CANNON PRESENTS HIS SIDE OF CASE

Southern Bishop Tells House Committee That Beer That Is Intoxicating Cannot Be Legalized.

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Prohibition leaders rallied behind Bishop James Cannon, Jr., today to present to the House ways and means committee the argument that Congress is without power to fix the alcoholic content of beverages.

Speaking to the committee members grouped about their high horseshoe table, the Southern Methodist churchman stood at the front of the crowded hall and reported a grand total of $50,288.40 for the seven-day drive for funds with which to carry on the Association's work projects this winter. The total reported last night was $3,000 more than was reported for the first five days of the drive.

Expect More
Chairman William C. Cheney and the members of the financial committee were hopeful for several large contributions which would increase the total figure approximately $1,000 in their opinion.

At the last annual town meeting the town appropriated $60,000 for charity and $50,000 for unemployment. The total sum for alleviation of distress will approximate the amount expended last year, $183,000, it is estimated.

Need Better Plan
Finance Chairman William C. Cheney remarked that there was a need for someone to evolve a better way to raise money in the future. Until that time, he said, there was no better way than a house to house

The entire organization of the Manchester Emergency Employment campaign met last night in High School hall and reported a grand total of $50,288.40 for the seven-day drive for funds with which to carry on the Association's work projects this winter. So They Looked a Little Cheerful!

This may be their last picture together, but are they downhearted? No! President Hoover and his cabinet members lined up for this picture, looking stern. Then a cameraman asked, "Can't you look a little cheerful?" The cabinet relaxed in laughter and smiles with this result. Seated, left to right, are Ogden L. Mills (treasury), Vice President Charles Curtis, President Hoover, Henry L. Stimson (state), Patrick J. Hurley (war), standing, left to right, are Roy D. Chapin (commerce), Ray Lyman Wilbur (interior), William D. Mitchell (justice), Walter Brown (postoffice), Charles F. Adams (navy), Arthur Hyde (agriculture), and William N. Doak (labor).

WAR DEBTS THREATEN HERRIOT GOVERNMENT

House Rejects Move To Impeach Hoover

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The House, by 361 to 8 votes this afternoon rejected a move by Representative McFadden, Pennsylvania Republican, for the impeachment of President Hoover on the ground that he had betrayed the country on war debts.

The resolution charged the President had "failed to obey and to uphold the law passed by the 72nd Congress forbidding cancellation in whole or in part of the war debts due to the United States from foreign nations, and in endeavoring to nullify the contracts existing between the United States and its foreign debtors."

It was tabled on motion of the Democratic dean of the House, Foul of North Carolina, with opposition votes coming only from Representatives Blanton (D., Tex.), Griffin (D., N. Y.), Fatman (D., Texas), Romjue (D., Mo.), Sweeney (D.,

Chamber of Deputies Undecided Whether Payment To U. S. Should Be Made This Week; Propose That a Conference Should Be Held First.

Paris, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Premier Herriot's government seemed seriously impeded today as the Chamber of Deputies began discussion of whether to approve the government's proposal to pay the December debt installment to the United States with reservations.

Before the opening of the session both the foreign affairs and finance committees of the Chamber went on record by large majorities as opposing the government's solution of the debt difficulty and voted in favor of deferring payment until such time as the United States consents to an international debt conference.

This decision was followed up during a recess of the Chamber by a vote in a sub-committee of ten deputies reiterating that France should not pay until America agrees to a conference.

This action was taken after Louis Marin, in the course of a speech, declared that France should refuse payment because the financial burdens of the war should be borne by all peoples.

Chamber Guarded
Outside the Chamber several hundred mounted Republican guards maintained order.

Despite the danger of being overthrown, the premier today recalled the Chamber lobby talking almost jokingly with several friends as the Chamber reassembled after a recess.

Deputy Lamoureux, general reporter for the finance committee, mounted the tribune and recalled that the foreign affairs and finance committees, after having heard M. Herriot in the morning, had adopted a resolution accepting a proposal to pay the December installment to America on condition that the American government agree beforehand to a proposal for an international conference.

Subsequent events, he said, had changed the situation and therefore the finance and foreign affairs committees drafted a new resolution saying that in the circumstances had been altered, the debt records had lost their force and should be the object of new negotiations.

Not This Month
The resolution said also that the Chamber could not pay the United States this month even with reservations, because the latter's refusal to accept a proposal for an international conference.

Hence, he said, the committee decided to advocate postponing the payment.

Then the premier went to the tribune.

He expressed astonishment that the two committees made no allusion to the government's proposal for handling the December payment. He said he was obliged to thank his political associates for their reply which he said had expected to come from his friends.

M. Malvy, chairman of the finance committee, replied that all members of the committee respected the premier, but that his committee had refused to approve that action of the governmental project authorizing payment of the December installment.

U. S. SATISFIED
Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Great Britain's explanation that the conditions she is making on December 15 war debt payments need not affect the United States' stand in accepting the money, is considered satisfactory by American officials.

This was learned today after Secretary Stimson had held a brief conference with President Hoover. It appeared here that the exchange of notes between the two countries in regard to the debts would now cease at least until after the payment date.

Great Britain's third note, delivered to Stimson last night, said that while that government stood by the position that it regarded the December 15 installment's payment to be credited to a new settlement, it did not intend this to affect the "constitutional position of the United States," left officials stung, that the payment could be accepted, though made without strings, and with no implied agreement on the part of this country.

Though Stimson left the White House as the Cabinet meeting began this morning, the debt question was a principal topic discussed at that gathering. No conclusions were announced, however.

Later as officials conferred on the question it developed that some difference of opinion existed and possibly appeared that a further exchange of notes might follow to clarify that the United States position not only "constitutional" but

NEW RELIEF PLAN TO HELP FARMERS

Bill Covers Wheat, Cotton, Tobacco and Hogs—How It Will Operate.

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A tentative draft of a domestic allotment farm relief plan covering wheat, cotton, tobacco and hogs and repealing the stabilization provisions of the Farm Board Act was made public today as the basis of a public hearing by the House agriculture committee.

After an executive session of nearly one hour, Chairman Jones distributed the draft of the emergency bill he had prepared to members of the committee. It meets tomorrow to proceed with consideration.

"This is simply a tentative bill to be used wholly as the basis of the committee's work," Jones explained.

Domestic Consumption
The first section of the measure directs that within 30 days of enactment the secretary of agriculture shall estimate and proclaim the probable domestic consumption of the 1933 production of wheat, cotton, tobacco and hogs.

Each producer then would be entitled to an adjustment certificate "covering the domestic consumption percentage of each lot of the commodity which is produced which is marketed by or for him during the year."

The fair amount of the adjustment certificates were to be fixed at 42 cents a bushel for wheat, 6 cents a pound for cotton, 4 cents a pound for hogs, less administrative expenses.

Two Alternatives
There are two alternatives ahead, he said—inflation or adjustments "necessary for a resumption of normal business at lower prices." It is "prudent to expect," he said, "that the long, hard grind of sound money will be chosen."

"In that event, 1933 will probably

TRADE UPTURN DEPENDS ON NEW ADMINISTRATION

Noted Statistician Asserts Present Economic Situation Not Likely To Be Automatically Self-Curing.

Cleveland, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Business recovery "will be conditioned to an unexampled degree" by what happens in Washington the coming year, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice-president of the Cleveland Trust Company and nationally recognized statistician, said today.

Col. Ayres, in his annual address before the Chamber of Commerce on the business outlook, asserted that unlike any previous depression, the present economic situation "is not likely to be automatically self-curing."

"The problem of trying to forecast the business developments of 1933 is one that involves in large measure the attempt to guess or estimate the degree to which the policies of the new administration at Washington will be formulated with wisdom and its actions guided by sagacity. It is quite literally a problem of political economy rather than one of business economics."

Predictions Impossible
For that reason, he said, it is impossible to make the customary yearly business predictions except in a few cases. He regarded probabilities of: lower industrial wages rates, a lower cost of living, a greater number of commercial failures, less dividend payments and interest rates on commercial paper, and an output of trucks and cars in the United States and Canada of between 1,250,000 and 2,000,000.

