DEBT PARLEY URGED BY FRANCE, BRITAIN

Both Ask Suspension of December Payment — Other Debtor Nations Likely To Make Same Request.

Washington, Nov. 14 — (AP) — Great Britain and France, each four billion debtors of the U. S. today sought relief of further payments pending an international conference on world debt problems.

Publication of their formal requests to a government already reported against further reduction of cancellation, coincided with a telegraphic invitation from President Hoover to President-elect Roosevelt, to confer on the subject—an unprecedented action.

Senator Walsh (D. Mont.) suggested it "it becomes necessary to dispose of the matter at once a special session of Congress should be called."

Representative Ragon (Dem. Akr.) who drafted the declaration against further reductions which Congress attached to the Hoover one year moratorium on inter-governmental debts, recommended that the House Ways and Means Committee consider the question immediately.

The British and French notes, both asking suspension of December 15 payments of $95,850,000 and $19,261,488 respectively, were considered only the first of similar requests to be made by all America's war debtors for a revision of obligations. December payments are the first due since expiration of the moratorium.

WAPPING'S PARISH HOUSE IS BURNED

Former Methodist Church Destroyed By Fire Last Night—Nothing Saved.

Fire destroyed the old Wapping Methodist church last night and with it the village's only bell which for almost a hundred years had been the only means of calling the people to church or of spreading alarm in case of fire. The building was insured for half of its $12,000 value. Today nothing but a smouldering mass of ashes and twisted iron remain and in the middle lies the old bell.

Hundreds of people from Manchester and elsewhere, choked the four main highways leading into the village to view the spectacular blaze. The church, one of the two in the hamlet, for the past six years it had been used as a Parish House in which all of the social and recreational activities of the community took place. Some church gatherings were also held there although the regular Sunday morning services were conducted in the Congregational or Federated church a hundred yards away.

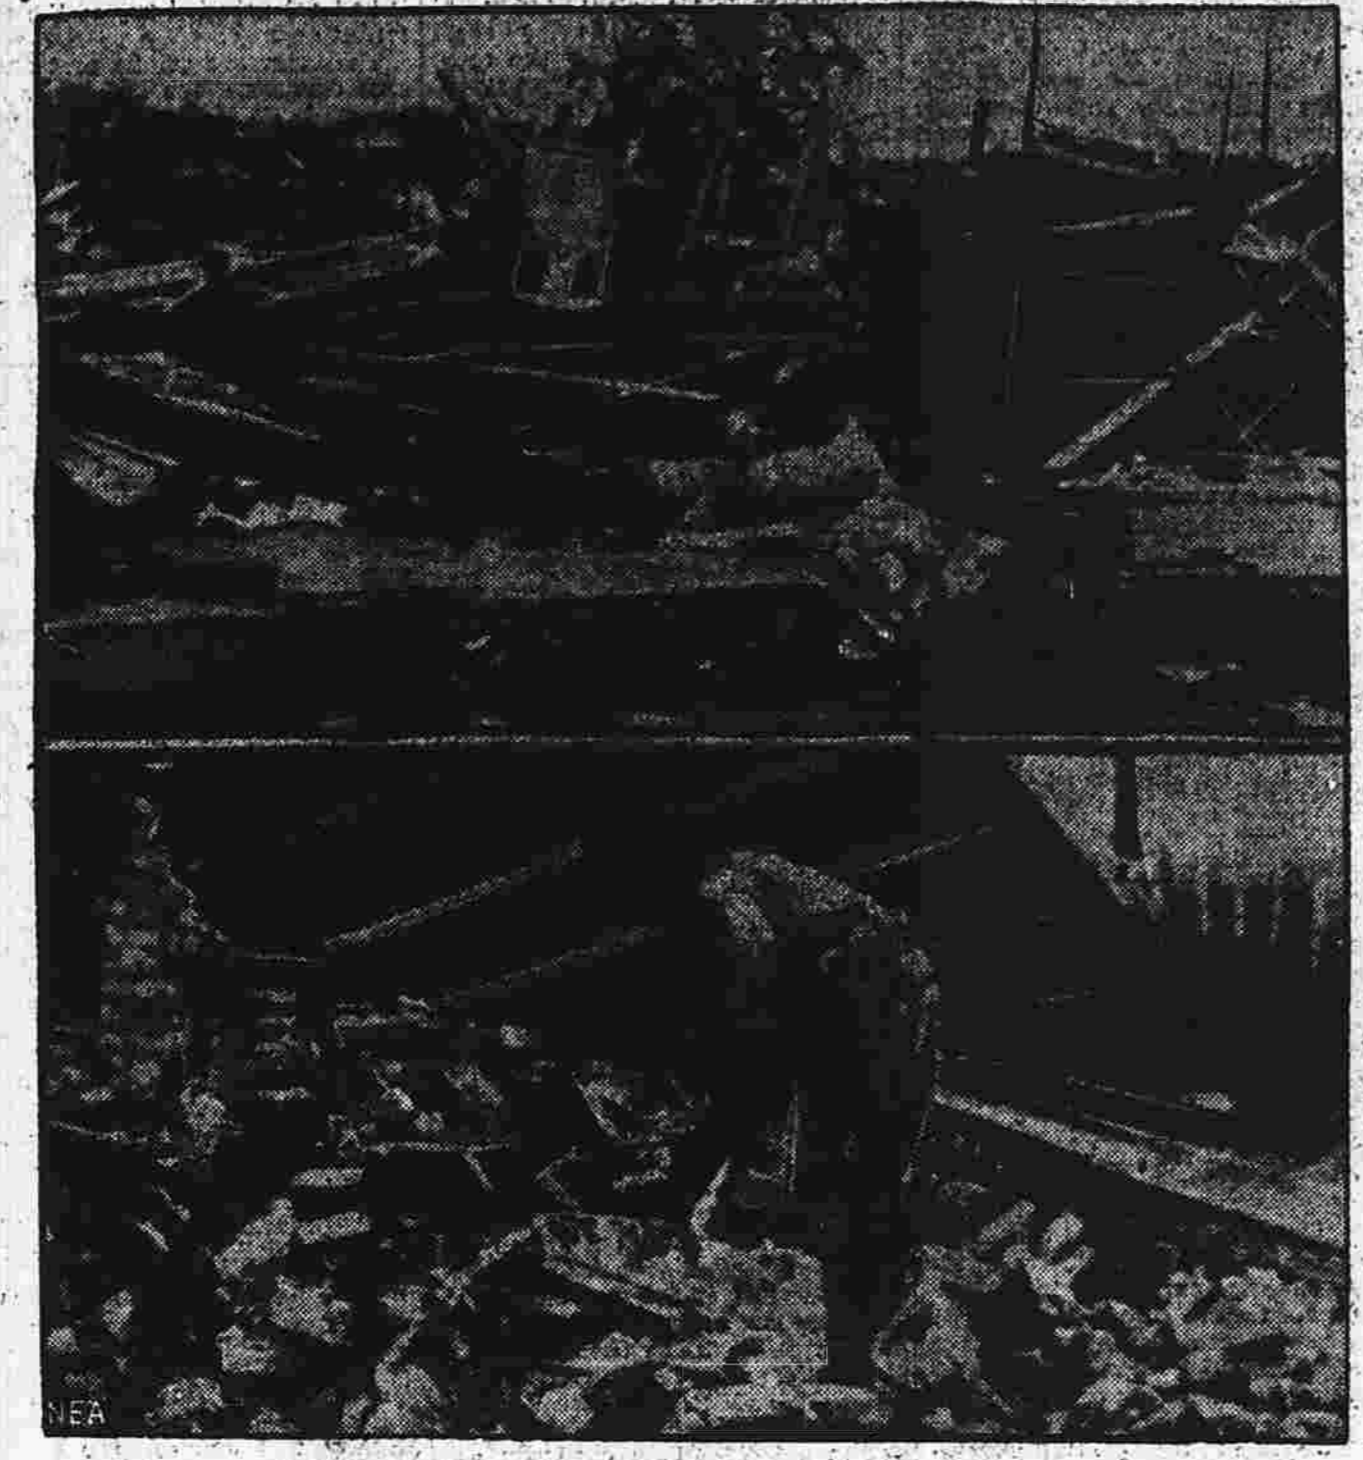

Cause Unknown

The cause of the fire is unknown but it is believed to have started either from the furnace or chimney. It was discovered by D. E. Lawton of Wapping who had been visiting at the home of Arthur M. Van Slichten near the church. He ran into the home of Walter S. Billings who is janitor of the building. Mr. Billings attempted to enter the church and ring the bell to let the people know of the fire but was unable to reach the rope in the belfry so dense was the smoke. He ever had difficulty in getting out.

Nothing saved.

With the bell silenced only one means was left of spreading the alarm. The telephone operator was notified and he opened all Wapping wires and rang the time which is the signal for fire. The villagers gathered quickly. An attempt was made to save the piano which had been recently purchased but not a single article could be brought to safety due to the dense smoke and

TRAIL OF RUIN IN CUBA

Like matches spilled from a box lay these Cuban houses (above) in Cabaiguana, after the hurricane had passed which took a toll estimated at 1000 lives. Cabaiguana province was devastated and other West Indian islands felt the gale's fury. Cuban soldiers like the one shown below raked the ruins searching for victims of the storm.

HOOVER, ROOSEVELT TO TALK OVER DEBTS

Turner Trying Again To Shatter Records

Columbus, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Fly-gord here Saturday because of a blown tire and damaged landing gear, said his next stop would be at Kansas City.

The veteran took two hours and thirty minutes to negotiate the trip from New York to Columbus. Head winds caused him to lose a portion of the time. Between Columbus and Kansas City, Turner said he planned to "step on it."

