

FOUR DRINK TOAST IN CARBOLIC; 2 DIE

Card Party At Bissell Street Home Ends In Tragedy As Contents of Wrong Bottle Are Poured and Drunk; Man Who Made Mistake Is First To Die.

A deadly toast, drunk by four friends last night at the home of Ignatz Servo, 73 Bissell street, resulted in the death late last night of Theodore Alici, 41, of 83 Bissell street and George Struff, 67, of 87 Summer street. The poison was carbolic acid, mistaken for whiskey.

The fatalities resulted from a party held last night at the home of Ignatz Servo where the men and their wives had met to consume some food left over from a church social club gathering held Sunday. The women made coffee preparatory to the party in the kitchen, according to the report given by the police, playing cards. A small quantity of sweet cider had been served when Alici suddenly remarked to the other men that "he had something to drink over at his house."

In the meantime, Servo had prepared four small golden-rimmed glasses and when Alici laid the graduated bottle of liquor on the table, he picked it up and poured it into a glass decanter which he had brought with the glasses and immediately poured out the four drinks Mrs. Servo was in the kitchen at the time and saw Alici take the coffee for the women, gave an interesting account of what took place.

"The men had been served sweet cider which my husband brought from his house," Mrs. Servo told a Herald reporter today. "Then Mr. Alici told them that he had something to drink in his house and went over to get it. He brought the bottle back and laid it on the table and my husband, who got the glasses and decanter, poured the contents of the bottle into the de-

Los Angeles, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Now the holder of three major air speed records, Colonel Roscoe Turner says he does not expect to try another coast-to-coast flight until next spring.

Colonel Turner, yesterday added a new east-west transcontinental record to his list when he flew from New York to Burbank, a Los Angeles suburb, in 12 hours and 38 minutes, breaking Lieutenant Commander Frank Hawks' record by 2 hours, 17 minutes. Turner also holds records for flights from Los Angeles to Mexico City and a round trip between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

On the east-west flight Colonel Turner averaged 298 miles an hour over the 2,450 miles. He had planned to attempt a round trip air speed record but was frustrated because of a tire blowout at Columbus, O., on the flight east Saturday.

Too Cold To Fly "I'm all through flying across the country now until next spring," he said. "It's getting too cold and the weather is certainly rough."

Turner twice has taken the east-west speed mark from Hawks in a rivalry that dates back to 1928. Hawks first set it in 19 hours, 10 minutes, then bowed to Turner's 18 hours, 30 minutes. Hawks then set a time of 14 hours, 50 minutes.

Madison Wis., Nov. 15.—(AP)—A plot to kidnap Frank Lloyd Wright, internationally famous architect, was disclosed today with the information that Madison police were seeking the author of a threatening letter delivered to Wright at his home near Spring Green on Nov. 5.

Wright was in New York. He will return this weekend. A friend said Wright would be accompanied by a personal bodyguard and that a close watch would be kept at Tallien.

The ransom note was postmarked Madison, Nov. 4. It demanded that a sum of money be deposited at an appointed place and declared that the architect would be abducted and held for ransom if he failed to comply. It also threatened Wright with harm if he notified police. The instructions in the note were ignored.

The letter was signed "Committee of Vigilantes." The police believed that the sender was someone who either knew Wright through personal contact or had read extensively from his biographies.

New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Josephine, the bambina of Giacinto household, is dead; but despite the horror of her death, and the sadness, her passing has been something beautiful.

The city of New York did what it could. The efforts of its doctors were futile. The child died, and the City hospital sent its cold, formal telegram of notification to Silvio Giacinto. That, too, was tragedy, for the Giacintos did not have 27 cents to pay for the telegram.

The neighbors managed that twenty-seven cents is not so easy these days down here on East 112th street, but they managed.

TO RE-CANVASS VOTE CAST IN NEW LONDON

New London, Nov. 15.—(AP)—James Harkins, master moderator in the election last Tuesday, today ordered a re-canvass of the votes recorded on the voting machines here.

Announcing his intentions Mr. Harkins said he was satisfied that there had been a discrepancy in some of the figures submitted to him by the five ward moderators and in order to remove any question he was going to have a re-count. The voting machines are to be opened for a recount at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

One claim of a discrepancy is in the vote for congressman from the Second District. Friends of William C. Fox of this city, Democratic candidate, contend that there is a discrepancy in the total vote for this office inasmuch as 301 less votes were cast for this office than were cast in the election here. Friends of Judge S. Victor Prince, candidate for judge of probate on both major tickets, contended that the figures were erroneous in showing him to be running about 100 votes behind his ticket on the Republican side.

Judge Prince was elected without opposition but the count indicates that he received nearly 500 less votes than was cast. This, it is contended, is due to a discrepancy.

INSULL JR., TRIED TO AVERT CRASH

Son of Power Magnate Explains What Steps Were Taken By Financiers.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Samuel Insull, Jr., told in Federal Court today of the futile steps he took a year ago to persuade New York and Chicago bankers to "go along" with Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and corporation securities company to tide them over until loans could be paid and receivership avoided.

He told of conferences with officials of banks that loaned millions of dollars to the two now bankrupt firms. The hearing sought to determine whether there were possible hidden assets.

"In December of 1931," said young Insull, "I received $70,000 from the proceeds of 'go along' companies," "we decided the point was being reached where, because of declining market values, the company could not continue to post collateral for the bank loans."

Insull said officials of the financing companies, including his father, Samuel Insull, Sr., now facing extradition from Greece on charges of embezzlement and larceny in connection with the collapse of his $2,000,000, utilities company, delegated him to confer with the banks.

His instructions, he said, were to obtain agreement of the banks not to sell collateral held at security for loans. The collateral consisted of stock in underlying utility operating companies and two financing companies. Dumping of the stock held by the banks would have had a serious effect on the market, he said.

Insull, Jr., said he visited five Chicago banks on Dec. 15 and officials of each indicated they would adhere to a "standstill" agreement if the New York banks holding loans would do likewise. The bankers he told of seeing included Herman Wadick, president of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Company, and Philip R. Clark, president of the Central Republic Bank and Trust Company (now the City National Bank of Chicago) of which General Charles G. Dawes was chairman of the board.

Brazauskas was told today of the girl's death as he suffers a relapse and an attack of pneumonia after the accident.

CATHOLIC CONFERENCE

Providence, R. I., Nov. 15.—(AP)—Brevity was the keynote in "our economic order, which the men of wisdom and good will realize must be remedied. If individual and common welfare are to be made secure" are prime fruits of the depression, declared Most Rev. William A. Hickey, D.D., bishop of Providence, in opening a Catholic conference on industrial problems here today. Noted educators, industrial and labor leaders were among the 1000 persons attending the opening session.

BICYCLE INJURED

New Britain, Nov. 15.—(AP)—A man believed to be Alfred Oulak, aged about 50, of 81 Smith street, is in a critical condition at New Britain General hospital as a result of a collision between the bicycle he was riding and a large truck at the intersection of Broad and Smith streets this afternoon. He rode down Smith street, fell at the intersection, was thrown into the truck driven by Joseph Roy, 38, of 78 Beaver street. Hospital authorities do not expect Oulak to survive.

center, and filled the four wine glasses. Ken To Slink "With the toast, 'Here's looking at you'—or something like that," Mrs. Servo continued, "the four men drank the liquor. I was standing near the sink at the time, making coffee for the women in the other room. The four men rushed to the sink for water. I did not think anything was wrong at first, as I thought they were after water for a 'chaser.' Then I saw foam gathering on the lips of the men and their lips getting white. After that all was confusion."

Doctors Called Dr. Thomas Weldon and Dr. N. A. Burr were called and a half-dozen telephones in the neighborhood sent emergency calls to the Manchester Memorial hospital. The doctor who could be obtained—the police doctor, the hospital, ambulances while the frantic women tried suggested emetics and antidotes until the arrival of the doctors.

Realized Mistake Allici, meanwhile, sensing something was wrong, ran over to his house followed by his wife. He was reported to have said: "God, I made a mistake—I took the wrong bottle, as he lapsed into unconsciousness," he said. Servo home the host and Ambrose had been partially successful in vomiting the acid solution, but Struff, the eldest of the party, could not remove the liquid from his stomach. Finally, Struff's face became blue and he became unconscious but was taken in Quinlan's ambulance to the Manchester Memorial hospital.

Dr. Thomas Weldon who had arrived gave Allici emergency treatment and shortly afterwards Allici was taken to the Memorial hospital on the return trip of Quinlan's ambulance. Stomach pumps were applied at the hospital but in the case of Allici, who had become unconscious, treatment was unsuccessful. He died at 10:15 without regaining consciousness. Struff's condition became worse and Dr. Burr and the other physicians did everything possible, but the patient's recovery was a factor combating recovery was a factor at 11:59 surrounded by members of his family.

The attending physicians had been busy in removing the poison from the stomachs of Ambrose and Servo, although Servo was not out of danger until early this morning.

No Intoxicants Found

The first alarm given from the Servo home following the fatal draught of the men, brought Officer Herman Munk from his beat on Spruce street. A call was sent to the Home Company No. 3 for the pulmotor which was brought over to the Servo home, but could not be used. Officers Walter Cassels and David Sullivan were called and they accompanied the patient to the hospital. Officer Walter Cassels searched the home for the bottle of liquor thought to have been missed by Allici, but none was found.

Scene at Hospital

The scene at the Servo home and at the hospital following was heart-rending, as the members of the friendly party, plunged so suddenly and fatally into the throes of grief, awaited the result of the doctor's efforts. During the long wait from 10 o'clock until 1 o'clock, an automobile driven by an unidentified young woman dashed by, and stopped at the hospital and inquired of a number of people in the lobby and asked if her brother, giving his name, was one of those poisoned. She said she had heard of the trouble and had been told by a girl friend that her brother was one of those involved.

Given Last Rites Rev. Patrick Killen, assistant pastor of St. James's church was called and administered the last rites of the church to the dying man.

Opened Store Recently Ignata Servo moved to Manchester last August and opened the grocery store in the Baxter block which has been closed for over a year. The Servos have two boys, Allici, a weaver by trade, has been working every other week in Williamsville, this being his week off. Struff has been employed in Cheney Brothers.

Allici's Family Theodore Allici the first of the four in the party to die was 41 years of age. He leaves his wife and two sons, Ralph, age 12, a pupil at the Barnard school and Bruno, age 10, a pupil at the Lincoln school. According to Mrs. Allici the correct spelling of their name is Lithuanian is Allicius. There are two brothers, John and Joseph, living in Lithuania. Allici had been working the past four years as a milk weaver in Williamsville.

The funeral will be held from his late home at 83 Bissell street at 9:30 Friday morning and at nine o'clock at St. James's church. Burial will be in St. James's cemetery.

