

VOTERS FACE HARD TASK TOMORROW

Must Select 30 of 52 Candidates in Republican Primary—Democrats Have a Contest, Too—Urge Early Voting.

Republican voters in Manchester will caucus tomorrow for their nominations to town offices and they have 52 candidates to name for 30 offices. It is the largest list of nominations ever presented to the Republicans in town. The Democrats are staging a contest in their Primary, too, so a big day is expected at the Municipal building, rain or shine. The polls will open at ten o'clock, daylight saving time, and will close at nine in the evening.

Representative Contest

Greatest interest centers around the Representative contest. The candidates are Sherwood Bowers, Marygrove Cheney, Thomas J. Rogers, Samuel Stevenson and William J. Thornton. Miss Cheney is seeking a renomination, Rogers and Thornton are endorsed by the Republican town committee and Bowers by the Taxpayers' League. Miss Cheney has served the town four terms as a legislator and the Republican town committee feels that she has been honored sufficiently with this nomination.

16 For Selectman

There are 16 candidates for the Selectman nomination and in this contest the Republican town committee has endorsed W. George Glenny, George E. Keith, W. W. Robertson and Wells A. Strickland on the basis of previous service to the town. There are also contests for Constable and Justice of the Peace but the Republican town committee has stated no preference for these offices.

Take More Time

More than the usual amount of time will be consumed by voters in the primaries tomorrow, due to the new machines in use and the large number of candidates for town offices. With twenty extra pollsters to operate, and with a large vote expected to be drawn out by reason of the increase in candidates, it is expected that late voters will have to stand in line for a greater length of time than in former primaries.

Today's Activities

Activity in the Municipal building was very evident this morning with orders for the installation of 11 special telephones in the building and adjoining buildings. All available space in the building has been taken by candidates and their workers, assuring one of the greatest vote combings in recent years. Every candidate in the primary has his or her special corps of workers, and estimates of the total vote expected to be cast has increased in the past few days, now reaching upwards of 3,500 by those in the know politically.

The Race for Selectman will be decided tomorrow with 16 candidates registered for the seven posts. Only five of the 16 candidates for the office of selectman are up for re-election, with the exception of that of William W. Robertson who served on the board in 1931 and who

MAINE REPUBLICANS PREDICT VICTORY

Chairman Field Says Martin Will Win For Congress By Over 25,000 Votes.

Portland, Maine, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Republican Chairman Daniel Field predicted the election of Burlingame Martin, Republican by a majority of more than 25,000 and success for all three Congressional nominees, Congressman Carroll L. Beedy and John E. Nelson and former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster.

The Democratic chairman, John H. Dooley said victory for Louis J. Bran, gubernatorial nominee, by 20,000 as well as for Joseph E. F. Connelly, Edward C. Moran, Jr., and John G. Utterback, the Congressional aspirant.

Prohibition was the all important issue in the Congressional contests. All three Democratic candidates were for repeal. The Republicans hardly mentioned prohibition during the campaign.

Brak voting was reported in most sections of the state in the first hour. In Portland surprising activity was being manifest in the suburban wards, where the heavy voting ordinarily does not begin until late in the day. Observers predicted the total would equal if not exceed the records of 1922.

Lewiston and Auburn reported heavy voting and observers, because of the time used in marking ballots, predicted many of the voters were splitting the tickets.

New York's New Mayor in Duel of Words With Reds

CLAIMS TROOPS NEEDED TO DRIVE OUT VETS

Attorney General Mitchell Reports That Over 800 of the Men Were Not Veterans—Many Communists.

Washington, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A report from Attorney General Mitchell that Federal troops summoned during last summer's encampment of the Bonus Army here were "necessary to, and did prevent further disorder and bloodshed" was before President Hoover today.

"In their absence, further rioting would have occurred with further bloodshed among honest marchers and police and possibly innocent bystanders," Mitchell advised the President after an investigation of police and other officials records.

"It is probable the Bonus Army brought into the city of Washington the largest aggregation of criminals that had ever been assembled in the city at any one time," his report said.

The 4,000 word document covering findings in the investigation ordered by President Hoover was made public by Mr. Hoover with a short statement that it "should correct the many misstatements of fact as to this incident with which the country has been flooded. The President added:

"I wish to state emphatically that the extraordinary proportion of criminal, Communist and non-veteran elements amongst the marchers as shown by this report should not be taken to reflect upon the many thousands of honest, law-abiding men who came to Washington with full right of presentation of their views to Congress."

877 New Veterans

Mitchell reported that 877 of the first 3,686 men named on the B. E. F. roster could not be identified as ex-servicemen and that of the 4,723 applying for transportation home, 1,069 had police records and 829 of these had been convicted. Communist, he said, promoted the march on Washington and then

NEW REICHSTAG DISSOLVED BY GERMANS' HEAD

Von Papen Spikes Motion of Non Confidence By Serving Decree Signed By President For Emergency.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Chancellor von Papen, facing the new Reichstag for the first time this afternoon, spiked a motion of non-confidence by serving upon the Parliament the decree of dissolution which President von Hindenburg signed a week ago.

So surprising was the turn of events, however, that the status of the government was not immediately clear. The hostile opposition insisted that it had beaten the chancellor to the draw by adopting a motion of non-confidence before the decree of dissolution was served.

There was no uncertainty in the chancellor's mind. The vote of non-confidence, which would have unseated the government, was unconstitutional and ineffective, he contended, because it was the work of a Parliament already dissolved.

Facts Reviewed

The issue was submitted to the Reichstag Council of Elders which convened this afternoon long enough to review the facts, then adjourned to consider the constitutional aspects of the situation.

What happened was this: The chancellor appeared at the opening of the session ready with a speech outlining his past achievements and his future intentions. The galleries were crowded.

Before things were well underway Socialists upset the arrangements by moving that the recent series of emergency decrees putting the government's economic program into effect be rescinded. There was an objection, and under house rules immediate debate was in order.

More Adjournment

Then the National Socialists moved a half hour adjournment to consider this development. The Communists thereupon moved non-confidence in the cabinet.

Non-confidence meant to the rostrum with the decree of dissolution in his hand. Hermann Goering, the National socialist speaker of the Reichstag, waved his aside, asserting that the vote was in progress and would be completed before anything else was taken up.

The Communist motion carried, 518 to 32, with members abstaining. The speaker announced that the chancellor's decree of dissolution would be ignored in view of the fact that the government already had been overthrown. The Reichstag then adjourned until tomorrow and the Council of Elders went into session.

In a statement issued by the government through the Press Bureau it was explained that under the constitution government representatives are entitled to the floor outside the regular order of business. Chancellor von Papen asked for the floor twice and was denied it. The government maintained that this denial was a violation of the constitution and that by laying his decree upon the Speaker's desk the chancellor dissolved the parliament.

HUTCHINSON FAMILY CRASH IN ARCTIC; BELIEVE EIGHT LOST

CLAIM VETERANS NEED NO FAVORS

Daniels, War Time Secretary of Navy, Speaks Before Legion Convention.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Fighting men in the World War "asked no favors" and "they ask none now," Josephus Daniels, of Raleigh, N. C., war-time secretary of the Navy, told the National Convention of the American Legion here today.

"More than that" he added "they wish all administrative policies, which have been justly criticized, repealed and discontinued to the end that this generous nation's policy to the veterans will not be detracted by such extravagance or favoritism."

The solution of National economic problems rests alike upon legionsnaires and all other citizens, Mr. Daniels declared, asserting extravagance in appropriations "is not confined to veteran legislation."

"It has been rampant in almost every line and in ways without suggestion that the Legion creed against participation in party politics for individual advantage should be violated."

"Quite the contrary, politics needs your freshness, your courage, in order to lift it to the high plane it must occupy to serve mankind."

Mr. Daniels recalled what he termed the "high idealism which marked America and its millions of men in arms at the time of the world war" and commented it "with the failure of the post-war world to carry out the ideal for which the war was waged."

Treasury Looters

He contrasted the promises to the men who entered the country's service in 1917 to the epithets of "looters" which he said had been leveled at war veterans.

For the lapse from "the ideals of wartime," Daniels said the men who

GO INTO POLITICS

Mr. Daniels urged legionnaires "to go into politics."

"The admission," he said "has no suggestion that the Legion creed against participation in party politics for individual advantage should be violated."

Train Wrecked — 600 Persons Robbed and Many Injured in Three Raids.

Harbin, Manchuria, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Twenty-four persons were killed, upwards of 70 injured, and an undetermined number kidnapped and 600 robbed in a series of three combined bandit raids and train wrecks near here within 24 hours.

In addition to these casualties more than 200 were killed and several wounded in a battle between Japanese troops and Chinese bandits six miles farther south near Tabling. The Japanese clashed with 700 bandits who were retreating with the Chinese Eastern Railway on which the three wrecks occurred.

Twelve passengers were killed, 47 injured, and 600 robbed in the first wreck when the bandits derailed the regular Changchun-Harbin train at Shuangcheng. The train left Harbin late Saturday night.

Six passengers were killed, fourteen injured and 100 kidnaped in a second wreck of a passenger train bound for Harbin in the neighborhood of Changchun, on the eastern railway.

Six Japanese killed, several wounded, and several others were missing following the derailment and wreck by bandits of a Japanese hospital train near Shuangcheng, short distance away from the spot where the first train was wrecked. This train was carrying fifty Japanese passengers and a number of sick

"The question to be asked," he said "by anyone who will give reasoned judgment to the problem is briefly this: What will it mean in dollars and cents to America? What will it mean in jobs, increased production, enlarged markets?"

LEVITT'S DELEGATES TO MEET SATURDAY

To Hold Convention in New Haven—Oppose Re-election of Senator Bingham.

New Haven, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Members of the Independent Republican Party of Connecticut pledged to oppose the re-election of U. S. Senator Hiram Bingham were notified today that the party's state convention will be held Saturday in New Haven.

Albert Levitt, acting chairman of the party said the same presidential electors named by the Republican convention last week will be nominated by the independents but otherwise a complete slate will be nominated for state and national offices.

While Levitt, former law professor, has announced his candidacy for the Senatorial nomination, the name of Professor Irving Fisher of Yale, noted economist, has been advanced as the possible nominee. The latter has declined to become a candidate for the nomination and has been non-committal as to whether he will consent to be drafted.

Friends of prohibition, led by the Rev. Ralph H. White have allied themselves with the independent party against Bingham because of the latter's anti-prohibition stand.

Levitt said the "temper of the group was determined and enthusiastic" and asserted there will be "no letup in the fight" which he had led for years against the regular Republican party.

MCKEE DEFENDANT IN FRIENDLY SUIT

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Mayor Joseph V. McKee was served today with an order to show cause for himself and the board of election for the city of New York why the board should not be mandamus to cease action in preparing for election of a mayor in November.

The suit was brought by David Mac today as a tax payer and with the consent of Mayor McKee for a conference between the mayor and his former law partner, Harold Medina, professor of law at Columbia University.

The order served on the mayor at City Hall today is returnable on Wednesday.

