Puerto Rico Swept By Terrible Storm; Property Damage Greater Than The Blow In 1928; Thousands Left Homeless When Wind Destroys Flimsy Houses In Outlying Districts.

San Juan, P. R., Sept. 27.—(AP)—At least thirty persons are known to have been killed in a terrific hurricane which struck this city last night.

The full force of a 130-mile wind struck before midnight and lashed the city until 2:30 this morning, causing property damage even greater than that left in the wake of the disastrous 1928 blow.

Hundreds were injured and thousands were left homeless. Most of the dead, the storm rages indicate, were in smaller outlying towns, such as Barrios, Sabanalana, Catano and Rio Piedras.

Here in the city the loss of life was materially reduced by the police who took the precaution of rounding up hundreds of women and children, removing them from their homes and placing them for safety in the more substantial church and school buildings.

No Protection The villages, consisting for the most part of flimsy homes, had no such protection. In San Juan hundreds of homes were unroofed and some were completely destroyed.

First reports gave the following death toll: Barrios, 14 dead; Sabanalana, 4; Catano, 2; Rio Piedras, 10.

LEVITT OFFERS HIS APOLOGIES TO P. U. BOARD

Says His Remarks Of Yesterday Slipped Out—Fails to Uncover Juggling In Electric Company Accounts.

When the Public Utilities commission opened the second day of its hearing granted local petitioners on a protest of the rates of the Manchester Electric Company Professor Albert Levitt representing the Taxpayers League of Manchester asked the commission to accept his apologies for any remarks regarding competency he had made about the board, either personally or as a whole.

Holl a Witness The first witness called today was Edward J. Holl, Manchester real estate dealer. Mr. Holl had appraised two pieces of property owned by the Manchester Electric Company. The appraisal value was placed at $5,500.

William H. Blood, Jr., electrical engineer for Stone and Webster, was again called to the stand. Attorney Levitt cross-examined Blood relative to prices paid for labor. Mr. Blood read the various items from a document he held he was advised not to read any further by the company's counsel. Levitt insisted that everything be read before the commission.

Levitt's Electors Ruled Off Ticket So Independent Candidate Lists Four Courses Which His Party May Take.

Hartford, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Albert Levitt, Independent Republican candidate for governor, listed four possible courses which his party might take in commenting on a ruling today from Deputy Secretary of State Elmer Lounsbery that candidates for presidential electors named by the Independents would not be placed on the official ballot.

"I have not yet seen the communication referred to, but if it is as reported in the newspapers, there is one of four things we can do. "First—We can seek a mandamus injunction ordering the secretary to place the names on the ballot or restraining him from printing the ballots until the names are placed on them.

"Which of these things we will do, I am unable at this time to say, as I have not yet conferred with the executive committee."

Labor Camp "Slavery" Charged By Woman

ROOSEVELT NOT SINCERE WITH ECONOMY PROGRAM

Sen. Hastings, of Delaware, Points Out That Billion Dollars Cannot Be Cut From Expenditures.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Daniel O. Hastings, U. S. Senator from Delaware, today charged Franklin D. Roosevelt with "lacking consistency and political sincerity" and attacked the Democratic economy program.

"I have found no one," he told delegates to the New Hampshire State Republican convention, "who believes that the Democrats have a chance here for success, but in a political campaign I think it is a mistake to take anything for granted."

Senator Hastings said that he failed to see how, either because of necessity or in keeping with the Democratic platform, the Democrats proposed to reduce it by "not less than 25 per cent."

PUBLISHER NAMED FOR U. S. SENATE

Democrats Now Outnumber Republicans By One In Upper House Of Congress

Denver, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Democrats outnumbered Republicans by one today in the United States Senate, with the appointment of Walter Walker, Grand Junction newspaper publisher, to that body to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Senator Charles W. Waterman.

"The appointment of Walker by Congress, which means Adams yesterday was not unexpected. But Colorado political circles still were uncertain today whether the recently retired chairman of the Democratic State Central committee would serve in the lame-duck session of Congress, which convenes in December or whether he will serve only until a successor to Waterman is chosen at the general election November 8. Waterman's term expires March 4.

WHO'S WHO IN MANCHESTER and VICINITY

INTRODUCING THE LIVE PROGRESSIVE FIRMS AND PEOPLE THAT MAKE UP THE INTERESTS OF MANCHESTER AND VICINITY.

