never again engage, to any comprehensive extent, the activities of a substantial proportion of the workers of the nation. It is even possible that the enterprise proposed by General

Houses, Inc., the embryo corporation, may become the solution of the depression and turn out to be the redeeming element to lift us out of the bog.

Next to food there is no object so generally desired by mankind as a comfortable habitation. The demand for homes is only limited by the capacity of the individual to pay. It is a demand that can never be over-supplied unless, as in the present time, it is nullified by conditions wholly separated from human desires.

It has been patent for a long time that the natural demand for homes was being defeated by the excessive costs of housing considered in proportion to the incomes of the people among whom the demand existed. That if better houses could be offered at much lower prices than people have had to pay for poor or indifferent houses there would be instant response from thousands and hundreds of thousands of home seekers.

It is in recognition of this fact and of the further fact that it is altogether possible to provide better houses at much lower prices than have ruled for years that General Houses, Inc., is coming into existence.

It may be remembered that some months ago this newspaper expressed difficulty in understanding why the steel industry, instead of foolishly attempting to restore a dead and gone demand for its product through the underheaded upward juggling of prices, or supinely waiting for railroad and automobile orders which could not possibly develop, did not seek an outlet by the production of members and units to be economically utilized in the building of dwellings. General Houses, Inc., enlarges upon this idea by planning to build its houses of pressed steel, producing them in such form that a five or six room bungalow, including electrical refrigeration, heating plant, plumbing and wiring, can be set up or taken down in four days. And it proposes to sell such a house for $5,500 or less, complete.

But this is no mere manufacturing concept. The projectors of the plan propose to institute a gigantic financing system whereby 75 per cent of the combined cost of houses and lot would "ride" on a single mortgage, the purchaser to discharge the entire indebtedness at the rate of about $30 a month. It is further proposed to enter the field of economic politics to the extent of insuring legislation to squeeze the water out of land values and check the contingent development of land booms which might otherwise follow the wholesale adoption of the single-house system around large cities.

Big names are spoken in connection with this proposed movement—for it is more than a business; such as the General Electric Company, the Pullman Car Company, American Radiator Company, Thomas Edison, Inc., and a number of other such interests.

Here is a Big Business big enough to very importantly supply the long sought push to bring industry and trade out of the mire. And Big Business for one at least aiming at an end which, if not completely altruistic nor altogether divorced from the possibility of profit, gives promise of accomplishing tremendously in the elevation of the actual American standard of living.

AS MAINE GOES

Each Presidential year the first big thrill that comes after the convention smoke has blown away is obtained from the result of the September election in Maine. "As Maine goes so goes the Union" is an old saw that persists and intrigues the imagination of the great American voter in spite of the fact that the rule has proved on several occasions to be quite fallible.

This year the Maine election will possess an interest based on something more tangible than a general superstition. A wet Democrat has been nominated for governor and a bone dry candidate has been named by the Republicans. Two years ago, in a rather unusually close election, the Republican candidate for governor defeated the Democratic candidate by a plurality of 15,000. Two years before the same Republican candidate had been elected over the same Democratic candidate by a plurality of $8,000. According to that combination of figures, showing a serious shrinkage in the Republican vote, the Maine G. O. P. has no great margin to play with this year.

There will be a deal of interest, therefore, in observing the result of a wet-and-dry contest in that state in September. If the Republicans hold their own it may be taken at least as an indication that their party, in Maine or elsewhere, is not losing by its refusal to commit itself to repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. If its plurality should disappear altogether and the wet Democrat be elected governor it will be reasonable to conclude that Maine

GAME POSTPONED

The Crescents and Pilots were scheduled to play off their tie game Sunday morning at the West-Side lots but the game has been called off because the diamond is engaged for that date.

A wind tunnel similar to those used in testing airplanes, has been installed at Pittsburgh, Pa., to test streamlined automobiles and street cars.

SMITH AND McADOO

The political spectacle of spectacles was presented at Chicago yesterday when William Gibbs McAdoo called on Alfred E. Smith and the twain held friendly converse together. Naturally every political writer covering the Democratic convention saw in this visit a sensational alliance in the historic dog-fight principle of 1924 as against the candidacy of Governor Roosevelt. Indeed it is difficult to conceive of this startling rapprochement as resulting from any less impelling motive than an absolute determination to "stop" the New York governor at whatever cost of dignity and at whatever surrender of cherished enmities.