President Invites Former Opponent To Come To Washington—Roosevelt's Reply Not Yet Ready—War Debt Issue To Start Bitter Debate In Short Term of Congress.

Washington, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Whatever President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt might agree on in connection with war debts, signs point to plenty of controversy in Congress.

As the President sped homeward, and his successor prepared in Albany to reply to his invitation for a White House conference, returning members of Congress aired their views in Washington.

Senator Fess (R., Ohio) favored an international conference looking toward debt "adjustments"; but opposed undertaking negotiations aimed to bring about cancellation.

Representative Byrnes of Tennessee, one of the leading candidates for Speaker in the new Democratic House, expressed opposition to extension of the moratorium such as is sought by European powers.

"I do not think that Congress, in view of its definite stand last year against reduction of the war debts will grant any reduction," he said, "but certainly would oppose any consideration of the debt question by Congress unless it is to the interest of the American taxpayer."

Byrnes' Charge

Commenting on President Hoover's invitation to Mr. Roosevelt to confer, Byrnes said "it appears to me that the President is seeking to involve President-elect Roosevelt in a situation brought about by the Republican administration."

He added, however, "if we are to have private conferences about the war debts we must see well to have a special session of Congress and discuss the situation in the open."

Meanwhile, Secretary Stimson gave out word that no other nations have as yet sent notes supporting the request of Great Britain and France for reconsideration of the debt problem.

No replies have been sent to Great Britain and France, and further discussions with those powers are not expected before the arrival of President Hoover.

No Change in Policy

It was pointed out that no change has occurred in the administration policy that each foreign power shall discuss its obligations separately with the United States government.

Consequently, there is no reason to expect a general conference immediately in which all European debtors will participate.

Sir Ronald Lindsay's note suggested that "proposed discussions could best begin in Washington."

These "discussions" would be in the opinion of State Department officials by conversations between the individual ambassadors of the interested countries and President Hoover.

In other words they would be the means of making known what each of the debtors suggests as a means of reaching some adjustment of the war debts.

Representative Rankin (D., Miss.), who fought the Hoover moratorium in the House a year ago, today said "President Hoover and his international banker advisers seem to be trying to rush this matter, hoping to get a lame duck Congress to betray the American people by cancelling or reducing these war debts and unloading that burden onto the backs of the already overburdened taxpayers of America."

"I am unalterably opposed to cancellation of a single dollar," he went on. "Practically every member of the House and Senate elected to the 73rd Congress is committed against any kind of cancellation. So Mr. Hoover wants to obtain action in the lame duck session."

U. S. HIGH COURT IN BRIEF SESSION

Refuses To Answer Several Puzzling Questions Asked By Lower Courts.

Washington, Nov. 14.—(AP)—In a brief session today, the Supreme Court refused to answer several puzzling questions of law asked by Circuit Courts of appeal.

One concerned a suit from Missouri where Minnie J. Young was awarded a $5,000 verdict after she charged the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company had slandered her. The lower court wanted to know whether it had authority to modify the award given in the Federal District Court for eastern Missouri.

The other case, also originating in the eastern district of Missouri, was over the conviction of Egozo Castro, on charges of violating the Espionage laws. He appealed, contending that the search warrant was invalid. The Circuit Court asked the highest court about it but got no answer.

Other Cases

The court today consented to take up a number of cases for a probable decision. Among them were:

The appeal of the United States against enforcement of interstate commerce commission order prescribing rates on petroleum products from southwestern points to North Dakota and northwestern Minnesota destinations.

A three-judge Federal Court in Minnesota held that the commission should have heard the plea of the railroad for a rehearing before issuing the order.

A suit involving whether capitalized expenditures for drilling costs in connection with oil wells are to be returned to the taxpayer through depletion or depreciation allowances.

The Dakota-Montana Oil and the Petroleum Exploration companies brought the suits originally the decisions of lower courts differed.

Refuse To Review

The court refused to review or reconsider several cases. Among them were:

The report of the National Surety Company to the decision of the Kansas Supreme Court awarding a judgment against it for approximately $120,000.

The award followed the failure of the Industrial Gas Company to complete a natural gas line to Topeka, Kansas, as required by a bond on which the National company was surety.

The attempt by the First National bank of Wichita, Kansas to have the court reconsider its recent action declining to review the bank's claim for a refund of $70,478 in Federal

BUFFALO ATTACKS SHIPWAY SCHEME

C. of C. To Attempt To Prevent Ratification of the Treaty With Canada.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Charging the St. Lawrence shipway project was a blow at "all Atlantic seaboard and gulf ports," Buffalo today fired the first shot in what is expected to be a determined fight to prevent ratification of the treaty with Canada.

The attack was made through the Chamber of Commerce, which also struck at the St. Lawrence power project, saying there was "no present market for the enormous amount of horsepower" proposed to be developed and no present demand for it in the vicinity.

The Buffalo Chamber of Commerce drafted more than a score of the city's leading citizens to direct the fight. The Buffalo Chamber of Commerce handed at its port would see much commerce going past its door through the Welland canal and down the St. Lawrence if the shipway were built, in the opinion of many transportation experts.

SAYS FRANCE FORMING A GREAT WAR MACHINE

German Newspaper Claims Best Equipped Army In World Is Ready To March Almost Instantly.

Cologne, Germany, Nov. 14.—(AP)—In an exhaustive discussion of French military organization and equipment, to be presented in a special issue tomorrow, the Kölnische Illustrierte Zeitung, a widely read weekly circulated internationally and throughout Germany, reaches the conclusion "that before the gates of Germany there stands the best equipped army in the world, ready to march."

Statistics, graphs and maps are set forth in the issue, along with photographs, banner-lined quotations from the sayings of French statesmen, and scientific analysis by German military experts.

The purpose is to prove to the German reader that Jules Cambon, eminent French diplomat, correctly interpreted the French people in saying, "in the army lies the soul of France."

The publishers of the weekly, "the English equivalent of the title in the Cologne Illustrated Newspaper," assert that much of the material they present never has been printed. Every declaration, they say, can be proved.

Outstanding among the statements are these:

1. That within a week, and without special Parliamentary authorization, France could put into action 46 Infantry, five Cavalry and four Air divisions.
2. That the French military budget does not show what the nation is spending on armaments—France is the world's champion when it comes to camouflaging her military expenditures.
3. That the French fleet "has made tremendous, methodical progress, thanks to a long-term, naval program, which though never sanctioned by the Chamber of Deputies, is being carried out tactically year after year."
4. That the French air fleet has a radius of activity extending "far beyond Germany, the channel and England, and beyond the Italian Camaguey, Cuba, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The town of Santa Cruz del Sur became a gigantic funeral pyre today by order of military authorities.

The destruction of the town, by wind and water which also took the lives of probably 3,600 Cubans last week, was thus completed for the sake of sanitation. The action rendered it probable that the exact number of persons killed by the hurricane of last Wednesday never will be known.

Meanwhile, President Gerardo Machado was ready to leave Havana to inspect the hurricane torn areas, and governmental

YALE PROFESSOR KILLED BY AUTO

One of Three Killed By Autos In State — Two Suicides Are Reported.

By Associated Press

Prof. Charles P. Howland, 63, one of Yale's most distinguished faculty members, was one of three persons killed by automobile in Connecticut during the week-end.

The list of violent deaths also included a suicide, while a fifth death was being investigated by Coroner L. A. Smith of Middletown county.

In addition to these five deaths, two women lost their lives, one succumbing to a bullet wound inflicted a week ago by a man whom she identified as her husband, and the other dying from an automobile injury sustained last Friday.

Prof. Howland, an expert in international law and research, was struck by an automobile driven by Joseph Roberts of Fairfield. The professor, a native of Princeton, N. J., was returning to his home in Fairfield, Conn., on Friday. He was driving with David Day on the back seat, as a passenger against the tiger.

Prof. Howland died in New Haven hospital an hour after the accident. The car struck him as he stepped out of the car.

Joseph E. Sullivan, 75, former mayor of New Britain, was fatally injured in New Britain when struck by an automobile driven by Robert Kinty. Police charged the driver was under the influence of liquor.

Jeremiah Wallace, 48, of Waterbury, was killed by an automobile driven by Harold Bunnell.

Joseph Dube, 36, hanged himself in the cellar of his Williamston home. His wife said he had been drinking but was unable to advance a motive for his act.

Carl F. Pierson, 78, an uncle of former State Senator Wallace R. Pierson, was found dead in his room in Cromwell under circumstances which led Coroner L. A. Smith to order an autopsy. Police found two notes addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Pierson and a tumbler which had been drained empty of its contents except for some sediment. In the notes Pierson left his books to his nephew and his wife.

Mrs. Adelle Gage, 42, died in Charlotte Hungerford hospital, Torrington, of a bullet wound in the chest inflicted a week ago. Her husband Louis was arrested after the shooting.

Police charge George Abel's wife, after she had been taken to a lunatic asylum to Meriden. The couple, they said, had been estranged several weeks.

Injuries suffered Friday in an automobile accident caused the death of Mrs. Edward Ding of Greenwich. She died in Stamford hospital.

FORMER GOVERNOR FELKER IS DEAD

Was New Hampshire's Chief Executive In 1923-24, Later Rochester Judge.

Rochester, N. H., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Samuel D. Felker, Democratic governor of New Hampshire 1923-24 died at his home here today at the age of 73 years. He had suffered a paralytic shock while attending the 125th anniversary banquet of the Methodist Episcopal church, early this month.

Mr. Felker was graduated from Dartmouth in the class of 1887, after which he completed a regular three year course in the Boston University law school in one year, ranking among the highest in the class. He was admitted to practice before the bars of Massachusetts and New Hampshire shortly after. In 1890 he was the first Democrat to be elected to the State Senate from the old 12th district. He served as mayor of Rochester in 1896-97 and in 1909 was elected a member of the House where he served as minority leader. He was re-elected in 1911 and in 1912 was chosen governor.