"More fundamental matters such as the probable volume of industrial production in 1933 as compared with 1932, the amount of building construction, the output of iron and steel, the production of electric power, the loadings of railroad freight, the volume of industrial employment, and the trends of security prices may be so greatly influenced by political developments as well as by more impersonal economic forces, that they defy prediction."

Three other possible avenues of escape from the death penalty also were open. She may appeal to the State Board of Pardons and Poles; she may obtain a sanity hearing before a Federal county jury, but only at the request of the warden of the state prison; or she may appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Attorney Verge said, in event a rehearing is denied by the State Supreme Court, a writ of error will be filed with the United States Supreme Court.

Errors in Trial
"We believe there were prejudicial errors in Mrs. Judd's trial," Verge stated, "and we will fight the thing through the highest tribunal in the land."

Just spent last night in her cell in "condemned row" with her mother, Mrs. H. J. McKinnell of Darlington, Ind., who had been allowed by the warden to remain with her daughter, Mrs. Judd the wife of Dr. William Judd, Los Angeles physician, had received calmly the news that the State Supreme Court said she should hang.

Mrs. Judd was convicted of murdering Mrs. Agnes Anne Le Roi, a former friend with whom she resided in Phoenix, Ariz. She also was charged with the murder of Miss Hedwig Sammler, another former companion, but never was brought to trial on this charge. The testimony showed both women were slain at about the same time in October, 1931, their bodies dismembered and sent in trunks from Phoenix to Los Angeles where the crime was first discovered.

THREE POLICEMEN KILLED BY THUGS

Five Other Murders Reported In One Day In Chicago; Woman Suffocated.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Metropolitan Chicago counted eight deaths by violence today—six by guns in near zero temperatures; one by suffocation when robbers left a woman victim to die after blinding and gagging her, and another from stabbing.

Of the six, three were policemen, one a bandit, another an alleged automobile thief and another a former lightweight boxer.

The killings occurred within a few hours of an anti-crime ultimatum delivered by Mayor Anton J. Cermak to the city's police captains.

The dead:
Detectives Frank Svec, 44, and Edgar Chatterton, 33, of suburban Berwyn's police department.
Policeman Albert J. Magoon, 35. An unidentified robber who died while being taken to the Bridgeway hospital after engaging in a pistol fight with a drug store owner and an employe he and a confederate attempted to holdup.
Joseph Seidel, 20, shot and instantly killed by police during a four mile chase in a stolen car.
Frankie Schaeffer, 30, former boxer. Body found in a tailor shop which police said was a bear fat.
Miss Gertrude Frish, 49, suffocated.

CONLEY VICTORIOUS IN SUPERIOR COURT

Declared To Be Senator-Elect From 21st District; Board Must Certify It.

Bridgport, Dec. 13.—(AP)—William A. Conley was declared to be Senator-elect from the 21st district by Superior Court Judge Frank P. McEvoy today. A decision was filed by the court in the mandamus proceedings brought by Conley against the state canvassing board to compel the latter to grant his election over Frederick Harrison, Republican, and the issues are for Conley.

Judge McEvoy ordered the board to certify Conley's election.

The arguments in the mandamus proceedings were made last week. Deputy Attorney General Ernest L. Averill and Raymond P. Johnson representing Secretary of State W. L. Higgins, State Treasurer Roy C. Wilcox and Comptroller F. M. Salmon who constitute the board.

Conley Victorious
The court was informed the board was unwilling to certify Conley's election until the Supreme Court of Errors had passed upon the mandamus action of Harrison who sought to have a recount. Judge McEvoy had refused to grant Harrison's demand. An appeal was taken. Conley then sought through a mandamus to have his election certified, and in this he has won.

The 1933 State Senate is Democratic by a margin of one. If Conley does not actually take his seat at the opening of the session Senator Fred Atwater of the 21st District, a Democrat, has the constitutional right to take it until Conley, or Harrison, is finally given it.

Dr. Higgins was the only witness examined before Judge McEvoy in the mandamus proceedings. He produced a record of the board's meeting on November 30. Under cross examination, he said the list of Senators-elect, which was omitted in the 21st district, was prepared by a clerk in the office of the secretary of state.

The official record books showed that the board made a note on the proceedings that no certification was made in the 21st District pending.

Anti-Saloon League To Return To Strategy Used 15 Years Ago.

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A decision to seek a new vote in states where prohibition laws were repealed in the recent elections was made today by the national board of trustees of the Anti-Saloon League.

The vote will be sought whenever it is legally possible to regain the status of dry and all dry laws hit by referenda.

The board met to draft a general policy for the league in the fight against repeal or modification of dry laws.

SEEKING CONTROL OF WARNER BROS.

Battle Rages Over Election of Five Directors of Moving Picture Concern.

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 13.—(AP)—The battle over the election of five directors and control of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., continued today.

The annual meeting, which began yesterday morning and recessed late last night, took another recess until this afternoon after it was announced at today's session that the count of proxies had not been completed.

A force of 97 clerks started the count early last night after a group opposing the management contended a quorum was not represented. It was stated the task may not be completed until late this afternoon or possibly tonight.

Proxies controlled by the management are being counted, the opposition force headed by Max Goldberg, of Salem, Mass., having declined to permit theirs to be counted on the ground the management would not vote them.

The meeting began electing five

FIND ARMED MAN IN KAISER'S HOME

Well Dressed Stranger Had Long Dagger and Pistol When Discovered.

Doorn, the Netherlands, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A well-dressed stranger, caught yesterday in the former Kaiser's castle with a long dagger and a pistol on his person, was identified by castle guards today as a man who gained access to the castle grounds last Sunday, but was ejected.

They said he had stayed at a local hotel since Saturday under the name Millinkoff, but that his real name was supposed to be Eder. The man said he was German and had a message for the former Kaiser from Adolf Hitler, National Socialist Party chief in Germany. The prisoner was taken by a police guard to the provincial capital, Utrecht, whence it was believed he would be escorted across the frontier. While in Doorn, his behavior was quiet and he excited no suspicion.

Near Kaiser's Room
He was discovered crouching yesterday in the so-called turret room of the castle, adjoining the ex-Kaiser's study.

Police said he slipped into the grounds of Wilhelm von Hohenzollern's exile home behind an automobile and succeeded in entering the vestibule of the castle last Sunday. He asked a servant to direct him to the Kaiser.

He appeared to be unbalanced and was refused admittance. He said in fluent German that he would call again.

When caught yesterday, police said, he refused to give any information other than he had no felonious intentions. He was detained overnight at the Doorn Town Hall because the town has no prison. He was believed to have climbed unseen over the castle wall to reach the turret room.

Dollar Worth a Quarter More than 2 Years Ago

Chicago, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The dollar, a survey in the nation's second largest city showed today, is about 25 cents larger than it was in 1929.

Breakfast of two eggs, toast, coffee, and fried potatoes all for 12 cents—that was one of the bargains which they call "imprudent." A men's shop that sold suits at from $75 to $125 a few years ago now carries a $35 line. Proportionate reductions have taken place in women's clothing.

State street's jewelry stores—where even the best customer was greeted with just a tinge of superiority a few years ago—appeared to have adopted a new policy. Here it is: "No reasonable offers refused."

Lower prices also were offered by amusement places, although two Broadway musical shows continue to play to full houses at $3.30 the same top prices that have prevailed for years. Only two weeks ago movie theaters cut their top admission prices from 55 to 75 cents.

MRS. JUDD HOPES TO ESCAPE NOOSE

Hold Conference With Husband and Lawyers To Apply For New Trial.

Florence, Ariz., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, Arizona's trunk murderer, called her husband and attorneys into conference here today at the state prison to lay plans to prevent her execution by hanging which the State Supreme Court has set for Feb. 17.