McKee, who took over the duties of mayor a week ago today after the resignation of James J. Walker during an ouster hearing before Governor Roosevelt, accepted service of the order and said he would turn the papers over to the corporation counsel.

Suit Is Necessary
McKee said that when he first gave the matter consideration he conferred with Medina who decided that a taxpayer's suit was necessary to determine the legality of the election. He stated that he was ready to carry the matter to the Court of Appeals.

On the day McKee, as president of the Board of Estimate, automatically became mayor to fill the vacancy caused by Walker's resignation, the city clerk certified to the existence of a vacancy and he should be filled by an election at the time of the general election on Nov. 8. Mayoral elections are regularly held on odd years.

After accepting service of today's order, McKee issued the following statement:
"When the question of tenure of my office came up I decided to consult with Harold Medina, my former law partner, who gave the matter close study and came to the opinion that there was no legality in the proposal of election at the time of fall. With that opinion in mind I thought it was only fair to have the matter tested."

"It is very important that there should be no haphazard opinions, and I instructed Mr. Medina to institute the order and carry it up to the Court of Appeals. I am in mind not only the tenure of my office but the question also of the expense involved in this election. I also gave thought to the fact that the voters would have an opportunity to elect a mayor in direct primary. This matter should not be rushed and it is of too great importance to be a sideline in the election for President and Governor."

FUNERALS

Miss Anne Haven

The funeral of Miss Anne Haven of Main street, one of Manchester's best known and most widely respected residents, was held this morning at 9:15 o'clock at St. James church, where a requiem high mass was celebrated.

From 8 o'clock yesterday morning until late last night, many hundreds of friends visited the funeral parlors of T. P. Holloran on Center street to view and pay last respects to Miss Haven. The services today were very largely attended. The mass was celebrated by Rev. Patrick Killen, assistant pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. William P. Reilly, pastor, as deacon and Rev. STERLING TO CONTEST PRIMARIES IN COURT

Lubbock, Tex., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Announcement was made today that Governor R. S. Sterling would not contest the claim of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson to the Democratic nomination for governor before state party meetings here, but would file a contest in District Court later.

State Senator R. A. Stuart of Fort Worth, spokesman for the governor, also announced that Sterling would not attend the sessions of the Democratic executive committee, which convened today to canvass the result of the Aug. 27 primary, or the state convention which tomorrow is expected to ratify as the nominee the candidate certified to it by the committee.

In deciding against attempts at a contest at the party meetings, the Sterling forces followed a ruling of the State Supreme Court in a mandamus action brought by Mrs. Ferguson. The court held that any contention involving the regularity of the primary voting should be made in a District Court within five days after the convention had named the nominee.

SHIP'S BOILERS LEAKED, EX-FIREMAN TESTIFIES

Tells Probers That Plates Were Very Thin and Steam Allowance Blew Off On Observation.

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Victor J. Michaelson, former fireman on the steamer Observation, which exploded in the East river Friday with a loss of 48 lives, testified today at an inquiry by the Federal Steamboat Inspection Service that the Observation's boiler had been leaking for several months, sometimes so badly that it spilled steam into the stowage.

Michaelson said he was discharged two months ago for having failed to report for work, but that he worked one day on the boat, September 8.

Michaelson said he could hear steam blowing off whenever he had steam up in the boiler.

"I didn't like it," he said. "I thought the plates were pretty thin. One day we had a welder there to fix one of the port side water legs. He told me he had nothing to work on."

Walter J. Larson, who worked as fireman on the boat from July 4 to September 5, corroborated Michaelson's testimony about the leak and added:
"It must have been a pretty heavy leak because sometimes we had to pump water into the boiler twice a night."
Both men testified they had assisted in making repairs on the boiler. David Thompson, former chief engineer, then testified that minor repairs were made without stopping the engine. Thompson said he had not known it was leaking.

EXECUTIVE POSTS

Candidate For Selectman Has Ability His Friends Maintain.

One of the outstanding qualifications of Charles R. Martin, candidate for selectman on the Republican ticket this year, is the ability to manage as exemplified by his work as President of the Army and Navy Club, director of labor in the Hartford County jail, as the newly elected member of the Recreation Committee and as Chairman of the Permanent Armistice Day Committee and as a member of various committees from the Veterans of Foreign Wars post.

When the Anderson-Shea Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, was organized Charles R. Martin became its first Adjutant, being elevated to the rank of junior vice-commander at the fall election. He had been previously selected to head the Army and Navy Club as its president and its first adjutant, due to his interest in the affairs of the Recreation Center, was selected a member of that committee.

A good platform speaker, Martin has on several occasions participated in ceremonies conducted by the service groups on Armistice Day. He is a student of each and every subject placed before him, weighing and reasoning the values of each factor before making his final decision, and his record proves that he cannot be swayed by motives that he deems unworthy.

Clarence R. Martin places his candidacy for selectman directly with those of his acquaintance who know his ability in the several positions of trust that he has held in the past.

WIFE MISSING

Police Search For Woman's Body—Tells Police That His Home Was Ransacked

Tuckahoe, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Charles E. Dubois, revealed today at Plymouth, Mass., and formally charged with the murder of his missing wife, was last Friday to inspect his home at 15 Merritt street, town of Eastchester. He complained to police that his home had been broken into and asked that a watch be kept. The next day, Saturday, the Dubois' only servant, a youth named Lepit, was seen hanging out some clothing which had been washed. Since then he had disappeared.

Before the visit of Dubois and Larry neighbors had thought the house was closed. Manchester police had not been notified up to noon of the charges against Dubois or asked to aid in the investigation. Massachusetts authorities are searching for the body of Mrs. Dubois.

Left in August, Mr. and Mrs. Dubois, who had lived here only since last October, coming from New England, left early in August for Cape Cod. Neighbors said today, Mrs. Dubois went ahead driving her own automobile. It was understood she intended to stop on the way to their summer home.

Dubois left the next day apparently to follow her and it was understood that they went separately because Dubois was to ride with a young married couple. The identity of the couple was unknown here. Mrs. Dubois was described as 35 years old and very attractive but of a "melancholy" personality. Dubois was older. They had no children.

Police records show that Dubois appeared at Eastchester police headquarters last Friday and made a complaint that his home had been entered in his absence. He told police that he would be away until Sept. 17 and asked that he be informed of arrest for the intrusion or further trouble or suspicious incidents, saying he could be reached at Bourneville, Mass., care of Charles Grover. Dubois did not report anything taken from the house.

CASH BAIL FORFEITED

Rye, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Judge William N. Edwards in Village Police Court today ordered forfeited the $15 cash bail posted by a man arrested for speeding last Friday who gave his name as Hubert, an orchestra leader of 55 Central Park west, New York City, and who police said was Rudy Vallee. The charge was driving 45 miles an hour on the Boston Road.

BASES QUALIFICATIONS ON HIS OWN SUCCESS

Selectman Candidate Squires Has Handled Own Affairs Well, His Friends Say.

Clifford C. Squires, candidate for Selectman in the Republican primaries tomorrow, has much to recommend him to the voters of Manchester, according to those interested in his candidacy.

Born at Bridgehampton, L. I., on June 28, 1876, Mr. Squires was a successful potato grower until he took up dairying in Connecticut. He later settled in Manchester, taking over the store property of the late J. E. Morton on North Main street. He has always taken an active interest in the towns in which he has resided and owes his success to his own judgment in handling his own affairs and his friends say he would no doubt work for all town interests if he should meet with the approval of the voters of Manchester.

 MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12.
 BIGGEST PRIMARY
 Tomorrow Manchester Republicans will have their biggest primary in the history of the town. Never before have there been so many contests for places on the town ticket, or such serious ones. The air is full of the talk of local politics, candidates and their friends are hustling for votes and the community is taking a keen interest, whereas on so many occasions in the past the primary, though practically equivalent to an election, has made rather less stir in the town than a circus in the suburbs or a dollar day in the stores.
 With sixteen candidates for Republican nomination as selectmen and only seven nominations possible; with five contestants for the two places as representative in the General Assembly and with six aspiring to the four senior positions among the six nominees for the new Board of Education, there is material enough for a major political battle, and it is all being taken advantage of.
 This newspaper has often declared itself as heartily favoring an extension of local political interest. It believes it to be a healthy condition when many aspire to participation in the public affairs of the community. Always, of course, when numerous persons offer themselves, some are less fit than others for the places sought. We do not believe, however, that it will often happen that the actually unfit will win preferment at the hands of the voters.
 That, indeed, is precisely the advantage to the community in these free-for-all political scrambles. It puts the voters on their mettle, brings home to them a sense of responsibility. It impels them to the exercise of their right of self government. A big town primary is the foundation of political education for the masses of the electorate. The individual voter is awakened to a consciousness that whether we have good officials or incapable ones is a matter for him and his neighbors to determine.
 We have faith enough in the discernment of the Republican voters of this town to believe that they will discover, among the sixteen candidates for selectmen, that some of them would be very poor material for the town governing board, that some of them would be only mediocre and that at least seven of the sixteen and perhaps two others are first class timbers. It should not be difficult in a town like this, where the merits and demerits of political aspirants are pretty sure to be generally known, for the voters to pick the best. We believe they will.
 Unusual interest naturally will attach to the selection of the party's candidates for members of the new Town Board of Education. Two are to be nominated for each of three terms, three years, two years and one year respectively. There are three candidates for each of the longer terms, no contest for the one-year nominations. Among each of the contest groups are two members who have served on the old Board of Education and one newcomer. All the candidates are persons of character and ability; it is up to the voters to determine whether in the management of the schools they regard experience as a prime consideration.
 Of the five candidates for the two places as representative, two are able citizens who have served the town well as selectmen, and who have been regarded as due for further recognition, another is a present representative of four terms service who refuses, it seems to us a little unreasonably, to subscribe to the theory of a limited tenure, the fourth is a "dry" and the fifth a newcomer untried in any political service.
 There are even contests, and lively ones, for the nominations for constables and justices of the peace. In fact not of a little of the primary interest is created by the activities of these candidates.

 On the whole it is a stimulating condition—and rather regrettable that the Democrats, on their part, have too little prospect of success in contestable offices on election day in large numbers, their only contest being for the post of registrar, where an experienced and an inexperienced candidate are matching strength.
 CRIMINAL BONUSES
 A great many Americans will be considerably astonished to find that they have, in the organization of the Department of Justice, such an accurately functioning machine that within a few weeks it can trace the records of 4,728 individuals as casual as those who made up the bonus army and be able to report that that number 1,069 have police records and of these 329 had been convicted at some time or other.
 This with no more to start from than the names, addresses and army numbers given by the bonuseers, which, in the case of the criminals among them at least, would seem to be rather meagre information.
 A good many persons no doubt will be much impressed by the celerity with which this investigation must have been carried out. Some others will be inclined to accept with a grain of salt Attorney General Mitchell's report to Mr. Hoover concerning the character of the deluded men who went to Washington to try to get Congress to pay them an imaginary debt in which they believed.
 For an organization as inept as the Department of Justice has shown itself to be in the apprehension of countless "big shot" racketeers whom any newsboy could point out to it, that law enforcement agency has, according to its own data, achieved a most amazing feat in personal espionage of thousands of the most inconspicuous people in the country.
 As a matter of fact Mr. Mitchell's inclusion of the fact that 877 of the 4,728 traced "could not be identified as veterans" will not be completely convincing when it is so well known that the Department of Justice was more interested in proving non-service than service.
 It is regrettable that this report was ever undertaken and that it has been made public. While only a small percentage of the ex-service men of the country were included in the Bonus Army, the action of veteran organizations all over the country, since, indicates how completely those groups are in sympathy with the bonus-march idea. They are certain to resent, very bitterly, the conclusions of the Department of Justice that a large proportion of the marchers were crooks and that so many of them were not veterans at all. The feeling was already bitter enough. This report is going to make it worse unless we are very much mistaken indeed.