In 1915 he was defeated for reelection by his Republican neighbor and friend, Roland H. Spaulding, the latter immediately appointing him judge of the Rochester Municipal Court on which bench he served until his retirement in 1929.

Felker for years had resided on a street with two other former governors, both Republicans, Roland Spaulding and Humble N. Spaulding. Both were his friends and when he was struck at the church banquet it was Roland Spaulding who assisted him to his home.

Others Cannot Pay

In September, Bethonia, Latvia and Poland took advantage of a ninety day notification clause in the debt funding agreements and told this government principal payments aggregating more than $3,000,000 would not be made in December. Last week Hungary served notice she could not meet her December installment and Greece failed to make a payment then due.

All of France's government payment is interest, which under the funding agreements, it is responsible. England's installment includes $30,000,000 of principal.

Britain's communication was a note signed by her Ambassador Sir Roland Lindsay. Ambassador Claudel presented for the French government an unsigned memorandum of like tenor. Ambassador Lindsay's note said in part:

"The hopes which were early raised by the President's initiative (moratorium) have unfortunately not been realized x x x. Today many thoughtful men throughout the world are convinced that if the depression is to be overcome, further remedial measures must be sought x x x."

Asks Suspension

"His Majesty's government x x x ask for a suspension of the payments due from them for the period of the discussions now suggested or for any period that may be agreed upon. His Majesty's government x x x believe that the proposed dis-

ASKS FAST ACTION ON SUPPLY BILLS

Congressman Byrnes Wants Members To Give Up Their Xmas Holiday.

Washington, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Urging speedy action on the annual supply bills, Chairman Byrnes of the House appropriations committee advocated today that Congress give up its Christmas holidays and "stay on the job to avert necessity for a special session early in the new administration."

The Roosevelt administration should have several months to become acquainted with the situation in Washington before a special session is called, he said.

Accordingly he expressed hope that the appropriation bill could be disposed of within a few weeks after the convening of the December session, which expires March 4.

Beer Bill Plan

Byrnes also said he saw "no reason why a bill to legalize beer should not be voted on at the short session."

He expressed the belief that the House at least would pass a beer bill but said he did not know the strength of the beer advocates in the Senate.

"It is necessary to keep up the campaign for economy," the Tennessee Democrat said. "It is our intention to apply the pruning knife to each appropriation bill so far as possible."

It was learned that the Budget Bureau itself has reduced some of its estimates under the present fiscal year, particularly in construction activities.

Estimates for the Treasury and Post Office departments are understood to have been reduced by more than $1,000,000.

BILLY BROCK DEAD, FAMOUS AVIATOR

Pioneer Air Mail Pilot and World Girdler, Is Victim of Cancer.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Billy Brock, pioneer air mail flier, and conqueror of the Atlantic, is dead.

Brock survived the dangers of pioneer aviation, taught American soldiers to fly during the World War, piloted air mail planes, and then capped his career with a flight over the Atlantic. He died last night of cancer.

William S. Brock, as he was christened, but known as Billy Brock in aviation circles, was born 36 years ago at Gladstone, O. In youth, the exploits of Lincoln Beachey, Arch Hoxsey, and other early American fliers, led him into aviation. At 16 he was a pilot.

His twenty years of flying spanned the days when a London to Paris flight was set down as a record to the present era of around-the-world flights.

And it was on a projected around-the-world flight in 1927 that Brock, accompanied by Edward F. Schless, made the first America to England non-stop flight. They flew their plane, the Fride of Detroit, on to Japan. But adverse weather conditions delayed them there for days and finally their plan to span the Pacific was abandoned.

In recent years Brock had been the private pilot of a wealthy Chicagoan. Four months ago he entered a Chicago hospital in his fight against cancer.

Tobacco Seed As Food For Animals, Reported

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Tobacco seed has been added to the list of "excellent food for mammals" by the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station.

Experiments conducted by Dr. Lafayette E. Mendel and Dr. E. E. Vickery, the station announced today, disclosed unexpected food values in the mature seed.

The harmful effects of nicotine were not apparent in the animals reared on the tobacco seed diet," the station announced. "They were healthy and grew normally. This bears out the results of chemical tests which had detected the curcuma, a fact that nicotine exists in the unripened seed and in seedlings nine to 11 days old, but not in the mature seed."

Three generations of albino rats were raised at the station on this diet. Dr. Mendel and Dr. Vickery said these feeding trials disclosed this species of rat "was successfully reared to maturity at a satisfactory rate of growth, and can reproduce on a diet that consists almost exclusively of tobacco seed."

"Either 1 or 2 per cent of inorganic salts were added, and a few drops of cod liver oil were administered daily. This was essential to successful growth because of the deficiency of the seed in vitamins A and D."

The success of these feeding experiments demonstrates that the total protein of this species of tobacco seed is of excellent biological quality.

With Bacon
For canapes, when you haven't time to prepare, cut out thin slices of bread with a fancy round or diamond shaped cutter and toast brown on one side, leaving the other side just slightly seared. Spread peanut butter on the least toasted side and over the top of each put tiny bits of sliced bacon. Place under the grill and cook until the bacon is crisp. These tiny peanut butter trifles are great favorites with both men and women.

plains of the Po, including Turin and Milan."

5. That French army maneuvers in recent years have evinced a clearly aggressive tendency.

6. That for more than a century French policy has not swerved from the goal of establishing a military hegemony over Europe, and that the "French system of alliances rests upon Europe like a nightmare."

The French military system comprises professional troops enlisted for long-term service with a short-term draft army resting upon the universal obligation of all males to serve, writes the anonymous author of an article entitled "Ready to march within six days—without mobilization." The last three annual classes of reserves may be called to the colors, this writer says, without asking Parliament or declaring mobilization. He describes the process thus:

Within a few hours eight highly equipped divisions of infantry, five of cavalry and four of the air force could be ready for action. Within three or four days, eighteen more infantry divisions could enter the fray. Within six to eight days twenty divisions of infantry reserves could be ready, making a total, without parliamentary action, of 46 infantry, five cavalry and four air divisions.

Five Million Men.
One general mobilization had been ordered the writer counts 30 to 40 more infantry divisions would be available, and one more cavalry division—making a total of 4,000,000 white and 1,000,000 colored troops, all trained and fully equipped with the following:

- 25,000 light machine guns.
- 15,000 heavy machine guns.
- 2,200 large cannon and howitzers.
- 4,000 tanks and other motorized vehicles of combat.
- 5,000 military planes.

The writer asserts that France has built many new railways and roads to guarantee a quick drawing up of her forces, has equipped her army with motorized weapons of attack, and has shown an aggressive tendency in recent maneuvers. "All this, together with the political factor of the French policy of alliances, and France's concern for her vassals in the east, proves," he concludes, "that the French intend to conduct a new war by the method of attack."

Economist's Opinion.
Walter Jost, a German economist, who contends that the French military budget does not show the actual outlay, makes this statement: "Neither world public opinion nor the French taxpayer like to see 'Pacific' France sacrifice more than one-third of the nation's entire income to the god Mars. Nothing is easier, then, than to hide the facts. A special credit of 5,000,000,000 francs (about $200,000,000) for the gigantic fortifications on the eastern frontier need not appear as part of the military budget."

Jost concludes that while France from 1913 to 1931 increased her military expenditures about 60 per cent, Germany reduced hers 80 per cent.

Bombing Planes.
The admiral expresses apprehension about the range of the French air fleet, an illustration accompanying his article depicts a plane described as the latest French development for night bombing—the S. A. B. 20 type—of which sixty are said to have been ordered. The plane is equipped with nine machine guns, has a radius of action of 625 miles, and can carry 5,500 pounds of bombs. A graph sets forth that, flying from Boulogne, it could drop its load in Scotland.

Count Max Von Montgelas, retired German infantry general, contributes a review of French military policy from 1793 to the present, in which he says that everything has been made subservient to the establishment of a military hegemony over Europe. French alliances are discussed by Karl Von Certzen, retired Germany army colonel, who asserts that France is the "gilder" in a web encompassing Belgium, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Poland.

Common military action, under the French alliance system, he declares, is possible as follows:
1. Against Germany by France, Belgium, Poland, Rumania, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia.
2. Against Hungary by France, Rumania, Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.
3. Against Italy by France and Jugoslavia.
4. Against Soviet Russia by France, Poland and Rumania.

CHARGE IS DENIED
Paris, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The French government branded the Cologne illustrated Zeitung's conclusions about French military strength as "fantastic and false today and simultaneously." Informed the Associated Press France is proposing general proportional reduction of the world's navies.

Commenting on Admiral Gadow's assertions, the French government in a seven-page document said that a fleet of 860,000 tons by 1939. It was also set forth that at the London conference France stated she had renounced execution of the program and would be satisfied with a tonnage slightly under 700,000.

Explaining the new French naval proposal, the document says France is unable for the present to fix French naval reduction, as this depends upon international agreement "but French tonnage probably will be around or under 600,000 tons."

The document continued: "This means France will accept a cut of nearly 300,000 tons from her original program."

Is For Peace
Referring to allegations as to the aggressive intentions of France, the statement said France has given convincing proof of her determination to settle peacefully international differences in adhering to the general arbitration act at Geneva, "a document to which Germany alone among the great powers has up to now abstained from subscribing."

The document declares that the charge France has constructed a system of fortifications on the northeastern frontier to permit offensive operations against Germany, falls under analysis.

"The importance of sums devoted to a system which might be applied to the purchase of movable war material constitutes striking proof of the defensive intentions of France."