Her only hope for immediate delay in yesterday's court's order is a formal petition for a rehearing of the arguments presented when the new trial was sought. Arthur C. Verge of Los Angeles, one of the condemned woman's attorneys, said he would file immediately.

Three other possible avenues of escape from the death penalty also were open. She may appeal to the State Board of Pardons and Poles; she may obtain a sanity hearing before a Federal county jury, but only at the request of the warden of the state prison; or she may appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Attorney Verge said, in event a rehearing is denied by the State Supreme Court, a writ of error will be filed with the United States Supreme Court.

TELESCOPE'S RANGE CAN BE DOUBLED

New Device Expected To Greatly Assist Astronomers In Studying Stars.

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A device expected to push out the "practical" frontiers of space twice as far as they now extend—doubling the "analyzing" range of the world's largest telescope—was described today in the annual report of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

It is an improved type of "thermionic tube" used with other apparatus to measure the brightness and color of stars and the giant nebulae of "island universes," that circle through space untold billions of miles from the earth. Its development was credited to Dr. Joel Stebbins and his assistants at the University of Wisconsin.

Discovery
President John C. Merriam of the Carnegie Institution described the improved device in his report as one of the outstanding contributions to research in astronomy of the past year. It will be used with the 100-inch telescope, largest in the world, at Mount Wilson Observatory, California.

"Construction of an instrument of this design for the 100-inch telescope," he stated, "is expected to increase the useful measures of the light of nebulae from the 13th nearly to the 15th magnitude."

This means, astronomers explain, that it will be possible to measure the size and distance of the giant "island universes" lying as much as 50 million light years from the earth. At present the limit is about 25 million light years. Nebulae that lie beyond this distance are too faint for study. A light year is the distance light would travel in a year at its speed of 186,000 miles per second.

CANNON PRESENTS HIS SIDE OF CASE

Compared with the will of his constituents, Cannon replied, "I am a fanatic," Cannon replied, his laughter arose from the jammed audience.

CANNON AT HEARING

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Presenting the contention that legalized beer would decrease instead of increase the country's revenue, a group of prohibitionists was led before the House ways and means committee today by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., to oppose the Collier beer bill.

Deets Pickett, research secretary of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal church, told the committee that other industries would be weakened by the diversion of funds to buy beer and that income and corporation taxes would decline.

UPSHAW'S LETTER

Upshaw's letter said 2.75 percent beer would be intoxicating and that "it is governmental suicide" to legalize sale of the liquor.

Pickett said as a representative of a great church "please permit me to enter a protest against the proposed action by Congress in response to what seems to be very properly characterized as hysteria on this whole liquor question."

"I mean beer of an alcoholic content sufficient to induce people to buy it," Pickett replied.

"I just wanted to know what you meant by that fine language," Treadway shot back. "You speak of church vows. Do you mean to say there is anything in the vow of the Methodist church against the drinking of beer?"

"My statement refers simply to the number of church members," Pickett answered, "it did not embrace individual views or refer specifically to church vows."

"Aren't some of the members of your church beer drinkers?" Treadway asked.

"Some I suppose," Pickett answered, "but not many. I told you that my statement referred to the number of members in my church."

"Aren't you not giving the impression," Treadway continued, "that the Methodist church approved your coming here to oppose this bill?"

"I intended to give no such impression," Pickett told him. "I think if you will read my statement that it will clarify itself on these points."

"Then you don't intend to give the impression that the Methodist church vows have any reference in opposition to this legislation," Treadway commented.

mately nine-tenths of beverage consumed in pre-prohibition days was beer.

"What evidence do you have to prove that statement?"

"I said," Pickett replied, "there was more alcohol contained in beer that was consumed than in any other liquor."

"You said beer drinking was greatly destructive to the mentality of the people," Treadway said. "Isn't Germany a great beer drinking country?"

"You can't indict a whole nation like that," Pickett replied.

Treadway insisted that Pickett produce evidence that most of the drunkenness in pre-prohibition days was due to beer.

"You say that there is hysteria on the part of those proposing this legislation," Treadway asked. "What evidence do you have of any hysteria?"

"I am not balanced or reasonable, I suppose you have heard that," Treadway said. "I have."

"I would put my conscience before my constituents," Bishop Cannon said.

"I am glad you say you would put your conscience before your constituents but how long do you think you would retain a seat in Congress if you go against your constituents?" Treadway asked.

"My conscience is more important to me than a seat in the House of Representatives," Cannon replied, as the crowd applauded loudly.

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Presenting the contention that legalized beer would decrease instead of increase the country's revenue, a group of prohibitionists was led before the House ways and means committee today by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., to oppose the Collier beer bill.

Deets Pickett, research secretary of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal church, told the committee that other industries would be weakened by the diversion of funds to buy beer and that income and corporation taxes would decline.

With Cannon, who also is one of the board officials, there appeared F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

Canon William Sheafe Chase, of the International Reform Federation and Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the National W. C. T. U., also arrived early. The room was crowded before the hearing started.

Before Pickett was presented, Collier had a letter from William D. Upshaw, a former Representative from Georgia, and presidential candidate on the Prohibition Party ticket, read by a clerk.

Upshaw's letter said 2.75 percent beer would be intoxicating and that "it is governmental suicide" to legalize sale of the liquor.

Pickett said as a representative of a great church "please permit me to enter a protest against the proposed action by Congress in response to what seems to be very properly characterized as hysteria on this whole liquor question."

"I mean beer of an alcoholic content sufficient to induce people to buy it," Pickett replied.

"I have no doubt that temperance forces will again assume the offensive but will that aggressiveness be in favor of prohibition?"

"I think so," Pickett said.

Bishop Cannon, following Pickett, said any member of the Methodist Episcopal church who uses "intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes is violating his vows."

He read from resolutions opposing "a change in the liquor laws" which had been adopted by the Kentucky and Louisville conferences of his church.

The sheaf of papers in his hand trembled as he read resolution after resolution opposing the "legalization of the liquor traffic."

"Mind you these actions were taken in the last ninety days," he said.

Federal Council He presented "the actions of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America," which he said represented about 25 percent of the Protestant churches in America.

He said Whiting Williams, of Cleveland, who had studied labor conditions over a period of years, had reported "the volume of misery was originally laid out by the efficient office force of Chamber of Commerce with added workers, and the results, in the face of discouraging conditions will give new heart to those of us who are workers."

RAILROAD EMPLOYEES MEETING TONIGHT

To Be Held In Manchester Depot With Speaker From General Offices In New Haven.

The Manchester branch of the Railroad Employees and Taxpayers' Association will hold a meeting in the Manchester railroad station at 7:30 tonight.

Mr. Sullivan of the general offices of the New Haven railroad in New Haven will be the speaker. Anyone interested in the association and the work it is doing is welcome to attend the meeting.

The organization, which is comparatively new, is especially active now since it hopes to inaugurate legislation in the coming General Assembly that will aid the railroads in their present financial difficulties.

Membership is not limited to railroad employees since the association maintains that aiding the railroads is a benefit to the taxpayers whether in the employ or not.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 13.

SPLENDIDLY DONE
 In the circumstances under which the drive of the Manchester Emergency Employment Association was necessarily conducted it has been astonishingly fruitful. Fifty thousand dollars, raised very largely through very small contributions, is a great sum. It could never have been got together save through the hardest kind of work which had to be done under discouraging and depressing circumstances. The Association, its drive committee and the individual solicitors who had to bear the brunt of a difficult job that called for real stamina are entitled to the sincere thanks of the community.

NEW VETERAN ASSOCIATION
 There was a general impression that there were already just about enough national organizations of ex-service men in the United States. However, a new one has come into being—the American Veterans Association. It was formally organized at Philadelphia on Sunday with Silas Williams of Chattanooga, Tenn., as its national commander. The first chapter of the new organization was formed in his city.

The real purpose of the Veterans Association, if one may judge from the principal resolution adopted at its initial national meeting, is to counteract the influence of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and other service organizations in the promotion or support of veterans' benefit legislation. The new association is opposed to paying the bonus until the due date, 1945, and declares against any other benefit legislation, existing or proposed, for former service men who were not disabled in the performance of their war duties.