SPOTLESS FIRM
Now comes a firm in the dry cleaning line; it cleans everything except fish. It is out for a spotless town. At the Greenberg Dyers and Cleaners, 28 Oak street, had a ladder long enough, the spots on the rug could be cleaned without marking it. It is a particular. The proprietor of this firm, Jacob H. Greenberg, came up by sheer force and at last made good. He is just the sort of person we read about; it goes to show that there can be a winner. Another good mark for Mr. Greenberg—instead of thinking first of himself, he thinks of others, and tries at every move to please all. There is something good about a person whose popularity grows and grows as this man's is doing. If you think he's not going to make good keep your eye on this chap and watch him climb. Today he is cleaning, pressing and repairing and is kept as busy as a bee. And it is not difficult to figure why people from all over this section are bound to use the Greenberg service. Jacob H. Greenberg was born in Brooklyn and has lived in Manchester for the past 17 years. His favorite sport is football and he earned his first money at the age of twelve years working for a hat company in Hartford. Mr. Greenberg is carrying on the business established 16 years ago by his father, the late Isaac Greenberg. The Greenberg Dyers and Cleaners will call for and deliver your dry cleaning and we are sure you will be pleased with our results. Phone 4928 and ask—How long has this firm been under its present management?

TOO MANY PEOPLE IN PUERTO RICO

Governor Reports Higher Standard Of Living Cannot Be Reduced As Result.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Sept. 27.—(AP)—In his first annual report to the Secretary of War, Governor James R. Beverly asserted today that Puerto Rico's greatest problem is its excessive population. This year there was a net increase of 20.4 per thousand, bringing the total population to 1,599,142, a 48.5 to the square mile.

Conditions demonstrate that this population is too large for an island which is and always must remain largely agricultural, he wrote. "Organization of agriculture, encouragement of industries and vocational training, can help to alleviate the situation, but the number of living to a satisfactory point with the present density of population."

He suggested three partial solutions — increased employment through new industries, emigration on a large scale or a decrease in the birth rate. The government, he said, has encouraged industries. He suggested that other remedies must be attempted.

Without some extraordinary and unexpected changes in economic conditions, he said, further net additions to the population must inevitably result in greater distress and poverty and ultimately in a rising death rate.

Little Industry
Lack of intense industrialization temporarily has protected Puerto Rico from the full effect of the world depression, the governor reported. The economic condition of the island was not good during the past year, but was better than in more highly industrialized areas.

The government collected more revenue than ever before, to a total exceeding $12,400,000. Commercial banks were reduced by more than 25 per cent of the total and the favorable balance of trade was more than $28,000,000. In the calendar year 1931 the island was the best customer of the United States south of the Gulf of Mexico.

The report treated educational activities at some length, particularly the work in vocational training begun by former Governor Roosevelt.

WAGE INCREASES URGED BY UNION

Washington, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Wage increases were urged today by the American Federation of Labor to "build up buying power and keep business rising."

In its month survey of business the Federation said: "Confidence is spreading but we cannot expect convalescence to develop into a cure until consumer buying picks up. x x x Increasing wage cuts have recently speeded the decline in workers' income. x x x The time has come to reverse this trend."

"Our object from now on should be to raise wages, not reduce them. x x x A movement for wage increases would at once carry industry forward x x x."

Shorter Hours
Hours must be shortened as well, but if shortened hours mean just another increase cut, this move will not be fully constructive.

The Federation said "Signs of real business improvement are coming slowly" and added that while the unemployment rise was stopped in August, "11,400,000 are still out of work."

It cited indications of business gains in textiles, shoes, clothing, steel, automobile, coal cartloadings and commodity prices.

THEY NEVER CAME BACK

The "Whoopie Cruise" Mystery; Jap Playboy Vanishes As Girl Dances.

Colonel Raymond Robbins, friend of President Hoover, has joined the ranks of 50,000 persons who annually disappear in the United States. This is the fourth of a series of stories, mystery classes of real life those who never come back.

By ROBERT TALLEY
NEA Service Writer
(Copyright 1934, By NEA Service)
Between March 1 and Aug. 3, 1931, Etsuaki Fujimura, 28, wealthy Japanese silk importer of New York, withdrew from his account in a New York bank the sum of $388,412, leaving a balance of only $102.

On Aug. 9 he sailed on the Red Star liner Beigeland for a "whoopie cruise" to Halifax and return, being accompanied on this trip by Mary Dale von Reissner, blond actress, who had been his friend for months.

At 2:45 a. m. on Aug. 14, when the steamer was within a few miles of New York on its return trip, a ship's officer—making his customary rounds—saw Fujimura, in evening attire, talking to someone in the shadows of "A" deck. He does not know who that "someone" was.

At 7 a. m., when a steward went to Fujimura's stateroom to awaken him, Fujimura's bed was empty. He has never been seen since.

What happened?
There are some who think the wealthy Japanese was murdered and thrown overboard by blackmailers who had been "bleeding" him for months and who had followed him on the ship.

There are others who believe that his huge bank withdrawals went to cover gambling losses and that finally, in despair and disgrace, he ended his life by jumping into the sea.

There are still others who think that in some way he got ashore and is now living secretly, somewhere, hiding away from the world he once knew.