The statement continues that France is in a dangerous position in case of aerial bombardment, the great industrial centers of the north being in proximity to the most menaced of French frontiers. The possession of bombing planes described by Admiral Gadow was denied, and it was added that France had not ordered any.

Colonial Budget
The statement says that aside from the military budget there are 400,000,000 francs carried on the civil colonial budgets, adding this is well-known in Geneva.

"It is false," the statement said, "to pretend this constitutes camouflage. Jost's assertion that Germany in the last five years expend only one-fourth as much as France is entirely inexact."

In round figures France has spent fifty per cent more than Germany. The military expenditures of France since 1913 have not increased sixty per cent but between ten and 15 per cent.

"Since 1920 the military outlay of Germany has increased by about 20 per cent."

As for French naval progress, the statement says the French warship "Dunkerque" is an answer to the laying down in Germany of the third "pocket battleship." The statement concluded:

SEES PREPAREDNESS AS PRELUDE TO WAR

Speaker Urges Conference Rather Than Conflict In World Problems.

"The Problems of Peace" was the subject of an address, the final in the series of God Will address sponsored by the South Methodist church, given by Dr. Gaylord W. Douglass of Springfield, Mass., last evening. Dr. Douglass who recently returned from a tour of Europe said that the only reasonable solution for the many problems confronting the nations today is an understanding not by conflict but by conference.

"Preparation by force was both costly and destructive," the speaker asserted. "Preparation did not eliminate the danger of armed outbreak as was exemplified by the break of the World War. On the other hand he claimed that a more logical understanding would have eliminated the tremendous expense of warfare and the sacrifice of manhood."

"History has always proved that preparedness was only a prelude to war, while it has been shown that Conference is better than Conflict." The speaker quoted Washington as an example showing both to have been opposed to war. Citing Washington's efforts to prevent war with England by sending emissaries to England with instructions that every effort was to be directed to prevent war. Lincoln was also quoted in his second inaugural address to have said that he deplored war and its horrors and prayed that the nation might be soon brought out of its misery following the Civil War.

Dr. Douglass described the cost of the World War and said that total cost was sufficient to have financed the Revolutionary War for a period of a thousand years as an object lesson of the wastefulness of war. Quoting many of the leaders in the World War, Dr. Douglass said they were convinced that civilization could not undergo another war such as the last great war.

St. Mary's Senior Members' club will hold its monthly meeting tonight at the close of the regular G. F. S. meeting.

HOLDS VISION OF GOD ALONE REDEEMS SINNER

Luther League Leader Tells Swedish Here They Must See God To Be Cleansed.

Rev. Sigurd L. Hanson of Middletown, president of the Hartford District Luther League, was the speaker at the evening service at the Emanuel Lutheran church last night, taking for his text Matthew, 5:8—"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Rev. Hanson said that if we do not see God in this life we will not see Him in the life to come. The desire to see God, he said, should be the deepest longing of the human heart, as it is a clear and satisfying need. The speaker gave several illustrations of his talk from the Bible, including that of Job, who lost everything and did not come to a realization of his sinful life until he had seen a vision of the Lord.

The vision of God, he said, is within the reach of every heart. "Let us therefore grip that truth that we may see God. Be pure in heart and give all to God, including love and service, and this vision will bring a cleansing from sin."

The G. C. Glee club presented a program of special music at the service.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 14.

A MATTER OF PATRIOTISM
 President Hoover's course in inviting President-elect Roosevelt into conference with him on the subject of international debts, while without precedent, is the logical consequence of an unprecedented situation. It does credit to Mr. Hoover's patriotism and good sense and it is to be taken for granted that Governor Roosevelt will accept this first opportunity to take part in solving one of the nation's chief problems. In this connection, however, it need occasion no surprise if Mr. Roosevelt should impose the condition that he is not to be asked to give his approval to any plan or policy or agreement involving secrecy in the slightest degree; for it is readily to be seen that any one in his position would be very jealous of his freedom of action when, later on, the responsibility became wholly his. This is one aspect of the proposed joint-administration consultation that should not be overlooked.

Otherwise the debt problem is wholly non-partisan and there is no reason why the President and his successor should not act together and every reason why they should. It is doubtful if they are, actually, very far apart in their views. Mr. Hoover is a very long way from being a Calvin Coolidge on this subject of debts. Mr. Roosevelt, careful during the campaign not to commit himself too fully, has nevertheless let it be inferred that he is inclined to be liberal in his construction of our debtors' obligations; he could go to almost any length without eating his own words.

At all events it is obvious that we are in for a showdown. Europe is not going to pay according to the arrangements of the World War Debts Commission nor according to any subsequent agreement. There is no way of making her pay if we would, and there is very serious doubt as to whether, in self interest, it would be in the least wise to compel her to if we could. This question has gone a long way since Mr. Coolidge said: "They hired the money of us, didn't they?" as though that were all there was to it.

It is open to considerable doubt whether the United States as well as our European debtors wouldn't have been even worse off than they are now if every debtor nation had paid every dollar on the counter at the specified hour during every year since the original settlement. We should have escaped a relatively small part of our taxation, but at the cost of having a prostrate world to do business with and of being frantically detested into the bargain. And it must not be forgotten that the debts, even with the face figures unchanged, are now at least twice as burdensome as they were through the shrinkages in foreign exchange and in commodity values.

Mr. Hoover's decision to make the President-elect a partner in the consideration of this vital subject in this time of emergency is the act of a statesman big enough to subordinate all personal and party considerations to the welfare of the country. It would be insulting to Governor Roosevelt to imagine that he will not accept the invitation in exactly the spirit in which it is extended.

RISKY BUSINESS
 Senator Borah has let it be known that he is determined to defeat wet legislation in the forthcoming session at any cost. That means, of course, a filibuster. It means that Mr. Borah would be willing, in case the rest of the Senate were as obstinate as he, to hold up the whole business of government from the beginning of December to March 4, in order to defeat any proposal to liberalize the Volstead law and gain $300,000,000 in federal revenue which now goes into the pockets of the racketeers.

There have been from time to time numerous men in the United States Senate of whom such a performance would be characteristic. If Willie Upshaw were a senator from Georgia he might quite properly be expected to perform as Mr. Borah purposes performing. It would have been the logical thing for former Senator Tom Harkin. But when a person of Senator Borah's intellect loses his sense of proportion to the extent indicated by his threat then the conclusion is inescapable that his vanity and his lust to impose his will upon his fellow men have overwhelmed his very character and wrecked it on the rocks of an inordinate ambition to command.

The various referenda taken in one form or another on election day on the subject of liquor, combined with the sweeping rejection of dry members of Congress all over the country, show with great clearness that there is a wet majority among the nation's voters much greater than the total dry vote. For Mr. Borah to set himself up as superior to these combined millions of his countrymen is not only enormously egotistical, it is dangerous. It is very much to be doubted if the country, in its present temper, would permit a filibuster in the coming session, on the question of Volsteadism or any other concerning which it feels keenly, without doing something about it—possibly something rough and involving Mr. Borah.

FOR A NEW G. O. P.

It is to be anticipated that Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's proclamation calling for the taking over of the control of the Republican party by new and young leaders will be received with many times more seriousness than if delivered at any previous period in the party's history.

To be sure, much that Dr. Butler says sounds like the utterance of a Democrat during the campaign; but now that there is no new campaign in sight, and will be none for a long while, it might as well be admitted that some of the things the Democrats said about the Republicans were true just as many of the things the Republicans said about the Democrats were true.

At all events Dr. Butler is unquestionably correct in assuming that the recent election demonstrated that the Republican party cannot get anywhere by simply maintaining a skeleton organization and waiting for the Democratic party to ruin itself. That wasn't merely an election; it was a bloodless political revolution. Anyone with half an eye must see that it indicated a determination to have done with old things. And if the Democratic party should fall into the error of even partially adhering to outworn policies the people would be fully as ready to destroy it, in 1936, as they were to destroy the Republican party in 1932. But not to elevate the same kind of a Republican party as they so ruthlessly slaughtered last week. That thundering horse would go Socialist or Populist or something else, with a rush, if the Democrats should not make good and the Republican party had nothing new to offer.

Let us not mistake the signs that the people of the United States have moved, in enormous numbers, to the left. Not far, but in the direction of liberalism and away from what so many Republicans have glibly called conservatism but which so many of the voters have come to regard as Bourbonism and the doctrine of special privilege.

In other words if the Republican party is to continue to be a major factor in American political affairs it is to be suspected that it will have to do what Dr. Butler calls on it to do—liberalize itself.

To illustrate, Dr. Butler in the course of his statement says:

"The adequacy of the gold supply in relation to the present demands upon the world's monetary system must be studied with open mind and the question fairly faced, whether or not some use, under international control, of silver as a basic monetary metal will not assist to relieve the present economic and financial situation."

For thirty-six years the Republican party has been a gold-standard party. It won the election of 1896 on the gold issue. But its candidate that year had been a bi-metallicist all his life. It wasn't the Republican voters who committed the party to the gold standard, it was a small group of influential and personally interested individuals. And in spite of all that has occurred since the party has adhered to gold standard support. Because it was unquestionably a good thing? Not at all. Because it was desired by a special element within the party, because it had once served to win an election and because there was no one with the will or the power to call its virtues into question.

There are millions of Republicans in the Midwest and West who have never abandoned their belief in bi-metallicism. They are the kind of Republicans who voted for Roosevelt last week. They have no reason to expect from the Democratic party as a whole any specially intelligent action on the currency question because that party is utterly divided within itself on the question.

Would it not be strange indeed if the campaign of 1896 were fought largely on the issue of the money standards—with the parties' positions of 1896 exactly reversed? Yet that is one of the possibilities suggested by Dr. Butler's call to arms. One of many.