The Veterans Association looks like a little brother of the National Economy League in that it arranges its program of interests in exact correspondence with the Economy League's platform as to benefit legislation of all kinds.

Perhaps there is sound reason for the existence of such an organization as this, since the older ex-service men's associations have run pretty wild of late in their support of a "gimme" legislation and it may be that a counterweight is needed. But we have never believed that the existing bodies would not presently become entirely reasonable in their demands, or that a good way to make them see things in a fair light is to abuse them. And this formal alignment into warring groups, on the part of the men who fought the World War for us, would seem to carry with it the probability of setting up organized bitterness—perhaps of helping to make the older organizations all the more stubborn and ruthless in their demands.

NOW FOR TAX REFORM
 It will be interesting to observe how the city of Hartford meets the fiscal situation disclosed by Mayor Rankin's annual message. When the bankers notify a city with annual expenditures of something like eleven million dollars that it must reduce its budget by two of the eleven million while it faces the necessity of increasing its relief appropriation by perhaps a million, on penalty of losing its borrowing power, that municipality is up against a real problem.

It is perhaps just as well that it is the capital city of the state that finds itself confronted by Hartford's puzzle, because whenever Hartford sets green apples the state government is a great deal more liable to have an attack of colic than if it were some other community that committed the indiscretion; and it may be that if our neighbor city finds itself in an impossible position from lack of sufficient revenue we may look, with some slight hope, to the Legislature for real action on the subject of taxation.

It is perfectly apparent that the present system of raising municipal revenues, which imposes an outrageously unjust proportion of government costs on real estate, demands drastic reform. The time has passed when we can continue to allow great fortunes in securities and evidences of debt to escape almost untouched from the inquisition of the tax gatherer, while heaping burden on burden upon the roof of the home. It is equally evident that the system of exempting certain realty holdings from taxation for any reason must come under serious scrutiny.

A great part of the municipal budget problem, now becoming so acute all over the state, arises of course from wasteful and foolish practices born of the lunacies of the madhouse period; and these, it goes without saying, must be corrected. But at least an equal part is attributable to the dire circumstances of our local taxation system. If the incoming General Assembly does not very seriously attack the problem of reforming that system it will be dodging a manifest duty—and there is no telling what may happen as a result of its default.

FOOD AS USUAL
 The annual report of the Cudahy Packing Company, showing among other things that while the concern's sales fell off during the year ending October 31 from $181,000,000 to $133,000,000, the total tonnage handled was within a fraction of 1 per cent as large as the year before, is a reflex from the bright side of the depression. No doubt the report of any of the great meat distributors would correspond very closely to it.

If this means anything it means that though the hard times may result in all other kinds of hardships they have not brought to any considerable part of the people either positive or relative hunger. The national diet has not been impaired. The people as a whole are eating as much and as good food as ever, or substantially as much, and since the fortunate can eat no more in hard times than in good it goes without saying that the unfortunate must be subsisting much the same, so far as mere food goes, as they did when things were booming.

It has been pointed out rather frequently that there is one word customarily used in connection with this depression which has no warrant in fact. That word is "starvation." There may be individual cases where families are living on short commons—no doubt there are, a good many of them. But that is because they can not bring themselves to ask for aid—not because there is not plenty of food for everybody who makes his need known—and their number must be relatively small else the effect would show in the total consumption of good food.

It is very much to be doubted if in any previous serious depression a close analysis of the nation's food consumption would not have shown a sharp shrinkage in packing house products and in all but the cheaper kinds of other foods.

The new American principle that "nobody must go hungry" very evidently is more than make believe.

"KITTY" MONEY
 How much idle capital there is in the United States nobody knows. That there is a tremendous lot of it, however, is demonstrated by the astonishing over-subscription to two Treasury loans advertised recently. One of these was covered by $350,000,000 in four year certificates bearing interest of 2 3/4 per cent; the other was a one-year loan of $250,000,000 bearing the extremely low interest rate of 3-4 of 1 per cent. Offers of subscription to the former totaled $6,877,000,000; those to the latter were $4,128,000,000. In the case of the four year certificates the loan was over-subscribed twenty times. In the case of the one year loan the over-subscription was sixteen times.

When more than four billion dollars is offered for investment at less than one per cent interest we get some idea, though a dim one, of the great stores of cash that are hidden away in safety deposit boxes and the vaults of corporations and private individuals.

It is practically certain that a large part of this idle money is offered from the reserves of some of those great industries which, though they have been operating in the red for three years, are still regarded as impregnable in their fiscal position because of their heaped up surpluses acquired in the years of prosperity. They cannot employ their former workers because they cannot sell their products, but they can't hundreds of millions to the government at a nominal interest rate. This is the "kitty" money. This is the accumulated excess profits made by manufacturing cheap and selling dear. This is some of the money withdrawn from the hands of the people by charging so much for their products that the people who made them could not buy them or any substantial part of them.

ALL LEGS GONE
 If Congress members who have been defeated but who still function are "lame ducks" there must be some corresponding term to apply to those exuberant dries who, serenely disregarding the verdict of November 8, still appear before Congressional committees and assert that they represent public opinion in opposing prohibition repeal or Volstead liberalization. To save us, however, we cannot think of one quite adequate to the exceedingly crippled state of these indomitable zealots.

A centipede that has undergone one hundred per cent pedal amputation suggests itself as an example of extreme deprivation, but we reject the implication that these worthy folks are mere bugs. However, there is this extraneous reflection, that so long as it is the locomotive and not the lingual muscles that have been cut it makes no odds to the duck, so far as his quack is concerned, whether he can waddle well or badly—whereas the footless centipede cannot sting; he can merely wriggle and make a futile fuss.

IN NEW YORK

Own Best Critic
 New York, Dec. 13.—Notes on nothing in particular and everything in general: Drama critics find themselves in the darndest situations now and then. . . . Take for instance the review of Gilbert Gabriel, one of the superior reviewers. He tossed a verbal barrage at a recent melodrama. . . . And the show was being produced by his wife's father. . . . Then there was the time that John Anderson was called upon to translate a dull and plodding European comedy. . . . On the opening night, attending in the role of critic, Anderson found himself soft-footing up into the back shadows of the balcony. . . . He almost walked out on his own show.

Izzy and Moe
 Somehow, New York manages to remember its more bizarre and amusing personalities long after they have forgotten many of its celebrated folk. . . . Thus, to this day, Izzy and Moe, the comedy prohibition agents, bob into the spotlight with vivid regularity. . . . To be sure, they have tossed away the trick disguises that kept them on the front page, and have tried to become average citizens. . . . But they continue to be dragged before the metropolitan audiences. . . .

So odd a trade as "crashing gates" can bring a sort of lasting fame. . . . One-eyed Connelly has forgotten the name of the producer John D. Rockefeller, Jr., or of Pierpont Morgan. . . . The presence of Connelly still is worth a paragraph after all these years.

Such Is Broadway
 Funny, too, the amazing up-and-downs in the show business. . . . Out upon the road during the autumn months went a music revue titled "Humpty Dumpty" . . . It had a great fall somewhere in the Pittsburgh area, folded up and seemed like a final financial blow to the producers, Schwab and DeSylva. . . . But they made changes in the cast, went into a huddle, kept the scenery and costumes and tried to decide on a new name. . . . Everyone concerned agreed to take a chance. . . . Which gave them a cue. The revue was titled "Take a Chance" . . . And it's a sure fire hit. . . . So what? . . .

But then, any number of superstitions haunt the show shops. . . . Take for instance George White. . . . Although there are scores of more modern rehearsal spots, White seeks out good old Bryant Hall. . . . Just superstitious!

Smelling Salts, Quick!
 Something of a tit as to which has created the greater number of newspaper legends goes on these days between Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler. . . . Each is sufficiently fabulous in his own right, but it so happened that they collaborated on a play, "The Great Magoo," and they both hop into the ring at the same moment. . . . Third in this exclusive little company of unique spirits is Charlie McCarthy, playwright and scenarist. . . . Wilson Mizner, now of Hollywood, and Ben De Casseres, a more serious fellow, also have a place in this parade. . . .