Beginning with Fujimura's mysterious disappearance on Aug. 14, an investigation by federal authorities continued until Sept. 8, when United States Attorney George Z. Medalle of New York announced that he had found "no evidence to prove that a murder or any other crime had been committed on the high seas."

Thus the investigation ended, but the mystery as to what actually happened is as far from solution as ever.

A few months ago Mrs. Fujimura, the missing man's wife, closed their $150,000 50-acre estate near West Norwalk, Conn., took her four children and went back to Japan. She never disclosed the case with reporters because she knew only one word of English and that was "Moran"—a word she had learned from a detective. She applied the word to all questions.

Nor could Mary Dale von Reissner, the beautiful 20-year-old ex-show girl who had been Fujimura's frequent companion, throw any light on the mystery.

She had sailed with Fujimura on this "whoopie cruise," and occupied an adjoining stateroom which was separated from his only by a bath. She was listed on the passenger rolls as "Miss Douglas," and was listed on the ship's roll as making the voyage as governess for Fujimura's seven-year-old daughter, Tochiha. Strangely enough, Fujimura took the child with him on this gay voyage. The child occupied her father's stateroom.

Mrs. Von Reissner (she is a divorcee with a child of her own) and Fujimura attended several gay parties aboard the ship. At one of these, a costume ball, the silk prince appeared in a vivid butterfly costume—symbolic of the source of his riches.

On the night of Fujimura's disappearance, Mrs. Reissner left him about midnight to attend a party in the stateroom of Mildred Harris, first wife of Charlie Chaplin. That night, it seems, Fujimura preferred to hang around the ship's bar with the men.

Mrs. Von Reissner, who stayed at the Mildred Harris party until nearly dawn, went directly to bed upon her return to her own stateroom. When informed next morning that Fujimura had vanished, leaving his seven-year-old daughter asleep in his stateroom, she was at a loss to understand.

The rich, suave Japanese had lavished gifts on the pretty blond actress since their meeting while they were familiar figures in Broadway night life.

Thus far the unidentified person who was seen talking with Fujimura in the shadows of "A" deck at 2:45 on the morning of his disappearance has never come forward to explain. Likewise, investigation has shown that two alleged "notorious blackmailers" who boarded the ship at Halifax and whose appearance was reported to have thrown Fujimura into a panic were nothing more than a couple of small-time gamblers who had no connection with the case.

Admittedly, Fujimura was a reckless gambler. He played for big stakes; he had money, was willing to bet it and did. Gamblers called him a "sucker" for any game of chance, crooked or straight.

Mary Reissner testified she once saw the little Japanese lose $20,000 on the turn of a card—and smile.

Investigation disclosed that much of the $300,000—that Fujimura had withdrawn from the bank before his departure had gone to pay gambling debts, but that, explains little. Fujimura's business associates say that he was worth at least $4,000,000—and in comparison with that amount, $300,000 seems small.

Another gambling factor is that shortly before Fujimura sailed he changed the beneficiary of his $50,000 life insurance policy to his ex-wife. Why did he do that?

And to top this climax, while Fujimura was absent on the "whoopie cruise" from which he never returned—at least, so far as anyone can prove—his wife gave birth to a baby and another child died.

All sorts of theories have followed in the wake of the high importer's mysterious disappearance. One is that he was killed in a brawl over a woman, which seems improbable on a ship given to so much night life where hunky stewards are as thick as politicians; another is that he was slain by gamblers or blackmailers; another has it that he ended his life by leaping into the sea; still another that he fled from the ship by swimming ashore or to a small boat waiting nearby to pick him up.

But all these are merely theories. The only known facts are that Fujimura is gone and his body has never been found.

AMERICANS ESCAPE
Chefoo, China, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Six Americans were resting here today after a 150-mile trip, shot through quagmires in escaping from Chinese bandits who attacked the mission quarters at Lichowfu.

They are: Ray and Mrs. Ivan Larson, their two children, and Dr. Jeannette Beall, all of Kansas City, Mo., and Miss Aida Grayson, Rutherfordton, N. C.

SEN. DAVIS TRIAL IS NEARING AN END

Government Completes Its Side Of Case; Old Friend Of Organizer Testifies.

New York, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The government completed its case today in the trial of Senator James J. Davis and the defense at once turned its efforts to show that because of political duties Davis was largely absented from the Legal Order of Moose at the time the alleged lotteries were conducted.

The first defense witness was Fred W. Jones who first met Davis in 1908 when they worked side by side in a mill at Gas City, Ind., and who later became himself a power in the Moose, of which Davis is life-long director-general.

Jones testified that up to September of 1920 Davis "was the organization department" of the Moose. The government showed through its witnesses that the organization department received some of the receipts from the 1920 and 1921 Moose charity balls, in connection with which the prosecution asserts gigantic lotteries were held.