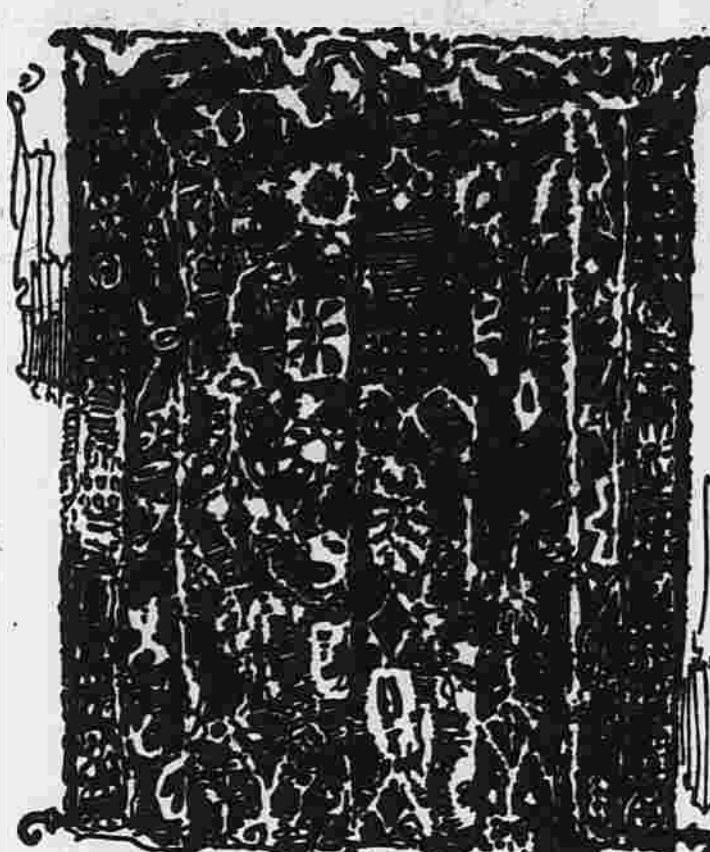

OLYMPIC THOUGHTS
 A friend has sent us a clipping of an editorial in the Los Angeles Times on the subject of the Tenth Olympiad, now a matter of the past, expressing the hope that it might be reprinted. The salient paragraphs are these:
 In the original Olympics, a victor was once asked what he expected to get out of it. He said, "To be privileged to fight in the front ranks of the King."
 What will the victors of the Tenth Olympiad get out of it? They may have a chance to fight in the front ranks of the highest ideals of any country. They will have a chance to live—and maybe die—for civic righteousness and sobriety. They have a chance to be braver, braver, better in international understanding and relationships. They have a chance to make it hard to ever fight those with whom they play. They have the supreme chance to fight in the front ranks for universal and everlasting peace!
 The Grove where the Grecian Olympics were held was a sacred inclosure. Nothing vicious nor unmanly was supposed to enter.
 Our Olympic Stadium is holy ground. Nothing small, nor weak, nor questionable, nor cowardly, nor low-minded, nor unideal should enter these sacred gates. May these high walls fend off against the cheap and tawdry, the despicable and unclean! May every athlete be a priest in the Holy Place!
 If, during the period of deepest interest in the Olympics at Los Angeles this newspaper did not indulge in rhapsodies over the event it was because we are always just a little skeptical concerning the advantage to the human race in the over-stressing of athletic contests.
 The original Olympics was a political stunt. It was a very clever device for interesting the peoples of several little Hellenic states in the activities in which the most athletic of them, Sparta, which sought political leadership, was best able to advertise her superiority. That it continued to be political is evidenced by the fact that when Pisa, having for a long time been excluded from any proper part in the management of the contests, once succeeded in getting control and running the show, that whole festival was later stricken from the records altogether when Sparta and Elis again got the upper hand.

 It may be that there is something godlike in the courage and self-immolation of the contenders in these great international contests; but if so then it is pretty difficult to deny the quantities of duty to a good horse on a race track. Such an animal will put the last hair's weight of his strength and will into the winning of his race, if his jockey will let him, with no more notion of saving himself than a human weight thrower or a sprinter. Yet he may bite his trainer or kick a stable boy in the eye next day and he may be an obstreperous luncheon or an animal every other way you take him.
 Candidly, it seems to us that it is almost as important, for the good of the human family, that the young people's thoughts be somewhat directed toward making this world a reasonable and fit place to live in as toward the apothecosis of so-called sports that develop brawn and perhaps cunning but which, after all, may leave heads pretty empty concerning the serious problems of existence.
 We find no fault whatever with sports or with athletic contests. They are, in themselves, healthy and natural manifestations. What we do criticize is a mawkish tendency to endow them with a glory out of all proportion to their value to civilization. We can cheer with the loudest for a champion prize fighter or runner or pole vaulter, and we can be proud when one of our own people gains distinction in sports. But we can't believe that the original Olympics saved Greece from making a pretty squallid finish or that the revival of them is going to save the United States or Finland from the penalty of economic and political ignorance or of ethical atrophy.
 In a word we fear that over-acculturation of sports in this country is a drug which in very serious degree interferes with the natural curiosity and interest of youth in the problem of what life is all about and how it can be made better.

IN NEW YORK
 Just Shoe-stringing Along
 New York, Sept. 13.—The shoe-string, they'll tell you on Broadway, has replaced the old lathstring. Fellows now find their way into the theatre without the slightest preliminary knocking at the door. The situation has given the Actor's Equity many a headache, and has given desperate theatrical paragraphers a grand opportunity to write endless pieces on "what's the matter with the theater."
 The "shoe-string" producer, like so many other things and persons, is a creation of the depression. With countless theaters dark and innumerable actors out of work, theaters are to be had at new lows and actors have been willing to gamble salaries for the chance at any sort of job. With a few hundred dollars and some old scenery out of Cain's warehouse, something resembling a play could be put on—and has been.
 As a matter of fact, most of the famed personalities identified with dramatic presentations have reached that goal after a long and loyal struggle along various trails. The late Flo Ziegfeld started as a press agent and manager of a strong man, William Brady, veteran of the trade, managed prize fighters, one of whom was Bob Fitzsimmons. Max Gordon ran a theatrical agency.
 Who's Who On Broadway
 The Minskys, entrepreneurs of low burlesque, were variously college men and newspaper fellows who stumbled into the theater through the accident of a father who happened to be in the real estate business. Peggy Fears, newest of the producers, was a chorine—with brains. A. J. Beckhard, another newcomer, was a concert manager. Al Woods was a shrewd sidewalk salesman starting from doorways with glinting trinkets.
 David Belasco had been an actor; so was Katherine Cornell. And still is. Sam Harris was an East Side lad who did a bit of everything. George M. Cohan came from a theatrical family and inherited his stage fever. Lawrence Rivers, who presented the spectacularly successful "Green Pastures," when others had turned thumbs down, was actually a gent by the name of Rowland play sponsor who came from Wall Street offices. Herman Shumlin was new to the theater when he put on the elaborate "Grand Hotel." Jed Harris was a press agent.
 And so it goes, with no one able to prognosticate from whence any of the play sponsors will come.
 Several of the successful newcomers have had to fall back on the co-operative idea, with players sharing in the rewards—if any. Thus the first Beckhard production, "Another Language," turned out to be a great investment for those whom he gambled on in its prospects. Several who insisted on straight salaries have kicked themselves ever since.
 Just Old Broadway Costumes
 Six floors of a mid-town building are needed to meet Broadway's costume demands in those days when production is humming. This vast area is occupied by the Albert Q. Hayes concern, which has been providing costumes since 1865 when

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington
 MOST OF THE HOWLING AGAINST CONGRESS DONE BY BALKED
 BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer
 Washington.—Some members of Congress unquestionably are losing their jobs this year because many voters are convinced that Congress is a bad lot.
 It is impossible to enter any blanket defense of Congress and its perfonmance, but it is also unfortunate that so many people fall for the propaganda of those groups and individuals, so often motivated by pure self-interest and so often un-informed or willing to misrepresent, who most persistently ridicule and berate it.
 Congress is attacked—often justly, but seldom with intelligent criticism—for extravagance, cowardice, petty personal graft, playing politics, verbosity and other sins.
 Better Than Deserved?
 But it is elected by the people of the United States on the theory that they will send here the men they want to represent them. Considering the muddle-headed voting and popular indifference we have had thus far, recent Congresses probably have been much better than we deserved.
 As an institution, Congress is the branch of government which directly represents the people and which is most responsive to their desires. If it were suddenly eliminated the government would become a dictatorship which, at this time, would inevitably be dominated, for better or worse, by the industrial and financial interests which already exert a major influence both in Congress and at the White House.
 There are many conservatives who would prefer such a dictatorship, who believe that the President should have a completely free hand even though he has been getting about everything he asked for. But that raises the question whether you want to invest one man with such mighty power and, if so, which man.
 Somebody Loves Them
 Every member is loved by somebody, although in some cases heaven knows why. It takes a lot of people to elect one. The assumption is that a senator who stays here is pleasing a majority in his state and that congressmen re-elected are favored by their districts. When he gets here the member has to reconcile his own ideas and prejudices on National legislation with his political leadership, but he must please his constituency or he can't stay.
 Whether he is or isn't already controlled by some interest or interests at home, he at once becomes the target for organized pressure groups which are likely to influence him to the extent to which they can influence political events in his bailiwick.
 He finds himself in a whirl of conflicting interests—wets versus dries, capital against labor, veterans and farmers against the other taxpayers, tariff beneficiaries against consumers, rich men against those who would tax them more heavily, power companies, business men and bankers lobbying against taxes or legislation they dislike, Cabinet members and various powerful groups opposing specific economies.
 What's Back of the Howling
 He does the best he can, with affection regard for his political skin and for the attitude of his voters as nearly as he can figure it, and comes in for plenty of abuse almost inevitably. The powerful, articulate groups are bound to be pleased with some congressmen and displeased with others.
 One group is pleased where another is not. Many such groups hate each other. No group is completely satisfied unless Congress is completely subservient to it.
 So the sum total of attacks piles up until there seems to be a general howling chorus directed at Congress. The President, naturally anxious for more power and prestige, takes advantage of it whenever possible, as do his Cabinet members and other political henchmen.
 Congressional extravagance and cowardice may be traced largely to organized pressure. Examples of nepotism, the mileage racket and other graft are sometimes disgusting, but when you recall the trust-controlled members and other hush-traders who in former decades shovelled out our natural resources and other privileges to grasping capitalists (often for bribes, even if some of our congressmen are reputedly statesmen), it is hard to get excited about it.
 The few exceptional statesmen in Congress today—able, honest and fearless—compare favorably with the dead statesmen for whom we build statues. Complaining that Congress "plays politics" are usually a matter of whose ox is gored. Politicians will always play politics, from the White House right down the line to the lowliest street sweeper.
 The theater belt was way down town.
 Rush orders mean the constant employment of 140 tailors. Some things like 100,000 costumes are on hand for emergencies. When theater business is slack, carnivals and masquerades, society costumes and the like are depended upon.
 Some of the costumes date back to such productions as "When Knighthood Was in Flower"—and this, by the way, provided one of the largest orders in theatrical history, amounting to a total of like $150,000. Which, in those days, was actually paid for.