My own particular favorite tale concerning Fowler deals with an occasion when he was a young reporter in search of a job. . . . A critic's editor sized him up and said: "Young man, if you are to be a newspaperman you should combine the characteristics of Horace Greeley, Northcliffe and a good old country editor." . . . Fowler read the agreement and went away. . . . The next morning he appeared wearing a Horace Greeley beard, a British monocle and a stick, and a rube straw hat. . . . The editor, as might be expected, shouted for smelling salts.

SPINAL STRENGTH BUILDS VITALITY

You may have heard it said that someone "had a wishbone where his backbone ought to be." Although usually intended as figurative, this statement comes very near to being literally true, for the one who has developed spinal strength to a notable degree is not likely to lie down on the job but is up on his toes, surcharged with that glorious health necessary to do his job. . . . This is the time when men and women need plenty of backbone.

One of the functions of the human spinal column is to hold the body straight; in fact, every part of the human body is directly or indirectly supported by the framework of bones that constitute the spinal column. A person with a poorly developed spine shows a weakness in his appearance; he seems to be humped over, pot bellied and round-shouldered, his chest doesn't look as though it had enough room, he may complain of weakness and trembling through the lower back, he suffers from various aches and sore spots, and seems without the ambition to plunge ahead.

Extreme importance of the spine lies in the fact that inside the bones of the spinal column lies the spinal cord which connects the brain with most parts of the body and is itself, in a small brain, between every adjoining vertebrae pass a pair of nerves, arising from the spinal cord and carrying nerve impulses to and from various muscles and tissues. When the spine is affected, the nerves passing through it are likely to suffer grave interference which causes a loss of energy, especially in whatever organs those particular nerves serve. Chiropractors and osteopaths recognize a close connection between subluxated vertebrae and the parts supplied by the nerves passing between them. Sometimes these vertebral misplacements may be so slight as to be undetectable except to one who is very skilled in diagnosing them. However, even though the spine is not in place unless the muscles of the back are strong enough and balanced enough to hold the vertebrae in position. If you will place your finger up and down the bony protuberances in the middle of your back, you will probably find several sore places which may indicate either a vertebral subluxation or a disorder in some part supplied by the nerves passing under the sore spot.

I believe that a lack of exercise is the main reason for spinal weakness. Anyone able to move should be able to make his spine stronger by using the right exercises. The only time I do not advise exercise for strengthening the spine is to those limited class of patients who suffer from an acute inflammation of the bones of the spine. Some of the best exercises for limbering up the spine are those which include bending, stretching and twisting exercises: (1) Lie flat on your back and grasp the hands behind the neck; then raise the head, shoulders and elbows as high as possible, at the same time raise both legs, keeping the knees stiff. (2) Face downward, extend the arms straight over the head; then raise the arms, head, and shoulders at the same time that you raise the legs with the knees stiff. (3) While standing, stretch straighten the spine by contracting the spinal muscles. At first these exercises may be difficult and, if done too vigorously, may lead to sore muscles. However, if taken gently in the beginning and persisted in daily for as long as two months, you will begin to appreciate what a remarkable improvement in strength and vitality is brought about by a strong spine.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Supposed Pregnancy May be Tumour)
 Question: Mrs. Agnes Maed D. asks: "Has any woman ever been known to become pregnant after 65 years of age? If she had never borne any children, would the birth be unusually difficult?"

Answer: There have been instances of women over sixty-five bearing children, but the only instances that I know of are where children have been borne previously. Generally, a woman who has not borne children goes through the menopause between forty and fifty, after which no children are possible. Symptoms of pregnancy in a woman of sixty-five are generally indications of tumors and should call for a careful examination.

(Acid Condition Causing Stained Teeth)
 Question: Ronald O. writes: "After being on a cod liver oil diet for a month and a half, I noticed a black stain on my teeth even though I brushed them thoroughly. The stain cleaned my teeth, but in a month the discoloration was again present and tooth paste, soda, or salt would not remove the stain. Then I used orange juice and vinegar at different times on my brush and the stain disappeared. What is your opinion about this?"

Answer: The black stain on your teeth are undoubtedly due to a condition of acidosis, and this seems to be quite likely inasmuch as the vinegar or orange juice removes practically all of the stain. If you will write me again, requesting my articles on the Alkaline-Acid Balance and Acidosis and enclosing a large, self-addressed envelope and a three-cent stamp for each article desired, I am sure that this information will be more than helpful to you in overcoming the acid condition of your system.

A BOOK A DAY

BY BRUCE CATTON
TELLS HOW MEN HAVE FOUGHT TO SET DEATH BACK

In "Men Against Death," Paul de Kruif voices the perfectly human complaint that he doesn't want to die. He strolls along the wind shore of Lake Michigan, enjoying life so deeply that everything he draws and every glance from his eyes bring him ecstasy—it can be like that, by the way, along Lake Michigan—and he begins to wonder what promise medical science may have for him in his quest for a longer life.

"Men Against Death" is the book in which he studies medicine's uphill battle to ameliorate the inexorable downward trend of the life line as statistics have plotted it. He finds a good deal of encouragement. He tells how devoted and heroic doctors triumphed in their war on pernicious anemia, on diabetes, on syphilis. He recounts the brave and unassuming way in which officers of the U. S. Public Health Service went to fight spotted fever and parrot fever—and, some of them lost their lives doing it. He recalls the discoveries that have been made about the healing power of the sun itself.

It isn't all sweetness and light. That curve in the life line still dips downward. But some fine brains and stout hearts are in the battle line, and the drama of their achievements is inspiring and encouraging. Mr. de Kruif has written an absorbing book in which the human values of the long fight get their full dues. Published by Harcourt, Brace and Co., his book sells for $3.50.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

BRITAIN'S SILENCE ON ARMS DISAPPOINTING
 Capital Would Have Been More Impressed Had Note Asking Debt Delay and Revision Contained Some Mention of Disarmament.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

Washington, Dec. 13.—The British note asking for debt postponement and revision would have made more of an impression in this town if it had said something about disarmament. . . . If it was meant to be a message to the American people, as the cables reported, it might have been a better idea to have told them something new. . . . The politicians in Congress, standing emphatically and in overwhelming majority against debts reduction, are not noble-minded patriots inspired only by the desire to protect the best interests of their glorious country. It is part of their business to reflect the views of their constituents and they are more afraid of misinterpreting those views just now than they ever were. And nearly all of them think the voters to whom they owe their jobs are overwhelmingly in favor of making Europe pay in order to avoid higher taxes.

But England has merely amplified and reiterated the same story that the politicians and the people already had heard, adding the warning that she may have to raise tariffs against us in self-defense. . . . The attitude of Congress seems a bit insane to some of the best minds in America, but that attitude—firmed by the condition of the Treasury and natural opposition to "saddling the war debts on American taxpayers" has been taken despite rather widespread diffusion of the important facts set forth in the British note. . . . It has appeared lately that the only hope of American action on this admittedly dangerous debt situation lay in the possibility of an agreement on armaments reduction which would benefit American taxpayers or something that would tend to guarantee the fulfillment of promises that revision would be a grand thing for American business.

There are leaders in and out of Congress who, on such a basis, would be willing to go to bat for a reopening of the debts question. . . . And they realize the fallacy of the contention that armaments can't be linked with debts. Armaments are maintained by domestic taxation and taxation is a vital phase of the debts problem.

The British note explained how frightfully difficult debt payments have become, how much more proportionately the United Kingdom has paid than other debtors, and the painful effects of the debts on all sorts of world conditions. . . . It warned of possibly "fatal results" if the debtors must resume exaction of reparations from Germany in order to pay Britain and the United States and warned of further depression and "disastrous consequences" if payments were resumed.