Under questioning by defense counsel Jones testified that after his resignation to the Senate in the autumn of 1920, before either of the balls in question had been held, Davis withdrew from active control of the organization department.

He said that Davis' contract as head of the organization department with the Legal Order of Moose was assigned orally to himself and Joseph A. Jenkins, so that they were in charge of the department at the time of the charity balls.

During the hunch recess defense motions for dismissal of the case were made in chambers, they having been delayed so that taking of testimony might not be slowed up.

Seventy-five well known American business men are on a committee, investigating the United States war debts. Our only advice is that they hire one good bookkeeper.

QUOTATIONS

It is long since the return of the blue birds. A blue bird, to have the state are concerned that conditions are best under prohibition.

Europe has now done all it can to restore prosperity in the United States without effective and prompt American co-operation.

If the time arrives when our people and it necessary to pay their own salary or wages of light in the hands of the country, that day marks the beginning of the end of this republic.

"Such an immaculate kitchen with an electric range . . . !"

"MY ELECTRIC RANGE IS WONDERFULLY CLEAN. THERE'S NO GREASY SOOT TO SOIL WALLS AND DRAPES. SEE HOW CRISP AND WHITE MY CURTAINS ARE—YET THEY HAVE BEEN UP FOR WEEKS!"

Freedom from the disagreeable tasks of scouring pots and pans . . . scrubbing woodwork and walls! It's yours, when you install an electric range.

And not only do you save work. You save money too. Because frequent repainting of the kitchen is no longer necessary.

Electric heat is as clean as electric light. Underneath your pots and pans there's no soot—no smoke. They're just as clean as before you put them over the units.

The electric range itself is constructed without corners to collect dust, and wipes off as easily as china plates. The linings and racks of the oven are easily cleaned.

Learn what it means to have a kitchen you're proud to show to visitors at any time!

SIXTH AND SEVENTH FLOORS

CALL of the WEST

By R. G. MONTGOMERY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

STAN BALL, an agent for cattle interests, faces ASPER DELO in his office. Asper is accused of kidnapping men sent to check his timbering activities at Three Rivers. Ball announces he is making a personal check. DeLo says he will personally see that he does not make the check.

Leaving the office, Stan saves a girl from kidnapers. She proves to be DONA DELO, Asper's daughter. When Stan learns her name, he tells her he is STANLEY BLACK and slips away.

DUDLEY WINTERS, in love with Dona, agrees to go to Three Rivers and bring Asper back. Dona goes with him and at a little ranch place on the way Dudley puts a plan of marriage to Dona, hoping she will take this plan of getting Asper DeLo to return. She agrees but holds back when Stan Ball, on his way to Three Rivers, steps out of the night and kisses her.

At Three Rivers they meet SWERGIN, Asper's timber boss, and he says he is ready to kill Ball, that Ball shot a ranger in the hunt for Ball. She catches a bad horse and has to try to ride him to keep up her pride.

Dona rides the roan. Swergin tells her she must not ride without a guard as Ball is a killer and is at large. She slips away and rides toward Pass Creek where she has been told not to go. Dona sees her father ambushed and shot by a rider on a black horse. Swergin rescues her and takes her father in. They arrive to find that Dudley has not returned to camp.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

Dona walked softly into her father's room and bent over him. He was sleeping soundly, his breathing regular and even. With a cool, firm hand she smoothed his pillow and then stood looking down at him. He was all she had in the world of close kin. A little catch came into her throat as she remembered how near she had come to losing him. With soundless steps she returned to her chair on the porch.

A gorgeous mountain sunset was flaming in the western sky and the wooded reaches of Folly Mountain were shrouded with purple haze. The chill of night was creeping up from the canyon below, laden with the heavy fragrance of balsam and spruce. On any other night Dona would have given herself over to the beauty and spice of the night. Now she was worried about Dudley.

Swergin came out of his office, his heavy, called boots pounding harshly across the porch floor. Dona greeted him with a winning smile. The timber boss grunted and his loose mouth spread in a wide grin.

"Want a little company?" he rumbled. Dona arose and faced him. "I'd be glad to have you sit and talk to me but I'm worried about Mr. Winters. He hasn't come in yet."

Swergin scowled and pulled a chair toward him with a sweep of his thick arm. "He'll have to learn to take care of himself if he stays up here. Now's a good time for him to start."

"But, Mr. Swergin, he may have been attacked just as father was. He may be—" Dona stepped to Swergin's side impulsively. "You must look for him!"

"I'm to play hero and go after him?" Swergin continued to scowl. "What am I to get for all this hero stuff?" He let his little eyes rove over Dona's trim figure.

"Father will see that you are well paid." Dona could not help but shrink under the creeping caress of his gaze.