George Struff's family died at the hospital just before midnight was 87 years of age and lived at 87 Summer street. His second wife died last June. There are three grown sons and a daughter all living here. They are George, Jr., John, Anthony and Miss Frances Struff. He also leaves a brother John who resides on Spencer street. He was a member of St. John's Society of Hartford and the Lithuanian Alliance of America and had been employed for many years by Cheney Brothers as a laborer.

The Struff funeral will be held from his late home on Summer street at 8:30 Thursday morning and at nine o'clock at St. James's church. Burial will be in St. James's cemetery.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 15.—(AP)—The first fatality of the football season in Newark was reported today. Albert Palant, 18, West Side High school teacher, died in South Jersey hospital after suffering from six weeks ago. He was on the school yard play ground.

MANUFACTURER RAPS GOVERNMENT BUREAUS

Chicago, Nov. 15.—(AP)—George C. Miller, manufacturer from Milwaukee, Ind., testifying on the growth of government bureaus today before a Congressional committee, investigating government competition with private industry, said the trend in that direction is dangerous. "We must get started on the back track," he said, "if government remains in business, let's put it on a business basis."

"I'm not afraid to bid against the government on a business basis," he said. "I could lick it to death. But I have a genuine fear of the growth of Federal agencies. It should relegate activity to the states. It has been monkeying with the farm problem since 1890, putting in farmers here and there, and gumming up the works."

Leaders Needed Miller said that leaders with courage were needed to oppose bureaucracy in Congress.

Representative William H. Stafford of Wisconsin said the watchdog of the Treasury in the House, "the congressman remarked, "I was decapitated in the election because I fought government expenditures. Militant minorities are governing this country. The man who stands up against the greedy goes down. It's easier to vote wrong than go home and explain."

Miller observed that in his opinion leadership against high government costs would be "populac back home." Representative Samuel B. Ferguson of Indiana said the small taxpayer "who pays no income tax should learn that he, the ultimate consumer, pays the bill."

INSURGENTS DEFEATED

Teguigalpa, Honduras, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Three hundred men were killed or wounded in a twelve-hour battle between Federal troops and insurgents at San Pedro on the north coast, the government disclosed today.

The fight began yesterday morning and ended with the Federal in control. General Francisco Martinez Funes, now in command of the city, reported today that the civil population, foreign and native, was safe and that complete order had been restored.

There was fighting also at La Ceiba, Puerto Cortes and Trujillo, with victory for the Federals at all points, the government announced. Rebels were still reported to be in control at La Esperanza and other western towns.

MAY CHANGE APPROACH

Hartford, Nov. 15.—(AP)—The proposed new bridge spanning the Connecticut river and connecting Hartford and West Hartford may have its west approach at some location other than West street, the commission appointed by the Legislature for the purpose of constructing the bridge having decided to give the matter further study.

KILLS 2 CHILDREN, THEN SURRENDERS

Mother Meant To Kill Others and Self But Had No More Bullets.

Graham, N. C., Nov. 15.—(AP)—Mrs. Riley Dellar, 42-year-old wife of a textile worker, early today shot and killed two of her children, as they lay asleep, critically wounded another and then calmly walked from her home and surrendered to police.

The dead are Warren, 13, and Daphne, 5. Dellar, 7, was critically wounded and hospital attendants said she was not expected to live.

After the shooting, which occurred while the woman's husband and two older children were at work in a Burlington mill a few miles from here, Mrs. Dellar packed her suitcase and started for police headquarters.

On the way she met Policeman Grover Rich. Walking up to him, she said: "If you will carry me to jail, you will get credit for an arrest."

The two walked in silence to the county jail. Lawrence Goins, the jailer, quoted the woman as saying she killed her children because of ill treatment at the hands of her husband covering a period of 21 years.

Cornet M. Trotter investigated and said there was no need for an inquest. "It is a clear case of murder," he said. Mrs. Dellar told police: "I had rather spend the rest of my life in prison than live with my husband. I will live longer in prison. The children are better off. They will not become wards of charity or be left to grow up and turn out on the streets. It was for the best."

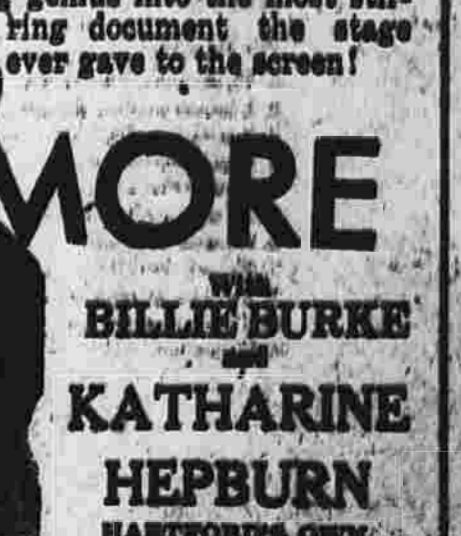

Mrs. Dellar said she planned to kill herself after shooting the children, but had no more bullets. "I had eight at first, she said, "but three of them snapped." The first three on Warren and the other two while I was shooting Dellar and Daphne."

ACCEPTED IN KIND

President-elect Roosevelt's acceptance of President Hoover's invitation to confer with him on the subject of war debts would appear to be sufficiently unreserved and ingenuous. If it contains a reminder that the responsibility for action on the British and French notes must rest on the present Congress and administration, that is true enough. Nor, so far as we can see, is there anything out of the way in Governor Roosevelt's suggestion that the President, as well as himself, should see the Democratic leaders whom Mr. Roosevelt is soon to meet at Warm Springs.

Some of those leaders have recently said some hard things about Mr. Hoover; but then, Mr. Hoover has also said some hard things about some of them, so they are quits. The big idea is that the President's patriotic and self-forgetful advances to his victorious opponent, made wholly in the interest of the national welfare, bid fair to bear the fruit of real co-operative effort—perhaps not only by the president-elect but on the part of the Democratic party in the present Congress.

One effect of such a meeting as Mr. Roosevelt proposes might be the suppression of such uncalled for prognostications as that of Senator-elect McAdoo who has been so prompt to butt into the very delicate debt situation with his publicized opinion as to what should and should not be done—without even waiting to see whether his party's leader intended to hint at his own views.

One of Mr. Roosevelt's first jobs may be to find some way of keeping Mr. McAdoo from making trouble by assuming too early to be the steersman of his party. Somehow we have considerable faith that he is not going to be able to foreclose his mortgage on that position.

COMMUNITY CRESTS

There are indications that the Hartford Community Chest workers are going to have great difficulty in raising the million and a quarter which is their goal in this year's drive. Up to the present considerably fewer than a third as many persons have contributed to the fund as at the corresponding time in last year's campaign. While a few of the very wealthy citizens have increased their contributions over previous years it is already evident that the number of those who can give and who are willing to make their sacrifices according to the pattern of the Community Chest is very greatly diminished.

We are conscious of being, and of having been for years, in a rather lonesome minority in our views on the Community Chest movement. But whether we have been right or wrong in holding that the system was sadly imperfect, so long as times were good, we are more than ever convinced that it does not fit into the situation when conditions are as serious as they are at present.

The acute problem before every community in the country right now is how to prevent actual physical destitution and suffering during the coming winter. Important as it may be to "keep up morale," to prevent men and women and boys and girls from slipping down into a demoralization of drabness and to continue those various services that are calculated to brighten and elevate community life, it is certainly a first charge upon our civilization to nourish and shelter and warm the bodies of the unemployed and their dependants. And it is becoming a very serious question indeed whether we can do both.

If Community Chest drives fail, this year, it will almost certainly be because a great many persons willing to make real sacrifices to prevent human suffering are no longer in sympathy with a system that puts on an equality the need of a starving family for milk and stew meat and the need of a welfare worker of his neat salary. There are very few persons, nowadays, with a squeezed-out five dollars to contribute to the public good who do not know of some undernourished family that is pretty sure to get none at all of that five dollars once it is deposited in a Community Chest—or of any other similar five dollars.

It is to be suspected that there would be a readier and more general response to Community Chest appeals, in times like these, if the chests were divided into two compartments—one devoted to actual physical relief, the other to those numerous expensive activities supposed to contribute to the spiritual well being of the people—with the contributor holding the right to determine into which contribution his mite should go.

There are a good many Americans who today stand ready to strip themselves of every self-indulgence in grim determination that their neighbors shall not starve but who do not propose to so strip themselves and then have the fruits of their sacrifices devoted to the maintenance of institutions and services which they regard as far from being vitally necessary.

STILL ON EVERY FARM

A Wisconsin municipal judge, Calvin Stewart of Kenosha, has made to President-elect Roosevelt a suggestion which may hold important possibilities. It is that farmers be allowed to convert surplus grain into industrial alcohol, of course without any form of excise tax or other hampering restrictions.

The possibilities in such freedom to treat the too abundant grain are apparent at a glance. There is substantially no limit to the extent of the market for industrial alcohol if produced at a sufficiently low price and if not made the object of special taxation. It can be used as fuel in internal combustion engines including those of automobiles, for heating and for a variety of other purposes. One of the advantages in Judge Stewart's scheme, he maintains, is that it would help to conserve the nation's oil supply which, while still large, is not inexhaustible and which can never be renewed when it is finally gone. Alcohol, however, can be produced in substantially unlimited quantities practically forever.

This is probably the simplest solution of the problem of surplus crops that has ever been advanced. It may be that there is a hole in it somewhere; that it would not work in practice, quite as well as it does in theory. But probably the only persons who will have the temerity to condemn the idea out of hand, without waiting for a pretty thorough study of the proposal to be made, will be the now very small handful of extreme dries who will be sure to take instant fright at the notion of a still on every farm. No doubt they will be infinitely less interested in the possible discovery of a solution of the grain farmers' problem than in the possibility of some farmer getting soused on his own product—just as if he couldn't, at any time, get a legal if murderous jag on his own hard cider.

TAXICABS

Connecticut people, who do not ride in taxicabs to any great extent because the Public Utilities Commission will not let them, and jobless men who cannot earn a living as taxi drivers because the same commission will not let them may alike be interested in the new New York taxi code which is to go into effect December 15.

The New York Board of Taxicab Control has not tried to kill the taxi business by prescribing a rate of fare higher than the public will or can pay and higher than the taxicab operators would be willing to accept, as the Connecticut P. U. C. did; on the contrary it has reduced the minimum fare to 15 cents for the first quarter mile and for each subsequent quarter mile to 5 cents—that is, to 30 cents for the first mile and 20 cents a mile thereafter. It has been possible for a taxi owner to charge 40 cents for the first mile and 30 cents thereafter.