FASTING FOR DISEASE
 As I write this article, I have on my desk in front of me a book which I received from the publishers today. It is probably one of the latest and most authoritative reference books at the disposal of physicians. In this book is approximately an 18,000 word treatise on fasting, citing the word treatise on fasting, citing the experiments, conclusions and observations of various scientists upon fasting. Those of you who have been reading this column for some time know that I frequently recommend various forms of fasting for different disorders, so I was naturally much interested in reading over this treatise. Much to my surprise I found that practically no experiments were recorded which had anything to do with the effect of fasting upon sickness. The types of fasts used were upon healthy people and animals and consisted in excluding food, and in some cases water, for periods varying from three days to thirty-one days without the use of snemas or other aids to elimination.
 I do not know just what these fasts were intended to bring out in regard to the treatment of disease by controlled fasting and, as this is the most comprehensive treatment of fasting that I have come across in medical text books, it is no wonder that most doctors have very little knowledge or appreciation of the effect of fasting in diseased conditions.
 I first became interested in fasting as a remedy about twenty-five years ago, and since that time, I have observed and supervised many thousands of people during partial and complete fasts, carefully checking over their cases with the x-ray and various blood and other laboratory tests, so that I feel that I am in a position to know something about the effect of fasting upon the human organism, and I am of the opinion that properly conducted fasting and restricted diet comes as near to being a cure-all as any single method of treatment.
 By fasting I do not mean simply taking away food from the patient, since this is of very little value unless elimination is also speeded up in other ways, and the fasting should not be done judiciously or indiscriminately. The first fasts which I conducted were plain water fasts, all food being excluded. In many instances I noticed that those who were fasting developed severe crises or sick spells which were evidently due to the acidosis produced by the body as it fed upon its own tissues. And in searching about for a remedy for this condition I hit upon the acid fruit juices. Apparently they supplied the necessary food minerals to prevent acidosis and at the same time permitted the body to use up its surplus stored fats and carbohydrates.

 Of all the possible kinds of acid fruit juices the ones I found most satisfactory were the citrus fruit juices (especially orange) and the unfermented grape juice, and I still frequently recommend these for various disorders. Since the first good results with the acid fruit juices fasts I have tested out a great many other methods of fasting and diet restricting, some of which I will explain in subsequent articles.
 In tomorrow's article I am going to explain how chemical changes in the blood and tissues of the body exist before most diseases can develop and how products of imperfect metabolism produced from carbohydrates and proteins cause changes in the cells of the body. Although tomorrow's article will be rather technical, I would like everyone to read it over so that a better understanding of dietetic treatment and fasting may be had.
 (Knees Cracking).
 Question: Mary Del. asks: "Will you be so kind as to tell me the cause of the cracking in my knees when I walk or kneel down or get up from a chair? My knees are not sore, just the noise, and it is coming oftener now. Does it mean I may not be able to walk a few years hence?"
 Answer: The cracking of the joints usually indicates a lack of synovial fluid or loose fragments in the cells of the body. When no inflammation is present, it is a good plan to exercise the joints. It is also helpful to use plenty of the non-starchy vegetables in the diet.
 (Dizziness).
 Question: Mr. Harold P. asks: "What can be the cause of violent dizziness when lying on the back or right side? Bowels are regular."
 Answer: The dizziness may come from high blood pressure or hypertension of the arteries. In some cases plain biliousness is responsible.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

29 STUDENTS TRANSFER TO HIGH SCHOOL HERE

Larger Number Than Usual Have Come To Manchester From Other Schools.

An interesting fact was discovered today in the high school registration for the new year. Twenty-nine new students have entered the high school, transferring here from other high schools. This is 13 more than have left the high school from the upper classes to go to some other secondary school. Of the seventeen who have left, two are entering private schools or academies. The rest have accompanied their families who have moved out of town. This is about the number who ordinarily transfer to some other high school from Manchester but the 29 who have entered is more than usually are received because of families moving into town. This does not include the number of tuition pupils who come from Bolton, Coventry, Wapping and Andover, towns which do not support high schools but which pay the tuition of their pupils. These towns send pupils also to Rockville, Willimantic and East Hartford.

The new registrations include the following transfers: Florence Bieri, Catherine Gallivan and David Douglas, Wethersfield High. Herbert Gudwin and James Gray, Hillhouse High, New Haven. Marguerite Werner, Providence Technical High. Marion Yerks, Bellows Falls High, Vt. Rita Bennett, Baltic Academy. Emily Yeomans, Windham High. Josephine Malek and Emil Malek, Norwich Free Academy, Griswold. Robert Procher and Charles Procher, Burlington High, Vt. Ernest Klein, Newington. Robert Broe, Wallingford. Bernadette Chamberlain, Thomas Courcy, and George Beeny, Hartford. Elizabeth Peracchio, New York City. Helen Hyde, Alexander Tedford and Anne Skutovics, Burnside. Sophie Vilkesz, South Windsor. Alexander Popoff, East Hartford High. Evelyn Runkey, Warehouse Point.

HERRIOT ACCEPTS GIFT FROM AMERICA

Meaux, France, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Premier Edouard Herriot hopes the world will understand France's attitude on the question of Germany's demand for equality in armaments. In an address yesterday, officially accepting America's gift of a monument for the battlefield of the Marne, a gift made in recognition of the French gift of the Statue of Liberty to the United States, the premier pleaded for world understanding of French "uneasiness over the noise of certain dangerous manifestations."

He defended the French stand that Germany's demand must be taken to the League of Nations, and praised President Hoover's disarmament proposals, made shortly before the world conference at Geneva early in the summer. In behalf of the United States, Ambassador Edge expressed the hope the monument might inspire international collaboration in every field, material and moral. General John J. Pershing and Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania were among the Americans at the ceremony.

WASHINGTON STATE PRIMARIES TOMORROW

Seattle, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Estimation of economic conditions has taken the spotlight from the prohibition question as a political issue in Washington today as candidates headed into the home stretch for the primaries tomorrow.

The liquor question was more or less sidetracked in the Congressional primaries when most of the active campaigners took the stand "the people should be allowed to decide."

The state law must run the gauntlet of votes in the general election in November as an initiative measure.

Senator Wesley L. Jones, favoring submission as a matter of governmental principle, declared his personal attitude unchanged on the liquor question. He is author of the "five and ten" law.

His opponent in the Republican primaries, Adam Beeler, former Supreme Court justice, is for repeal. Three of the Democratic candidates for the Senatorial nomination—Stephen F. Chagwick, Edwin J. Brown, both of Seattle, and Homer T. Ross of Tacoma—are either for repeal or submission. The fourth, Lloyd Black, of Everett, favors prohibition. All have, however, stressed economic betterment in their campaigns.

Washington's five Congressmen are seeking reelection and three Republicans and two Democrats ask nomination in the newly created Sixth District.

The principal state fight is for the governorship, with Gov. Roland H. Hartley, Republican, seeking a third term. He is opposed by four Republicans. Four Democrats seek the office.

TRIES TO HANG HIMSELF

Chicago, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Rudolph Dies, 31-year-old former grocer, held for alleged extortion plots against society brides, was reported by police to have made unsuccessful attempts to end his life by hanging in his cell at suburban Evanston.

Dies, the police said, had torn his shirt into strips, tied the ends together, and was adjusting it about his neck when he was discovered.

The alleged extortionist was apprehended Friday when, police said, he picked up a dummy package, which had been left at a designated place by agents of Edwin M. Ashcraft, Jr., wealthy attorney, in compliance with a letter demanding $5,000 on penalty of having his daughter kidnaped and killed if he did not obey. The daughter, Ann, was married the same day to Raymond Otis Mitchell, Minneapolis attorney.

Since then police have been informed of three other instances in which wealthy men have received letters during the past few days demanding money to avert the kidnaping of daughters, about to be married.

YACHT NOT OWNED BY NEW YORK MAN Vessel Seized At Boston With Liquor Aboard Was Sold Last May, He Reports

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—William M. Greve, of 381 Madison avenue, today issued the following statement relative to the seizure of the yacht Prudence with liquor aboard at Boston:

"The yacht Prudence was purchased by Mr. Greve in March, 1930. He ran the boat until September 24th, 1930, when it was laid up in the Marine basin, foot of Hubbard street, Brooklyn, and never taken out again by Mr. Greve.

Early in May of this year a D. H. Thurber approached Mr. Greve with a proposition to purchase the yacht. He said he was an agent and gave two addresses, 39 Commonwealth Road, Watertown, Mass., and 84 State street, Boston, Mass. This latter address is the same as that of the principal for whom he was acting, Mansuet M. Dillaway. Mr. Greve never met Mr. Dillaway.

Sign Bill of Sale "An unconditional bill of sale was signed on May 23rd, 1932, after Mr. Greve had refused to take a marine mortgage. He wanted to get rid of the boat and have nothing more to do with it. Two-thirds of the purchase price was paid in cash and two small notes, one of which had been paid, were taken for the balance. Mr. Greve has not seen or heard of the boat since the sale.

"The engineer who had been retained by Mr. Greve to watch the boat while it was laid up reported that he had been discharged by the new owner about 10 days after the sale and that extensive repairs and alterations had been made to the yacht.

"The original bill of sale was filed in the Boston Custom House and an abstract filed in the New York Custom House within 24 hours of the sale and the Marine Basin, dockmaster and other interested parties were informed that Mr. Greve no longer had ownership or possession of the Prudence."

TO START MOVING LIBRARY WEDNESDAY

No Overdue Charge On Books While Library Is Closed—Not Sure of Opening.

Today and tomorrow are the last days on which the South Manchester Free Public Library will operate at its present location in the Eldridge house on Main street. The library will close its doors after Tuesday evening and will not reopen until the transfer to the new location in the School street Recreation Center has been completed.

Just how long the library will be closed is indefinite. It only the transfer of the books were to be considered, it would only require a few days but there will be some delay owing to the necessary changes which must be made in moving not only the books, but all of the stacks, tables, desks, etc., are to be taken to the new location and there will be considerable work in fitting the old stacks into their new quarters.