None the less, however, it is to be guessed that if Smith and McAdoo have struck hands in a common cause it has not been without stipulations. One may guess that if these twain have teamed up in opposition to Roosevelt it is on a very definite understanding that neither of them is to seek the nomination for himself. Though McAdoo said yesterday that "if one can't have a sense of humor after eight years it's just too bad," it is substantially impossible to imagine him, after eight years or eighteen, participating in any political arrangement likely to result in a major political victory for Al Smith.

This incident is the strongest bit of evidence that has arisen that Smith has no real purpose of getting the Presidential nomination for himself.

PIPE ORGANS AND PUDDLERS

New York, June 23.—Puddlers in the steel mill zones may or may not have turned in recently on a radio program which let the nation know about Charles M. Schwab's amazing private life.

A puddler, you know, is a fellow who handles the white-hot steel. Schwab was a puddler once himself.

At any rate, occupying a place in the Schwab mansion just a few feet away from the steel magnate's beloved organ is the huge bronze statue of a puddler. And whenever the maestro is seated at the organ and their music goes echoing through the perfectly acoustical adjoining rooms, he sits facing the bronze symbol.

They say it's difficult to state which gives him the biggest kick, the music or the statue!

Pipe organs have, for a quarter of a century, been Schwab's musical delight and anodyne.

While his "town house" instrument is almost "the last word," it has another elaborate one in his country place at Lorretto. In fact, on Sunday afternoon, informal musicales have been staged. The entire cast of musical artists has been to Lorretto—Zimbalist, Kreisler, Schumann-Heink and scores of others.

MILLIONAIRE'S MAESTRO

Unusual it is Archer Gibson who plays Gibson designed the organ and attended its installation.

Gibson, in New York, bears the title of "millionaire's maestro."

For a generation he has played to the great financiers. Both the senior and junior John D. Rockefeller call him in to play their favorite selections. They are usually simple, homey compositions.

Gibson has been private organist to Henry Clay Frick, to W. K. Vanderbilt, to E. H. Mannville, George Joslyn, William D. Sloane and many others.

REMINDER IN BRONZE

The Schwab manor is, in itself, old fashioned and definitely dated. It occupies a vast area overlooking the Hudson on Riverside Drive.

The "Drive" has, for many a year, passed from the classification of "swank." Other millionaires moved to Fifth Avenue and later, to Park Avenue, or to the streets that run between.

Schwab's castle is surrounded with landscaped grounds, shrubbery and gardens. It is a renaissance copy—taken from the Chateaux de Chaux.

The organ is built in a semi-chapel at the head of a main stairway. The chapel is lighted by six cathedral windows. One shows St. Cecilia at the organ. Its tone has few equals. The last word in modern sound-proofing has been introduced for acoustical purposes.

A few feet away—stands a puddler, ready for his molten steel—sentimental reminder to a man who rose from the furnaces to the financial heights.

GILBERT SWAN.

ESTIMATES OUT OF DATE

Everyone knew that the treasury estimates of February were no longer valid. Business had grown worse and the proposed new taxes would raise much less than they were expected to raise.

The Mills estimates also included some $200,000,000 in debt payments which were probably not yet due. Mr. Keiser, economist and correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, carefully and elaborately calculated that the proposed new taxes would raise $700,000,000 less than was necessary, even assuming a $300,000,000 cut in expenses.

Apparently everyone from the White House to Capitol Hill was too frightened to say anything or do anything about it. But in an astonishing change of attitude which came almost like a flash everyone became too scared not to do anything about it.

That Quick Change

On a Monday the estimate that the Senate Finance committee's new taxes would raise $965,000,000 in the next fiscal year and that new taxes and economies of $1,241,000,000 were required was still official. Tydings of Maryland had been demanding new estimates, only to be blocked by the leaders.

But late that same day Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, fresh from the White House, was warning the Senate frankly that it must not pass the tax bill if it would miss balancing the budget by at least $300,000,000, which he said would mean forcing us off the gold standard.

THE BIG "SURPRISE"

Then suddenly everyone began to yell in effect:

"Surprise! Surprise! We aren't balancing a budget at all. Where's that new estimate? Now we're really going to balance it. Ha, ha!"

That's no sillier than the facts themselves. On a Monday Congress was still balancing on the basis of treasury estimates of financial requirements made four months previously. Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills was still sticking to them—he had just said that "we cannot undertake to revise our estimates every month or two."