Swergin noted this and his smile returned. "What's this boy friend worth in cold cash, being as I have to be paid?" His chin thrust out as he spoke.

"He means a lot to me, Mr. Swergin, and I did not mean to set a money price on what you have done. Father and I owe you more than we can ever pay." Dona fought to conceal her natural dread for the bulging man who was staring boldly at her.

Swergin arose deliberately to his feet. "I don't calculate to get paid all in cash," he spoke slowly. "I ought to leave that tenderfoot get shot so as to have him out of the way. Then you could tie to a real man, Sis." He bulged one big arm and winked at her.

Dona flushed in spite of herself. She was suddenly glad he was going to look for Dudley but she could not force herself to a show of friendliness with Swergin. He repelled her too much.

"I'll bring Winters in and tie him up where he can't get away from you," the man rumbled. "You won't have to bring him in, Mr. Swergin, and you won't need to tie him up." It was Dudley's voice coming from the shadows at the porch rail. Dona started in surprise.

"Oh, Dud, you are terribly late!" she greeted him. He looked as fresh as though he had just come from his room instead of from a long, hard ride. He placed his rifle against the rail and took Dona's hand.

"How's your Dad?" Dudley seemed in rare good spirits. Dona overlooked the relation implied in his reference to her father. "He is sleeping and he's much better. Now tell me where you've been." She perched on the porch rail and turned a chair for Dudley.

He accepted the chair and leaned back comfortably. "This is a great country, D! I rode miles and miles and went so far that it took hours to get back."

"But where did you ride?" Dona asked. Dudley waved a hand in the general direction of Folly Mountain. "Up on top of that mountain," he answered.

Dona looked at him. Then her clear laugh rippled out. Dudley turned upon her and a frown knitted his smooth forehead. "What's wrong with that?"

"Oh, it just sounds funny. You go riding all over Folly Mountain while this killer, Ball, is hiding up there ready to shoot all comers. Didn't you even get a glimpse of him?"

"Not a flash. Swergin's men were all the time stepping out from behind rocks and trees with guns all set but I didn't see a single black horse or cowboy rider." Dudley grinned as though remembering pleasant encounters.

"And you didn't see anyone else?" Dona persisted. "Not a soul. But I had my rifle ready and I'd have used it." His smile disappeared and he looked at Dona gravely. "I have my own theory as to how this Ball should be hunted and I intend to prove I'm right about it."

"What is your idea? Tell me," Dona urged. "No, Watson, the master mind, must work out all details and weigh every clue before unraveling the crime."

"You're very unsatisfactory and very mysterious, Mr. Sherlock. I shall reward you by leaving." Dona hopped down from the rail. Dudley was on his feet instantly. "Aw, be a sport! Let's sit out here for a while. It's only a little after eight."

"I have to get some rest. Dad may need me at any hour and I didn't get much sleep last night." Dudley looked into her eyes affectionately. "You have had a tough time in the past 24 hours. Well, run along to slumberland."

Dona was busy caring for her father for the next three days and waited impatiently for Swergin and his posse to capture Ball. Swergin did a great deal of thundering at his men. He threatened and badgered them but they reported little progress.

Asper was sitting on a porch chair on the third afternoon. Dona perched on the top step looking away into the blue of the mountain peaks. She was eager to be astride the big roan and out into the hills. It seemed to her that even Swergin was afraid to meet Ball and have it out with him. Asper stirred and spoke.

"You'd better break away and take a ride," he suggested as though he had read her thoughts. "A canter down the canyon on that freighting roan would do you a heap of good."

Dona smiled fondly up at her father. "You won't worry?" "Not a bit. Just promise to stay away from the breaks and from the Pass Creek country."

"I promise." Dona arose and planted a kiss on his cheek, then ran to her room to slip into riding clothes.

Down at the corral Malloy was eager to ride with her but she refused his offer, saying that she was just out for a canter and not in any danger.

She rode at a jog-trot across the clearing and into the timber. Her pulses quickened to the beauty of the day and she forgot for the moment that Folly Mountain was a place of tragedy and that she had vowed to see vengeance done in these woods. She trotted the roan until she came to a forest service trail sign. It read "Blind River Trail." Dona halted and sat looking up the dim pathway.

The sign set her to thinking of the strange feud between the cattle interests and the timber company. Her reverie was broken by the crashing report of a high-powered rifle. Dona whirled the roan about and listened. Down the mountain-side came the clatter of a horse's hoofs. The rider was, without doubt, coming down the Blind River trail.

Dona felt for her carbine, then remembered she had not brought it. The roan snorted and champed to be off. Dona let him out a little and they swung down the slope.

The horsemen behind continued to pound along but now he was at her right and still under cover. Dona urged the roan to a faster pace but could not pull away. She called a range "Hallo" but there was no answer. The unseen rider now was leading the roan and seemed to be trying to head her off. Dona realized that she would have to set her spurs and sprint for it or she would be caught.