Librarian Miss Jessamine M. Smith said this morning that she thought the change would take about a week. As soon as the opening date becomes apparent, it will be announced in The Herald. Miss Smith also announced that people will not be asked to bring in their books due before Wednesday. In other words there will be no overdue charges for books which become due during the time the library is closed to the public.

Miss Smith further stated that the public is welcome to come and select books at any time during the closing period. Miss Smith asked The Herald to make it very plain that library patrons may hold their books not due today or tomorrow until the new opening without penalty because if everyone got the idea that all books must be returned, this would greatly increase the work of moving and thus prove an added handicap.

SOVIETS SHOOT OF HORSES

Moscow, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Soviet government today ordered "individual" peasants to place their draft horses at the disposal of the collective farms.

The peasants will rent their horses when they are needed by the collective farms, which must not bear all expenses of feeding them.

The animals will be used in the fall sowing of grain and in transportation of grain, beets and other vegetables.

U. S. CUSTOM GUARDS ACCUSED OF MURDER

Detective Charges They Killed Negro On Brooklyn Pier.

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Two United States Customs guards were arrested by police today in the investigation of the shooting of a negro on a Brooklyn steamship pier.

Detectives charged that the guards, Benjamin Fein and Charles E. Gathecole, held four prisoners without cause in a shanty on the pier and shot Joseph Clark, 27, negro, under the heart. They also accused Customs authorities of efforts to block the police detectives and of splitting away one of the witnesses against the guards.

The missing witness, police charged, was William Woods, negro. They said he was rushed to the Customs house after the shooting and that Federal officials refused to reveal his whereabouts.

The other two men held by the guards at the time, E. Cley, master of the steamer Southern Prince, and Harold Frazakeley.

The police were told that the guards seized Woods as he was peddling neckties on the ships and detained him despite the fact that he had given permission to peddle by other guards. Clark, hearing the summation as he was leaving the pier, came back and with Woods was herded into the shanty.

Reaveley and Frazakeley, passing the shanty, heard the names of their ships mentioned and entered. Before they could protest, they said, Fein covered them with a pistol and forced them to stand with the negroes, their hands in the air.

They said that Gathecole struck Clark, who then dropped his hands of defense himself, whereupon Gathecole shot him. They told police further that they were forced to stand for twenty minutes with their hands in the air while the wounded man moaned on the floor.

When police arrived, headed by Captain McGowan, the two guards were gone, but several other Customs officials were present.

"This is none of your business," McGowan said they told him, "this is a Federal affair."

Later, McGowan said he found a Federal wall of silence, which he broke through by threatening to make wholesale arrests for obstruction of justice.

The two guards surrendered. Gathecole said he didn't have a gun, that Fein had both guns, that there was a shot but that he didn't know who fired it. Fein said that he was asleep at the time of the incident.

Among those aboard the first train was Henry Hilgard Villard, publisher of the Nation, New York. He was not injured.

In another bandit raid on a golf course here, George C. Hanson, United States consul general and a party of British and Americans sought their way out to safety with their golf clubs. Two of the British members of the party were wounded seriously.

LATEST STOCKS

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Selling poured into the Stock Market from all sides today, sending prices skidding in the most violent manner since the market turned upward more than two months ago.

While business and trade news continued to be generally favorable, improvement more decisively than at this period in either of the preceding two years, traders evidently felt that the 100 per cent appreciation in values had fully discounted the better tone in general business, and there was a rush to lighter commitments.

Rails broke widely, with losses of 5 or more than 7 points appearing in Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Lackawanna and Delaware and Hudson. Issues of 3 or more included Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, New York Central, and others.

Elsewhere in the list, losses of about 3 to 4 points appeared in U. S. Steel common, Case, International Harvester, Western Union Electric, American Tobacco, E. I. du Pont, American Telephone, American Smelting, American Can, Johns Manville, North American, United Aircraft, and others.

Losses of 2 or more appeared in such issues as General Motors, General Electric, Radio, Anaconda, Kennecott, Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas, Woolworth and others.

Railroad bonds turned heavy at the start, and appeared to drag stocks after them. Despite the pronounced upswing in freight car loadings in the past two weeks, and indications that carrier earnings generally improved somewhat in August, selling of these issues evidently reflected fresh realization that many prominent carriers are still failing to earn their fixed charges, and are leaning heavily on the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

The Interstate Commerce Commission announced approval of a loan to the Nashville and the Grange, pointed to the note maturity due Oct. 1, and making that conditional upon agreement of holders of the notes to extend 75 per cent of the principal amount for at least three years.

Many brokerage quarters were inclined to accept the sweeping reaction in shares philosophically, pointing out that a real technical setback had been long overdue, and that the short position had been substantially reduced, and that a good reaction which would lure a substantial short position back into the market would strengthen its technical position.

Short selling, according to usually well-informed brokerage quarters, intensified sharply in the past few days. Houses with foreign connections reported that French speculators who had been active buyers here some weeks ago had largely taken their profits. Much of the buying that came from London, it was explained, however, had been for long term investment, and holdings acquired for such accounts were being retained.

Groups were rumored to have been active broke rapidly, and support was evidently withdrawn. Weakness of the copper was said to reflect some disappointment over the stubborn refusal of consumers to be prompted into making substantial purchases of the metal by the recent increase in the price to 6 1/2 cents a pound. Farm implements reflected a slump in cotton and grain markets. Indications were that the freight movement was being well maintained, despite the slump in carrier issues.

Santa Fe, the first big trunk line to report for the week ended Sept. 10, showed loadings of 22,052 cars, only 230 cars under the previous week, despite the Labor Day holiday.

PLEADS FOR FREEDOM Hartford, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Claiming that he was being unlawfully held in state prison, Reuben Glazier, 23, appeared before Judge Edwin S. Thomas in U. S. District Court today and pleaded for his freedom. He asked for a writ of habeas corpus.

Glazier was paroled from the Connecticut reformatory in 1928. Arrested again while on parole, he was sentenced to the State Prison in Wethersfield. Instead of being sent back to the reformatory at the conclusion of sentence, he told the court he is being held in state prison to serve out the unexpired term on his Connecticut sentence.

Judge Thomas dismissed the case on the grounds of lack of jurisdiction. Glazier was without counsel.

MOSES A CANDIDATE IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

In the second district, which is ordinarily Republican, Harold K. Davidson, former president of the State Senate and Speaker of the House, opposed former Governor Charles W. Tobey for the Republican nomination.

Davidson called attention to his record of public service, his war record, his youth and his claim that he was the "only north country candidate on the state ticket."

Tobey, a staunch supporter of the Farm Bureau and the Grange, pointed to his experience both in government and in business. Both planned rallies for tonight.

Two former mayors, Jeremiah J. Doyle of Nashua and John G. Landers of Keene, vied for the Democratic nomination in the Second District. Their campaign was a friendly one.

FACES TWENTY YEARS ON EXTORTION CHARGE

Chicago, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Rudolph Dies and his wife, arraigned today on charges of extortion plots against fathers of four North Shore society brides, faced prosecution under a recent Federal law forbidding the mailing of threats.

Assistant U. S. District Attorney Thomas Dodd Healy said their case would be one of the first of its kind under the new statute. He said Evanston police would turn the defendants over to Federal officers for Grand Jury action.

Dies and his wife pleaded "not guilty" upon arraignment on charges of Edwin M. Aschcraft, Jr., of suburban Evanston.

Life of letters threatening the life of his daughter, it is reported, were not paid. Dies was trapped by Aschcraft, whose daughter, Ann, was married Saturday to Raymond Otis Mitchell, of Minneapolis.

Magistrate Harry Porter of Evanston suggested they employ an attorney and placed them in $10,000 bonds each pending another hearing September 16.

Dies would face a 20-year penitentiary term if convicted in Federal Court.

CLAIMS TROOPS NEEDED TO DRIVE OUT VETERANS

sought to incite the marchers to disorders.

"On the other hand," Mitchell added, "a very considerable number were genuine ex-service men of good intentions and clean records. This is particularly true of the conditions prior to the adjournment of Congress. After the adjournment of Congress, the quality of men in the Bonus Army steadily deteriorated.

Without Formation Publication of the Justice Department report brought immediate comment from Bonus Army leaders. In New York, Walter W. Waters, commander of the B. E. F., said:

"Mr. Mitchell's charges are absolutely without foundation in fact. It was Mr. Mitchell's job to furnish this information and he did the best he could."

"I regret that this statement was timed for the American Legion convention, as it will only antagonize thousands of veterans who had begun to forget what took place in Washington."

After a careful study a complete answer will be given and issued. R. E. Ellison, who said he was National organizer of the Khaki Shirts of America, and former contact officer of the Bonus Army in a statement here termed the Mitchell report "a political alibi," he said:

"It is regrettable by the fact that its release to the press and the public is timed to coincide with the opening of the National convention of the American Legion, where President Hoover and his henchmen must make their last desperate bid to regain the self-respect of the ex-servant."

"The attempt to brand the Bonus Army as a criminal organization, falls flat by the attorney general's own figures. It reveals that 22.6 per cent of the 4,728 bonus marchers from whom fingerprints were obtained by the Veterans Bureau had police records."

"It is not necessary to attempt to refute these records. The B. E. F. did not ask the veterans whom it enrolled if they had ever been arrested any more than it asked what their religious beliefs were. It required only that they give satisfactory replies to the questions 'service in the World War, x x x.'"

Mitchell's report of the crowded two months' history of the bonus encampment led ex-convicts and Communists led the first groups to arrive. Later, a better element came but largely departed when Congress adjourned. The best estimates of the army's size was given at 8,000 to 15,000 when Congress adjourned, and 6,000 to 8,000 at the time of the "riot" on July 28.

A total of 362 were arrested by police during their stay for various offenses including "disorderly conduct, parading without a permit, assault on private property and soiling aims."

"Of 129 found to have been convicted in the past for criminal offenses, the largest group of 138 were for larceny and theft, 95 for drunkenness among 19 other offenses, the report said.

After the better element left, the report added, groups of trouble makers suggested the forces and the army repeatedly refused to disband.

"It circulated around the city individually and in small groups and even in large bodies, asking or demanding money and supplies." It said, "Many reports have been received that they practically levied tribute on small merchants and intimidated housewives when their demands were refused, x x x."

Were Tolerated "Notwithstanding all these conditions, they were tolerated and gently dealt with by the community in the hope that they would see the futility of remaining, x x x."

Mitchell said that on July 28 a "mob that had come from Camp Marston in Annapolis, rushed police officers stationed on government property on Pennsylvania avenue and attacked them with bricks and rocks."

"The police had revolvers," the report continued, "but had orders not to use them and did not do so. This attack finally subdued thousands of persons were attracted to the scene."

"The situation became more strained, x x x Finally the mob of bonus marchers again attacked the police with bricks and concrete and iron bars. Two of the bonus marchers were shot by police who had been set upon and were in danger of their lives."

Battle Expected "The entire mob became hostile and riotous. It was apparent that a pitched battle on a large scale might start at any moment."

Mitchell said police officials notified the Federal government the situation was beyond control, the troops arrived and "restored order and cleared the areas and put an end to the disturbance, x x x with the use of practically no weapons except tear gas."