INFURIOUS ECONOMY

Some clergyman the other day broadcast a plea to his hearers that they refrain from the usual custom of having an elaborate Thanksgiving dinner, substituting therefor a simple and inexpensive meal and devoting the difference in cost to the relief funds of their respective communities. This well intentioned pleader appears to have confused the situation now existing with the problem faced by the nation during the war.

There was sound sense, at the Thanksgiving period of 1917, in asking the people to refrain from luxurious feasting. The grim job facing agriculture at that time was the feeding of our allies and the supply of our troops. It was a matter of patriotic service to abstain from absorbing farm labor in the form of festive foods. Now, however, the problem is exactly reversed. The markets are glutted with a superabundance and the anticipated Thanksgiving luxury market is being absolutely depended on by countless farmers to yield them the money for their taxes or interest so that they may not lose their homes and their means of support. Any general movement for an abstemious Thanksgiving day would be sure to inflict much more hardship than the savings could possibly relieve.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Washington — The election campaign may be over, but the hysterical fingers on.

Here in the national capital quite a few folks are gravely worried as they contemplate a series of invasions by militant groups which threaten to march on Washington in active protest against unemployment and other serious effects of the depression.

This city remembers vividly the visit of the bonus army and of the Communist-led hunger marchers last year—marches with such menacing possibilities as might have bred rather horrible spectacles had they not been tactfully handled by a clear-sighted chief of police who is no longer on the job.

No one, let it be said hastily, is worrying over the prospect of revolution. Federal troops can be counted on to disperse any mob that is likely to come, along, in case President Hoover deems it necessary to call them out, as he did in the case of the bonus army.

But there is much apprehension of some messy situations. The spectacle of a large mass of the unemployed in the capital being driven off by soldiers is not a very pretty one and it will be especially unwelcome to the people who have to live in this beautiful, quiet town.

Nor does the idea of placing heavy police guards at all the highway entrances to the District of Columbia for the winter appeal either to citizens or officials.

The hunger march planned by Communists for early December is now causing the most concern.

There are reports of other proposed marches and one of them is sure to materialize with hundreds or thousands of farmers—a professedly non-Communist movement which will demand tax and debt moratoriums but is not yet regarded as a likely source of serious disturbance.

The hunger march is being carefully organized. Its radical leaders have been working on it since the visit of about 1500 Communist-led hunger marchers last year and it is not unlikely that between 5000 and 10,000 hunger marchers will try to get to Washington.

Communists are making much of the London riots and some of them regard their Chicago demonstration as a sort of rehearsal for the "national march."

Whether there is to be rioting in the shadow of the Capitol probably will depend on the police and the administration. The Communists are not planning any violence, although their ideals of non-violent demonstrations are sometimes rather extreme.

Their primary aim is to convince the unemployed and the poverty-stricken farmers that there is no hope of relief or humane treatment from the existing authorities. They are not dumb enough to suppose that they could upset the government without first creating a mass hatred.

But when their demonstrations are met by violence the Communist leaders apparently are more pleased than others, because they believe that forcible suppression aids their cause among the "down-trodden" masses to whom they appeal. Privately, they will assure you that the authorities can have trouble if they come looking for it. And the likelihood of belligerence on both sides is the chief factor which causes Washingtonians to fear an unpleasant period.

IN NEW YORK

A Modern Graustark
 New York, Nov. 14.—Out in Texas they may be interested to hear that the dashing, colorful Johann, Prince of Lichtenstein, is soon traveling west to spend Christmas with his wife's folks.

Prince Johann is ruler of that picturesque, amazing little kingdom where nobody pays taxes and stout menherrs sit over their beer and pipes yodeling to the mountains which enclose the tiny principality. Out of the family exchequer Johann has built a good road service which is famed throughout Europe. The prince of Lichtenstein has a sort of paternal, rather than sovereign rule and their little capital has become one of the most romantic in the world.

Hotel Is His Palace
 The prince, in the best of "Graustark" fashion, married a handsome and charming Texas gal, Alene MacFarland. For more than a year he has made New York his home. They live rather quietly, if expensively, in an exclusive hotel-apartment. He is about 35, rather handsome, with a tricky little military mustache to give "the sort of air when he goes about in evening clothes or semi-uniform."

Already he has found a pet American charity: the West Side Hospital for Malignant Diseases. And helps to underwrite cancer experimentalism. Recently he sponsored a fund-raising concert with the great Chaliapin as the star. Chaliapin is the young prince's favorite singer. For Johann's country has many wandering street singers and Chaliapin rose from the streets.

Assent Those Bridge Rules
 By the way, the only effect the new bridge rules will have upon my life—insofar as I can figure it—is to make it more expensive for me to play and hence make it easier to spend nights reading.

Thus with 2,500 points scored by a grand slam, my customary losses—at a tenth of a cent—will be sufficient to cure me.

Sifting the Manuscripts
 Only a producer knows the number of bad, fair and middling plays that are being turned out in the cities and countryside. Thus George Tyler revived a last year's opus after all but tossing up his hands. This son of Chillecothe, O., has read 1000 manuscripts thus far this season and has found but two that he even considered. However, many a big league producer has let a prize package slip through his fingers. The outstanding example, at the moment, is "Another Language," which goes on-and-on although turned down by almost everyone in town and finally snapped up by an unknown to Broadway—Arthur Backhard—for a little theater group.

Gillette's Retirement
 William Gillette, although often rumored as threatening to take "Sherlock Holmes" out of storage again for one more round of the circuits, appears actually to have retired to his suburban estate. This time, I hear, he actually means it. Gillette's particular playthings on his huge place are cats, Japanese servants and a pigmy railroad. The railroad, drawn by an electric engine winds in and out of the grounds, goes through tunnels and performs similar stunts. The cats have been gathered from many corners of the globe and the Japanese are valets, servants, etc. GILBERT SWAN.

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD—IT PAYS

Health and Diet Advice
 By Dr. Frank McCoy

CORRECTING CROSSED EYES

During the first few weeks of life babies may appear somewhat cross-eyed because they have not yet learned to control their optic muscles; however, such squints should have disappeared entirely by the time the baby is four or five months old. After this age mothers should not allow the defect to remain uncorrected. Most cases of true crossed eyes occur between the ages of three and ten. Fortunately, these cases usually respond readily to correction. At the first appearance of crossed eyes a competent optometrist should be consulted because an occasional turning of one eye may easily, and usually does, become a constant deviation.

There are three principal types of crossed eyes. The most frequently encountered is the convergent squint; that is, one eye turns toward the nose while the other remains in the normal position. Differing from this is the divergent squint, where one eye turns out while the other remains straight. The third type is the alternating squint, differing from the other two in that the deviation may alternate from one eye to the other.

Although there are many causes of crossed eyes, the most prevalent are uncorrected far-sightedness and astigmatism. A far-sighted eye requires extra nerve strain to focus properly and an astigmatic eye, being unequal in curvature, puts an unusual strain on the muscles and nerves controlling the focusing apparatus. Another possible cause is unequal vision; that is, one eye may have such poor vision that it cannot co-ordinate in the normal act of seeing with the good eye. Other possible causes are nervous diseases, epilepsy, paralysis of one or more of the eye muscles, injury to the head and spine, and brain disorders.

Fortunately, most cases are not pathological in character and are amenable to corrective treatment either by glasses, eye exercises, or both. Operations on the eye muscles are often resorted to in order to improve the appearance, but the results from the "visual standpoint" are not as satisfactory.

The most important part is that the two eyes be taught to work together. The optometrist is especially valuable because he stresses the action of fusion, or single vision. Where one eye has borne the burden of doing most of the accurate seeing, it is important that the eyes be taught to co-operate for the perception of depth or stereoscopic vision. This highly developed visual function cannot be appreciated by a one-eyed individual; hence it adds greatly to the efficiency of a person if he has this function developed to its highest degree. Many people who have crossed eyes, or even defective eyesight, have a poorly developed sense of perspective and cannot accurately judge distances.

The treatment of crossed eyes, while interesting, is, nevertheless, very complex in all its phases. As there is no set procedure for handling a given case, the resourcefulness of the optometrist, as well as the cooperation of the patient, is of the utmost importance for successful results. Even though it may require some time, non-surgical treatment usually brings about the most permanent improvement.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
 (Eyebrow Plucking Not Harmful)
 Question: C. E. L. writes: "Will you please tell me if plucking the eyebrows is injurious."
 Answer: The fact that plucking the eyebrows is such a common practice among women today proves that there is nothing harmful in it. One must be very careful to allow an infection to start. Ordinary precautions in regard to cleanliness of the skin before and after plucking, and using tweezers which are clean, should avoid any possibility of infection.

 "THE TORCH BEARERS" FRIDAY EVENING

ROCKVILLE

AUDIENCE FILLS CHURCH TO HEAR MISS KELLER

Famous Blind and Deaf Leader Addresses Meeting in Rockville Sunday Evening.

Rockville gave the Helen Keller meeting at the Rockville Union church on Sunday evening an audience that jammed the auditorium and chapel of the church. Standing room was hardly available and the doors were closed to many who desired admittance. It was estimated there were at least 3,000 people in attendance to hear the famous deaf and blind woman known as the greatest apostle of achievement, who was speaking on behalf of the American Foundation of the Blind. The meeting was sponsored by the Rockville Methodist and Union Congregational churches at the sixth in a series of union services. The Rockville Lions club, with Alfred Rosenberg, president, as chairman, acted as the reception committee. There was a large staff of ushers in charge of Robert Gregus, one of the young workers of Union Congregational church.