Aberdeen, Scotland, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The crew of the trawler Lord Talbot, which rescued the "Flying Hutchinsons" in Greenland, were reported today to have gone on strike, claiming a bonus from the owners for the rescue.

THEATERS

AT THE STATE

"Love Me Tonight" Maurice Chevalier in "Love Me Tonight" will be shown at the State for the last time today. Gary Cooper and Tallulah Bankhead in "Devil and the Deep" will head the new program Wednesday and Thursday. Drama, a torrid romance and thrilling action have been mingled to form one of the finest pictures in recent months in "Devil and the Deep". Here is real excitement for movie patrons—a real melodrama distinguished by three stellar performances of Gary Cooper, Tallulah Bankhead and Charles Laughton, which place them all high on the screen's roll of honor. The story begins in a north African seaport and moves swiftly through growing dramatic action to a terrific climax aboard a sinking submarine. An adaptation of the famous novel "Strons and Tiltans" follows the strange machinations of a submarine commander's insane jealousy of his young wife which led to a near tragedy when the man goes completely insane and attempts to wreck the submarine with himself, his wife and the wife's lover aboard. Miss Bankhead is cast as the wife, Gary Cooper the lover, and Charles Laughton as the insane husband. A new Cooper is revealed in "Devil and the Deep", with Miss Bankhead has never given such a performance to the screen. As for Charles Laughton, he contributes one of the greatest characterizations ever presented on the screen. The work of this celebrated English actor is a treat to behold and he stamps himself as one of the greatest of present screen actors. The usual short program rounds out an exceptional bill.

Another of the "Country Store Nights" will be presented on Wednesday evening, as an extra added attraction. Practically a stage-full of high grade groceries will be given away free to the holders of lucky numbers. All merchandise is furnished by Economy Market, and every article given away is of the type of provision that the average housewife purchases daily. Everyone attending the performance on Wednesday evening will have an equal opportunity of winning one of the many prizes to be given away. Just ask anyone who was at the State last Wednesday evening. It is one of the biggest feature nights ever presented at the State.

TWO MEN IN COATS
Two persons were killed and four injured yesterday when a mail passenger train operating on the New York, Westchester and Putnam lines, making a forced landing at Grady Island. The plane alighted on the water but its momentum carried it against the bank alongside a cemetery. An Austrian passenger, Fredric Reibmayer, and an Italian mechanic, Giovanni Vismoli, were killed. Two of those injured were in a serious condition.

MODERN WOMEN

Modern women are making a name for themselves in every line of business. They are not only successful in business, but they are also successful in the home. They are the backbone of the nation.

LICENSES SUSPENDED
 A list of operators whose licenses to drive automobiles in Connecticut have been suspended for one year because of a conviction for driving while under the influence of liquor was given out today at the State Motor Vehicle Department as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. The Department statement advised people to notify the department or the police in case they should see any of these drivers operating motor vehicles.

P. O. SUB STATIONS

DECISION AWAITED

Nothing Definite Learned From Washington—Hope For Two Offices.

Pending definite information from the post office department at Washington, D. C., there is no positive assurance that there will be any branch or classified station at the north or south ends of the town when the new Manchester post office at the Center is ready for occupancy the first of the year. However, general opinion is that there will be at least a sub-station at the north end.

Neither Postmaster Frank B. Crocker of the South Manchester Post Office or Postmaster Ernest F. Brown of the Manchester Post Office has received any definite word as to how the situation will be worked out here. It is understood that there is some sort of a misunderstanding existing in Washington as to the combining of the first-class office at the south end and the second-class office at the north end. Postmaster Brown has been notified to be prepared to give three months' vacation notice to Michael J. Coughlin, owner of the building, but as yet has not been told to vacate the building. The lease expires in 1935. At the south end the lease is held by the Mutual Realty Company of which the Manchester Trust Company is the trustee. This lease also expires in 1935.

The probability is that the post offices at Buckland, Manchester Green and Highland Park will continue to operate on the present system and that their mail will be received and dispatched from the new central post office. There is a possibility that some business proprietor may seek the right to conduct a contract office at the south end. This would only involve the sale of postage stamps, envelopes, cards and the issue and cashing of money orders.

Patrons of the north end office are strongly in favor of having some sort of a branch office at the north end and if this is decided in this manner, lock boxes may be retained. Both postmasters made it plain, however, that they had received no definite information or orders and until such time, they were reluctant to make any predictions.

Hartford Days are here again! Starting Tomorrow, Continuing Thursday . . . Two Days This Year Instead of One Day

HARTFORD DAY, last year, was the biggest sale day in our entire history. Hartford Day, last year, we wrote some of the most drastic markdowns that had ever appeared on Flint-Bruce price tags. It doesn't require much imagination to see a close connection between the two, does it?