WOMAN IS SOUGHT IN BERN MYSTERY

women checked out the day after the producer's death. She remained that night on the following morning from the river steamer Delta King enroute to Sacramento.

Three of the letters were from Bern, the other from his secretary, Irene Harrison.

The letters revealed Bern had been collecting for Miss Millette's welfare and was interested in supplying her with funds. He sent "love and best wishes" in a letter written to "Miss Dorothy Millette" in New York City six months before he shot himself and four months before he married Miss Harlow.

"If you do change to another place," he wrote, "we will find some way of supplying you with funds in a manner convenient for you." The letter was addressed, on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stationery, to "Hotel Algonquin, New York City."

Recommended Hotel He said in a preceding paragraph he had read with "great interest" she was "contemplating a trip to San Francisco." He added: "of course, I can not give you any advice because you yourself can be the only person to know what is best."

He recommended the hotel at which she registered last May 4.

The letter from Bern's secretary, dated last May 12, and addressed to Miss Millette in San Francisco, announced the enclosure of an order for $160, "due on May 14." It stated "Mr. Bern has already left on his vacation, but I am at the office in the meantime, and if I can help you any way at any time, please don't hesitate to let me know."

In a wardrobe trunk left behind by Miss Millette, police found imported shoes, frocks and fine Parisian perfumes and toilet articles.

"On a blotter of her writing pad, stamped in reverse order, was the one, enigmatic word—"Justification." There was no indication of what the word referred to, but police expressed the opinion, it was blotted from a note or letter written shortly before the woman left the hotel.

As her belongings were examined here, Sacramento authorities dragged the river for the woman who allegedly lived with Bern as his wife 10 years ago. Their operations were confined to a 20-mile stretch.

Miss Harlow's attorney promised a statement after conferring with the widow, her step-father, Mario Bello, and Bern's brother, Henry. The attorney said he believed the producer's will is in a Los Angeles bank deposit box and it may be opened today.

PRESIDENT WAS RIGHT

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Assertion that President Hoover "was right in the ousting of the B. E. F. (Bonus Expeditionary Forces) from Washington," was contained in a letter sent to the American National convention by J. A. Laska, National commander of a Veterans' Hoover Club, and made public here today.

"He performed his oath-bound duty," the letter said. "For the President to have remained inactive after the riot and bloodshed would have meant that the country had fallen into the hands of a few disgruntled insurgents self-styling themselves dictators."

"Like Lincoln, like McKinley, like Roosevelt, like Wilson, so Herbert Hoover, too, is being unjustly maligned. Yes, more so. We elect a President to perform his duties, upon performing his duties, if a few selfish individuals happen to have their tops tread upon, it becomes worked up as a great National injustice."

"We are for Herbert Hoover because he is a leader, because he is a real commander. Because he is a fighter. Because he is a great statesman."

PRICES ON MARKET TAKE A NEW SLUMP

Under Flurry of Selling Orders Leading Shares Drop From $1 To $4.

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Stock Market, which had strayed from its upward course toward the close of last week, was reactionary today and bonds also turned downward.

Under a flurry of selling orders, leading shares dipped $1 to about $4. Trading was fairly active. Some brokers said the small gain in the United States Steel Corporation's unfiled tonnage during August was smaller than had been expected, even though it was the first uptick since March, 1931.

U. S. Steel Common dropped about $2.50 to a price under $46. Santa Fe railroad was off nearly $4 to around $55, while American Telephone sagged $2 to approximately $114. Pennsylvania lost $3 and Chesapeake and Ohio $2. Allied Chemical, General Electric, Dupont, Air Reduction, American Can, Chrysler and American Tobacco "B" were off $2 or more.

In bonds, low priced railroad loans were heavy, particularly the Nickel Plate issues. That road's 6 per cent bond, due October 1, slumped sharply.

MONA TOWNSEND, beautiful young widow, inherits her husband's millions with the provision that she must not re-marry. Her marriage, arranged by her husband's lawyer, was a mere business affair, leaving her free at the end of a year to become her husband's wife in actuality or secure a divorce.

She employs LOTTIE GARE, a fashion model, as her secretary-companion and they set out for South America, where Barry and STEVE SACCARELLI are partners in a diamond mine. Mona's brother, BUD, works at the mine. Mona hopes for a reconciliation with Barry. She also feels Barry is entitled to a share of his uncle's fortune and wants to find a way to arrange this legally.

Learning that Barry and Steve are on vacation at Holiday Island the girls leave their boat at Fort of Spain. There they meet Bud who takes them to Holiday. Barry and Steve are cordial but their greeting lacks warmth. Mona wishes she had not come. Then one night when she is restless she goes to the beach and finds Barry there.

Misunderstandings are swept away. He tells her he loves her but when she asks her to marry him Mona refuses. She feels she must first find a way to give him a share of his uncle's fortune. They quarrel.

Mona and Lottie are about to sail for home when Steve is poisoned by a fer de lance, deadly snake of the West Indies. They procure serum by airplane and after several days of serious illness Steve recovers.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVII

The weeks drifted by. Steve, pale and weak but each day growing more like himself, limped about with a cane. Lottie and Mona soon would be setting off for the north. "Though it really isn't necessary for us to go back to New York," Mona told her friend. "We might just travel. We could visit Mexico or Spain or dole out at Guadalupe and take one of the French liners for France."

They could pack at half an hour's notice. After the period of anxiety over Steve—when death had seemed so close—all problems had become dwarfed. Life was suddenly smooth and tranquil.

"Marry me, Mona!" was Barry's constant plea. "Perhaps," she did not add aloud, as she always did in her heart, "if only I can sell the Empire or if you'll let me buy back your shares in the mine."

During the first few days of Steve's illness when Dr. Allen had assumed charge of the household and Lottie, and white-faced, was constantly to be found near Steve's door, Mona had reached a decision. She had had plenty of time to herself in which to think.

She had written to Withington, the jeweler, asking him to open negotiations with the mine. She had thought of cabling but was afraid an answer, likewise by cable, might arouse too much attention. For the present she wanted to keep her plans secret.

Barry and Mona went to Granada frequently now since Bud was no longer there to take care of errands. Since Steve's illness Miss Gracie had become most demanding about his fare. The chickens, cackling about the kitchen doorway, belonged to the cook. There were fewer chickens now. They had to be supplemented by others to supply fresh eggs as well as meat. Miss Gracie insisted on plenty of vegetables and fruits too.

Mona ransacked the market for new dainties to tempt Steve's appetite and for tropic delicacies to serve Dr. Allen. "Don't you like guavas?" Mona asked Barry as they strolled in the market place. "They are so tiny, so dainty! They ought to taste like pickled limes, I think, but they surprise you."

The two were idling about Granada. A boat from the north was expected with mail and Mona wanted to wait until it arrived. There would be another hour possibly before the postoffice employees would have it sorted.

Mona and Barry strolled about the town. "Like tourists," Barry said amusedly. He stopped to buy Turkish cigars for Steve, a quaint little necklace for Lottie and some calicoes for Josie and Florence. For Maria they bought a pipe with a large can of tobacco. Then came the question of Miss Gracie.

"Here's hardly anything good enough for Miss Gracie!" Mona said. "We rushed over here that terrible day to bring the doctor and the serum but it was Miss Gracie who risked her life draining the poison from the wound. Nothing the rest of us did would have saved Steve without Miss Gracie!"

"She was an awful butcher, though," Barry added, trying to smile. Steve's suffering was an unpleasant thought. "She hacked and whacked at the wound, you know, with a knife."

"But Steve was unconscious. He didn't suffer from it."

"But Steve was unconscious. He didn't suffer from it."

"Well, it took a lot of nerve and a lot of skill, too. I guess she saved his life. We all did what we could but Miss Gracie kept him alive until we got the doctor there. The serum kept him alive after that. Allen is a nice fellow. I like the way he stays around. Do you know he simply refused to discuss a fee! Talk as though he were imposing on us by staying!"

"He's in love with Lottie. Didn't you know that?" Mona asked. Barry's eyes widened. "With Lottie? You don't say!"

Mona nodded solemnly. "Yes, but I guess he knows there's no hope for him. I think he understands the situation. He's really staying around to help her."

"Rather a waste all around isn't it—this love business?" Barry began. "Lottie loves Steve, Dr. Allen loves Lottie. I love you—"

They were nearing dangerous ground. "And whom does Steve love?" Mona asked. Barry pondered. "That would be telling," he said. "The really important question, my dear young lady, is whom do you love?"

She did not look toward him. She could feel her hands trembling. Barry insisted, not to be side tracked. "There's the steamer!" Mona exclaimed. The S. S. Helena was just rounding the bend with flags flying. The tiny motor boat bearing harbor officials had pushed out from the jetty and was blowing through the sapphire bowl which made the harbor. The S. S. Helena, anchored, would ride with the tide for several hours.

"Shall we wait to see the tourists?" asked Barry as the native boatmen clambered into their barks and started out briskly at a safe distance from the power boat. "The mail will be in soon."

Mona said, "Yes, let's!" The tourists, in trow and tresses, were leaving the steamer now, bargaining on the companionship for the most desirable of the shifting boats before them.

Mona watched the oars dipping rhythmically as the two boatmen in each craft brought their boats to shore. "Here comes the mail," Barry remarked idly. The motor boat, ignoring the

HEALTH

SPECIAL CLASSES RECOMMENDED FOR MORE GIFTED CHILDREN

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

In all schools there are children who never seem to study but always have their lessons. It has been believed that this was primarily due to an especially retentive memory.

Sometimes the children who learn so easily are troublesome because they have time, energy and imagination enough to get into mischief. Sometimes they are so exceptional that even their teachers in the elementary grades recognize that these children are likely to rise in the world.

A survey made in connection with the White House conference on child welfare indicates that such gifted children constitute about 6 per cent of the school population. There are 25,000,000 children in the schools of the United States and approximately 1,500,000 of them are so exceptional that they ought to have special training in school.

There seems to be about an even number of girls and boys among them, and there are just as many in the rural districts as in the cities and towns.

These children do not have any special genius for music, art or literature; they have merely exceptional intelligence. It is realized, of course, that the curriculum in most schools is adapted to the average, so that it is not easy for the child who is not quite as smart as the others, or for the one who is much smarter, to get along with the group.

The modern point of view tends toward grouping the gifted children and the backward ones in special classes, and in adapting the work that they are to do to their special abilities.

The result of placing children in such special classes is to keep them constantly interested and to permit them to progress much more rapidly than do the average classes.

It has been argued that such grouping is undemocratic and that it is not practical because these children, when they come out in the world, will mix with all the others. However, such an argument is illogical, since it would be in order under the circumstances to put all the children in one grade.

Those who are especially interested in the behavior of children feel that special grouping may make the children more of the same in a group in which most of the others are just as smart as he is.

In the average class, the especially intelligent child is a leader; in a class of especially gifted children leadership is to be won only with struggle and study.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

FEET NEED EXERCISE BEYOND WALKING

You may think that your feet receive enough exercise because you walk on them. They don't though. All the time that you are making strides in one direction and another, your feet are encased in shoes. They can't move freely.