Of course the idea in balancing a budget is to make receipts equal expenses without going any further into debt. After all the breathless beatings and dire warnings of the last six months you might have thought more the one statesman might have pointed out that it might be better to try to balance the budget than to make a pretense of balancing it.

THE POLITICAL FOLLIES OF '32

Washington.—The vast outburst of campaign oratory which is about to descend upon us will undoubtedly pass through the ears of some persons willing to believe everything they hear, but it is likely to encounter a much larger group of folks who won't believe a word of it.

The extraordinary performance of the administrative and legislative branches of government during the great budget balancing act may be counted on to attract many new converts to the latter habit.

Apparently no one in Washington was kidded about it. But it seems as if everyone had been earnestly engaged in trying to hit everyone else into believing that Congress was really balancing the budget. Everyone was, at least, until the day before the Senate actually passed the huge new tax bill.

(Spinal Curvature)
 Question: Mrs. D. writes: "My little girl 2 years old has developed a curved spine within the last two years. She has a mixed diet, attends gymnasium, and seems generally well, but complains of backache and tired easily. What causes this? Can it be corrected? Does it affect the health?"

Answer: Be sure that your little girl is having corrective exercises with her gymnasium work and that she is instructed by a competent teacher. It is also well to have an x-ray picture made of her entire spine, in which case it would be advisable for her to exercise during the time when the acute changes are taking place in the bones.

(Trouble with Eyes)
 Question: L. B. writes: "Please tell me what causes a pain beneath the outer half of the eye. Also, what causes black specks to be always present in the vision?"

Answer: Your trouble may be caused by improperly fitted glasses, sinus or antrum trouble, abscess of teeth, or the pain and the symptoms of black spots may be due entirely to liver congestion from auto-intoxication.

(Clabbered Milk)
 Question: Mrs. Sophia J. asks: "Is clabbered whole milk healthful and nutritious for an elderly person who dearly loves it? Would a person who craves it be likely to be benefited by going on a diet of this kind?"

Answer: Clabbered whole milk is a very good food. If green vegetables are taken with the clabber (about three quarts used per day), it makes a very well-balanced diet but so simple that most people would not be willing to live on this diet exclusively for any length of time.

You have to sympathize with Ogden Mills. Treasury estimates of receipts have often gone far wide of the mark. The February estimates were brought in and the treasury then found itself wrong by about a billion in its November estimates.

Everyone, it appears, has been betting consistently on an upturn in business. But the general reticence to face facts until the pell-mell rush to do so at the last critical moment, seems rather absurd or pretty terrible or something.

What The Candidates Are Doing Today

Franklin D. Roosevelt: Still at Albany, he considers a rush journey to Chicago in case of prolonged deadlock; he conferred last night with John E. Mack of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who will place him in nomination.

Harry F. Byrd: At Chicago, he urged the convention pledge itself for an international conference on tariffs. "Prosperity can only be captured by an adjustment of tariffs to encourage other nations to buy and consume our exportable surplus."

James A. Reed: The former Senator from Missouri was the center of a large crowd at his headquarters. Asked who was Missouri's "second choice" for the nomination, he said: "I did not know there was a second choice so far as Missouri is concerned."

William H. Murray: Oklahoma's governor "Alfalfa Bill" protested a move to delay naming of a platform subcommittee, saying it was to allow the arrival of Congressmen. "We had an example last week of a convention dominated by postmasters."

Other candidates did not figure prominently in the news, for the time being.

Albert C. Ritchie: Hugh crowd cheered Maryland governor as he started from Baltimore for convention with party of nearly 300. Shortly before hotel elevator dropped five floors with him but he was unhurt.

178 MILLION FLOUNDER FRY ARE HATCHED

Largest Number On Record Says Captain Banning of the Noank Hatchery.

Scientific experiments in fertilizing and hatching eggs of the winter flounder under artificial conditions, conducted during the past five years at the Noank lobster hatchery of the State Board of Fisheries and Game, have now achieved success far exceeding expectations of state fish culturists, it was reported at the Hartford office of the State Board today.

By stripping eggs from live fish and mixing them with milk, coupled with utilization of the Banning tube, a device developed at the hatchery which enables the employment of standard lobster hatching equipment for marine fish culture, over 178,000,000 flounder fry, the largest number on record, have just been successfully hatched and distributed in Long Island Sound, Captain F. N. Banning, in charge of the Noank hatchery, stated.