The rights of the "little man"—the independent owner—are rigorously conserved, his taxi-license being maintained at $10 a year in spite of the efforts of the big companies to have the rate increased so that the little fellow could not continue in business. Cruising, incidentally, will be done away with by the establishment of many "hackstands" at which patrons will find their cabs. For the enforcement of this rule the board will establish a system of checks on meters and any cab whose meter shows more than the logical number of unpaid miles at the end of the month will have its license suspended unless its driver or owner can give a satisfactory explanation. On the whole the Board of Taxicab

Control is very plainly interested in two things, the provision of plenty of taxi service at a rate that people can afford to pay and the protection of the independents from the schemes of the big companies which would like to drive the little fellows off the streets and monopolize the taxi traffic.

It is worth noting that this is apparently the direct opposite of the aims of taxi control in Connecticut. Here the Public Utilities Commission has made taxi travel as expensive as possible, apparently in the interest of the trolley and bus lines, and so many exactions and so much expense have been heaped on the taxi units that only a very few independent owners can make a living.

We should be very heartily in favor of legislation at the next session of the General Assembly that would make it possible for a great many more people to ride in taxis and a good many more men to make a living out of that business. If this legislation were to involve removing the taxis from the control of the Public Utilities Commission and placing it, where it belongs, in the hands of local police departments, with certain statutory regulations for the mutual protection of the taxis and the public, that would be a good job well done.

COSTLY

These criminals of ours in the United States are an expensive luxury in a good many ways. In 1922 the insurance companies allied to the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters paid out, on account of bank burglaries, 16 per cent of the total of premiums received for this class of insurance. In 1931 it had jumped to 104 per cent.

Insurance companies can't do business on any such basis as that, so it has been announced that the casualty companies have been forced not only to make new rates but to formulate new rules. Also bank policies will hereafter be written only for one year periods instead of the three year periods heretofore customary.

Another Big Game Hunter in the White House

Behind the Scenes in WASHINGTON

RADICAL RELIEF BILLS

Washington.—Among the few consolations that can be conjured up from the recent election is the fact that the Democratic House of Representatives, like President Hoover, is not as bad as it has been painted.

We are going to have a Democratic House for quite a while and the short session of Congress which begins in December will exhibit exactly the same one that you have been hearing about in the campaign speeches.

So many harsh things were said about that body of men by the Republican orators, from President Hoover on down the line, that there must be millions of folks thoroughly convinced that if a Democratic House ever sits again the country will be ruined completely instead of only partially.

So this dispatch is dedicated to those who believe that, with the hope that they may be somewhat reassured.

Even if one should grant that the present House passed some dangerous legislation, there is still no reason to believe that additional doubtful bills could get through the Senate or past a presidential veto.

The mere fact that Governor Roosevelt would "disavow" certain of the measures passed by the House under Speaker Garner, as Hoover demanded he should do, convinced no one that he favored them or would favor them unless they were first demonstrated to be sound.

Cash payment of the bonus is one instance. The bonus bill was passed in the House only with the aid of many Republican votes and the fact that it was passed with the help of many Democratic votes, Democrats, either in the White House or Congress, will not be found supporting such a bill as a party.

The large, unwieldy House is always to be feared as a herd of sheep in a matter of veterans' legislation. Republican majorities have overridden both Hoover and Coolidge on other phases of the bonus issue.

A BOOK A DAY

NATION ITSELF IS REAL. HERO OF THIS NOVEL. "Never Enough" Is Absorbing Cross-Section Study of American Life.

The United States of America is serving as the "hero" of the modern novel more and more frequently, these days. John Dos Passos showed how it could be done by writing books in which the nation itself was so to speak, the central character around which the plot evolved; and now Lewis Mumford, in "Never Enough," has done the same thing.

Incidentally, Miss Zugmuth has enjoyed something of Mr. Dos Passos' success; for "Never Enough" is a remarkably strong book, as human and as absorbing as your daily paper, filled with some of the most vivid characters that have appeared in American fiction in many a day.

IN NEW YORK

Random Jottings
 New York, Nov. 15.—Notes on nothing in particular and everything in general: Same old story! . . . Author of a dozen smart, sophisticated and bitter plays—all hits—is a daughter of Bloomington, Ill. I mean Rachel Crothers, playwright of Broadway. Her father was a country doctor. Her mother studied medicine in late life and made quite a success of it. . . . Writes much of the dialogue and ideology of her plays propped up in bed at her Connecticut country place.

E. H. Sothern, a dapper symphony in autumn-leaf browns, parading Fifth Avenue; a jaunty tilt to his hat and swing to his cane; his polished white hair. . . . And no one in the passing crowd seeming to remember. . . . Nor did they seem to recognize Eugene Leontovich, as the original heroine of "Grand Hotel" hurried about shopping for Hollywood clothes. . . . With all due respect to the Garbo screen imitation, my vote still goes to Eugene.

Strens Started It
 And here's a chap who has traced torch singers to their source. . . . It seems the Strens of mythological fame, were the originators. . . . Not that Libby Holman, Helen Morgan, Ethel Merman and the rest are not sirens in their way! . . . The information, by the way, comes from Charles Grant, a "Tin Pan Alley" figure, who went on the trail for his book, "Torch Singer."

Barney Gallant, dean of Greenwich restaurateurs, is folding up after all these years. . . . Norman Anthony, who could almost pay for his meals just before "Ballyhoop" became a success, can now disport in London. . . . And does! . . . Joseph Hargreaves' next will be called Palm Beach and its gay folk.

Mrs. Joe Lebling, whose theater agency has saved many a threatened theatrical flop, couldn't save her own show. . . . Prince Matcha-bell whispered between acts at a theater opening the other night that he was going to drop his title and become plain "Mister" when he takes out his citizenship papers.

New York gave him the chance to make a neat living in the perfume and cosmetic business, and he finds the title superfluous.

"The Bill Can Wait"
 William B. Brown writes in to advise that his Times Square Hotel will donate 10 per cent of its rooms this winter to white collar workers who are out of jobs. . . . Rent will be waived for six months and eventual payment, if desired, will be waived three years. . . . If other hostilities would thus employ their room space, some 20,000 persons would have shelter. . . . Brown reports that most persons he has taken in to date have sought to reimburse him the moment they found employment. . . . Extremely few try to "beat their way."

Lois Must Study
 Lois Moran observed dancing about at the Waldorf with young Douglas Montgomery, the actor filler, who seems to occupy a great deal of her time and attention. . . . Yet you'll hear that Lois is not intending to let her heart stray over far until her musical education is finished and that mania sees to that! . . . Also Constantine Bennett will cast a blond halo over opening nights, always on the arm of her hubby, the Marquis. . . . Jimmy Walker is said to have received a quarter of a million offer but hopes to grab that Will Hay movie-camp job.

And Stay Out!
 Night-going swankdom still chatters about the behavior of a certain bibulous one who sat near the ring-side at the Mayfair gathering and tossed money when Mary Lewis, who is to be starred in "The Du Barry," graciously contributed a song. . . . While the incident was charmingly "passed off" as the "best all-out" sign hangs for the young man all over town.

Quotations

We know now that the Allies were the aggressors in 1914, and that there was not the slightest probability that Germany would have attacked the United States had she been victorious. Health and Diet Advice
 By Dr. Frank McCoy

OLIVES, A VALUABLE FOOD

The Italians have a saying that "if you would provide for your grandchildren, plant an olive grove." This saying is most likely based on the fact that the olive tree has probably the longest productive life of any fruit tree, olive trees sometimes attaining many hundreds of years of growth during which time they bear regular crops of fruit. This oil, which is produced from fruit that has been treasured from ancient times by many peoples, including those of Greece, Italy, Spain and Egypt. The oil has long been used by man both as food and as a skin ointment. In Greece the tree was valued so highly that victorious athletes were crowned with an olive wreath, and an olive branch was held a symbol of peace. Even at the present time olives are one of the leading fruits of the world.

The ordinary ripe olive contains up to 50 per cent of a nourishing vegetable oil. The color of the olive skin varies from green to purplish or brownish black. The fruit is naturally very bitter, but the bitterness may be removed in several ways, generally sold, they are put up in two forms; the green and ripe. The green olives are preferred for their health standpoint as the green olives are likely to be less easily digested and should be used more in the line of a relish or decoration. A good olive has a firm meat and a bland, oily flavor. Usually the grading runs by size, the largest ones bringing the best price.

Olives are sometimes sold in bulk, but when it is desired to keep them for a period of time, they are generally packed in glass jars or tins cans, this way of handling them having originated in California where the first trees were planted at a mission from which the name of mission olives comes. Ordinary pickled olives should keep for a number of months, but those sterilized during canning will keep indefinitely. I advise that olives be allowed to stand for several hours in cold water before they are eaten, this extracts some of the brine in which they have been packed.

Instead of the ordinary pickling process in lime, a limited amount of olives are prepared by dehydration or sun-drying. This form of olives is sold in bulk, which are named mission olives comes. Ordinary pickled olives should keep for a number of months, but those sterilized during canning will keep indefinitely. fasting and dieting regimen, it would be a good policy to bathe the affected foot alternately in hot and cold water. Have vesicles of hot and cold water side by side, and place the foot first in the hot water and then in the cold. This will stimulate the circulation and assist in overcoming the tendency to gangrene. It would also be helpful if you could obtain active light treatments or sunbaths.

(Skin Eruption)
 Question: N. H. writes: "I have a skin eruption which I am told is the itch. Is this a blood disease, and is it likely to be contracted by others?"
 Answer: I could not tell whether or not you have the itch without examining you, but, if you do have it, you should be careful to try and get rid of it as soon as possible, as it is readily transmitted to other people by contact. The disease is caused by a small parasite, which burrows under the skin, reproducing more of its kind quickly, and spreading from one part to another. It is not a blood disease. The treatment is rigid cleanliness with plenty of soap and water, and antiseptics, and locally applied salves which your druggist can recommend.

(Spearmint Leaves)
 Question: Miss Doris Lou S. writes: "I often eat spearmint leaves, and I like spearmint sauce. May I ask what food value this mint contains? I have heard that spear-mint is good for nervousness; is this true?"
 Answer: Spear-mint leaves contain approximately the same food value as watercress and other succulent pungent leaves. They may be used as a sprigging, but I would not advise too large a quantity because of the irritating essential oil they contain. A spear-mint sauce made without sugar could be used as seasoning. I do not believe that the plant has any particular effect on nervousness.

(That Tired Feeling)
 Question: Mr. Gordon F. writes: "It seems to have that 'tired feeling' physically and mentally. It seems rather difficult for me to concentrate. Do you think I have an inactive thyroid?"
 Answer: If you are quite a bit over-weight, it may be that you have a sluggish thyroid, but enervation can be produced from many things, such as overeating, lack of exercise and not being interested in constructive activities.

BUILDING FIGURES TAKE GREAT DROP

Construction In U. S. One Quarter Compared With Years 1925 To 1928.

New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Building statistics indicate that the total volume of construction in the United States this year will aggregate less than one-quarter of the average of the building boom years, 1925 through 1928.