The auditorium was filled with adults, over 18 years of age, and the chapel has a seating capacity of one hundred, it was arranged at the eleventh hour to allow children from the ages of 12 to 18 admittance. This is unusual and only met with approval with those in charge of the Helen Keller visit when Rev. George S. Brookes and Rev. C. E. Johnson stated they would open the chapel for this purpose, thus not interfering with the auditorium audience. Children here, however, were more fortunate than those in other places where Miss Helen Keller has visited.

All ministers in the city and surrounding towns were represented at the service. Rev. George S. Brookes, pastor of the meeting and Rev. C. E. Johnson, pastor of the Rockville C. E. church introduced Charles Hayes, field director of the foundation, who spoke briefly of the work of the foundation and people. Miss Keller led the audience in singing. Her hand started and ended accurately with the music which came only in vibrations.

When Miss Keller took the stand she was greeted with loud applause. She appeared with Miss Polly Thompson, the interpreter, who familiarized the audience with Miss Keller's manner of receiving impressions before the latter delivered any remarks. Miss Keller placed her thumb on the hymn and two fingers on Miss Thompson's lips and on the instant read off what Miss Thompson was saying. Miss Keller was vibrant with good nature, eager and emotional. Her easy smile and rich chuckle inspired slowly into the hearts of her audience.

Mrs. May Chapman Holt, organist of Union church, rendered selections while the people were assembling. A quintet furnished a splendid musical program. It was a most inspiring service. The splendid work of Miss Keller, together with her pleasing personality and unlimited service to the foundation for the blind, has won for her a place in the hearts of people all over the world.

May Change Tax Date
A recommendation that the date of collecting taxes be changed to the first of the fiscal year, November 15, will be made at the annual meeting to be held in December by the Finance Committee. The proposed change is to save much of the interest money, amounting to from $500 to $2,000 which the city pays for temporary loans until the taxes are collected.

Another suggestion is that the city continue to collect its taxes bi-monthly, as at present, but that for several years it raise an additional one mill tax to be used as a reserve fund, and that the city in that way, within several years would be able to borrow from its own funds and save interest charges.

Fined for Speeding
Wessils Middaugh, 28, of Mansfield, was before Judge John E. Fisk in the Rockville Police Court on Saturday morning on charges of violation of the motor vehicle laws. He was speeding. He was fined $10 and costs of the court. Middaugh was arrested on Friday night by the State Police.

Before the animal could be removed another automobile driven by a Rockville woman ran over the animal. The car became stalled over the body of the horse. Passing motorists assisted in removing the car so as the woman could continue on her way. No arrests have been made.

ASK HELP OF LIBERALS

New York, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has issued a call to what he called the young, liberal elements in the Republican Party to take over the reins of that party.

Columbia University president, in a statement yesterday, said that unless that is done the party will go the way of the Whig Party "and will soon pass out of existence because of its incapacity to face the future with understanding and courage."

He advocated a program which would include the loosening of the grip on government by "every form of private or group interest," a balanced budget, retention by the people of the remaining natural resources, removal of high tariff barriers to international trade, readjustment of war debts, a study of the world monetary system and the gold standard, and general cooperation by all nations.

Dr. Butler for years has been a prominent Republican.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

The officers of the council are now working on plans for the annual meeting to be held in December. St. James' church is reported as co-sponsoring a Cub Pack Success to you.

Scoutmasters and scribes, please! It is the desire of the council to have a weekly column in this paper, and it can be done only through your support. Place the report of your meeting in the box in House's store, so kindly furnished for such a purpose, as soon after your meeting as possible, but not later than noon Saturday of the same week. We will get the co-operation of all the Troops, Sea Scouts, and Cub Packs in Manchester? We hope so.

Troop No. 1
Troop No. 1 held its regular meeting Monday evening at the Second Congregational church. After the meeting had been opened, the older scouts helped to decorate the church parlor for the annual fair. The younger scouts spent their time preparing saluted messages for the sale. A scout booth was a decided success, all the popcorn and peanuts available were disposed of. The compliments go to Assistant Scoutmaster Smith, and Junior Assistant Elliott.

Troop No. 6
From October 28 to 30th, Troop No. 6 enjoyed one of the most successful hikes in its history. The hike was held at the Salvation Army camp on Coventry Lake, under the leadership of our new Scoutmaster, Joseph Dean, and Francis Moriarty. The scouts attending the hike were Russell Stevenson, Herbert Maguire, Ray Irwin, Bill Haugh, Joe Schoen, Tom Wippert, Frank Sheldon, Harry Howroyd, Woodrow Trotter, and Albert Brown. The supper was cooked by aid of lantern light over a blazing wood fire in the fireplace. After supper we took a short hike, and on our return had a good feed of popcorn and candy. Dean read a conundrum from a book found at the camp. About ten o'clock we turned in, and for a while silence reigned, but was soon broken when the air became filled with flying pillows and old shoes. The disturbance soon quieted, and we dropped off to sleep.

Up bright and early Saturday we enjoyed a good breakfast of bacon and eggs cooked by Chef's Dean and Moriarty. After breakfast we played a game of football in which Tom Wippert and Joe Schoen were stars. After the game we helped a man pick apples this being our good turn for the day. For dinner we had hunter's stew, and of course a Rockyville woman for you had to hunt for the meat in it. After dinner the dumb-bell was presented to Albert Brown, who in turn gave it to Harry Howroyd. They were named First Honorary Member and First Honorary President of the First Order of the Dumbbell. After supper we took a hike down to the village to buy candy and camp provisions. We turned in early, but as on the previous night a pillow fight disturbed our sleep.

Monday morning, after another good breakfast, we policed the grounds. Later some of the boys went nutting, but without much success. Before we knew it dinner-time had arrived, and then before long three o'clock came and time to break camp and return to Manchester. A good time was reported by all.

Cub Pack No. 4
Pack No. 4, of the Center Congregational church, met Friday with 28 cub Scouts and two officers present. The opening ceremonies were given by Denner Allan Coe after which a game period of "Oddities" under the supervision of Assistant Cubmaster Irwin was enjoyed. Later in the meeting Cubmaster Charles Lynn led the pack in a game called "Characters," some of the cubs played as Frankie Busch, Charles Chaplin, Sam Turkington, Skippy, and others. A story was read illustrating how a boy's observation, deduction, kind heartedness and civility, solved a brutal murder. Roberts was elected to the Dumb-bell Club by an overwhelming vote. Denner Wilson led the Pack in the Grand Howl, after which the meeting closed.

Pack No. 4 had a good turn out in the Arrivides parade, having 24 cubs present with 21 in uniform. The De. rs of the Pack voted at their meeting to hold a Thanksgiving party on November 23rd. The cubs will hear more from their leader later. Cubs are again reminded that until further notice, meetings will be held on Wednesday nights.

TRIAL POSTPONED

New York, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Trial of Conrad H. Mann, director general of the Eagles and president of the Kansas-City, Mo., Chamber of Commerce, on Federal lottery charges, was postponed today until November 28.

Federal prosecutors said that retrial of United States Senator James J. Davis on similar charges, also set for November 28, would have to set over to await the end of the Mann trial.

Mann's co-defendants are Fred E. Hering, editor of the Eagles Magazine; Bernard C. McGuire and Raymond Walsh. The latter two are also co-defendants with Davis who is director general of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Davis went before a jury alone during his campaign for reelection to the Senate, but the hearing was declared a mistrial because of the irregular conduct of a juror.

BELIEVE EIGHT DROWNED

Miami, Fla., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Eight persons reported missing after venturing out in small boats in Biscayne Bay yesterday were being sought today by Coast Guard patrol boats and passing planes of the Pan American Airways.

Those missing included L. C. Snider, manager of a bakery goods distributing company; L. V. Reed, salesman-driver for Snider, and Mrs. Reed, and an unidentified woman. They left at noon yesterday in a 24-foot motorboat for a fishing trip in the lower bay waters.

In a sail boat reported missing were Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Roberts, a man named Babcock and a fourth unidentified person. Little was known about this party, but Coast Guard officers said they understood the group had also planned to cruise in lower bay waters.

COFFEE PRICES
New York, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Futures in Colombian coffee were admitted to trading in the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange for the first time today.

The new contract, to be known as contract "41" opened with a transfer for December delivery at 10 cents a pound. This was somewhat above the Brazilian Santos coffee, which traded for December delivery at 9.15 to 9.13 cents a pound.

Colombia has expanded its coffee production in recent years. It was backed by the disastrous Brazilian restriction attempts of a few years ago. The Brazilian product, however, continues to fill the bulk of American coffee requirements.

