"An egotist is a man who thinks his wife made a brilliant marriage."—Bright Side Up.

"We'll give you an ounce of gold for every ounce of adulteration you find in our paints," they say at the Painting & Decorating Shop of Thomas McGill, Jr., (off Hartford Road). They will mix any color and quantity of paint you want.

Ten Pounds To Spend We read today the very interesting idea that many people who can afford to do considerable buying content themselves with little because they don't want to make an unusual display, when others are in need. It used to be the fashion to keep up with the Jones's. Now it's considered proper to live down to the Jones's.

Public opinion can be blamed for this attitude. We are apt to criticize people who have everything, when we know that so much poverty exists. But our attitude should be that those who spend are helping to put money back into circulation. So—you who can buy—never mind the expense, when others are in need. You spend helps to reduce unemployment.

Blue Coal, the anthracite sold by W. G. Glenny Company, is an excellent fuel for domestic use. Because of the light draft, it burns slowly, evenly, needs little attention, and gives maximum heat. Being a trade-marked coal, you always know what you're getting, too. Call 4149 to order.

Details Count Nothing is more delicious than sandwiches when they are daintily prepared. No matter what kind of bread you use, cut it thin; use melted or softened butter so that it will spread evenly; and have the fillings sufficiently broken up so that they can be eaten easily. We've all had the experience of biting into a tomato and lettuce sandwich and having a whole leaf of lettuce or a big slice of tomato come out at once! When sandwiches are to be eaten right after preparation, toasting adds to their tastiness.

WASHINGTON CALLS EDGE FOR PARLEY U. S. Envoy To France To Sail Tomorrow To Discuss Franco-American Affairs.

Paris, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Called to Washington to discuss Franco-American affairs, United States Ambassador Walter E. Edge will sail on the steamship Manhattan tomorrow and go directly to the National capital upon his arrival in New York.

"Ambassador Edge is sailing on the Manhattan tomorrow, going directly to Washington where he was called by the State Department to discuss Franco-American problems which require a personal conference, especially details of French counter proposals for a commercial treaty."

After the consultation with the State Department, the ambassador will take a short vacation at his home in New Jersey, then he will return to his post here with Mrs. Edge and their children, who spent the summer in Maine.

The Embassy announced the French proposals were received officially by the ambassador late this afternoon. Persons close to embassy affairs described them as conciliatory with the American position.

May Aid in Campaign The early departure of Mr. Edge for home was expected in view of the approaching presidential campaign, in which it was believed he would participate.

Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, who has conferred recently with Premier Herriot, Prime Minister MacDonald and other British and French officials, planned to leave tonight for the Riviera and probably will sail for New York Sept. 29.

He is expected to report to the President and the senate concerning disarmament and the situation in the far east.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO HOLD CONFERENCE REUNION

The Senior Club of St. Mary's Girl's Friendly Society has completed plans for the Young People's Conference Reunion to be held here on Saturday, at 7:30 p. m. Invitations have been sent to a number of out-of-town delegates who attended the Concord Conference in the past year or two.

The following have been appointed as chairmen for the affair: reception committee, Lillian Beardon, chairman; program committee, Evelyn Tedford, chairman; refreshment committee, Florence Madden, chairman.

The Rev. Malcolm Taylor of Brookline, Mass., will be the principal speaker. Rev. Taylor is the executive secretary of the Province of New England and is prominent in conference work. A cordial invitation is extended to the young people of the parish to attend this reunion.

D'AMICO CONCLUDES WORK AT MADISON

Was Lifeguard At Exclusive Yacht Club—May Not Go South This Winter.

Frank D'Amico, well known swimming instructor, is back in town again after completing his second summer at the Madison Yachting Club where he was a lifeguard and instructor for members of the club and their families. D'Amico hasn't definitely decided whether or not he will go south to Florida again this winter as he has for many years although he expects to do so. He has been a lifeguard at Ormond beach there for 18 successive years but the company for which he was employed has been involved in financial difficulties and may not continue.

However, D'Amico said today that he is confident that he doesn't work for his former employers that he will find similar work at some nearby beach in Florida. He hopes to go south late in December.