Statistics on building contracts let in the 37 states east of the Rockies, compiled by F. W. Dodge Corp., show this year's volume will approximate the low levels of the war years, when the shortages developed which led to the post-war boom.

How long it may take in the present period of low activity to lead to a more normal level will bring new health to this major industry is a question which building statisticians would like to answer. It is pointed out, however, that active building to take up the slack presumably will bring general economic improvement.

The F. W. Dodge figures indicate that the construction in the states east of the Rockies for 1932 will approximate the extraordinarily low total of $1,300,000,000. This is less than half the volume for 1931. A high record of $6,600,000,000 was reached in 1928.

The slump in residential building has been particularly severe. This year's contracts, based on the Dodge figures for the area east of the Rockies, will aggregate $300,000,000, which will be the lowest since before the World War, with the exception of 1918, which saw a volume of approximately that size.

TO BUY NEW CURTAIN FOR HIGH SCHOOL HALL

Sock and Buskin Club To Use Profits of Friday Night Play For That Purpose.

The Sock and Buskin club at Manchester High school which is now hard at work preparing for the annual Senior play, "The Torch-Bearers", to be given Friday night, plans to present a new stage curtain to the M. H. S. hall. They are working for this objective and for this reason placed the date of their play in the earlier part of the school year.

Last year the stage curtain met with an unfortunate accident and the curtain detracts much from the looks of the hall which was recently redecorated. The new curtain will, no doubt, be expensive and the club hopes to make enough money on the play to get a good start towards its purchase.

LOW PRICES AS CAUSE OF BUSINESS FAILURES

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 15.—(AP)—Delegates attending the annual convention of the National farmers union today were told by John A. Simpson, of Oklahoma, City, National president, that the low price of farm products "is the cause of every business failure, including the closing of thousands of banks."

He expressed belief, however, that "the rising sun of a new day is here," for agriculture and that a Democratic-controlled Congress will soon enact legislation designed to aid the farmer.

Remonitization of silver, government refinancing of responsible farmers, federal regulation of crop marketing and permanent discarding of the manufacturers general sales tax plan were proposed by the Oklahoma man in his farm relief program.

WINDSOR BOY IS SHOT WHILE ATTENDING TRAPS

Windsor, Nov. 15.—(AP)—George Thayer, 13, was seriously injured this morning when shot through the stomach while attending his traps as William Sherill and Frank Skac, both aged 14 years came along the bank, the two latter had 22 calibre rifles and saw an object moving the brush and thinking it was game of some kind, Sherill is said to have shot at the object. The Thayer boy fell over. Skac who was ahead of Sherill recognized what had happened and called to the latter who was reloading his rifle not to shoot again. Sherill and Skac rushed down the bank and found Thayer. They telephoned to Dr. A. P. Pratt who responded and rushed the boy to the Hartford hospital.

The three boys are members of the freshman class at the John Fitch High school and on account of the crowded condition of the school and two session plan, the boys did not attend school this morning. Constable Maurice Kennedy is investigating the accident.

ANDOVER

The evening meeting of the local Christian Endeavor society was cancelled Sunday evening to give the members the opportunity of attending the First Baptist church in Wilimantic, where there was a speaker from Boston.

During the morning service at the Congregational church on Sunday a children's bible story was told by the Rev. Wallace I. Woodin. The name of the central figure of the story was omitted, and the children are supposed to look up the story in the Bible, ascertain the name of the character and be able to tell it to Mr. Woodin during the Sunday school session next Sunday. This is the first in a series of ten such stories, one to be told each Sunday morning the names of the leading character to be told the following Sunday. At the end of the series the child having learned and given the names of the largest number of leading Bible characters will be presented with his or her favorite book.

A Junior Choir has been started under the leadership of Miss Amy Randall. It is composed of about 12 of the boys and girls of the Sunday school who will be seated in the left front corner of the church opposite the adult choir. This choir will be trained in hymn singing, in singing responses and such simple numbers, and will be taught, as far as possible, to be able to assume leadership and responsibility as they grow older, that they may one day be able to form a dependable, serviceable group which can take its place in upbuilding and maintenance of the church and social life of the community.

The topic of Mr. Woodin's sermon on Sunday morning was "Washington, the Christian." During the service a children's Bible story was told by the pastor, and special music was furnished by the senior and junior choirs. At the Sunday school session following the morning service there were thirty-five in attendance. Miss Randall's class of girls sang a selection appropriate to the text, "Deligent, Not Slothful."

A large audience attended the Washington Bicentennial program which was given in the town hall Friday evening. CALIFORNIA TO FREE 1,000 "DRY" PRISONERS

Sacramento, Calif., Nov. 15.—(AP)—An indefinite number of violators of California's Prohibition Enforcement Act, confined in prison and jails are expected to be out of their cells by Christmas through executive pardon. California voted last week to repeal the act.

Governor James Rolph, Jr., sent letters today to the wardens of the two state prisons and to the district attorneys of the 58 counties asking information on all prisoners guilty of offenses against the Wright Act and details of their offenses. Authorities guessed their number would reach at least 1,000.

The governor said the "Wright Act" having been repealed, all persons deprived of their liberty for having violated the provisions of that act ought to be pardoned, except those involved in other serious criminal offenses connected with their crime.

The secretary of state said the official count of the vote on the Wright Act will be announced December 17 and five days later, the act will be officially repealed.

TO BUY FIERCE LIONS FOR HIS NEXT HUNT

St. Louis, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Denver, M. Wright, St. Louis manufacturer whose recent pseudo-African "Safari" turned out to be merely a Missouri fiasco, so far as he was concerned, still has lion hunting ambitions.

Wright said today he was considering purchasing two more lions and starting his big game hunt all over again. His much publicized synthetic lion hunt in southeast Missouri last month came to a tame ending when a deputy sheriff killed the two young circus lions.

Wright had intended for his quarry, and which he had released on a small island in the Mississippi river. Despite the outcome of his first "Safari" which brought protests from members of humane societies and warnings from state and county officers, Wright insists there's "nothing wrong with the idea."

He's still bitter over the spilling of his first hunt and also displeased by the great number of letters he received in which the writers accused him of poor sportsmanship.

"You won't be able to call the lions young, and kittenish next time," Wright said. "If I do it again, I'll get a couple of old, vicious ones."

3 EASY RULES for Using Koppers Connecticut Coke

1 Shake less—Because Koppers Connecticut Coke is all fuel, and burns down to fine ashes that drop through the grate with very little shaking. Once a day is often enough to shake—less frequently in mild weather.

2 Use less draft—Because Koppers Connecticut Coke is High Test Fuel, it burns evenly without forcing the fire and wasting heat up the chimney. It responds at once to closing as well as to opening of dampers.

3 Fill the fire pot heaping full—You can do this without danger of smothering the fire. Koppers Connecticut Coke is lighter than coal and burns most economically and effectively when you keep a deep fire.

These 3 rules mean less work and less attention. Your Koppers Connecticut Coke fire requires less work in firing and in taking out ashes, burns perfectly and provides a steady warmth for less cost.

THOUSANDS of Connecticut families now find their fuel and their gasoline costing them no more than they have been paying for fuel alone. They have switched to Koppers Connecticut Coke. You can burn this scientific fuel in your present furnace, without any attachments or machinery. Try it yourself. You'll see that besides saving enough to pay for gasoline, you'll have better heat for less work. It's because Koppers Connecticut Coke has more heat per ton, and is a more responsive fuel that you get this better, steadier heat. Because Koppers

Coke leaves two-thirds less ashes, shaking is reduced to a mere jiggling of the grates once a day, and a week's ashes will go into a little pail about a foot high. You'll find too that it banks easily and comes up quickly in the morning. It is natural that five times as many families use this fuel now as burned it four years ago. Once you discover for yourself the advantages of Koppers Connecticut Coke you'll never want to go back to old-fashioned fuel. Phone us right now, or phone your own fuel dealer, and ask about a trial order. Start immediately to enjoy the benefits of High Test Fuel.

R. S. BROOKINGS, ECONOMIST, DEAD

Washington, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Robert Somers Brookings, 82, founder of the Brookings Institution and internationally known economist died today at his home here. Brookings had been ill for about two weeks. He was born in Cecil county Maryland in 1850. His life divided itself into three periods—his active business career in St. Louis from 1886 to 1897; his educational activities as president of Washington University in St. Louis from 1897 to 1917; and his war work, and subsequent educational and research activities in Washington. At 46 he retired from active business.

Says Carelessness Causes Fire, Accidents and Drives Up the Rates.

Declaring that the insurance agents as well as the companies are vitally concerned in the "colossal fire waste and accident toll," Insurance Commissioner Howard P. Dunham, in an address before the Insurance Board of Greenwich at its annual dinner in the Pickwick Arms Monday night, November 14th, urged the agents to do all in their power to combat these "twin forces of destruction." They can do this, he said, through education and leadership in their communities.

Public Pays "The public," he asserted, "should be made to realize that it pays for its own carelessness. An insurance company raises its rates when losses get out of bounds. This is necessary if it is to remain solvent. Juries may disregard the merits of a case because of sympathy, but instead of making the company pay, they are really passing the loss to the public, of whom they are a part."

"How does this concern the insurance agents? A great many persons, unfortunately, now feel that they cannot avail themselves of the protection offered by the insurance companies because of the cost. If the losses are greatly reduced, as they should be without difficulty since nearly all fires and accidents could be prevented, the rates may be lowered and many of those who now have no insurance will become good prospects for insurance."

Discussing the responsibility of agents in view of the changed conditions, Commissioner Dunham said: "Changed World" "The insurance agents are facing a changed world in which many of the old methods will not serve. The free and easy ways of the lush era have become pleasant memories. The past three years with their devastating effect on business in general, at the business session, officers will be elected for the coming year. Chief of Police Samuel Gordon and the Board of Police Commissioners have accepted an invitation to attend the meeting. Warden Charles S. Reed of Waterbury will be one of the speakers and the invitation was extended the local police officials as it was thought that Warden Reed's subject will be of interest to them. Members of the Chamber who are unable to attend the dinner, are asked to make an effort to attend the business session, which will start at 7:30 o'clock.

"The insurance agents can no longer regard themselves as mere salesmen, peddling policies and pocketing commissions. They can no longer write policies in a hit-or-miss fashion and hope that the risks will turn out all-right. For one of the most important lessons which the insurance business has learned is that unless careful and skillful underwriting is done at the source much of the efficient management at the home office is nullified."

"With underwriting restored to its rightful standing as the chief concern and function of insurance companies, the insurance agents have the greatest opportunity to prove their reason for being and their indispensability."

Must Be Efficient "Companies are not going to keep agents with consistently unsatisfactory business. Such agents are a drain on the companies and in self-protection they cannot maintain them as their representatives. This being so, it is decidedly to the interest of the agents as well as to the companies they represent to become as highly efficient as they are able. They must approach their work as professional men do, ever seeking to improve their knowledge and methods. They must learn all they can about the risks they are to insure and about the persons who are seeking the insurance. If moral hazard is suspected the companies will look to them for protection; they will have to resist strong temptation but in the end they will be rewarded. They should not expect their companies to write accommodations when they have any doubts as to the insurability of the properties. For accommodations have always been costly to companies.