Winter flounders or flatfish are the principal food fish sought by Connecticut commercial fishermen in the Sound. Captains of Mystic and Noank fishing craft co-operated with officials of the State Board of Fisheries and Game by furnishing all live flounders used in the experiments.

State fish culturists believe that as a result of the success attending Noank experiments, the supply of these important food fish will be greatly augmented. Flounder "draggers" operating nets on the Sound, and annual distributions of fry, now obtainable in great quantities as a result of Captain Banning's experiments, will assist measurably in maintaining one of Connecticut's oldest industries, it is predicted.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
CHERRY DIXON, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, falls in love with DAN PHILLIPS, newspaper reporter. She quarrels with her father about Dan, leaves home and, taking advantage of Leap Year, asks Dan to marry her. They are married and for the first time Cherry finds what it means to lack money. Her struggles with housework are discouraging. DIXIE SHANNON, movie critic of the News, is friendly with Cherry. She meets handsome MAX FEARSON who also works on the News.

Cherry receives a letter from her mother enclosing a check for $500. She returns the check because pride will not let her keep it. Dan, worried about bills, undertakes to write a short story but becomes discouraged and leaves it unfinished.

Two days later Cherry learns her mother is critically ill. She goes home and at her mother's bedside the father and daughter are reconciled. Late at night at the nurse summons Cherry to MRS. DIXON'S room.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVII

The single lamp was still burning in the big room. Cherry hurried to the bedside. She was clutching a robe about her.

"I'm here, Mother," she said eagerly. "You wanted me?"

The woman on the pillow raised her eyes. They were brown eyes, so much like Cherry's. They looked dark now against the pale face.

"My little girl," Mrs. Dixon said gently. "Cherry—come here beside me."

The girl knelt at the side of the bed. "What is it, Mother?" she asked. "I'll do anything—"

The sick woman smiled. She raised one slim hand to touch the girl's hair. "Cherry," she went on slowly. "I'm glad you've come back. You mustn't misjudge your father, dear. I want to know—you're going to be—friends."

"Of course I don't misjudge him, Mother. I know how he feels. But everything's going to be all right now. He said so."

For an instant happiness seemed to light the pallid cheeks. "He said—that?" she repeated. "Oh, I'm so glad!"

The words seemed to take the woman's last bit of strength. Her eyes closed almost instantly in sleep. She must have been in Cherry's hand but now the fingers loosened. The rise and fall of her breathing came regularly.

Cherry knelt there for a long while. Mrs. Dixon slept as peacefully as a child. Presently the nurse put a chair by the bed and motioned for her to rise. Cherry realized for the first time that she was shivering. The night air had grown colder and her dressing gown had slipped down from her shoulder.

She went down the corridor to her own room and got into bed. Within five minutes she was asleep. Despite Dr. Knowles' cheerful predictions three days passed before she gave the definite word that Mrs. Dixon had passed the crisis in her illness. Little by little her strength returned. There were times during those three days when the doctor's calls stretched out over several hours. There were times of anxiety for everyone in the household. Waiter Dixon did not go to his office. He remained in his own room downstairs in the study. Cherry and her father met for meals that were almost silent. The food set before them and taken away scarcely tasted. Father and daughter waited nervously outside the door of the upstairs bedroom for the brief bulletins the nurse could bring.

Each day Cherry telephoned to Dan. She stayed on at her parents' home, making one hasty trip to the apartment. Her clothing, Pinky, the kitten, had been quartered upstairs with Dixie Shannon. The world seemed to have stopped in its regular orbit. Everything centered about the battle being waged in that upstairs bedroom.

Then on the morning of the fourth day Dr. Knowles greeted the father and daughter with a cheerful smile. "If this improvement continues," he announced, "Mrs. Dixon is going to be herself in a week or two. Remarkable how she's rallied in the last 24 hours. It's remarkable! Of course there's a long road ahead to health but I'm confident she'll make it. I've increased her diet."

He went on in a maze of professional terms. Cherry's heart was too full to listen.

She spent several hours with her mother that afternoon. Mr. Dixon paid a brief call at his office. In the evening all three sat together for almost an hour before it was time for Mrs. Dixon's early bedtime.