Last year it took us two weeks to complete the delivery of Hartford Day selections... three full days to even type the sales slips that were turned in Hartford Day. Our usual ample and splendid facilities were completely swamped... BUT, we DID give shoppers the most unequalled values they had ever encountered!

Naturally, we plan to outdo even our 1931 effort!

Here is Advance Information About These Two Sale Days at Flint-Bruce's

Over 2,000 Different Items On Special Sale!

1. Hartford Day discounts will be in force on all our six floors. There will be 2,000 items of furniture alone, tagged with special discounts. In addition, hundreds of items in our radio, office, rug, drapery and range sections.

Prices Quoted Effective for 48 Hours Only!

2. Wednesday morning you will see 2,000 special Hartford Day tags throughout the store. Each will tell you the price for these two sale days, the price AFTER Hartford Day, for these tags come off Thursday night.

Important Changes In Our Store Hours!

3. The store will open 8 a. m., Hartford Days, a half hour earlier than usual. Wednesday we will remain open until 9 p. m., instead of 6 p. m., our usual closing time. Thursday we will close at 6 p. m. as usual.

Purchases Delivered In the Order Received!

4. We'll deliver Hartford Day purchases by our own trucks anywhere within a radius of 50 miles. We will ship freight prepaid anywhere in New England, all purchases of $10 or more. Deliveries made in rotation in order of purchase.

No Refunds... No Exchanges or Approvals... All Sales Final!

NOT WORK OF ANARCHISTS

Boston, Sept. 27.—(AP)—William G. Thompson, one of the counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti in their trial, today branded the explosion at Judge Webster Thayer's home, if a bombing, an act which he said he could not agree to what he assumed would be the general conclusion that the destruction was the work of anarchists.

OTHER PERSONS GUARDED

Boston, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Boston police today placed guards about the homes of several persons who were connected with the Sacco-Vanzetti case but refused to make known the names of those they were protecting.

MAY OFFER REWARD

Boston, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Boston Traveler today was told over the long distance telephone by Governor Joseph B. Ely at his home in Westfield that "every resource of the Commonwealth will be used to apprehend the culprits responsible for wrecking the home of Judge Webster Thayer in Worcester early today."

LOWELL GUARDED

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Guards were thrown around the home of A. Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard University today after word had been received of the explosion at the home of Judge Webster Thayer in Worcester.

get the information one way or another. Chairman Higgins of the commission called Levitt to task asking him "Is that the way you are going to try this case?"

Not Seeking to Falsify

Levitt reviewed the testimony of yesterday and attempted to quote what the witness had said. Blood, however, objected saying that Levitt was not sticking to the facts. It was evident that Levitt was trying to make Blood contradict himself. Levitt said that there were several items included in the reproduction offered by Blood that should not be included. The Redding attorney said that these items were accounted for in the refinancing of the Electric Company but did not actually occur in a reproduction of the books of the company.

Bowers and Spiess

Five witnesses were called yesterday, starting with Sherwood G. Bowers, selectman and president of the Taxpayers' League, and Mathias Spiess, former president of the League. Both witnesses were put on the stand to give testimony that the present rates were unreasonable in that the petition for a reduction in rates was made in good faith.

Bowers outlined the conditions which led to presentation of the petition, namely, his appointment to the Board of Selectmen of the town of Redding. He stated that the entire structure of rates was unfair and that he believed a revision downwards was in order. He testified that both the flat rate and charge per kilowatt hour were unfair.

Council for the Light Company—D. Austin Baehre, or it Professor Richard Smith, asked Bowers to prove his contention regarding the rates. Bowers said he had compared the figures with other localities, citing Norwich, Conn., and Braintree, Mass. When pressed further for more details, he stated that he had made a study of the situation in a municipally owned plant and the situation in a privately owned plant. Professor Levitt objected to the line of questioning on the grounds that the burden of proof rested on the light company and not on the petitioners. His objection was over-ruled, opposing counsel saying that an attempt was being made to establish the basis of the petition.

Mr. Levitt asked if this commission should decide, or if it should be decided by a competent tribunal that the legal rate should be 1-1/2 cents per kilowatt hour, when you have to pay four and a fraction cents, would you object to the difference? The question was asked in reference to the fairness of the hour.

No Apology Asked

When Levitt said "I place it squarely before the company and the commission," Richard T. Higgins, chairman of the commission, added "or a competent tribunal." Levitt said that he was sorry Mr. Higgins brought the matter up but that he would like to apologize. Mr. Higgins said that Levitt was the one to bring it up and that no apology was being requested.