WEEP AND MURDER

GABRIELLE FORBISH

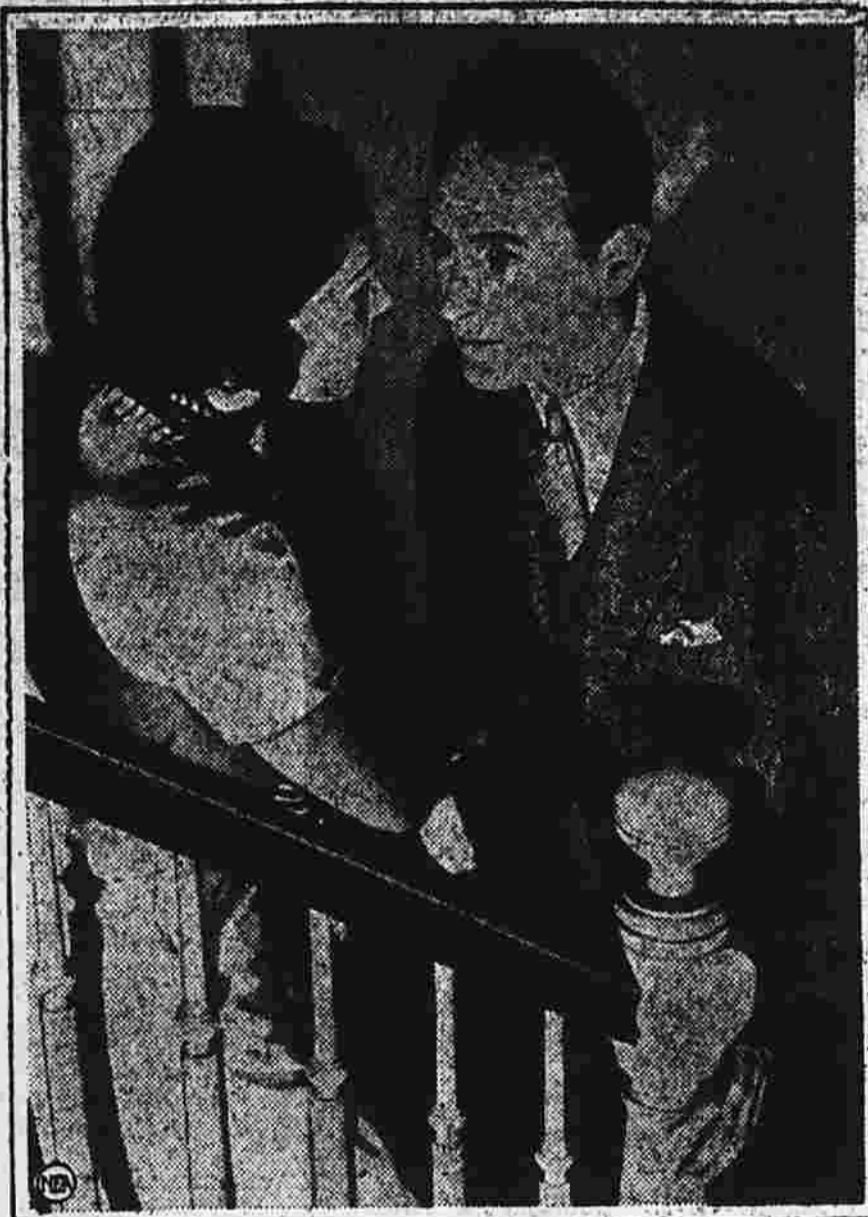

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The story opens with a prologue in which a murder is committed by a homicidal maniac. Later he boards a train for Long Island, thinking of the pleasant week-end he is to have there. The name of the murderer is not disclosed.

The scene shifts to the Long Island home of LINDA and TOM AYERBELL, married three years and much in love. Linda announces that instead of three guests over the week-end there are to have five. The guests will be: COUSIN AMOS FEABODY, elderly, distant relative of Linda's who was in New York on business and invited himself to visit the Ayerbells; CAPTAIN DE VOS, handsome Belgian representing a European perfume manufacturer with whom Ayerbell hopes to do business; MR. STATLANDER, middle-aged manager of the firm Ayerbell works for; MARVIN PRATT former suitor of Linda's whom she has not seen for several years, and LIAN SHAUGHNESSY, Irish writer on a lecture tour.

Immediately there is trouble. Cousin Amos grows angry at Bunty, a faithful old watchdog. At dinner he quarrels with Shaughnessy and calls him a dangerous rebel for defending Gandhi's work in India. Both men show violent temper.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Before Linda knew how she got there she was beside him and had her hand on his arm. "Tom," she cried, "what is it?"

CHAPTER

Sure in the knowledge that the new lavender sports frock was a triumph of sophisticated simplicity, that her mellow tan brought out bewitchingly the blue of her eyes and the bronze lights of her hair, and feeling decidedly refreshed by a good night's sleep, Linda stepped with blithe freshness down the broad polished stairs. The air was fragrant of fresh roasted coffee within the house and mingled flowers and sea from without. She hoped none of her guests was before her. She had arranged for trays for the two Europeans; the others had assumed her the would descend for breakfast. At any rate, Tom was down to do the honors until she arrived.

At the bottom of the winding flight she suddenly saw her husband and his expression annihilated in a second her casual morning mood. Before Linda knew how she got there she was beside him and had her hand on his arm.

"Tom—what is it? Bingo?"

"No. Oh, no honey—not the kid. Sorry I scared you!"

"What has happened?"

"Poor old Bunty!"

"Oh! Linda's eyes filled with tears. "Died in her sleep, poor old dog. Well—we didn't expect—"

Tom looked at her, hesitated, then spoke reluctantly.

"No—she didn't die in her sleep, Bunty. Don't raise a row, though, of course, you didn't hear—"

"Tell me quick—someone's coming!"

"She was killed during the night. Out on the lawn toward the garage."

"Tom! The poor old dog! Where is she?"

His jaw set.

"Where you won't see her, Linda. Sorry, but you mustn't—oh, good morning, Mr. Statlander! I hope you rested well last night. Glad we have such clear weather for the Fourth."

He was talking, Linda knew, to give her time to cover herself and in a moment she was able to echo mechanically his pleasant banalities.

"I think breakfast is ready," she said. "If you men will excuse me a moment, I'll see. Take Mr. Statlander into the breakfast room, Tom. I'll just pop into the kitchen."

She bolted, deliberately leaving the door and stood a second or two in the short, cool passage. She wanted oh, how she wanted, to run upstairs and fling herself childishly across her bed and cry. That poor old dog, that darling Bunty! Tom was so mysterious, so enigmatic, so unaccountable. Resolutely she put her thoughts on the important, controlling details of her house-wifely duties.

The girls in the kitchen greeted her dejectedly. Stat Amos, queen of the moment, had called the service door and stood a second or two in the short, cool passage. She wanted oh, how she wanted, to run upstairs and fling herself childishly across her bed and cry. That poor old dog, that darling Bunty! Tom was so mysterious, so enigmatic, so unaccountable. Resolutely she put her thoughts on the important, controlling details of her house-wifely duties.

after when a slam of the screen door announced an arrival and Lian Shaughnessy, bearing his breakfast tray, appeared with the smiling, guileless face of a schoolboy.

"Oh, you shouldn't have bothered, Mr. Shaughnessy! Rosie would have collected that!"

"Sure and it was no bother to save the girl the trip," he asserted blithely. "And 'twas a thought for her and two for myself at that. A bit of my breakfast muffin saved, you see, to propitiate the wee white monster that set upon me in the dark last night as I entered my temporary abode. It took a lick that I'm sorry I made so lusty, this morning, to free me from the little beast's attentions. I'd have made my peace of bribed my way across the grass, at least, but I didn't encounter the little dog at all."

"I'm sorry, Bunty troubled you last night," said Tom soberly. "She is—she was something of a watchdog but I never knew her so suspicious before. I'd have shut her up or sent her away yesterday if I'd known she was going to persecute our guests. I—I wish I had, for her sake, as well as for all of ours," he went on, realizing that there was no use avoiding mention of what must seem to all these strangers, a minor domestic tragedy. "Bunty would be either any of you any more. She died in the night."

"Ah—distemper?" Cousin Amos looked rather alarmed. "Perhaps that accounts. Will you have her—I understand they test the brain—"

"She wasn't mad and she won't be examined," Tom broke in savagely. "The old dog was simply mangled to atoms, Cousin Amos, on the very lawn Mr. Shaughnessy speaks of some time after we all went to bed."

An outburst of startled exclamations interrupted him.

"For mean, deliberately killed?"

"'Poor little devil!'" "Did you say there'd been burglars?"

"Deliberately killed—no, traces—and there have been burglars operating around these parts since the summer home began opening in the spring. It may be—"

"The Irishman's voice vibrated with the rich, sentimental tenderness of his race. "I'm sorry for that kick—I am that!"

Tom glared at him. He knew the little dog had not deserved such rough treatment and now especially he could not forgive it.

"You—you couldn't help it," Linda tried to palliate the sin. "She did move quickly for an old dog, sometimes, and you must have been surprised—"

"We both were!" Shaughnessy laughed with the hearty abandon of the easily amused and then checked himself at his host's glance of disapproval.

"I'll be back in a moment—" said they heard any noises or disturbance last night."

"Of course, probably every one—except the one who did it—went right off to sleep. I know I did."

"Did I? But Linda—"

"What?"

"Shaughnessy didn't go over to the garage by himself. I walked along the roadway with him and stood right at the edge of the grass until he went in the door. I didn't see Bunty there."

"They looked at each other.

"He must have come out afterwards. And he must have thought someone heard him or he wouldn't have taken pains to mention the kick. He really sort of dragged that in, Tom."

"Probably he wasn't sleepy, and just wanted to roam about."

"Um! There was a wealth of incredulity in the grim avowal.

"Well, what ought we to do?"

"Nothing," my dear. Absolutely nothing! What can we do—interrogate him or any of the others?"

"No, no, suppose not. But, oh, Tommy, this gang is queer. There's something in the air—I told you last night—"

"Now you're having what the Victorians called the vapors. A sensible lid like you, Binks! I'm ashamed. Come on—we must go down. Ready?"

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

DIETING, LIKE MISERY, LOVES COMPANY

Misery isn't the only thing that loves company.

If you're starting to diet, or treat your hair, or put yourself through a course of sprouts in exercising, why not sign up your girl friend or your sister to do the same.

You'll find that having someone else committed to the same amount of exertion, or the same self-denial of food, or the same number of brush strokes on your hair by night, gives you just the moral stamina you may need to carry on.

For the biggest single stumbling block to beauty is lack of continuity in treatments. Haven't you yourself bought an expensive jar of cream or a manicure set or a hair tonic, resolving to spend a half hour every night towards beautifying and then weaken about the third night? Everybody has!

Don't be discouraged but do see if you can't fortify yourself by getting a partner in beauty treatments. You'll find that you hate to admit that you're just a weak woman who can't stick to a schedule. You'll go a lot farther toward carrying out your original plan.