Another day and another passed. Mrs. Dixon was able to sit propped up with pillows while Cherry read to her. A touch of color appeared in the pale cheeks. Dr. Knowles promised that she continued to recuperate at the present rate she might get out of bed and sit in a chair for a few minutes on Sunday.

Eight days had passed since Cherry had seen her husband. She felt it was time for her to return to the apartment, yet she hesitated to suggest it. The still felt the sense of guilt that her departure had caused her mother's breakdown.

It was Mrs. Dixon herself who solved the problem. Cherry was sitting with her, relieving the day nurse who had gone out for fresh air.

"Cherry," her mother said

thoughtfully, "Isn't it time you were going home?"

"Why, Mother—?"

"Your father and I were talking about it last night," Mrs. Dixon went on. "We've been glad to have you here, of course. It's meant everything to me. You see I felt I'd lost my daughter and I know that underneath Walter's bitterness he was suffering just as I was. This illness—well, I don't really mind it since it's brought you back to us."

"I should never have gone away," Cherry said fervently. "It was wrong of me, but, oh, Mother, I've paid for it!"

"But you love your husband, don't you?"

"Of course I do. But I should have made Father understand. I shouldn't have lost my temper—"

"We can't undo the past," Mrs. Dixon said quietly. "It's the future we must think about. Your father and I agree that if you love this young man you should go back to your home. That's your duty now, Cherry."

"And I can come to see you? And you'll come to see me?"

"I hope you'll come. Yes, when I'm able I'll come to see you. I'm anxious to know your Dan—"

more turning to Sarah or Martha for everything she wanted done. "And I'm glad of it!" Cherry told herself earnestly. "It's going to be good to be home. Oh, it's going to be wonderful!"

Martin let her out of the car before the library steps. It was the place where Cherry and Dan had met so often in the days when they were living at the hotel. The chauffeur closed the door after her, touched his cap, and drove away.

Dan was nowhere in sight, but Cherry was not disturbed. She had learned to expect him to be late. A boy in knee trousers was selling flowers from a basket farther down the street. Cherry strolled toward him, selected a rose to fasten to her blouse and gave him a quarter for it.

"Here's your change, lady," the boy began as Cherry moved away. She smiled, told him to keep the coin.

Office workers, late at their posts, were hurrying along the streets. Many of the girls were dressed in lines and thin cottons.

"Why, it's summer!" Cherry thought in surprise. Sure enough it must be. Cherry had not the slightest idea what the day of the month was. To satisfy herself she bought a newspaper, saw that it was the 20th. The 20th of June.

The headlines were not interesting. A clash over local politics. Smugglers arrested in San Francisco. A woman demanding a divorce because of lipstick on her husband's shirt.

There was no story on page one signed "By Daniel Phillips." Cherry scanned the columns wondering which he had written. It made her thrill with pride to see Dan's name in type. Somehow it seemed to look bigger than the other by-lines. Cherry had told him that once and Dan had laughed at her.

"I wonder what's keeping him," the girl thought restlessly. There was a big clock in the window of the jewelry store across the street. Her hands pointed to a quarter of six.

She scanned the street in both directions. There was no Dan in sight.

"If he doesn't come in five minutes," she decided, "I'd better call the office. Of course if anything's happened he knows he hasn't any way to reach me."

Deliberately Cherry turned her back on the clock. She watched the boy with the flowers sell a bouquet to a slim, stoop-shouldered man with white hair. No other customer came to buy. The boy looked up and down the street and then moved away.

Cherry swung around. No, Dan was not in sight yet. Then she saw him. He was crossing the street, coming toward her. Directly to her side was a girl in white. She wore a white hat and white shoes. Her head was thrown back and she was looking up at Dan and laughing.

Jealousy, white hot and scorching, flamed up in Cherry's heart. Who was this girl and what right had she to be laughing like that and swinging along beside Dan?

With sudden and unreasoning anger Cherry resented this other girl.

Walter was a quiet, thoughtful boy, a deliberate thinker, cautious in his movements—safe.

Mark, his brother, was precisely the opposite. He was harum-scarum, impulsive, careless, too quick in his motions—dangerous.

Their mother was fond of telling her friends how confident she was in Walter's judgment—that she acted just as he acted and never worried about his getting hurt.

Likewise, she voiced her fears about Mark. Every day when he went out she was in terror lest he be brought in dead. "He's always getting into trouble because he knows no fear; going about with bumps and bruises because he's so venturesome. He will try anything once. It is a wonder he hasn't been killed long before this."