They feel confined or imprisoned exactly as your hand would feel if your gloves stayed on all day. Walking doesn't necessarily exercise your entire foot. Too many people don't know how to walk.

If your dress is red, your lipstick leans to purple and your rouge is borrowing its tones from orange, you will look as flamboyant as a circus poster. No one will say that you are lovely or charming, for you won't be.

Before choosing your autumn wardrobe, decide how many shades of makeup you will need. Then match your face with your clothes. If your face is bright, your rouge must be bright. If it is soft and a little dull your face may retreat into a shadowy mystery, too.

If you are wearing browns that let orange supply their gaiety, you will carry a touch of orange in your make-up. In fact, you must change the lipstick and rouge cases that you carry in your pocketbook as regularly as you change your frock, if you want a pleasing ensemble.

Remember always that your lips supply the most outstanding color to your face. If the red is wrong, your whole face might as well give up.

Make your mouth gay and soft and lovely. If you don't let it fly up to the colors you wear, your face will simply do a fade-out. People will tell you that a good looking gown you are wearing, instead of saying how lovely you look in the gown.

In order to wear colors, make-up is necessary. But it must be the type of make-up that will set your dress to be merely an aid in promoting you, instead of making you into a clothes model.

Powder, too, changes as colors affect your skin. Since it is now possible to buy powders in bulk you will be able to have a wide range without an extra expenditure.

With Apologies to Gilbert and Sullivan

September is a month of madden and extreme changes in temperature. But the hot spell last week did not live up to true September style. The nights did not cool off as anticipated and most of the country sweltered day and night for six or eight days.

It was hard to tell what to do with babies. Each mother, as she put the baby to bed thought: something like this: "Last night and the night before you were in the country sweltered day and night for six or eight days."

After several nights of this with the thermometer staying up around 80 degrees until sunrise, when it jumped to the century mark, these careful mothers were surprised to see prickly heat break out on their children.

The Unexpected Happens Prickly heat in September? When there hadn't been a sign of it during June, July or August?

Which goes to show that not only in September but at any other time of the year, the unexpected is likely to happen. You cannot count on the weather and you cannot make any rule for dressing the baby or fixing him up for the night, just because it is such and such a month.

What is good for one month, one week, or even for a day, will not be the best thing for the next in many cases.

The best thing to go is instinct. No, not just anybody's instinct, but the mother's own. She herself, with a little solemn thought on the subject will be able to tell what to put on the baby both day and night.

Cold? Shirt, nightie and covers enough to keep her warm. Draughts shut off and windows arranged for fresh air but not opening directly on the bed.

Hot? A very thin nightie, or a thin gauze band, or as one mother I know set an example on two or three scorching nights—nothing! A diaper, that was all.

Keep On the Alert But now that the hot spell seems to have passed into limbo, it would probably not be safe to repeat that performance again. Because as fall advances there is a teasing dampness to night air, little bursts of wind, a chilling coolness toward morning that is quite dangerous to a tender little unprotected body.

The safe rule is when the baby is put to bed in the heat at six to make him as comfortable as the temperature permits at the time.

At nine, twelve in and look things over in the nursery. Add covers if necessary. Put down one window and another up if the wind has changed. And at twelve, play policeman again, to adjust covers and clothing as seems best.

The whole story amounts to this: In the fall you cannot put a baby to bed and say, "See you in the morning, darling." With quick changes from hot to cold and back again, alternate damp and dry spells, gusty nights and still ones taking turns, it is safer to check up on a baby's safety and comfort every few hours except perhaps those from midnight to six. And even then it won't hurt to take a peep if you are awake.

A BOOK A DAY

BY BRUCE CATTON

"Murder in the Basement" Proves Exciting and Entertaining; "The Green Knife," Disappointing.

Roger Sheringham, the English detective who stalks through the pages of books by Anthony Berkeley, is a pretty good detective, and Mr. Berkeley is a pretty good writer.

Consequently, Mr. Berkeley's mystery stories are highly readable, and "Murder in the Basement" is his latest one, is a topnotch yarn throughout.

This story gets under way when two honeycombers discover a lady's corpse under the floor of the basement.

For eight months or so just rented. For eight months or so just rented. For eight months or so just rented.

I can't say nearly as much for "The Green Knife," by Anthony Wynne. In this yarn we have an English financier stabbed to death in a locked room from which no one could possibly have escaped—you know the sort of thing; people go about saying "It's simply inconceivable," and so on.

Then a couple of servants get killed in the same way, and finally Dr. Eustace Halley ferrets out the truth at great peril to his own neck; but the whole business is so involved and complicated and generally impossible that the book falls to the ground of its own weight, and I shan't try to lift it.

"The Green Knife" is published by Lippincott, and costs $2.

WATSON BABY'S DRESSING CHANGING SEASONS

TODAY IS THE WORLD WAR ANNIVERSARY

ST. MICHEL DRIVE BEGINS

On Sept. 12, 1918, the First American Army, acting as a unit for the first time in the war, attacked the St. Michel salient and advanced more than five miles on a 38-mile front.

St. Michel and several other towns were taken during the advance, which was preceded by one of the heaviest artillery bombardments of the war.

More than 10,000 Germans and several hundred Austrians were taken prisoners. An entire train full of ammunition and machine guns was taken by the rapidly advancing Americans as it was getting ready to leave the salient.

The Austrian prisoners captured were part of a division of Austrian troops sent to the sector early in the year to replace German veterans, who were sent to the zone of the spring offensives.

British forces in Picardy resumed the offensive, making important gains, and gaining another foothold in the deserted Hindenburg line.

Holland Wins Net Championship For Fifth Successive Year

Marks To Flutter Down Every Time Big Bam Bats In His Tenth Classic

World's Series To Spin Around Ruth's Record Wrecking; Here Is First Story of Amazing Career.

This is the first of ten stories relating the psychical series feats of the one and only Babe Ruth. Nearing the end of his career, the Babe this year will make his tenth and perhaps last appearance in the classic.

By EDWARD J. NEIL (Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Every time George Herman Ruth steps up to the plate, scratches his spikes in the batter's box, tucks down his cap as the crowd roars and waves his hickory wand—nine world's series records either will tumble automatically or tremble, and 13 others will be in danger.

That is all that Ruth, the greatest slugger in baseball history, once one of the game's best left-handed pitchers, and certainly the outstanding gate attraction of all times, means to the game he has played for world's championships more than any other ball player.

Series No. 10

The first time the "Big Bam" brots out with his funny mincing stride to take up his cudgel in the opening game at the Yankee Stadium, one record will topple with that motion alone. This is the tenth world's series for the Babe.

The first three of these he saw as a pitcher for the Boston Red Sox in 1915, 1916 and 1918 and even then he set up records. His mark of 29 successive scoreless innings in series competition has never been equalled or surpassed.

Rewritten Book

But over the stretch of his world's series career with the Yankees in 1921, '22, '23, '26, '27 and '28, when hitting was his forte and the clouting championships of the world at his mercy, the big better has all but rewritten the record book.

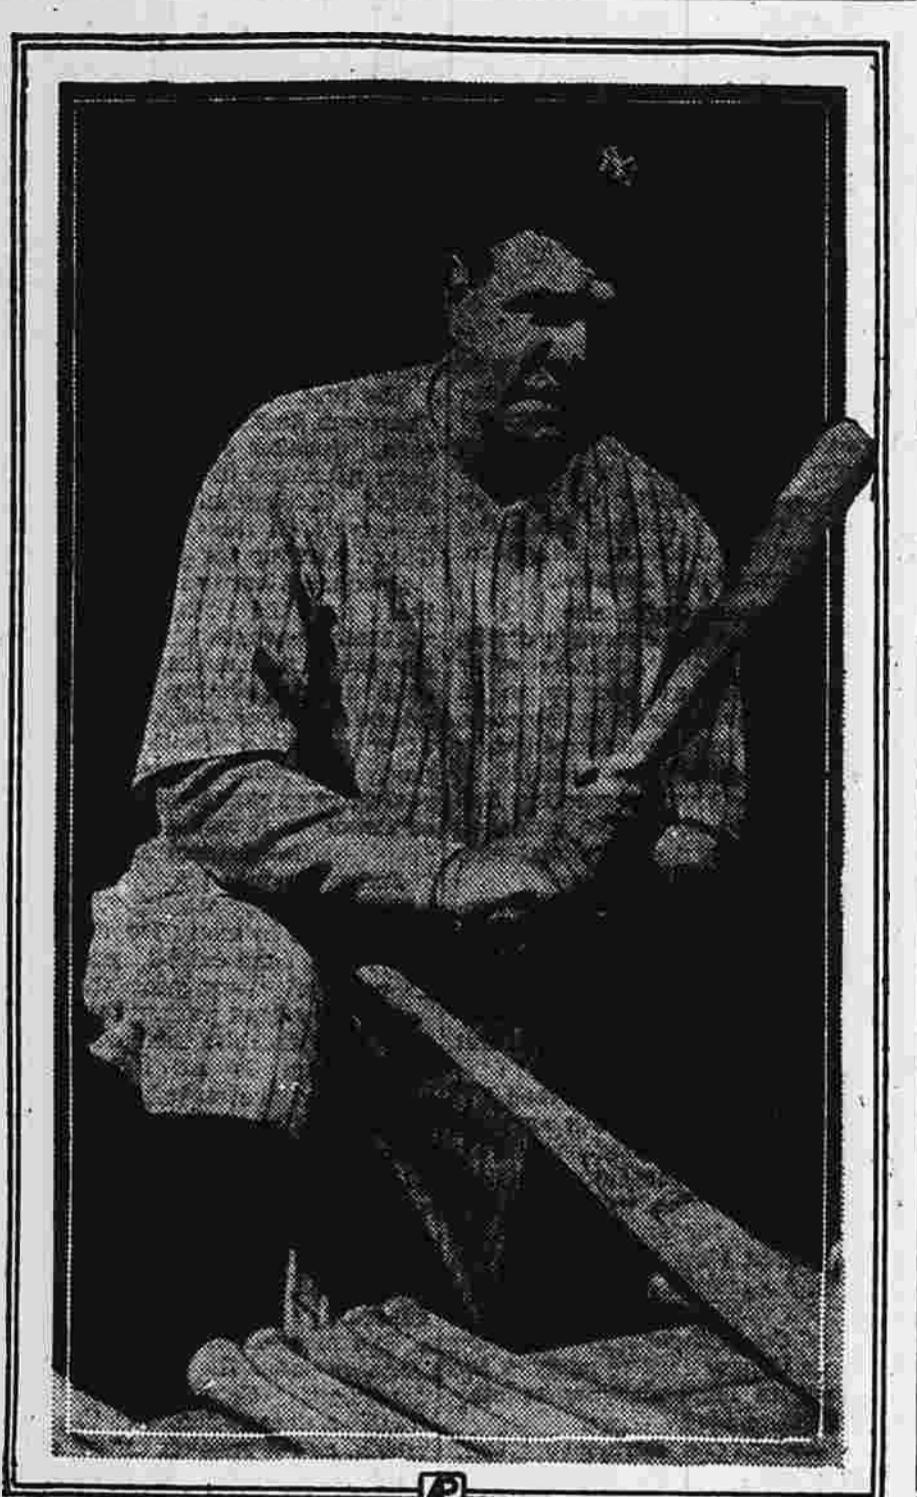

Every time he scores a run or bats one in, hits a home-run or an extra base hit, gets a base on balls or even strikes out, Babe Ruth breaks one of his own series records. Ruth's unequalled marks today, over the period of his nine series, stand at 31 runs scored, 27 driven in, 13 home runs, 20 long hits, 48 extra bases on them for a total of 85 bases on all his hits, 28 bases on balls and 27 strikeouts.