SCHOONER RETURNS

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Scarred by ice floes off Labrador, the auxiliary schooner yacht Zavraf, formerly owned by the Grenfell Mission at St. Anthony, N. F., has reached Halifax of its return trip to Boston following a long cruise up the Labrador coast.

Her skipper is Charles J. Hubbard of Boston, and the crew includes David Riesman, Philadelphia; G. Hollister Judd, Jr., and Edgar M. Williams, Jr., New York. Hubbard flew north from the United States last spring to do research work in Labrador. The other three joined him at Cartwright.

WINE JUG AND BOTTLES CARRY OUT BURGUNDY SCHEME

Curious groups gathered at Rubinow's display windows today, attracted by the "burgundy" display. The center of interest is an enormous wine jug, bearing the numerals "1932" and surrounded by a number of old wine bottles—full ones! What is in the bottles could not be definitely established, but the liquid is just the color of the many burgundy dresses and hats on display. No other color is represented in the window, and sprays of autumn leaves and gladiolus add to the effect. The store is placing great emphasis on this color as a fashion highlight.

WITHDRAW OLD TRAINS AND SOUTHLAND MOURNS

The Kiddies Especially Will Miss the Toot of Engines That Put Them To Bed and Aroused Them.

Memphis, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Two southern railroads have withdrawn their best trains to save money and have brought anguish to hearts of little boys who would rather be engineers than kings or even cowboys.

The Illinois Central's Panama Limited and the Frisco's Sunnyland, institutions down here where trains and steamboats still are romantic things, have been driven to early graves by hard times.

Since there is an affinity between trains and little boys—the kind with warts and freckles and day dreams—the passing of the limited means more than just an economic change.

The Sunnyland was what the folks in the Ozarks called the "slow train through Arkansas." It came snorting around the mountains, always on time and filled a fast assignment between St. Louis and Memphis. Songs have been written about it and tales always will be told about its speed in that land where good stories are saved until the family gets together on the front gallery after supper.

The Panama, that sleek, deluxe limited that followed the valley from Chicago to New Orleans, will never be replaced in hearts of thousands of persons to whom it was a time-piece and inspiration.

Hardly Ever Late
It was news when the Panama was late. A lavishly equipped train that made the 1,000-mile run in less than 24 hours, it was the pride and joy of the valley just like the City of Natchez and Robert E. Lee were a few years ago when folks did their traveling on steamboats.

The Panama's fame was so great that boys were promised trips on its clubcars as payment for good behavior. The train left Chicago several hours behind its sister, the Creole Limited, and hurried through the corn belt to Carbondale, where it grabbed its St. Louis sleepers at dusk and headed for the south. Folks at Cairo often delayed supper until three long, sonorous blasts told the little city the famous train was crossing the Mason and Dixon line. It crept over the long Ohio river bridge there just as the evening mist rose from the gaunt Mississippi nearby and as it rattled across the span the engineers would sit on his whistle cord to tell his passengers they were in the south and "a heading' fo' N' Awleens."

Kentuckians set their watches by its whistle and as it streaked through the folks knew it was time to extinguish the lamps. It roared into Memphis around midnight, caught its breath and then slipped away through Mississippi. The pant of the engine could be heard for miles in that flat country and the scream of its whistle as the train cried for green lights and a clear track always told the planters it was time to be up and about the early morning chores.

Its firebox cast eerie glows against the levees in the murky pre-dawn of the valley and its whistle echoed mournfully down the bayous, but to those who heard it year after year it was a friendly giant and as much a part of plantation life as the cotton gin, the mules and the mortgage. Jackson, Miss., went to work by its arrival and south Mississippi towns knew it was time for a mid-morning cup of black coffee when it thundered through the villages. Soon after it crossed the Louisiana line, the Panama overtook the Creole and beat it into New Orleans by 15 minutes.

Its passing means hundreds of families that used it for a timepiece will have to buy clocks now. The depression also got the old Memphis accommodation, which was just a friendly little train with an Irish engineer, Mike Brady, who was pulling a throttle down here when Casey Jones was railroaded in these parts. It ran from Memphis to Tusculum, Ala., and everybody along the run knew Mike and his pudgy little engine. Mike was so considerate that he installed a steam calliopi on his engine so the shrill blasts wouldn't awaken the hamlets. And he played tunes on it.