Mr. Barney presented a schedule of the rates of the Manchester Electric Company as Exhibit No. 1, and a petition with 375 signatures, as Exhibit No. 2. The petition, he said, was offered to show that the company is in good standing and to reflect the quality of its service. Levitt ridiculed the petition and made formal objection to its introduction as an exhibit. He was over-ruled. Mr. Higgins stated that petitioners did not carry much weight and it was easy to obtain signatures one way or the other.

Experts Appraisal

Mr. Barney called the first of his three witnesses to the stand—William H. Blood, Jr., vice-president of Stone and Webster. He presented the appraisal of the Manchester Electric Company at $1,048,976, not including an item of $104,900 for going value. These figures were as of June 1, 1932, when the appraisal was made. He stated that this valuation was very low, as the price of copper wire alone if taken on a ten-year average, would have increased the amount $57,000.

The original cost of the plant was given by Mr. Blood as $1,148,615, including an allowance of $60,000 for working capital. Depreciation on the property was given as $57,850, and organization expenses was estimated at $27,400. Mr. Blood stated that the estimates represented the minimum figure possible.

Blood Not Vulnerable

Mr. Barney and Mr. Smith questioned the witness at great length as to the manner in which the above figures were arrived at, taking each item separately. When Professor Levitt took the witness he attempted to uncover flaws in his testimony but Mr. Blood refused to retract his statements and did not prove vulnerable to any extent.

Again and again, Mr. Levitt claimed to have proven that his questioning brought out that the figures given were entirely hypothetical and had nothing to do with the actual situation. Some confusion arose involving the original or historical cost and the reproduction cost. Mr. Blood blaiming that Levitt had them mixed up. It was then that Levitt charged that the figures of reproduction and original cost had been interwoven.

Confusion in Figures

Levitt attacked the figures on the cost of financing, and by his questioning seemed to be attempting to prove that the company did not finance itself originally. He reduced the matter to simple terms by bringing out his watch and job. "Let's get these figures down where I can understand them," he said. "Suppose this watch cost me $100 and the job, although worth $5, was given to me free, and could be given to me free the same time would I be troubled in putting the value of the watch and job on my books at $105?"

"Certainly," retorted Mr. Blood. "You wouldn't sell it for $100, would you?" he asked.

The questioning and cross-examination of Mr. Blood occupied the entire morning session and when the hearing resumed at 2 o'clock, Gardner Rogers of Brookline, Mass., who has been associated with Stone and Webster for thirty years, was called to the stand. He had been in charge of the appraisal of the original cost of the company and was questioned on the ways of arriving at certain figures of the appraisal. Six men were employed on the job, he said.

Attacks Statements

When the defense had brought out the item for item figures and completed its questioning, Levitt once again attacked the statements of the witness, saying that the figures were neither the reproduction nor the original cost but a combination of both, one table being used to fill the gaps in separate costs of the other.

In questioning Mr. Rogers, Levitt again took opportunity to strike at the Public Utilities Commission. He began an example, to simplify his question. "Suppose a meter in my house," he said. Then added, "But I haven't a meter in my house yet. Take my neighbors." Levitt recently laid an attempt to force the Connecticut Light and Power Company to extend electric lights to his home in Redding.

By his questioning, Levitt wove a mantle of confusion around the testimony in order to present a clear view of the matter.

Turbull Called

A half hour before the hearing adjourned, the company counsel called James Turbull, assistant treasurer of the Manchester Electric Company, to the stand. Blueprints of operating income and expense were presented for the years 1931 and 1932. The first eight months of 1931 were compared with a similar period in 1932 and the last four months of 1931 were compared with the estimated figures for the same months of this year.

When Mr. Levitt took the witness he asked Mr. Turbull if the figures given on the charts were similar to those in the report to the Utilities Commission. Mr. Turbull replied that they were, with the exception of the expense for retirement, which was listed in profit and loss instead of operating expense in the report to the commission. The figure was $22,788.62.

Adjusted

Mr. Barney objected to the question, saying that the charts were offered merely to show the operating income and expense. Levitt said that it was his intention to bring out the differences in the two reports, that he would take it item for item and show inflated valuations and a change in accounting system to meet the needs of the hearing. The commission chairman then adjourned the session until today.

Besides the three members of the Commission—Mr. Higgins, Colonel E. E. Taylor and Joseph W. Alsop, those present included John L. Collins, commission counsel, who introduced sporadic questions as each witness was called to the stand; Samuel Ferguson, president of the Hartford Electric Light company, the Manchester Electric company and the Connecticut Light and Power company; Walter P. Schawie, general manager of the North Connecticut Power company; John E. Lynch, secretary-treasurer of the Manchester company; K. P. Applegate, vice president of the Manchester company and general manager of the Hartford company; Ralph D. Cutler, vice president of the Hartford company; R. H. Knowlton, vice president of the Connecticut Light and Power company; and C. L. Campbell, secretary and treasurer of the same company.