"Not only can the insurance agents reduce losses by exercising great care in the selection of risks, but they can and should do all in their power to combat the colossal fire waste and accident toll through education and leadership in their communities. There are some who find comfort in the fact that the annual fire loss, which has been averaging about half a billion dollars a year, has not been rising. An analysis of the situation will show that so far from lessening the fire loss is really increasing. We all know that property values have been steadily declining in the past three years, yet since 1926 the annual fire loss has been in the neighborhood of half a billion dollars—which clearly shows that the waste is in reality growing. And this despite the fact that building construction and fire fighting facilities have been greatly improved. Hardly less menacing is the accident situation. Unless these twin forces of destruction are curbed insurance companies will continue to lose heavily on their underwriting and reduction of rates is impossible."

TROTZKY STARTS FOR COPENHAGEN

also hopes to go to Berlin, where his mother is ill in a sanitarium. He already has permission to cross Italy from Trieste and possibly he will visit friends in Vienna before coming back.

An older son and a daughter are at school in Europe, but his youngest son, attending school here, was required to remain in Turkey as a sort of hostage for the return of his parents.

Leon Trotsky was exiled from Russia a few years ago by the Soviet strong man, Joseph Stalin, for leading the Right Wing opposition. Subsequently Trotsky was ordered banished for all time. The Turkish government permitted him to live on Prinkipo island in the Marmora Sea. Recently there have been reports that his health was bad and he wished to go to some European resort to recuperate. In February of this year the Czech-Slovakian government granted him a permit to visit a health resort in that country, but later ordered that he be barred. Other Balkan countries denied him visas, and subsequently Czech-Slovakia explained her consul general had been unable to issue a visa to him.

WIRTALLA PRESIDENT OF THE GARDEN CLUB

Succeeds Mrs. John R. Lowe—Miss Edith Pearson Named Secretary Last Night.

Walter C. Wirtalla was elected president of the Manchester Garden Club at its annual meeting last night at the Center church house, succeeding Mrs. John R. Lowe who declined to serve another year. Mrs. Mabel Rogers, secretary for the past three years, was succeeded by Miss Edith Pearson, principal of the Highland Park school. Mrs. Herbert B. House was re-elected treasurer and Miss Mary Hutchings, vice president.

Following reports by the different officers and routine business, C. W. Blankenburg of the program committee projected on the screen a collection of slides of the members' gardens. For the most part they were colored and very beautiful. The display included the rock-garden and pool at the Memorial hospital grounds which members of the club and local nurserymen have contributed, a number of scenes in the lovely Chapman and Cheney gardens on Forest street, two pictures of Mrs. Mabel Rogers' garden, two of Mrs. Lowe's, two of W. E. Buckley's, Mrs. C. T. Willett, Mrs. Albert Dewey, Mrs. O. G. Bartlett, C. W. Blankenburg and a motion picture of the lovely Lily pools, sunken rock garden, perennial borders and beds at Forest Buckland's home on Bush road. These were taken and shown by Frederick C. Strong of Hilltown road. His little son was paddling a canoe on the lake and Mr. Buckland was taken unaware in his boots picking some of the lilies. The pictures were all so much appreciated that the gardeners requested the operators to show them all over again without descriptions. Unusual plants and flowers were brought for exhibition and included a rare fuchsia, Christmas roses and a variety of handsome chrysanthemums. The attendance prize was won by President Wirtalla.

Week-end MURDER

GABRIELLE E. FORBUSH

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The story opens with a prologue in which a murder is committed by a homicidal maniac. Later he boards a train for Long Island, thinking of the pleasant week-end he is to have there. The name of the murderer is not disclosed.

The scene shifts to the Long Island home of LINDA and TOM AVERILL, married three years and much in love. Linda announces that instead of three guests over the week-end they are to have five. The guests will be: COUSIN AMOS PEABODY, elderly, distant relative of Linda's who was in New York on business and invited himself to visit the Averills; CAPTAIN DEVOS, handsome Belgian representing a European perfume manufacturer with whom Averill hopes to do business; MR. STATLANDER, middle-aged man of the firm Averill works for; MARVIN PRATT, former suitor of Linda's whom she has not seen for several years, and LIAN SHAUGHNESSY Irish writer on a lecture tour.

The guests arrive and almost immediately there is trouble. At dinner Cousin Amos gets into an heated argument with Shaughnessy whom he denounces as a dangerous rebel for defending Gandhi's work in India. Bumpy, an old watch dog, is usually killed during the night and suspicion for the deed turns to Shaughnessy, who admits he roamed about after the others had retired.

Tom kissed her quickly. "Good sport," he applauded.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

Linda stood up and shook off her thoughts with a visible motion of her slim shoulders. "What's the program this morning?"

"Golf for them as wants it—the boat—anything you say. Best get a dip in before lunch. Tide's high then."

"And the tennis tournament this afternoon; dinner home; and the Fourth of July dance at the club to-night. All right—let's go!"

Tom kissed her quickly. "Good sport!" he applauded. "Our guests wait below. Up and at 'em. Blinks, old dear!"

But all day long, Linda's solemn, clear little voice rang in his head and he found himself at one time or another regarding each guest as a stranger capable of unbridled fury which might find outlet in the mangling of a small, inoffensive little dog. His day was a suspicious and a miserable one. Even Amos elected to play golf. Even after they started Averill had cause for apprehension as to how they would mix. For as they collected their bags in the entrance hall the telephone rang and he stopped to answer a call from his sister Agnes in White Plains. He abstractedly assured the local "live wire" that the place was still for safe, that it could be seen at any time, and that the terms still held. He noticed that the two men stood stiffly waiting, a little apart from each other and without any attempt at ordinary small talk. Motivated by them to the links, he wondered more and more how the combination would work. Statlander he knew for a hard man—with an amazingly retentive memory and a genius for figures, together with the impetuosity of such aptitude toward his lack in others. Perhaps 47 or 48, he was stockily built, strong beyond an off-hand guess and reputed "a hog for work," no easier on others than on himself. What he had said of his favorite amusements—mountain climbing, exploring, big game hunting—led Averill to believe that he would prefer play as arduous as hard work. By the solemnity with which Statlander produced his clubs it was evident that no St. Andrews pro took his game more seriously.

Now Cousin Amos Peabody, as it happened, also took himself seriously and Tom might have said the two would make a perfect pair. But Cousin Amos, though a precisionist, was not, like Statlander, a silent one. Every detail of the greens, the technique of teeing off, the action of other players, the positions of his opponents toward the hole, was subject to fluent and critical comment. His face pink, his eyes shining, he addressed himself to observing every rule and by-law of correct golf—and to seeing that others did likewise.

Statlander, glumly estimating the distance between the 12th tee and the first bunker, paused with the air of one who endures much for a particularly explicit lecture.

"My dear sir, I am sure you will not mind my calling attention to the fact that you habitually drop your club too low. Holding it as you do, you cannot hope to get distance in your drives! Thomas, you too should mark this point well. Always remember, my boy, that your club should be parallel with the ground at the beginning of your stroke."

Sensing the growing fury of his business associate, Tom soon heartily wished that one or the other of them had stayed at home. He could ignore the westerner's silliness and admit the dogged, even game of the admiral play up to Cousin Amos' pride in his passable skill and youthful energy. But to reconcile the two proved more and more hopeless. When the explosion which he dreaded finally came, for all its violence, it brought the sense of relief which follows a long-awaited detonation.

Cousin Amos, of course, was its reason. The direct cause was a patronizing comment upon the idiotic carelessness of getting into a sand trap. For some time Statlander had been ominously quiet. Now he stopped, his face darkly flushed. As Linda had seen it the night before, his voice seemed almost throttled; it quivered as with repressed, concentrated fury as he damned Cousin Amos for an interfering, talkative old busybody. That worthy, blinking in astonishment, stood with putter hanging from limp fingers. By a roll of his eyes he disapproved any connection with this unexpected outburst. His air of innocent surprise seemed to be the last straw. Before Tom could intervene Statlander raised the club he had been bandishing and by a single passionate exertion of strength snapped it in two, then hurled the pieces into the nearby rough. With a final sulphurous epithet, he turned on his heel and strode away.

For a moment the others stood staring after him, then Averill began groping for phrases that would express his regret for the occurrence.

"Do not apologise, Thomas," said Cousin Amos severely, the ruddy flush fading slowly though his eyes still started from his head in surprise. "It is not your fault that this—un-mannerly person so—er—lost his self-control. Certainly I cannot understand how comment upon such—such an obvious infirmity of poor stroke should infuriate him. It was, Thomas, an exceedingly poor stroke. Would you not have said so? Well, ah—however—! Do you think you should—ah—follow and attempt to—er—placate—?"

"Not at all," Tom had watched the retreating figure and saw it swing at a brisk pace into the road toward White Haven. "It's not far to the house. He can blow off steam walking. I'm really awfully sorry, Cousin Amos. Shall we—do you care to go on with the game?"

"Certainly," Cousin Amos stopped with a slight grunt to retrieve the abandoned ball. "Hmp! Suppose, young man" (he addressed the gaping caddy), "you take charge of this."

"We'll put his clubs in the car," said Tom. "All right, Carry on!"

He was torn between annoyance at the bland old man who saw no personal blame for the situation and more decided anger at the other's inexcusable behavior. And suddenly—no use ducking it!—he knew that most alarming of all was his constant memory of Linda's suspicions. Certainly he had seen Statlander's furious fury. For a single horrified second he had expected Statlander to brain Cousin Amos with the club. It had been the sort of anger which only physical violence could express—as witness what happened to that very club! Was it possible that the man, strolling, perhaps, against the grounds during the hot night, had been badgered by the watchful little dog? If so, how had he killed her? A stone—one of the big entrance gate urns—some huge, crushing, mangling instrument. Or he might have swung the little body against the stone pillar or a tree.

For a moment the picture made Tom almost physically ill. He was recalled by a subdued click and Cousin Amos self-congratulatory

Tom kissed her quickly. "Good sport," he applauded.

Statlander, glumly estimating the distance between the 12th tee and the first bunker, paused with the air of one who endures much for a particularly explicit lecture.

CONTRACT FANS—HERE ARE NEW SCORING VALUES

BY WM. E. MCKENNEY
Secretary, American Bridge League.

Following are the new scoring values for rubber contract bridge. The old values are printed in light type—the new values are in boldface type. Cut this table out and mount it on cardboard for use at the bridge table.

New Scoring Values for Rubber Contract Bridge.