TALE OF TWO BOYS

Walter was a quiet, thoughtful boy, a deliberate thinker, cautious in his movements—safe.

Mark, his brother, was precisely the opposite. He was harum-scarum, impulsive, careless, too quick in his motions—dangerous.

Their mother was fond of telling her friends how confident she was in Walter's judgment—that she acted just as he acted and never worried about his getting hurt.

Likewise, she voiced her fears about Mark. Every day when he went out she was in terror lest he be brought in dead. "He's always getting into trouble because he knows no fear; going about with bumps and bruises because he's so venturesome. He will try anything once. It is a wonder he hasn't been killed long before this."

Then she would add, "I don't worry when Walter walks with him. He acts as a brake. I know he will keep Mark safe."

And her friends, knowing the two brothers, nodded wisely and agreed.

Cases in Point
One afternoon the great swimming pool was open and Walter and Mark could swim well and Walter a little. Both boys stepped into a hole and Walter went into a panic. He claimed later it was cramps. Mark saved him.

One day they were crossing a railroad bridge to fish. Walter was mooning over the edge looking for turtles on the bank when Mark's quick ear heard something. He pulled his brother over on the other track and in a few seconds the express went by.

"I told you we'd better not come this way," Mark complained. Walter through his white lips. "No bridge, no fish," he replied.

HEALTH

WOMEN MORE SUSCEPTIBLE TO HEADACHES THAN MEN

Migraine is Often Due to Heredity and Diet
BY DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

That type of sick headache commonly called migraine is believed by many persons to be a hereditary condition more likely to occur in women than in men.

Since this point of view was first advanced around 1889, many investigators have sought a scientific basis for the contention. This caused Dr. William Allan to make a special study of the matter. He now makes available the results of these studies.

Out of 545 persons suffering with headaches of the migraine type, women were found to have the condition two and one-half times as frequently as men. Some investigators have found the proportion as high as five times as frequent in women as in men.

It was thought that possibly women were more likely to seek a physician for this condition than men, but an examination of the records of thousands of cases coming to a physician's office indicated approximately equal numbers.

Out of 105 men it was found that 56 gave a history of periodic headaches of this type; 90 per cent stated that their parents had had similar histories, and in 73 per cent the headaches had started before the age of 21. Among the 92 wives of these men there were 50 who had a history of headache of the same type; of these women there was a record of similar headaches in the parent. In this particular group, therefore, the frequency of migraine in men and in women seemed to be the same, but a careful investigation showed that migraine is a more serious condition in women than in men.

In most instances women had headaches that lasted longer and they were nauseated much more frequently than were the men. It seems likely, therefore, that women go to the physician more often for this condition than do men, because of severity of the symptoms.

There have been various suggestions as to the underlying basis of migraine. It is recognized that heredity plays some part. However, the condition that is hereditary may be associated with some special anatomical development of the brain, or of the glands of internal secretion, or of the nervous system.

In some instances, no doubt, headache of the migraine type is a manifestation of sensitivity to a foreign protein substance. Such sensitivity is, however, also hereditary to a considerable extent. In other words, it is likely that a number of causes acting together produce their condition, rather than a single cause for all cases.

AIR CORPS RESERVE

Washington—A bill recently introduced by Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, calls for a five-year training program wherein an unorganized reserve for the Army Air Corps will be available in any emergency. It is the intention of the bill to provide flight instructions at various municipal airports throughout the country.

Contract bridge is a game for morons, a learned doctor tells us. That's all wrong. He should ask some of the wives who play with their husbands.

GLADYS PARKER

A BOOK A DAY

BY BRUCE CATTON

DAD'S RICH, BUT SHE'S BRIDE OF A TAXI-DRIVER

A novel by a taxi driver about taxi drivers really ought to be worth reading. The taxi driver is a man set apart; he gets his own unique slant on things, and he is generally sacked with worldly wisdom—not always of a kind that we stay-at-homes easily acquire. So, when he sits him down to write a novel, we have a right to expect something interesting.

But "Fifteen and Five," which a taxi driver named Abraham Bernstein has written with New York taxi drivers as his principal characters, somehow fails to make the grade.

It begins nicely enough. We follow young Max Brenner (if I remember the name correctly) as he gets his job, we get a look at the drivers in their moments of relaxation and we find out what a driver thinks about and how he feels as he cruises up and down the streets looking for business.