Mike always left Memphis for Alabama in the evening, and as soon as he cleared the last green light of the yards he would strike up "Alabama Bound" and he came home at dawn, his calliopi tooting "Memphis Blues" as his little engine took the crossings of the suburbs.

HANK KEENE AT SANDY BEACH THIS EVENING

Hank Keene and his Connecticut Hill Billies who were to have appeared at the ballroom last Friday night but due to unfavorable weather had been postponed will be featured tonight. The Connecticut Hill Billies are a regular feature for the National Broadcasting Company, broadcasting over a network of twenty-five stations. The announcement that such a well known radio band is to be featured at Sandy Beach has already created a fever of interest and enthusiasm, not only among the dancing fans but radio enthusiasts as well who will avail themselves of this opportunity to not only hear the orchestra but to see the musicians. Mr. Keene has expressed a desire to meet personally as many of his admirers on Wednesday evening as care to come to Sandy Beach ballroom, also sponsors of the band.

N. Y. WETS, DRYS IN A CLOSE RACE

Four Against Three In Latest Primary Returns; One Contest Undecided.

Albany, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Advocates and opponents of prohibition ran a close race in yesterday's primary election in Congressional districts where the 18th amendment figured in the campaigns of aspirants for Republican congressional nomination.

In eight upstate districts where the prohibition amendment played a more or less conspicuous part in the hustings, four Republican Congressmen who have supported the amendment were renominated. They were Frank Crowther, 30th; Francis D. Cullin, 32d; Frederic M. Davenport, 33d and Daniel A. Reed, 43d district. Each was opposed by an advocate of repeal.

Three Congressmen who advocated repeal were victorious in their quest for renomination against the opposition of candidates who had the support of Women's Christian Temperance Union and kindred organizations. The winners in these contests were John D. Clarke in the 34th district, Walter Gresham Andrews in the 40th and Edmund F. Cooke in the 41st.

One close contest remained undecided early today. This was between Representative G. H. Stalker, staunch advocate of prohibition, and W. Sterling Cole, in the 37th district. Cole had not placed himself on record during the campaign as favoring repeal of the 18th amendment, but did state he believed in resubmission of the prohibition question to the voters.

Ruth Pratt NAMED
Prohibition did not play any part in the 17th district (Manhattan) where Ruth Pratt, New York's only woman representative at Washington, was renominated over opposition by G. Hiram Mann. In the 27th district which includes part of the Hudson Valley and the Catskill Mountain section, a three cornered fight for Republican nomination was waged without reference to prohibition. Philip A. Goodwin, Coxsackie banker was nominated as the successor to Rep. Harold J. Pratt, who is retiring from Congress.

Former U. S. Senator James W. Wadsworth, an unyielding foe of prohibition was nominated for Congress without opposition by the Republicans of the 39th District to succeed Rep. Archie Sanders. Of the seven Democratic contests for Congressional nomination, three were held in Brooklyn, where Representatives George W. Lindsay of the 3rd District, Patrick J. Carley of the 8th and Emanuel Celler of the 10th District were renominated. Each was backed up by the Kings county Democratic organization of which John McCooney is the chief-tain.

Personal Politics
The other four Democratic contests were upstate and were based on personal politics. Mr. McCooney's organization faced a number of fights for Democratic nomination for State Senate and Assembly but the organization candidates were victorious in every instance. Among those who were renominated was John A. Hastings who figured in the testimony before the Hofstadter committee and also in the testimony presented before Governor Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee at his hearings on the recommendation of Samuel Seabury, committee counsel, for the ouster of Mayor James J. Walker of New York.

Senator William Lathrop Love of Brooklyn, the only Democratic member of the Senate who voted in favor of the Hofstadter investigation was not redesignated by the Brooklyn Democratic organization ran as an independent but was defeated for renomination. However he will go before the voters in November, as he has been given the Republican nomination in his district. Upstate, a feature of the Republican balloting for senatorial nomination was the defeat of Mrs. Rhoda Fox Graves of St. Lawrence county for several years the only woman member of Assembly at the basis of Senator Warren T. Thayer. Interest in the Assembly primaries was largely local.