He has made four home runs in one series, and twice clouted three in one game. He has walked 11 times in one series, four times in one game. He made six long hits, three doubles and three home runs in four games with the Cardinals in 1928. He had 12 total bases in one game, 22 in one series. And he holds the magnificent batting average record of .625 for one series. Six times he has averaged better than .300.

TEXAS HAS TOUGH SCHEDULE TO PLAY To Meet Ten Teams This Fall; Need Quarterback, Punter.

Austin, Texas, Sept. 12.—(AP)—On the eve of his eleventh year as football coach at the University of Texas, Clyde Littlefield's chief problems are the development of a quarterback and punter, not what effect the new rules will have on the game.

"It isn't the new rules that bother me," said Littlefield. "It is that 10-game schedule, six conference battles and inter-sectional combats against Oklahoma, Missouri and Centenary. We play Rice, Southern Methodist, Baylor, Texas Christian, Arkansas and Texas A. and M. in a row. All conference battles, and believe me, that's a shadow over our future that is going to be difficult to erase."

Here's a sight to chill hurlers of the National League entry in the world's series. It's the Babe ready to leave the dugout for the plate. Ruth, headed for his tenth classic, holds more world's series slugging records than any man alive.

ACES BEAT WEST SIDES AND TAKE TOWN SERIES

Godek Has Edge In Pitchers' Battle With Mattson; Brennan's Hit In Eighth Wins Game By 2-1 Score.

In a well played baseball game yesterday afternoon at the Four Acres field, the Aces defeated the West Sides 2 to 1 in the final game of the town series. Godek and Mattson had a great pitchers' duel each getting six strikeouts and Godek allowed the West Sides only 5 hits while Mattson gave the Aces only 6.

Brennan and Stavitsky each succeeded in getting two hits while "Red" Hadden was the only one of the West Side players to get two hits one of them a triple.

In the second inning the Aces scored their first run when Brennan got a hit, stole second and then Zapada, Bycholski, was thrown out. Mattson to Tierney, Brennan going to third on the play. Godek dropped a slow roller down third and O'Leary made the play to first Brennan going home, then McCann was thrown out on a ground ball from McCann to Tierney.

The West Sides tied the score in the seventh when Hadden tripled to deep left, Tierney laid down a perfect bunt along first base and was thrown out, Stavitsky to Pitt. Hadden scoring on the play to first base.

The Aces came back again in the eighth to score the winning run when Stavitsky got a single, stole second and then Burkhardt filed out to Sandrowski. "Hook" Brennan put the game on ice with a single between first and second. Stavitsky scoring from second on the play. Hadden's throw to the plate was low and late. The West Sides threatened again in the ninth when Sandrowski hit a high fly in front of the plate and Bycholski and McCann let it drop in front of them. Then Bycholski threw wild to first and Sandrowski went to second. Hadden struck out and Tierney was thrown out. McCann to Stavitsky to end the game.

Both teams played good ball with Pitt being the outstanding man in the way in which they handled the Aces infield and Brennan making two beautiful catches in the outfield. O'Leary handled five chances without an error and Mattson also handled five without a mishap for the West Sides.

MAY SETTLE FLAG RACES IN MAJORS DURING THIS WEEK

Yanks Need Only Two Games To Clinch Pennant; Cubs Must Win 10 To Beat Rivals.

By HERBERT W. BARBER. The major league finish line still is 14 days away but, with a little luck, both pennant races may be decided this week.

New York Yanks are almost certain of clinching the American League flag within the next few days. They need only two victories to eliminate the sole remaining contender, the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Cubs stretched their lead over the Idle Pirates to six full games yesterday by trimming the Brooklyn Dodgers 3-1 behind Guy Bush's eight-hit pitching.

The St. Louis Browns after breaking an eight game losing streak in the first game, 7-1, dropped the second to the Boston Red Sox, 3-3.

WOMEN'S CHAMP LOSES IN TENNIS SEMI-FINAL

Elizabeth Washkiewicz Defeated By Gladys Lamprecht, 5-7, 6-4, 8-6 In Big Upset; Winner To Meet Muriel Tomlinson In Finals.

Miss Elizabeth Washkiewicz, who won the women's town tennis title in 1921, was eliminated in the semi-finals of the present tournament last night, when Gladys Lamprecht triumphed in the third set of a match that had been postponed with the score at one set all. The scores were 5-7, 6-4 and 8-6.

This was the most startling upset in the tourney. Earlier in the week Muriel Tomlinson defeated Eleanor Heubner, last year's runner-up, in straight sets, 6-4, and 6-2, paying the way for a finals between two unknown players.

DEFEATS BISSELL IN STRAIGHT SETS

Retains Crown With 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 Victory In Finals Yesterday; Earl Fails To Solve Ty's Peculiar Style of Play But Forces Champ To Utmost.

For the fifth consecutive year the Manchester tennis championship crown rests on the shoulders of Walter Robert Holland, better known as plain "Ty." He won his latest conquest by outsmarting Earle Bissell yesterday morning in the finals of the sixth annual town tournament.

Although Bissell gave a fine account of himself and exhibited some very classy tennis, he did not seriously threaten Holland's crown. For a time in the second set, it appeared he might get back on even terms with the champion but a few minutes later Holland's unquestionably brilliant defense had the challenger beating himself with errors.

The match was played at the private court of Paul Jesanos on South Main street just over the line in Glastonbury and was witnessed by a gallery of about 200 persons. It was the first time in tournament history that the finals had been held outside the town limits. The reason was because one of the public courts here was in unfit condition for tournament use.

The Jesanos court was in excellent condition and both players and the spectators were well pleased with conditions in general. The match lasted just a little over an hour, starting at quarter past ten in the morning. Holland played the same type of tennis for which he is famous—and, incidentally, the type that still is a complete puzzle to every Manchester tennis player.

home, but Garner "slid out the back door" of them all and boarded his train in the freight yards.

Senator Bingham said that the state of Texas, Garner's home state, would receive six million dollars from the Relief bill, the state as a whole contributing but one million.

He also described the work done at Rocky Hill for the aid of veterans the State Fund for veterans being another important piece of legislation second to none in the country.

He said the Republican Party could be trusted to take care of the veterans of the state as they have done in the past.

Colonel Clarence W. Seymour, candidate for Congress said that there "were no strings tied to his nomination and that he was 'uncrossed and unbossed' and promised to work for the best interests of the district, state and Nation when elected.

Colonel Seymour blamed the depression on the Wilson administration, and like the Nation in 1916, "we have another college professor on our hands" although expressing thanks that the last legislature had been Republican.

John A. Dannaher, candidate for Secretary of State argued for still higher tariff, especially on tobacco which he said "men here today know is not high enough to stop the flood of foreign tobacco."

Democrat's Speech. Mrs. Mary C. Ostrout, treasurer of the East Hartford Democratic Town Committee, and a prominent leader in the interests of the Smith group last spring attended the rally and following the address by Senator said that she would work for the Republican Party this fall.

"Connecticut will go Republican," predicted Mrs. Ostrout. "That was decided last Thursday at the Democratic Convention. I think Mr. Hoover is the better man. He is more broad-minded than Mr. Roosevelt. And then, he has had a lot of hard times at Washington and I don't think this is the time to make a change."

With Mrs. Ostrout at the rally was Mrs. Mary J. McQuinn, vice chairman of the South Windsor Town Committee, who met Senator Bingham and wished him success in the coming election.

The largest bridge in Paris is the Pont Alexandre III over the Seine.

State's Finances. Judge Johnson delved deeply into the financial structure of the state, claiming for the Republican party the credit for the present healthy state of its finances which he said were initiated under Republican administrations. He said that in 1915 the state was 13 millions of dollars in debt, but through the enactment of financial legislation of far-sighted caliber, a sinking fund was established to meet bond payments when they fell due.

On the other hand, Judge Johnson said that the Democrats had no record such as that of the Republic.

can't look back upon more recent than 18 years ago. Speaking of the recent Democratic Conventions Judge Johnson said, "Until they can manage their own business, it doesn't strike me that they ought to be entrusted with the management of millions of dollars of state money. If the state is to be managed as the Democratic Party is managed, much as I love the State of Connecticut, I feel I should have to seek residence elsewhere."

Building Program. In response to claims for credit taken by the Democratic Party for the state building program provided by the last legislature, Kenneth F. Cramer, candidate for State Senator said that the program had been conceived and prepared by the Budget Committee of the Board of Finance and Control before Governor Cross took office.

He also described the work done at Rocky Hill for the aid of veterans the State Fund for veterans being another important piece of legislation second to none in the country.

GAS BUGGIES—But They're Worth It

By FRANK BECK

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Just when the Tines thought they were out on their way toward a real tall tree top, they all got a big surprise. A puff of wind which was real strong came by and made things look all wrong. Said Windy, "Beats of drifting down, we're starting now to rain."

SENSE AND NONSENSE

GRANDMA'S GONE MODERN
My grandma used to smoke a pipe. But she's reformed, you see; for now she always wants to smoke a cigaret with me.

She always used to sit and knit. As prim as she could be. But now she's rarin' just to go on a double date with me.

Hard times agree with some people. Yes, I feel myself 20 years younger financially.

Mrs. Briggs had invited her neighbor to see the new decorations. The house had been repainted. They stopped in the bedroom.

Mrs. Diggs (admiringly)—My! isn't it pretty. But why are the lovely pictures painted on the ceiling?

Mrs. Briggs—For my husband. He likes to have something to look at on Sundays.

A fisherman always likes to tell about the big ones that got away. And a girl never gets done bragging about the men she could have married.

Windy Wolf—My fortune is made. Friend—How so?

Windy Wolf—I've succeeded in crossing a homing pigeon with a collar button.

Moe—Have you any close relatives?
Joe—Yeah, all of them.

The man at the door of a lady said:
Madame, I am a bill collector.

She—That's Fine. What do you pay for them? We have more of them here than any other place in town.

Why are women's minds so much clearer than men's?
Must be because they change them so often.

Remitted
Thru all the days we've been apart
Why didn't I remember?
I'll press you closely to my heart
Now that it's chill September.
Once more you'll nestle to my breast,
I love you more each minute,
Who wouldn't love last winter's vest
With a dollar bill hid in it?

The preacher calling on one of the congregation was met at the door by little Johnny:
Preacher—Sonny, is your father home?
Johnny—No, sir. Pop hasn't been home since Christmas, when Ma caught Santa Claus kissing the cook.