Then, just as his story threatens to grow interesting, the author goes into a prolonged skid. This Max person is engaged to drive a millionaire's daughter here and there, and presently—how it happens isn't at all clear—they're parked on a side street, chatting about the things that really matter. A few more chapters, and there's living in sin. As the book ends in their getting married, and Max is on his way to medical school.

Fifth-rate sex novels are common enough, heaven knows. Everything considered, they probably have their place in the scheme of things. But it is disappointing to have this one turn out that way. It happens out to be really entertaining.

"Fifteen and Five" is published by Liveright, and sells for $2.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

During hot weather, much waste can be avoided if foodstuffs are given extra care and attention. Sometimes such raw materials and finished products are handled so thoughtlessly in the home that by the time food reaches the table it has lost much of its value.

An infinite amount of talent and labor goes into food production. From the Department of Agriculture to the local dealer who handles the food in the last instance before it reaches the consumer, unpeppering effort is made to deliver foods in the finest condition. Yet careless handling in the home defeats all these precautions.

Well selected containers are a great aid toward keeping foods in good condition. Glass or earthenware, enamelware or aluminum—covered dishes made in any of these materials are excellent for storing foods, both cooked and raw. Since most perishable foods keep better if not exposed to the air, containers are desirable.

All perishable foods should be taken care of as soon as they come from the market. Milk, fruits, vegetables, fruits and meats deteriorate in a short time and must be promptly prepared for the refrigerator and immediately stored. Cleaning foods before putting them into the refrigerator keeps the ice box clean and saves ice or current according to the type of your refrigerator.

Soft fruits like berries keep better if they are taken at once from the box in which they are marketed and spread on a platter or large plate. Keep them in a cool place but not in the refrigerator unless a cool cellar is not available. If berries must be kept in the ice-box, they should be stored in the warmest place.

Don't Let Milk Stand
When milk or cream or any food is allowed to stand in a hot kitchen or left unnecessarily long on the dining table, an extra amount of ice is required to chill it and there is danger of the milk and cream "turning" sour.

The care of left-overs requires special attention at this season. In the first place, buy as little as possible and spread out the way with the likelihood of having left-overs. Make it a custom to use all left-overs promptly. Cooked vegetables that have been served buttered for the first meal can appear in a vegetable or cornmeal salad, or may be reheated in a cream sauce or served au gratin. This changes the dish enough to make it acceptable for the following meal.

Vegetables and meats that have been prepared with milk need extra precautions. The milk should be actively boiled if there is any chance of some of the dish being left over. After the meal it should be cooled quickly and stored at once in the coldest part of the refrigerator. All creamed dishes should be used within twenty-four hours.

If creamed vegetables, gravies or sauces, soup stock or any such foods must be kept more than twenty-four hours, it's a wise precaution to bring them quickly to the boiling point, boil vigorously for a few minutes and cool quickly on the ice-berg of the second day. Then they may be kept on ice with perfect safety for another twenty-four hours.

Changing weather conditions involving both temperature and humidity have a decided effect on many food-stuffs before and after cooking. Bread, coffee, quick-frozen foods, pastries, pies, crisps, etc., lose their firm consistency and "sweat" or melt. Fruits and vegetables rapidly become over-ripe and begin to deteriorate.

Bread and bread-crumbs require particular care. Crumbs and old slices of bread should not be allowed to accumulate in the bread box. Those not usable for "kneads" should be thoroughly dried in a special oven and served for crumbing. Frequently scalding and sunning of the bread container helps to keep the bread fresh and prevents mold.

Buttered toast does not keep well and should never be stored in the bread box.

It seems wisest to buy things and cereals in small quantities while the weather is hot. Dry food delivered in paper bags should be turned into glass or metal containers for safety against mold and weevils. Flour, cereals and sugars are sensitive to moisture; in the air and absorb it readily, so that metal cans are desirable for this reason also.

Crackers and ready-to-eat cereals lose their crispness—very quickly if they are exposed to the air. However, they easily can be made crisp again by placing them in the oven for ten or fifteen minutes. They must be thoroughly cooled before serving.

SMITH MAY QUIT IF ROOSEVELT DOES AF's Convention Manager Gives Out Statement That Starts Speculation.