Trick Values (Scored in Trick Score)

Trump	Undoubled	Doubled	Redoubled
No Trump	20	40	120
No Trump	40	80	180
Spades and Hearts	30	60	120
Diamonds and Clubs	20	40	100

The first six tricks won by the declarer constitute his book and have no scoring value.

How to Score All Tricks Made Above the Book Not Doubled

Tricks Made	No Trump	Spades or Hearts or Clubs	Diamonds
1	30	30	30
2	70	60	40
3	100	90	60
4	140	120	80
5	170	150	100
6	210	180	120
7	240	210	140

Only BID TRICK VALUES count in the trick score. The balance of the trick values count in the premium score. For example, declarer bids three no trump, makes six. From the above chart you will see that he is entitled to 210 points. His contract was three no trump, therefore 100 is scored below the line and the difference between that and 210—110 points—is scored above the line. As the small slam was not bid, no bonus is scored for the slam.

UNDERTRICK PENALTIES

Undoubled not vulnerable: each undertrick—50 points.
Doubled vulnerable or redoubled not vulnerable: multiplies the 100 points. Each subsequent undertrick—increased 50 points over last previous undertrick.
Doubled vulnerable or redoubled not vulnerable: multiplies the above values by two.
Redoubled vulnerable: multiplies by two the doubled vulnerable penalty.

Daily Health Service

PURE AIR AND HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS STREIBER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

There is a great difference between being sick and being well. Whenever the human body becomes diseased the human body is disturbed. The old saying has it that a sound mind exists in a sound body.

Not only does illness reflect itself in the person concerned, but also on his associates. The presence in any group of anyone who does not enter fully into the spirit of the group activities because of some type of illness breaks down the measure and the efficiency of all.

Hence it is almost a duty that everyone be as healthful as possible for the good of himself and of the community.

What we call good health arises from the perfect functioning of all of the tissues and organs of the body. Such functioning does not take place unless these tissues and organs are given the proper conditions for their actions.

The human being cannot live without air for more than a few minutes. Almost everyone can get enough air most of the time, but the kind of air, make can vary of difference. Air must be clean, cool, sufficiently moist and free from dangerous gases and impurities.

Some people are constantly in fear of the slightest sense of air in motion. There is no question but what a powerful blast of air or even the continuous exposure to the air from an electric fan may on occasion be harmful, but air slightly in motion is superior to air that is static.

Nowadays all sorts of devices are being developed for air conditioning, since it is recognized that impurities in the air or modifications of its quality away from the best may have serious effects on the human being. Most people can do without air conditioners in their homes, because it is possible, through the use of a board in a window, to prevent drafts and at the same time to get good window ventilation.

However, in large factories and offices, or for people especially sensitive to various substances that may float in the air, air conditioning devices may be of value. They serve the purpose of keeping harmful dusts and pollens from the air. They also have the value in some cases of adding sufficient moisture and of keeping air in motion.

Few housewives really understand how to clean a room without filling it with dust. The modern vacuum cleaner takes dust out of the air and out of furnishings in a room without stirring it up.

The old-fashioned carpet sweeper is better than a broom. The obsolete feather duster really scatters dust in the air, whereas a moist or oiled cloth removes it without distributing it.

LATEST STOCKS

New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—The Stock Market managed to dig in its heels today and close the rather sharp slide of the previous session.

Prices slipped a little more in the early trading, but selling soon dried up, and by early afternoon, several of the leaders had rallied to show signs of firming on a point. A firm wheat market was helpful.

The list turned generally dull, but Case managed to get up a couple of points, and issued up a point or so included Allied Chemical, American Can, American Telephone, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific. In the early trading, U. S. Steel had sagged a point, but this was recovered as the session wore on. Drug was an isolated weak spot, losing more than 2 points. Owens-Illinois Glass was again hid up a couple of points.

The number of impending dividend actions evidently made traders hesitant, although the principal one of the week, American Telephone's tomorrow, was expected to usually well informed quarters to bring another regular quarterly payment of $2.35 a share, although there was some uncertainty about it. What, of course, more important than dividends, is corporate earnings. The ordering of dividend distributions not fully earned appeared to have lost its erstwhile salutary effect upon the market.

Weakness of Drug, Inc., evidently reflected the filing of a petition for a receiver for Louis K. Liggett Co., although it has been known for weeks that reorganization was contemplated. If favorable settlements were not granted under present leases. The oil shares held to a narrow range. White Standard of N. Y. advanced gasoline prices, preliminary estimates indicated a sizeable increase in crude production last week. The production problem, however, has become decidedly less threatening, with the enactment of a new proration law in Texas.

An item of interest bearing on the international financial situation was Germany's report of its foreign trade for October, showing an excess exports over imports of $4,000,000 marks, unchanged from September. The export surplus for October of last year, however, amounted to $38,000,000 marks. The sharp shrinkage in the Reich's favorable balance of trade has complicated its problem of continuing payments on external debt.

BORAH THANKS DOCTOR

Washington, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Senator Borah, back again in Washington from a hospital where his wife had unusual measles, parotid fever, sought out and thanked Dr. Charles Armstrong, the potticoose expert who saved her life, by giving him the disease a year or two ago.

To Surgeon General Hiram S. Cummings of the public health service, Borah also expressed his appreciation for the long distance scientific aid rendered his wife.

Serum treatment for Mrs. Borah was recommended by telegram by the scientists who attended the disease and the convalescent serum was speed to her by airplane.

Mrs. Borah returned with the Senator to Washington. She is still slowly recuperating from her serious illness.

HOSPITAL CONFERENCE

Hartford, Nov. 15.—(AP)—A discussion of state appropriations for hospital purposes was held at the opening session of the Connecticut Hospital Association's annual conference today at the Hartford hospital. After a business meeting including election of officers and the group representing the hospitals and nurses training schools of the state inspected the Avery convalescent hospital at 731 New Britain avenue.

The D. Newton Estney educational building on Jefferson street, part of the Hartford hospital, was also inspected during the day. Lunch was served at the hospital. A round table discussion was to occupy the closing session in the afternoon.

President Oliver H. Hartine, superintendent of the Bridgeport hospital, called the meeting to order and presided. Arrangements for the reception of the visitors was directed by Dr. Lewis A. Sexton, superintendent of the Hartford hospital.

BIG RUSH FOR JOBS

Hartford, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Applicants for temporary jobs during the Christmas mailing rush jammed the post office lobby overflowing it today. James W. Gilson, postmaster, announced.

So unprecedented was the rush that prepared application forms ran out fifteen minutes after the window was scheduled to open at 10 a. m.

Hundreds of other job-seekers were turned away disappointed.

Postmaster Gilson pointed out today that of the hundreds who will file application for work, the Hartford post office and its sub-stations will be able to employ 300 or 400.

STEAL SENATOR'S FIFER

St. Paul, Nov. 15.—(AP)—It is enough to get injured without losing your pet pipe and overcoat to souvenir hunters, Senator Gerald F. Nye of North Dakota said today as he prepared to leave his hospital bed here.

Senator Nye suffered two rib fractures and one and a half inches of his car skidded from the highway near Hudson, Wis., Saturday. Souvenir hunters escaped with his pet possessions left in the wrecked automobile.

He had gone to Ansonia for a native festival and was accompanied a third time when the accident occurred. He had been driving a car when he was struck by a truck. One bullet hit the governor in the face and another in the chest. The skyer fled into the jungle and has not been caught.

MOVES TO HARTFORD

Hartford, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Deputy Attorney General Ernest A. Averill of Stratford has moved to Hartford for the winter, having taken a place on Congress street.

PRIVATE STATES GRIEVANCE

Manufacturers Denounce Government Competition; Against Tariff Change.

New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Members of the National Association of Manufacturers assembled for their 27th annual convention today and heard denunciation of government competition with private business and declarations against general Congressional tariff reductions.

A report by the organization's tariff commission supported the tariff commission form of administration and said:

"Experience has demonstrated that general Congressional revisions of the tariff permit of too much political manipulation, retard industry and business to the point of stagnation and produce neither scientific nor satisfactory results."

Speakers who professed alarm at the extent of government competition in business were James L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company; B. L. Wischell, chairman of the executive committee of the Remington Rand Company, and James A. Emery, general counsel of the Manufacturing Association.

Federal Competition
Windshell said that the Army and Navy in the past eleven years "have done more than $170,000,000 worth of work for fourteen other departments of the government."

He submitted for committee on the subject five recommendations. They were:

"1. Government ought not to engage either directly or through subsidies in the manufacture, production or purchase of commodities or services for sale or re-sale in competition with private enterprise."
"2. It ought to procure commodities and services for all its uses from the commercial and industrial world."
"3. Federal agencies should not be employed to produce commercial or military articles manufactured by or obtainable in quantity from private industry."
"4. Government departments, while continuing to engage in an act of production of goods, should be required to establish and maintain a standard system of accounting containing those elements ordinarily recognized in all similar conditions of private operation."
"5. Other things equal, the government should give preference in the purchasing of commodities and services to domestic producers."

TO CONTEST ELECTION

Washington, Nov. 15.—(AP)—S. Davis Wilson, Philadelphia attorney, said today Lawrence Rupp of Allentown would contest the reelection of Senator James J. Davis, Republican. The unofficial count showed Davis defeated Rupp, his Democratic opponent.

Wilson, representing Rupp, said the contest would be filed in the Senate within 30 days. Intimidation of voters, excessive expenditures and vote buying were given as reasons for the charges brought in the contest. Wilson added, he was confident that if the votes for Davis illegally obtained were thrown out Rupp would be elected by a substantial majority.

Wilson was employed by Representative Black (D. N. Y.) as counsel for a sub-committee of the House campaign funds committee which watched House elections in several states. He attended a committee session today.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

TAKING BEAUTY BY THE REINS

Ears have come out into the open this winter, or at least half way. Are yours the kind that should appear? Just what can you do to heighten their attractiveness?

If you have delightful looking little shell-pink ears that somebody apparently pinned to your head when you were so young that they grew nice and close, then you don't have to do much but show them.

If your ears are very large and unpleasant looking, why try to show them? Cover them up, all but the lobe, which sometimes can appear to advantage with a small, close-to-the-head carrying, neatly made, to do much but show them.

If your ears are ridiculously small, then slender, long earrings tend to elongate. Nothing is more incongruous than a fat-faced woman with very small ears. Here is where long earrings help out a lot.

Sometimes women have ears that are not attractive at the top but well-formed at the lower part, with the little lobe well shaped. These are the ears that wear tight little jeweled earrings well.

Some of the new earrings are jeweled little earlines, as they are called, fastening to the lobe and then outlining the edge of it, instead of just being a round button or a pendant.

If you do wear your ears exposed, especially at night a touch or rouge on the lobe is a nice addition. It emphasizes the fact that you're modern enough to expose your ears.

However you wear your ears, your ears should have their outer portion creamed when you massage your face at night. Be careful not to get any into your inner ear, of course. But creaming them gives you a well-groomed feeling.