Many economists, financiers and even government officials agree with that picture. But we stand ready to take a chance, insisting on the December payment or on default, with its unknown dangers. . . . This government can't change its position until Congress changes its mind. . . . Congress wouldn't have postponed the December payment in any event, but there is a tendency to sympathize with England, which receives this with great terms among the larger debtors and has much the worst time paying—a tendency which would have been encouraged had England made something in the nature of a proposition.

There's a time and place for everything—even a coonskin coat, considering the temperature in the bleachers at football games these days.

Motor Hints
 Timely Suggestions on the Care of the Car by the Automobile Club of Hartford.

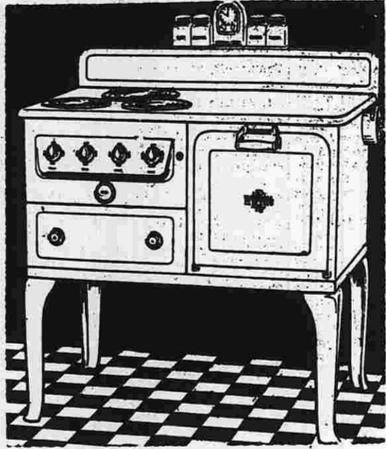

Thinning Out Gear Oil
 In many sections of the country it is necessary to thin out the gear lubricant for good cold weather performance of the car. The custom has been to use kerosene for this purpose but there is a marked trend toward the use of special oils. . . . Any of the oils used for breaking in a motor are satisfactory for diluting the regular heavy oil in the transmission and rear end. . . . Drain off some of the present lubricant and add about a pint of this special oil to each of these units. . . . If the car has been in service some time it is best to drain both of these units and refill with all fresh lubricant. . . . There are many special lubricants for winter use, so that the kerosene plan need not be resorted to. . . . One advantage in using "break-in" oils is that these penetrate into the bearings and are quick to lubricate parts which are apt to starve momentarily for lubricant when the usual oils are used. . . . One Leads Another
 No part of the car can be adjusted or changed without in some way affecting other parts, favorably or otherwise. This is clearly illustrated in the story of the motorist who had battery trouble immediately after having the valves ground. Compression was raised to a point where the battery had a harder job providing a start. . . . Another owner had the generator charging rate increased to keep an old battery up to par. When the new battery was installed the charging rate proved to be so high as to damage one of the cells. . . . Motor improvements sometimes increase car speed to a point where brake shortcomings show up. . . . Often an adjustment of the clutch necessitates a change in the driver's habits, if you want to shift gears easily. He usually has to learn to press the clutch pedal a little farther down or perhaps not quite so far. . . . Check Return to Kickback
 Ever since the introduction of those special shackles which attach to the left front spring, motorists have become alarmed if "kick-back" develops in another possible wheel shackle stop the kick-back when the car is new. They may continue to do the job quite well if replaced. But it is unreasonable to expect them to do the job to perfection continually. . . . There are many other spots which are also wearing, all of which may be too much of a load for the special shackle. Often the trouble is due to there being too much play in the steering wheel. Worn king pins or bushings are another possible cause of the trouble, not to mention loose shackles and worn wheel bearings. Kick-back may be an indication of mild, shimmy or simply wheel wobble. . . . Some of the special shackles are adjustable. Others should be replaced. It is a good plan to use stronger springs in these shackles when making a replacement to compensate for other wear. . . . Watch Collar of Clutch
 It is generally agreed that the throwover collar is the most troublesome part of the clutch. That this should be so is entirely reasonable for it is under special strain every time the clutch is engaged or disengaged. It is also badly abused. . . . When the throwover is of the self-lubricating type it is often damaged through the owner's habit of oiling it. If of the type requiring lubricant experience demonstrate that it receives more than a fair share of neglect. . . . Often the collar gives a squeaking noise or a rattle because of wear within itself. It may not be possible to cure this with grease or oil. Some types have a tendency to become disassembled. When this happens of course the pedal "does not disengage the clutch." . . . Should a break occur the car can be driven by switching off the motor when obliged to stop and by starting in low gear with the aid of the self-starter which cranks the motor and pulls the car at the same time. . . . Carbon in Sleeve Motor
 When power falls off materially in a sleeve valve engine the owner is not likely to conclude that the motor is filled with carbon. He has been trained to assume that carbon helps rather than hinders this type engine, and sees no reason why the motor ever could suffer from this pest. . . . Cases have been found where sleeve valves were so badly blocked with hard carbon that gases could not get into and out of the cylinders properly. This may occur when the engine happens to pump an unusual amount of oil, or if the carburetor mixture is habitually much too rich. . . . Carbon is removed from a sleeve valve engine by disconnecting the exhaust and intake manifolds, and then doing the job manually with a copper or brass drift. Carbon also may accumulate on the piston tops in such quantity as to cause pre-ignition, or the usual knock. . . . Check New Breaker Arm
 One of the important details in breaking in a new car is to make allowance for wear on the drive bumper block of its breaker arm. Slight wear may be enough to affect the efficiency of the spark. . . . The better a new car is broken in the longer it will give good service. That is obvious but not easy, because there are many little details that are likely to be overlooked. If the breaker gap is designed to be .020 inches or best results any decrease in this spacing by reason of wear is certain to have an effect on the engine. This may result in the engine laboring on hills where ordinarily it would climb easily. . . . Just as a fan belt will stretch a little when new so various parts of the car stretch or contract a bit during the first few hundred miles. In the aggregate such changes, if not corrected, will keep the car off of its best performance.

POLITICS TO STIR IF MOSES WRITES G. O. P. PUBLICITY
 Washington.—Were the Republicans to decide, and it is rumored they might, to put Senator Moses of New Hampshire in charge of their publicity forces during the coming Democratic era, the game of politics would perhaps take on a new zip the next four years. . . . For this witty, wisecracking New Englander, defeated last November in his attempt to return to the Senate, could be expected to let loose in lively fashion. . . . He was a newspaperman before he became a senator and knows all the tricks of the game. . . . For many years Moses has been a recognized and popular figure in the Senate. He has in turn delighted, infuriated, and cowed those on Capitol Hill with his sharp tongue and repartee. . . . What he could do in a job where these things count for much, anyone familiar with politics at all can guess. . . . Job To His Liking
 And there's some very good evidence, perhaps, that Moses would find such a job very much to his liking at the moment. . . . His defeat at the hands of the baseball, sports-loving Fred Brown, a Democrat—although it was by the comparatively slim margin of 2,117 votes—left the senator smiling. . . . He is not the kind of man who takes defeat easily. He had his heart set on another term in the Senate, and worked hard to realize that ambition. . . . That he doesn't feel altogether resigned and philosophical about it, perhaps, is evidenced by his inflexible stance at will? . . . A Good Opportunity
 Considering all this then, and also keeping in mind that Moses is the publican brethren in the Senate he "sons of the wild jackass" and how at other times lashed out with his tongue in telling fashion, what he could do in a job where he could employ his talents at will? . . . He is on record as having said that he expects to be active, and more active than I ever thought in the near future.

SCIENTIST STUDIES MYSTERY OF LIFE

Russian Biologist Says Invisible Organisms Control All Processes of Life.

Los Angeles, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Invisible organisms control all processes of life and exist as eternal life throughout the universe, says Prof. D. F. Sinitzin, Russian biologist.

Aphanobionts, meaning "invisible life," is the name he applies to these infinitesimal beings, which he suggests can travel from planet to planet and pervade all space.

Man, he says, never will be able to see these units of the mystery of life because they are so much smaller than the smallest wave length of visible light, which marks the limits of human vision.

Prof. Sinitzin's conclusion of the existence of aphanobionts follows the discovery of other living ultra-microscopic organisms that have been revealed in the search for disease control.

More than a hundred diseases of man, animals and plants, he said, have been found traceable to virus, invisible to any possible scientific development of the microscope.

The limit of man's power to see with scientific aid, he said, is 400 millionths of an inch.

A millionth of an inch is one millimeter and one millimeter is less than one twenty-fifth of an inch.