Sometimes a little competition with a friend spurs you on. Suppose you both tackle a diet at the same time. Put up a supper on who loses the larger number of pounds within a month. Let the winner eat a dinner cooked by the loser, or go to a matinee on tickets bought by the loser.

Why not talk over a plan with your girl friend for devoting a half hour every night to beauty. Lay out a schedule of so many brushes to the hair, so many strokes massaging the face, so many minutes to your nails. You'll find yourself much more punctilious. You'll enjoy the results more, too, when you can admire each other.

Only old-fashioned folks think perspiration is a summer problem.

What with our over-heated homes and offices and this winter's vogue for woollens that are quite as warm as heavy woollens used to be, curbing perspiration is one of the most modern and up-to-date problems.

As a matter of fact, it shouldn't be a problem. Any woman who takes a little trouble can check this problem nicely. If you tell me you can't I'll answer that you haven't really tried.

First, the biggest factor in failure to check perspiration is that it no longer ruins dresses and makes you squirm for fear your best friends are going to detect it. It is inability to follow directions on the preparations you buy for this specific purpose.

There is an excellent liquid, but you mustn't use it with soap. Moreover, you must use it several nights and a milder variety daytimes. There is a little gadget like a lip-stick that is efficacious. There are many deodorant powders. Newest and best of the age is a successful cream and powder combination. You can use one, the other or both!

If you are bothered with perspiration, here are a few suggestions:

Don't wear the same dress two days in succession. Change and let the other one air thoroughly, preferably in front of an open window or out on the covered porch.

Shave under the arms once a week. This often prevents that perspiration odor.

Get one deodorant. Follow directions perfectly, and give it a fair chance to help you. I am sure it will!

How to Keep Well by World Famous Authorities

PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED CHILD SHOULD NOT SPARE PAINFUL

Strain Likely to Inhibit Further Growth

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The child who is physically handicapped has to try much harder to accomplish any task than does a normal child. Therefore, there is always danger that such a child will be overtaxed, and it must be carefully guarded against this possibility.

There are so many children who have grades of illness of a mild character, sufficient to constitute a serious handicap, but, at the same time, hardly of sufficient severity to incapacitate the child completely.

Children with tuberculosis, with asthma, or with hay fever, and those convalescing from influenza, from pneumonia, or similar conditions have so much difficulty in breathing and in accomplishing the activity of the lungs to the demands made on them that they should be given special consideration in play and in school.

The child with a mild defect of the heart may be able to carry on its work about as well as other children and should certainly not be classified as a crippled child, but at the same time it is working under a severe handicap.

It is vitality is likely to be exhausted sooner than is that of the normal child. It is compelled to put forth more energy to accomplish a given result.

The more fatigue the more the possibility of strain on the heart muscle leading to further damage. It must be recognized that the child who has sustained an infection of the heart leading to illness is likely to have repeated infections which come on sometimes without warning and which invariably leave increased disability.

The child who suffers from any disturbance of its blood may also have to have special attention in school. There is first the group that has hemophilia, an hereditary disease with a tendency to bleed; and second, the group that has hemorrhagic purpura, which bruises easily and bleeds seriously following any wound.

The child in either one of these classes may be seriously affected by an injury so slight that it hardly disturbs in any way a normal child.

A BOOK A DAY

BY BRUCE CATTON

HE HAD A SPEAR AND HE USED IT TO KILL TIGERS

Hero of "Tiger Man" Seems To Be the World's Most Amazing Hunter.

Sacha Siemel lived by choice in the depth of the Brazilian jungle because he preferred solitude to civilization, and he made his living chiefly by hunting the jungle's huge jaguars, called "tigers" by the inhabitants. He killed them with a spear, in hand-to-hand combat, or arrows; and he had, altogether, enough adventures to satisfy a dozen ordinary men.

You can read all about him in "Tiger Man," by Julian Fugilde, which you read this author's "Green Hell" last year, you'll grab off "Tiger Man" without being told to; if you didn't, I can only tell you that it is authentic adventure stuff at its best.

Siemel was born in Latvia, and in his early youth he set out to see the world.

Going to South America, he followed divers occupations; he worked in a foundry, he became a mechanic, he was a farm hand, he was a silversmith's assistant, and finally went to the jungle because he liked to be off by himself.

And "Tiger Man" is not simply a story of adventure; it is also a story of a man who was able to weigh things in the balance and turn his back on civilization and find nourishment for his spirit close to nature.

Incidentally, once you read about this amazing hunter, you'll never again be awed by the ordinary "big game" hunter.

Published by the Century Co. "Tiger Man" sells for $3.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton, BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

One thing that I think a mother would be wise to cultivate in her children is the habit of coming to her and telling those things that are really worrying them—of mortifying themselves.

As a matter of fact a child will go to a mother with most of his troubles, or she will guess anyway. The things he will not tell her are the things he is ashamed of.

There are two many happenings of no great importance in themselves, or with perfectly natural causes, that lead and eat into the hearts of children for years. To an older person they are often funny, but to the children themselves they take on the proportion of real tragedy.

I am going back to my own childhood and relate a few of the things that left an indelible mark on me. As I look back I think what a dear price I paid for not emptying my heart to my mother then. She could have saved me those terrible "secrets" that often made me unhappy to illness.

Childish Worries, But Deep

One time I was sent to the store for a quart of milk. It was five cents, for milk was cheap in those days. I had a quarter and laid it on the counter and walked out. They were busy and didn't call me back, probably not noticing that the coin on the counter was too much.

I was home a long time before I remembered that I should have had some change. Carelessness! Should I tell my mother that I had not put the twenty cents back in her purse? I never went back to the store, for there was a cross old storekeeper and I knew he wouldn't give me the money.

I weighed the matter for days, unhappy, worried. No one said anything and I let it go. But for months I nursed the idea that I was a liar and a cheat. It seems to me now that I would be wise to cultivate in my children the habit of coming to her and telling those things that are really worrying them—of mortifying themselves.

The business man's associations, Commissioner Mulrooney and his police and others do what they can to discourage the racketeers, but they keep coming—coming with "bigger and better" articles. Pretty soon they'll be offering to furnish your home for you, right out of the little brown bag.

The infinite variety of articles now offered by sidewalk peddlers in the midtown section is something to marvel at. No longer are their sales efforts confined to grotesque balloons, mechanical toys and tin watches that won't run. They have branched out into the hardware business, trade in "useful" household goods, foodstuffs and notions.

Some of the pushcart men from the lower east side probably are responsible for this diversification. Trade wasn't so good for them downtown any more, and so they

CAREY CHAMPION DRIVER OF AUTOS

Indiana Man Wins Crown Although He Finished Second in Oklahoma Race.

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Bob Carey, Anderson, Ind., today wore the crown emblematic of the 1932 National A. A. A. automobile race driving championship.

Although he finished only second in the 150-mile classic at Oakland Speedway yesterday, his previous point standing was sufficient to give him the title over William "Wild Bill" Cummings, of Indianapolis, who piloted his car to first place in one hour, 39 minutes, 20.45 seconds.

Ernie Triplett, Los Angeles, followed Carey across the finish line, while Maurie Rose, Dayton, Ohio, was fourth; Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis, fifth; and Al Gordon, Los

SENSE AND NONSENSE

Now is the accepted time to overhaul the old room stove, tighten up its shackles, bolts, renew a couple of bearings,inker with the carburetor, and see that the coal his accumulates something besides dust.

Easy in a Traffic Jam.
The curfew tells the knell of parting day.
A line of cars winds slowly o'er the sea.
A pedestrian plods his absent-minded way.
And leaves the world quite unexpectedly.

Neighbor—What happened to your car, old man?
Man—Aw, one of these darned culvert posts ran into it.

The little nibe was riding with the family of Perkins when Mr. Perkins asked for road directions at a filling station.

Attendant—Go east until you hit the gravel, then north to the next town.
After having driven a few miles a piece of gravel was thrown against the window by a passing car.

Niece (speaking up from the back seat)—Now we hit the gravel, didn't we?

A woman who is learning to drive a car was asked if it made her nervous. She replied: "Goodness, yes, I ran over a white cat and thought it was a cow."

Two great dangers to night driving on the highways continue unabated: The dazzling headlight and the case-eyed car. Some cars seem to be equipped with searchlights instead of legal lights. These powerful searchlights are a menace to every driver they meet. Yes, there is a law against dazzling headlights but who can remember a prosecution under the law?

Officer—Hey there, don't jam up traffic? Why don't you use your needle?
Sweet Young Thing—I didn't know the car had one.

Speed!
A Milwaukee, Wisconsin, woman broke the speed laws, and a judge broke the laws in speeding her to jail—at least that is what she alleged.

However, the courts may finally decide she is typical of Americans. They would rather "get there" and wait than arrive on time. They like the thrill of speed—and this causes more than a third of automobile casualties.

An English editor who recently came to this country for a visit later told his readers that American cars are "speed crazy." They are and have been for some time. The fact accounts in some measure for the depression.

Speed is filling the hospitals and the insane asylums. It is rendering futile the efforts of science to prolong the average human life. It is, creating business and knocking the profit out of life insurance. Speed has become to be a vice for which there may be no remedy other than speedy application of the penalties of the law.

Observation.
Things sure appear to be lean; Times worse than we've ever seen; Talk, baggie and worry, They continue to buy gasoline.

A man says he feels sure he always has his car under control when he has his wife in the back seat.

Anyway, when they take all the trains of there won't be so many grade crossing accidents.

He was at the fountain pen counter making a purchase.
He—You see, I'm buying this for my wife.
Clerk—A surprise, eh?
He—Y'll say so. She is expecting a Chrysler.