He had gone to Ansonia for a native festival and was accompanied a third time when the accident occurred. He had been driving a car when he was struck by a truck. One bullet hit the governor in the face and another in the chest. The skyer fled into the jungle and has not been caught.

Punts—Passes

Cambridge, Mass.—If the usual tradition is observed, Harvard's starting lineup against Yale will have Nasro and Hageman at ends; Hardy and Bancroft, tackles; Gundlach and Easterly, guards; Hollowell, center; Wells, Crickard, Barrett and Dean, backfield.

West Point—With all due respect to West Virginia Wesleyan's excellent team, it wasn't because of its game this week against Army that made the Cadets drill behind curtains yesterday. Army is looking ahead to the Notre Dame and Navy games.

Providence—Brown's forthcoming cruise game with Colgate has forced Tom McLaughlin to do something he hasn't done in years. He's ordered a secret practice for Saturday of this week.

CRIMSON GRIDDERS NOW GET ELABORATE MEDICAL SCRUTINY

Old Harvard Stars Call It "Coddling"; Recent Football Humiliation Brings Charges.

Boston, Nov. 15.—Harvard's humiliation at the hands of Army has resulted, for one thing, in a complaint by certain old-timers of the Haughton era that the players are being coddled by an intensive medical supervision the equal of which is not to be found at any college football establishment in the land.

"Tack" Hardwick, Harvard All-American end in 1914, has said that "Casey's" team is being so cautiously handled with kid gloves that he and his aides have not been able to work the men as a unit into the physical and mental condition essential to success.

But where one complains of this elaborate hospitalization there will be many more who thoroughly approve of it, especially parents of the boys.

It is a fact that Harvard is an outstanding leader in the prevention and care of football injuries. Harvard has nearly 600 boys out for football this fall. That includes varsity, junior varsity, freshmen and house teams.

At the head of the staff is Dr. Augustus Thorndike, a widely known Boston practitioner. He has three medical assistants, a doctor for the second varsity, a doctor for the freshmen and one for the house team. Dr. Thorndike attends a physiotherapy room with its whirlpool massaging device and cabinets where knees and ankles are packed in ice immediately after a sprain.

There is an X-ray room containing apparatus costing upward of $20,000. Here bone injuries are determined. There is a fluoroscopic attachment whereby they "look inside" a player and see what's going on. Diagnosis is complete. If the injury is serious enough the player not only goes to the infirmary but 700 plaster is taken over.

Harvard goes to extreme lengths in the matter of prevention. Every boy playing at Harvard is expected to have his knees and ankles taped before playing, in practice as well as games.

It takes two hours to tape the varsity squad for a game and as a rule about 500 yards of tape is used. Up to the Army game there were only two severe ankle injuries out of a squad of 48 men.

Harvard has a doctor present not only at every game but at every scrimmage. The slightest limp is quickly spotted and the player sent to the field house instantly. A sprained ankle is quickly packed in ice, later to be treated by heat and massage.

A complete record of every injury suffered by any player engaged in the sport is filed in a fireproof vault built for that purpose. A parent, no matter where he may live, upon reading that his son was out of the lineup because of injury, may receive a detailed report on the boy's physical condition.

There are, of course, old-timers who call this coddling and recall how they played through 80 minutes of football with broken ribs, twisted knees and fractured collarbones. But others who have carried into the later years the pains and creakings of trick joints—the price they grudgingly paid for their courage—rise quickly to commend the medical lavishness as practiced in Harvard football today.

One Year Ago Today—Barney Drayfus, big shot of the Pittsburgh Pirates announced that 80 men had applied for the job as manager of his team to take the place of Jewel Eas.

Five Years Ago Today—Yale beat Harvard 14-0. Illinois won the Big Ten championship by beating Ohio State, 13-0, before a capacity crowd of 78,000 at Columbus.

Ten Years Ago Today—The Amateur Athletic Union urged suspension of Joe W. Ray, crack infielder of the Chicago Cubs, for alleged exorbitant expense accounts on occasion of an appearance at New York.

The "Finest Hospital"

"Coddling," the old grads call it, but Harvard's gridiron heroes of today must have the best in medical treatment. Above Roger S. Hurlbut, backfield star, is receiving diathermic treatment. Below, George Bennett, another backfield man, is undergoing an X-ray examination of a back injury.

McCLUSKEY ALSO BROKE OLD RECORD YESTERDAY

Made Gallant Bid For Victory, But Could Not Match Barker's Pace At Finish; His Last Attempt To Capture Title.

In winning the thirty-third intercollegiate cross-country championship, George Barker, New York University's long distance ace, finally realized an ambition of three years' standing at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday afternoon, and in so doing smashed a similar ambition held by Joseph McCluskey, the Fordham flyer.

McCluskey, like Barker, was beaten off in two previous attempts at the title, and he was determined to gain a victory yesterday. But the slyling feat of Barker outran a field of 111 rivals in record time, nearly three minutes under the record set at $9,958 by Dan Dean of Pennsylvania last year. Barker's time was 28 minutes, 58 4-8 seconds, and McCluskey, placing second, also broke the old record in 29:08.

Barker won by a good fifty yards over McCluskey with Tom Otley of Michigan fifth and Arthur Foot of Harvard fourth. Manhattan College won the team title with 73 points; Syracuse was second with 111; New York U. third with 115; Michigan, State fourth with 120 and Penn State fifth with 130.

In fashioning his brilliant victory in the varsity test the N. Y. U. leader ran with poise and confidence and a world of stuff. He had run second to McCluskey in the freshman championship three years ago; he had placed sixth in the varsity run as a sophomore, third as a junior last year, and he was destined to move up to the head of the pack in his final effort.

But Barker was not to win without a terrific struggle, in which he proved his ranking with the great country aces of the I. C. A. A. A. history. A swift breeze swept across the Van Cortlandt meadows under slate gray skies—ideal cross-country weather—as the distance runners in the colorful uniforms of sixteen colleges swept away from the mark at the crack of Johnny McHugh's pistol. A surging wave of racing legs cut a path fifty yards wide across the parade ground headed to the north and the hills.

From the time the field straightened out into a long winding queue, Barker was bounding along in front, with Otley at his elbow. Otley, a sophomore, was a strong favorite. He is the American 10,000-meter champion. He had run away with the final Olympic tryout out in California in a race in which Barker was forced out by a cramp.

So there was an added spur to send Barker onward, racing here again with Otley. Up to the hills the first time Barker and Otley ran like a team, with Joe Mangano, of Cornell, intercollegiate mile champion, close behind, and Foote and McCluskey following at ten-yard intervals. Ryan, of Manhattan, had attempted to match the killing pace in the first mile, and now he had fallen back, remembering his coach's instructions to lay off the pace and keep his team together. He picked up Crowley and McKenna, and they kept an eye rearward at the others in Green.

McCluskey Advances Mangano faded from contention in the last three miles and McCluskey moved into third place in the hills, but Otley and Barker moved along step by step in unison. First Otley surged ahead by inches, then Barker. But it was Otley in the main that kept the best where it was: a striding pace that seems much too

MANCHESTER PLACES FIFTH IN FIRST INTERSCHOLASTIC STATE CROSS COUNTRY RUN

EXPERTS DECLINE TO PICK HARVARD-YALE GAME WINNER

Outcome of Past Battles Makes Tilt Hard To Figure; Crimson Has Better Record This Season

New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Its Yale vs. Harvard for the 51st time Saturday and the football experts rapidly are tearing up their dope sheets and, almost without exception, candidly declining to pick the winner.

There is no figuring a Yale-Harvard game. An Ell outfit facing what might seem to be a superior Harvard eleven frequently has played over its collective head and sent the experts scurrying for cover.

The last two years furnish excellent examples of just this point. In 1924, Yale came down to the Harvard game with only one defeat while Harvard had been beaten by Army, Dartmouth, Michigan and Holy Cross, and tied by William & Mary. Yet the Crimson won 13 to 0.

Last season Harvard, with one of the East's great eleven went into the Yale game undefeated, but Albie Booth's field goal gave the Elis a 3-0 triumph.

This season neither has any particular luck. Yale's only victory was a 6-0 conquest of Dartmouth. The Elis have been tied by Bates, Chicago and Princeton, and beaten by Brown and Army.

Harvard whipped Buffalo, New Hampshire, Penn State and Dartmouth in succession but dropped a decision to Brown and then took a 4-0 losing from Army. Last week the Crimson showed surprising resolve to form, beating Holy Cross 7-0.

Yale has a wide edge in the fifty games the rivals have played since 1875 with 27 victories against 17 Harvard. Six games were resulted in ties, all scoreless. Twelve in the 48-0 victory the Yale eleven of 1844 achieved. Harvard beat the Elis 4-0 in 1915 for the next most one-sided score.

Both have been handicapped by injuries this season but virtually all the "gripplers" should be in shape by Saturday.

By right of age, the Yale-Harvard struggle tops the eastern program this week although there are a number of other highly important intrasectional struggles involving traditional or natural rivals.

RUPPERT BELIEVES YANKS HAVE GREAT CHANCES NEXT YEAR

Expects His Team To Win Pennant, And Ruth To Sign Contract; Talks of Return of Beer.

French Lick, Ind., Nov. 15.—(AP)—Beer, baseball and Babe Ruth were in the mind of Colonel Jacob Ruppert of New York today.

Not that the three subjects are related, but it happens the colonel is president of the United States Brewers Association, owner of the New York Yankees baseball team and has to get the famous slugger's signature on a new contract.

Ruppert is at French Lick for his annual 21 days' rest. He thinks the Yankees have a great chance to win the American League pennant in 1928 and does not expect any trouble in signing the highest salaried ball player in history.

"Babe's all right; he will sign at the right time," Ruppert said. Return of real beer interests the colonel more than anything else right now. He believes the Volstead Act will be modified during the short term of Congress beginning in December to permit manufacture of the beverage.

"If that is done, my own brewery will be ready to produce the real stuff on a minute's notice," Colonel Ruppert said. "It will mean great activity here for the 800 breweries in the United States and the opening of others."

"I believe the brewers, if permitted to manufacture real beer will within one year have under way a $900,000,000 building program."

Colonel Ruppert said his association had figured that a government tax of 85 or 84 a barrel on beer would raise more than $600,000,000 a year.

SMITH OF RUTGERS TAKES FROSH RACE

Leads Pack By Fifty Yards To Win In 14:33.1; Weather Chilly.

Van Cortlandt Park, New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Daniel Smith, first-footed freshman runner from Rutgers University, yesterday won the 15th annual Freshman cross country run of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America over the three mile course in this big city park.

Smith finished the bill and date journey in 14 minutes, 33.1 seconds, about 50 yards ahead of Albert V. Acerno, of Manhattan College, who came in second. Jerome Callione, of Fordham, was third.