Among these invisible living virus, Prof. Sinitzin said, are those of smallpox, scarlet fever, warts, yellow fever, rabies, measles, influenza, common cold, trachoma, spinal paralysis and foot and mouth disease.

Have Been Measured Some of these have been measured through filters. The smallest virus is known to be about 125 millionths and the foot and mouth disease virus about 8 millionths.

While these never will be actually seen, it is possible that ultra-microscopic waves by photography, or other means, may be able to reveal the reflection of light from them, that is by light-diffraction.

Most people have noticed in a dark room into which a tiny shaft of sunlight comes, the million of particles that appear to be moving in the ray of sunlight. All that is really seen, he said, is the light reflected from these particles, for the most powerful microscope does not reveal the shape or size of the majority of them.

"Scientists have found the bad virus, the invisible living organisms that do harm to animal life," he said.

"Why then should there not be good living organisms, helpful to animals and plants and man, or similar size? That would explain the mystery of life."

"That would explain the enzymes, the tools known to be cell-life for digestive and other processes, and also the hormones, those messengers secreted by the glands and carried by the blood to all parts of the body to govern proper development of functions of those parts."

PROMINENT SPEAKERS ON INSURANCE PROGRAM

Annual State Rally To Be Held In Hartford Thursday — Is "Personality" Glimpse.

The magnitude and importance of the insurance business may be judged in various ways. Annual statements reveal the financial aspects of the industry and compilations of claims paid indicate the tremendous stabilizing power of insurance. But at an insurance convention one gets a glimpse of the "personality" of the profession. It is then that one appreciates the caliber of the men who have made insurance their life work.

Connecticut, with its many "insurance minded," is naturally an insurance center. The annual Connecticut Insurance Day, therefore, attracts a large number of delegates and a choice group of speakers. This year's occasion will be no exception, for an excellent program has been arranged, and from all present indications, the attendance will be as large, if not larger, than any previous similar gathering. Although the meeting is planned primarily for the education, inspiration and better acquaintance of Connecticut insurance agents, brokers, field men and company officials, the public will benefit indirectly through the increased efficiency and still higher ideals actuating those with whom the thousands of Connecticut policyholders look for insurance advice, protection and service.

This, the eighth such event, will be held at Hartford this week Thursday at the Aetna Life Insurance Company building on Farmington Avenue. It will be, as the name indicates, a one-day convention, registration being scheduled for 9:30 and adjournment promptly at 5:30. Opportunity will be afforded the delegates to inspect the Aetna building before the opening session which will be held at 11:00 a. m.

Following Mr. Turner's words of welcome, Hon. Howard P. Dunham, Insurance Commissioner of the State of Connecticut will address the gathering.

Following Commissioner Dunham, Clarence T. Hubbard, Assistant Secretary of the Automobile Insurance Company will tell his audience the answer to the question that is uppermost in their minds—How to Improve Your Business for 1933.

The next speaker, Dr. S. S. Huebner, Professor of Insurance and Commerce at the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, University of Pennsylvania, is one of the country's acknowledged leaders of progressive insurance thinking. He has chosen for his topic, "Business Depressions and Insurance."

The closing address of the morning session will be delivered by William Lyon Phelps of Yale. His subject will be, "Looking Forward," which is the theme of the conference.

At one o'clock luncheon will be served in the Aetna dining room, after which three prominent men will be introduced by General Chairman Turner. Governor Cross will be the first speaker on this "after-luncheon" program. He will be followed by Paul S. Hart, President of the Insurance Executives' Association of New York. Hon. Merton L. Brown, Insurance Commissioner of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, will be the third speaker.

At three o'clock the Insurance Day delegates will divide into two conference groups. The first, comprising life insurance representatives, will return to Bulkeley Memorial Hall, Aetna's large auditorium. George L. Hupt, Vice President of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, will be the chairman of this departmental, and the discussion will be directed by Dr. Huebner, who, as Dean of the College of Life Underwriters, is especially well qualified for the task.

The other group, comprising fire, casualty and surety representatives, will convene in the men's club room. Harold W. Hatch, President of the Connecticut Association of Insurance Agents, will preside, and the conference leader will be Hon. Charles C. Cheney, Chairman of the Advisory Board of the New England Associations of Insurance Agents.

The informal discussions from the floor there will be two designated speakers, Frederick V. Bruns and John J. Hall. Mr. Bruns is President of the Excelsior Insurance Company and of the Bruns Company, Inc., both of Syracuse. Mr. Hall is associated with the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters and is well known for his activities in the promotion of highway safety.

The last event of this busy day's program will be a general session at which President James L. McCaughy of Wesleyan University will give the closing address.

A large attendance is anticipated, for any Connecticut insurance man, whether or not he belongs to any of the several organizations sponsoring "Insurance Day," may attend all sessions, and the luncheon, upon payment of the $2.00 registration fee.

FLOODS IN QUEBEC Pont Viau, Que., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Flood waters of the Riviere des Prairies had receded to normal levels today after an ice jam had given way and released the water backed up into the streets of L'Abord-a-Plouffe, Bordeaux, Pont Viau and several other small municipalities on the north side of the island of Montreal.

Streets were impassable last night as the water rose above the curbstone and trickled into cellars. Operation of a pumping station was threatened for a time as water swirled around the pumping equipment and threatened to cut off the water supply of neighboring villages. Dynamite broke up the ice jam.

STRICKEN WHILE COASTING Torronton, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Howard R. Wylie, 9, died yesterday at the Charlotte Hungerford hospital 20 hours after suffering a convulsion while coasting Sunday. He suffered further convulsions after being carried into his home by fellow coasters and was removed to the hospital Sunday evening. The death certificate gives the cause as convulsions due to concussion of the brain. According to the physician who attended him, the concussion of the brain resulted from a head injury believed to have been received while playing football on Saturday or while coasting on Sunday. The injury was evidently internal as there were no marks on the exterior of the head. The boy attended Sunday school two hours before he went coasting on Sunday.

NORWEGIAN TURKEY LIKED BY SWEDES

That Is Name Given To Lut-fak, a Great Delicacy For Christmas.

Courtland, Kas., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Over at William Freeberg's general store where eggs speak louder than money, the Swedish customers have exhausted a liberal supply of "lut-fak."

The Christmas holidays are approaching and while most folks are pricing fowl for their menus, the Swedes already have put to soak their lut-fak, sometimes known as Norwegian turkey. It derives its name not from sard, the fish caught off the coast of Norway, but from the method used in its preparation.

Wherever one finds a Swedish colony, one is almost sure to encounter lut-fak, and when the fish is in season, as at Christmas time, a link with the old country, its heaping platters of the white starchy meat, served with butter sauce or cream gravy and lingon berries, is sure to recall memories of a childhood spent in the land of the midnight sun. No Christmas dinner menu in the home of a first generation Swede is complete without it.

Taken from the water, the fish are placed on huge racks and dried until they become hard. Shipments are made to this country for the holidays.

Stacked up on the counter at Freeberg's, lut-fak looks like cord-

CUTTING XMAS TREES

Montpelier, Vt., Dec. 13.—(AP)—The ring of the axe was heard on the Vermont hillsides today, as every day for several weeks past, to announce that thousands of men and youths are busy providing the rest of the world adjacent with Christmas trees.

During the last few years, nearly 600 carloads of trees have been cut in Vermont and shipped to various markets. An average flat car will hold about 2,000 Christmas trees. This work provides work for between 400 and 500 men for a period of from four to six weeks. The land owner receives as his share of the proceeds, from 15 to 25 per cent; the bundles of trees and, as a rule, trucks the trees to the railroad loading point.

Trees from Vermont customarily are shipped to Boston, New York, Washington, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and, some, as far as Texas and Oklahoma. The gathering of the crop adds about a quarter of a million dollars to Vermont's income and returns nearly $100,000 in freight charges to the railroads.

Through judicious cutting, land owners are succeeding in conserving the supply and the business is becoming more profitable annually.