The winners in the various Congressional contests follow:
Third district, George W. Lindsay (D).
8th district, Patrick J. Carley (D).
10th district, Emanuel Celler (D).
17th district, Ruth Pratt (R).
27th district, Philip A. Goodwin (R).
30th George D. Lambertson (D), and Frank Crowther (R).
32d Francis D. Cullin (R).
33d Frederic M. Davenport (R).
34th John D. Clarke (R).
40th Walker Gresham Andrews (R).
41st Alfred Meyer (D), and E. F. Cooke (R).
43d James M. Reed (D).
43d Daniel A. Reed (R).

SENSE AND NONSENSE

It is difficult to believe that the nation has so much wheat when so many children are going hungry, and so much cotton when so many women are going without sufficient clothes.

"A girl whose cheeks are covered with paint has an advantage with me over one whose ain't."

Hazel—But surely you didn't tell Ned straight out that you loved him?
Elinora—Goodness, no! He simply had to squeeze it out of me.

ISN'T IT PECULIAR, TOO, THAT THE SUN NEVER SHINES HALF SO HOT ON THE BASEBALL DIAMOND AS IT DOES ON THE HARVEST FIELD.

Anette—Bob was in a terrible railroad accident yesterday.
Agnes—You don't say! Was he hurt?
Anette—No. He escaped with just a few scratches on his face.

Agnes—Lucky fellow. Where did it happen?
Anette—In a tunnel.
Agnes—In a tunnel?
Anette—Yes. He kissed the wrong girl.

About the happiest marriage is one where the husband thinks he got the best wife in the world and she is willing to make a good many sacrifices in order to have him keep on believing it.

Grocer (to his new clerk)—James, my lad, who bought that mouldy cheese today?
New Clerk—Mrs. Brown, sir.

Grocer—And the stale loaf of bread we could not sell yesterday?
New Clerk—Mrs. Brown, sir.

Grocer—Where's that pound of rancid butter that the baker refused?
New Clerk—Mrs. Brown bought it cheap, sir.

Grocer—And the dozen stale eggs that the cafe returned?
New Clerk—Mrs. Brown. Are you ill, sir.

Grocer (turning green and groaning)—No, only I'm going to have dinner with the Browns tonight.

JUDGE—Only married a week and you beat your wife? A month's imprisonment will cure you.
HUSBAND—Judge, don't you think that's a bit tough, spilling our honeymoon like that?

If a girl wants a "rush" from the opposite sex, she need only to darken her eyes, redden her lips, and hint at a shady past.

EX-CAPITALIST—Why, a lot of us had seats on the Stock Exchange a year ago, and now look at us.
FARMER—Yes, and many of us had seats in our pants a year ago, and now—Don't look at us.

GUSTS OF WIND... If a man knows where he's going you can tell it by his walk... Good times seldom come back. The world must move on to where they are... A dry father often has a son who makes up for him... This political bug you hear so much about must be the fabled straddle-bug... Banks never attract much attention until they get in the hands of a receiver.

There's always room at the top for another piece of cherry pie... There ain't no justice. A trial will convince you... Many a husband envies the stand-in enjoyed by the pet dog... As a rule the girl with the dreamiest eyes is the widest awake... It takes three generations to make a gentleman—one darned good guess in the stock market... That preacher who stated that marriage was a preventative for suicide, is off his base. It is an antidote.

UNNECESSARY EFFORT—The census bureau has published a pamphlet proving that woman's place is no longer in the home.

MRS. NEWLYWED—What shall we give mother for a birthday present?
MR. NEWLYWED—How about a nice traveling bag?

The girl who falls in love with a movie actor is almost as hopeless as the cow that falls in love with a Bull Durham advertisement.

Germany isn't satisfied with the Versailles treaty, apparently that peaceful document is turning out to be just another "scrap of paper."

A GOOD SUGGESTION... Look ahead. You can't do anything about the past.

HE WAS RIGHT
"I saw you in town last night with a lady."
"That was my wife."
"But I thought you were divorced."
"Yes, I said that WAS my wife."—Hummel, Hamburg.

Father: Your teacher has written saying he finds it impossible to teach you anything.
Son: There! I have always said he was no good.—Lustige Kolner Zeitung, Cologne.