A crowd of some 1,500 persons gathered at the finish line in the chill air, tempered only slightly by a bright sun. The turf was thawing from an overnight frost. Manhattan, defending the team title it won last year, finished three men in the first ten, William J. Ray coming in fourth.

The order of finish: 1.—Daniel Smith, Rutgers, 14:33.1; 2.—Albert V. Acerno, Manhattan, 14:42; 3.—Jerome Callione, Fordham; 4.—William J. Ray, Manhattan; 5.—Robert Hill, Princeton; 6.—Daniel Callinger, Yale; 7.—Sam Musico, Pittsburgh; 8.—William Weiss, Columbia; 9.—John Wolff, Manhattan; 10.—George Allen, Yale.

NOT SUCH SLUGGERS The combined total of home runs made by members of the Chicago Cubs during the 1925 season did not equal Babe Ruth's record of 49 set in 1927.

Recreation Center Items of Interest

Volleyball League After dropping the first game to the Leopards the Wildcats under the leadership of Frank Wadell won the second two games after a red hot battle in the Rec Volley Ball League last night at the West Side Rec. Captain Johnny Falkowski and his squad of ball hoppers gave the Wildcats plenty of opposition during the match but the Wildcats were just a little too much for them. Score 14-16, 15-8, 15-10.

In the second contest Captain Fred Hansen's Lions proved to the Tigers that they were still the King of all animals by taking them into camp in three straight games. Scores: 15-8, 15-11, 15-6. Captain Jay Chapman's men fought gallantly but in vain.

Wildcats: Wadell, Anderson, Bissell, Egan, Angelo, McCann and Mahoney. Leopards: Falkowski, Gustafson, Quinn, Smith, Russell and Kerr. Lions: Hansen, Schubert, McCoukey, Cotton, Wiley, and McCann. Tigers: Chapman, Wadell, Vennert, Hadden and Cordeiro.

Next week brings together the Wildcats and the Lions at seven o'clock with the Leopards and Tigers furnishing the excitement in the second series.

Basketball Notes Owing to a number of the players of the league having to practice with both the Rec. Five and the Guards on Thursday evening it is necessary to make a change in the personnel of the teams. All players entered in the basketball league are requested to keep an eye open for information concerning the league which will be printed in these columns Wednesday evening.

U. S. ARMY WINS New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—The International military jumping championship still belongs to the United States Army team. FRENCH ARMS CUT PLAN GIVEN TO THE PUBLIC

"The application of the principles laid down in the previous chapter will make it possible to give full effect to the obligations devolving upon members of the League of Nations x x x."

Chapter Three provides special regional agreements for mutual assistance against any aggressor in the European sphere. This involves reductions in effectives and man-terials of war with a special allotment of troops and arms for the use of the league of nations in enforcing peace.

"The French government hopes that this European system will appear to the powers who will not be loath to it to be of sufficiently great importance from the point of view of the consolidation of peace for them to render its application possible by agreeing, for their part, to give full effect to the guarantees arising out of the pact by which they are already bound: 'The Pact of Paris or the Covenant of the League of Nations. Without this acceptance the plan would be impracticable.'"

(The United States is a signatory of the Pact of Paris, or Kellogg-Briand Pact, and of its Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson said recently: "Consultation between the signatories of the pact when faced with the threat of its violation becomes inevitable.")

Act of Aggression The third chapter also defined an act of aggression thus: "x x x When a territory under the authority of one of the signatory powers is attacked or invaded by foreign force. An aggression as thus defined cannot be taken into account certain cases, such as the existence of an agreement to the contrary, the case of self-defense, (I. E. S. The repulsing of armed forces which have entered by violent means the territory of the state which is defending itself) and action undertaken in execution of Article 16 of the Covenant of the League of Nations or specially authorized for any reason by the Council or Assembly of the League."

"While the French government has objected to the conditions in which the 'claim for equality of rights has been put forward, while it does not recognize the force of the legal arguments on which this claim is based, and while it persists in the belief that any solution involving rearmament would be unacceptable as being contrary to the very purpose of the conference, it has never denied that the problem was among the political problems brought up before the conference."

The French plan insisted that political and military questions interlocked throughout and asserted their plan must be considered as a whole. Technical features The technical features of the suggestion, which is designed to achieve these general purposes are, roughly:

- 1. The establishment in European countries of short-term, defensive conscript armies; 2. Special offensive forces which would be placed under the direction of the League in emergencies; 3. The establishment of stocks of powerful arms in certain localities in the countries providing those stocks which would be under the control of the League and for the use of the League; 4. A special Mediterranean naval pact and a general pact for the suppression of offensive naval arms; 5. The abolition of aerial bombardment and the regulation of all aircraft to prevent the use of bombardment, the organization of European civil air transport under international European supervision, and a special air force which would be placed at the disposition of the League for peace purposes.

LIBBY HOLMAN FREED FROM MURDER CHARGE

guilty, then the door should not be closed to a prosecution should sufficient evidence to justify it be available at any time hereafter.

Presented Before

"It will be recalled that practically all of the evidence which is now available was presented to the coroner's jury which heard the testimony and so far as I know, all of the witnesses who attended the party. Likewise the evidence of all persons who were in the house at the time of the killing, as well as the evidence of physicians who made the post-mortem examination and found the evidence insufficient to justify a charge against any person, and while the Grand Jury did prefer such a charge, and while I have no criticism to make of their action, for I know that it was honest and sincere, yet the Grand Jury did not have the benefit of the evidence of any witness who was present at the party or who was in the house at the time of the shooting. For these reasons, I request that a noli prosequi be entered in this case."

By Leasing a non-suit, Higgins can at any time move to bring Mrs. Reynolds and Walker to trial merely by appearing before a judge and moving that the case be reopened on the grounds of newly discovered evidence.

Formal entering of the nol prosequi was delayed momentarily while court attaches went in search of Sheriff Transou Scott who was not in the court room when Higgins made his statement.

Walker, also was absent. W. N. Reynolds, the father of the dead young man who requested that the charges be dropped, was present, accompanied by his attorney. Reynolds said the solicitor's course was satisfactory.

Smith Reynolds was rushed to a hospital from his home in Watertown, Salem last July 6, a pistol wound in his head. He died shortly afterward.

Most all of the principals in the case, house party guests said they were convinced that the fatal wound was self-inflicted, but several circumstances made officials dubious.

Mrs. Reynolds said that her mind was a blank for 40 hours and was returned to lucidity by a "flash." Ab Walker said that Reynolds declared, after an all night party: "I'm going to end it all." With these words, he told a coroner's jury, Reynolds flung to him this pistol.

Officials were unable in the first search to find the gun with which Reynolds was killed. In a second search they found it on the floor near a door where they felt it should have been easily found the first time. They found blood on a towel in the bathroom.

A nurse said that she found Walker and Mrs. Reynolds struggling on a floor in a room of the hospital while Reynolds' wounds were being treated in another room. The nurse quoted Mrs. Reynolds as saying: "Oh, my baby, my baby. Don't you know I'm going to have a baby." Walker was held as a material witness. The coroner's jury found that Reynolds came to his death at the hand of "a party or parties unknown."

August 4's Grand Jury indicted Mrs. Reynolds, said Walker on charges of murder. They were arraigned and released on bail of $25,000.

lives who, if free to express their opinions would feel that there was a definite advantage for them? Vandenberg asked.

"Whatever has been their views in the past," Thom replied, "they have come to the conclusion that this is a sound position."

Senator Walsh (D., Mont.), asked for the names of some representatives of western roads leading into Chicago who supported Thom's views. The railroad spokesman named Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific; Henry A. Scandrett, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul; C. T. Jeffrey, of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie and Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and Northwestern.

"I am sure that will be most interesting to those in our part of the country," Walsh commented.

Characterizing the proposed waterway as "dubious practicability and economically unsound," John P. Magill, of the Maritime Association of New York, said its consummation would result in a "total disruption of the transportation flow in this country."

"That dislocation," Magill added, "would bring with it reductions in the earning capacities of existing facilities" and direct subsidy to the present flow of tonnage through north and south Atlantic ports.

The enrollment of Columbia University in New York is about 35,500 resident students and about 10,000 non-resident ones.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

Better Times Are Here

Let's turn them into Good times through Faith, Courage and shoulder-to-shoulder Co-operation!

A certain man, whom we shall call Smith, answered an advertisement and sent a dollar for four pairs of socks. When he received them, he looked them over, and wrote the manufacturer:

"Socks received. The patterns are via. I wouldn't be seen on the street with them on."
And the answer from the manufacturer was:

"What are you objecting to? Didn't we guarantee you wouldn't wear them out?"

After that Smith purchased his socks from local merchants.

Phyllis—Your husband is certainly wild about you, isn't he?

Lola—Yes, he raves about me in his sleep, but the poor abominable boy nearly always calls me by the wrong name.

If you have a story, joke, pun or short poem that appeals to you as funny, send it in to this column. The editor MAY print it—but he won't send it back.

Bride (to her husband)—I wish our bank could get on its feet enough to stop sending our checks back marked "No Funds." A bank that hasn't enough money on hand to pay a $4.27 check ought to be merged and put on a sound basis.

Mrs. Blabber—Marriage is a business.

Mr. Blabber—Yeah, and the husband is the silent partner.

It May Be True That There Is A Growing Scarcity Of Girls Who Know How To Keep House. But There Is Also A Scarcity Of Young Men Who Know How To Provide The House.

The following testimonial letter was written to a patent medicine company by Aunt Agatha Littleford of Brushville:

"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. A month ago I was so weak I could not spank the baby. Two bottles of your cure and I am now able to thrash the old man. Heaven bless you."

Billy—And now, Dad, that I've told you that I'm going to marry Ann, there's one more thing I'd like to get off my chest.

Dad—What's that, son?

Billy—A tattooed heart with Peggy's name on it.

REBOUNDS: Strange that our weak points have a deeper root than our strong ones. . . Faith may remove mountains, but work is the only way we have been able to tunnel them. . . Brains aren't everything, but they're important. . . Love is the same as it ever was, 'cept that it acts quicker and don't last so long. . . An honest man never claims to be—he just is. . . Sometimes a boy's love is so blind he can't even see his own faults.

Silas—I didn't sleep very well last night.
Hiram—What was the matter?
Silas—The shade was up.
Hiram—Why didn't you pull it down?
Silas—I couldn't reach across the street.

A HINT TO THE WOMEN: Consider the lilies of the field. They never heard of lipstick and eyebrow tweezers, yet Solomon in all his glory was never arrayed like one of them.

An Alabama paper puts it this way: "If you like our paper tell the world; if you don't like it, keep your foot mouth shut!"

EA CHA!
WANTED—Stenographer for heating contractor's office.—Ad in New York World-Telegram.

Jasper—I've come to the conclusion that women are puzzles.
Smith—So have I. I've had to give several of them up.