Chicago, June 24.—(AP)—A sudden anti-Roosevelt pronouncement of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City today caused Democratic chieftains to wonder whether Hague meant Alfred E. Smith would quit the presidential race if Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt would.

But elsewhere there was a flood of speculation as to whether Hague meant to imply Smith would readily retire in favor of some candidate should Roosevelt do likewise.

Smith himself conferred with Hague while the latter was drafting the statement and this added fuel to the fire of speculation.

Chicago, June 24.—(AP)—Chairman John J. Raskob believes the Democratic convention, despite its manifold trouble potentials, will last two days "plus the time it takes to nominate candidates."

Here is comfort for weak voiced delegates who do not wish to make the long journey from the Democratic convention floor to the rostrum.

One thousand words — no more and maybe less. Members on the democratic resolutions committee have set this as their goal for the party platform.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

What this country needs—right now is "guts." Harvest time is a long way off. But the soil is rich and warm. Trees are green. Gray clouds are gone and the sky is blue. It takes faith, nerve and vision to run a business. Faith that America always comes back. Nerve to go in there and put up a fight. Vision to comprehend the opportunity in a market of one hundred and twenty million virile people who want everything and are willing to sweat to get it.

This is no time to sit on the fence watching the weeds grow, hoping Congress will do something about it. For some time to come, prosperity will be won with backaches. The next dream line at the ticker and the bread line that follows are a long way off.

The Wife—Do you think I look all right in my new gown, dear?
The Husband—Hm! Yes, but I would suggest that if possible you get in it a little further.

Courtship Under Difficulties
 Consider the mail pilot's sweetheart. She watches until he is a mere speck. Then saunters off home with the knowledge that he is her pain in the neck.

Counsel (cross-examining prejudiced witness)—I suggest that Mrs. Gibbons is anathema to you.
Witness—Then you suggest wrong. It's only my friends that I call by their Christian names.

A husband who is in the habit of coming late at night with elaborate excuses says the best present to give a doubting wife is a copy of "Believe it or Not."

Hubb—You've been looking a bit shabby of late, old man. Haven't you spent any money for new clothes lately?
Peck—Oh, haven't I? You should have seen her last Sunday.

The girl who used to marry a man to reform him now has a daughter who figures that two can go to the devil as cheaply as one.

Jarvis—And how is your wife?
Fervis—Oh, her head is troubling her a lot.
Jarvis—That's bad. Chronic headaches, eh?
Fervis—No; she wants a new hat.

One trouble with our various forms of government is that they go in too strongly for fact-finding and not strongly enough for fact-finding.

Henderson—Did you get my check?
Fennington—Yes, twice. Once from you and once from the bank.

Bachelor—A man who, when he accomplishes something, gets all the credit.

Prosecuting Attorney—Your Honor, your bull pup has chewed up the Bible.
The Judge (grumbling)—Make the witness kiss the dog. We can't adjourn court to get a new Bible.

After all, "to love 'em and leave 'em," is better than to "love them and deceive them."

Flying Sparks: Between sense and nonsense the latter is the best seller. Let's ride back to business on a buy-cycle. . . . To keep a romance from blooming, nip it in the bud. . . . It is dangerous to lose the habit of making friends. . . . You cannot build a reputation on the things you are going to do. . . . When your foot's asleep let the sleeping dogs lie. . . . Don't question your wife's judgment—look who she married. . . . If a man isn't honest there's no use bothering with him. . . . True religion is not in services so much as in service. . . . How polite and obliging people are when work is slack. . . . Money may, but it never gives itself away. . . . No man has the nerve to tell a woman the things her mirror tells her. . . . A small man is easily satisfied with himself. . . . Difficulties strengthen the mind, exactly as labor does the body. . . . A criminal is a person who breaks the wrong laws.

THE DEMONSTRATION

ROBINSON: Who was that man you just raised your hat to?
GREEN: That? Oh, that was my barber. He sold me a bottle of hair grower a month ago, and whenever I met him I let him see what a fraud he is.—Lustige Blatter.

HOORAY! HOORAY!

STAGE MANAGER: You received a tremendous ovation. They are still clapping. What did you say?
ACTOR: I told them I would not go on with my act until they quieted down.—Hummel, Hamburg.

DO IT AGAIN

HUBBY: Here is $5, dear. Don't you think I deserve a little applause for giving it to you without being asked for it?
WIFE: Applause? Why, darling, I think you deserve an encore!—The Humorist.