That photographer who snapped a picture of "Jimmy" Walker on a French golf course while New York's ex-mayor shouted protests proved he was pretty good at brassie shots himself.

1 Shake less—Because Koppers ConnecticutCoke is all fuel, and burns down to fine ashes that drop through the grate with very little shaking. Once a day is often enough to shake—less frequently in mild weather.

2 Use less draft—Because Koppers ConnecticutCoke is High Test Fuel, it burns evenly without forcing the fire and wasting heat up the chimney. It responds at once to closing as well as to opening of dampers.

3 Fill the fire pot heaping full—You can do this without danger of smothering the fire. Koppers ConnecticutCoke is lighter than coal and burns most economically and effectively when you keep a deep fire.

These 3 rules mean less work and less attention. Your Koppers ConnecticutCoke fire requires less work in firing and in taking out ashes, banks perfectly and provides a steady warmth for less cost.

WEEK-END MURDER

GABRIELLE E. FORBUSH

BEGIN HERE TODAY

LINDA AVERILL believes her elderly cousin, AMOS PEABODY, was murdered when he fell from the second story balcony of the Averill's Long Island home because of a few words he gasped before his death. Linda Averill says someone tries to strangle her and she faints.

There are four guests in the house—all suspects of the crime. They are: MR. STATLANDER, business associate of TOM AVERILL; CAPTAIN DE VOS, handsome Belgian; MARVIN FRATT, former suitor of Linda; and LEAN SHAUGHNESSEY, Irish writer. Since there is no evidence on which to base an arrest, Linda and Tom, her husband, agree they must keep the four men in the house until they have discovered who is guilty. They pretend to believe the death was an accident. They aided in their plan when DR. BOYLE, medical examiner, sends word that everyone must remain until he has questioned them. Boyle is on a fishing trip and can not return for several weeks.

Linda finds the towel with which the attempt was made to strangle her—identified by a smear of sunburn ointment. It was in Statlander's bathroom. She overhears ROSIE, the maid, talking to Shaughnessey about a shirt Rosie has promised to launder.

FLEUVE STONER and DOLLY ALGER come to play bridge the evening. She talks to Statlander about the happenings of the morning. She leads him into admitting he was on the balcony but says he saw no one else and merely stepped out for a breath of air.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXX

"Hello!" called Tom unceremoniously. Linda, secretly amused at Statlander's confusion, soberly as she saw that her husband was evidently laboring under some excitement. His first words confirmed it.

"Something's happened," he said. "Linda—could I see you alone a moment? Sorry. Excuse me, Mr. Statlander."

The other waved him away with a shade of affronted indignation. "Quite all right, quite all right," he replied. "Pray don't consider me at all. I shall sit here a while, enjoying the—"

What he would enjoy was lost on the Averills, disappearing rapidly in the opposite direction. Linda half-running to keep up with her husband.

"Tom—what on earth? Is someone hurt?" she gasped.

"Oh! Sorry, Binks! Didn't realize I was running you so—no, no great calamity but things are upset again. Tim called—they've finally heard from Dr. Boyle."

"On his way? Oh, and I wanted—"

"No, out of it entirely."

"Who do you mean?"

"Wrecked on the way back. Wild driving, I suppose. Anyhow they had a complete and terrible smash-up. Happened a couple of hours ago by all accounts, but the people have only just heard of it."

"I thought he wouldn't take all that time!"

"It happened down that long stretch of road through the Pine Barrens—no house anywhere around and the road practically deserted. I was always to go there most—"

"Ireland must be wonderful!"

There was something in his skeptical glance that made her a little uneasy over this last at-hurt seriously—all pretty badly smashed up. They straightened out as to names and so forth after awhile and phoned Mrs. Boyle. She relayed it to Tim and Tim called us."

"What does it mean, Tom?"

"He looked at his watch. 'Nine o'clock—it means the rest of the evening with no Boyle to butt in and the gang here all night.'"

"Just playing on our hands—"

"Yes, if we can't find our now—"

"Do they all know?"

"Oh, yes. Couldn't help it if I'd wanted to, to which I didn't especially. I talked some time to Tim. Marvin was dummy and he drifted out to hear about it and the rest followed. Shaughnessey appeared from somewhere—and Linda, that's really what I wanted to tell you."

"Yes—what?"

It is grip time and flu time! As though we didn't have troubles enough without sickness! The worst part of such illnesses is that they go right through families. The first thing you know Johnny is down with it, then he's scarcely back to school until Fanny gets it, and she isn't out before Charlie starts to sneeze and stop eating.

There is only one cure I know for either of these things, and that is not to get them at all.

This year with people living in crowded quarters, doubling up and tripling up or even quadrupling up—for the Tom out of a job, Ralph on a commission, David with no work, and they've all had to come home with their families—it looks as though Old Man Grip was going to do a land-office business.

Get That Thermometer! Did you ever get that clinical thermometer I advised? At the drug store for a dollar or a dollar and a half? I know! It looks as big as a dish-pan these days, that dollar does. But if some one said to you, "I can keep grip or flu from spreading through your family for a full dollar," what would you say? Or even a feverish cold? Feverish colds, after all, are low-grade germ diseases and can cause as much trouble as other things with higher sounding names.

When Johnny begins to cough or sneeze and looks tired, has a headache, doesn't eat, is chilly, perhaps flushed of face, the wisest thing to do is to shake down that thermometer, until it is at 90 degrees or below (watch you don't break it), and put the silver end under his tongue. Let it stay there for a full minute, with his lips closed, and then take it to the light and read it. If it goes over the place marked "T" or "X" or otherwise designated, 98 3-5 degrees to be exact, keep an eye on him.

Never let him go to school with a temperature even of 99 degrees. He may not be sick, but other children must be guarded. Moreover, if he has a temperature, even a low one, he should not be out of the house. He is better in bed.

Call in a Doctor! It is best to call a doctor whenever there is a temperature, especially if it goes to a hundred or over. This is the best advice I can give, for when a child has a temperature it may be something simple and again it may not.

At any rate, get him to bed, keep all the other children absolutely away from him and groupings, too, except those looking after him; see that he is warm and quiet, that he has a very light diet and a simple physical. Castor oil has always been my panacea.

All his dishes should be kept by themselves and should have his own towel and wash rag. These should be kept away from the bathroom as well as his tooth brush. Never carry his glass to the bathroom and leave it there, either.

His handkerchiefs should be put away by themselves, too, and boiled and washed. No one should handle them.

And when he is better, air and sun his room well. Do not allow another child to sleep with him until he is entirely well and the bed-clothes and blankets laundered.

Fanny and Charlie probably won't get sick if this is done, unless they did so when their brother was first infected. The early stages of any infectious disease are very contagious.

However—let us hope that even poor Johnny will escape this year.

When you envy a well-groomed woman, just remember she didn't get that way in a minute.

Good-grooming actually is nothing more or less than meticulous care paid to every lasting detail.

One of the few points of good grooming consists in taking such care that you never have to give a thought to the superfluous hair that retreats from good appearance.

If you shave your legs and the armpits, then do it regularly and don't wait until you are reminded that it must be done again. There are all kinds of efficacious depilatories on the market. Most women prefer one of these to a razor. Particularly for the armpits.

Always, ALWAYS, follow the directions minutely. Some must not be used if you have washed with soap. Others must be used when you have just bathed in hot water. These little details determine the success you have in the depilatory that you choose.

Particularly necessary to good grooming is that freshness that only the meticulous woman has. This means every consideration to prevent perspiration from staining your garments and creating that unpleasant aroma that no well-groomed woman will tolerate.

Every woman needs a deodorant. Even if you wear shields, use a deodorant first. There are some that are instantaneous in their action, others that must be put on the night before. As a last gesture to perfection, use a dash of cologne under your arms after bathing.

Hartford, Dec. 13.—(AP)—State police opened a campaign on defective automobile equipment yesterday at Montville on the Norwich-New London road and in Stonington on the Post Road. At Stonington, out of 2,600 cars checked, only 108 received defective equipment tags which prescribed that the owners must have repairs made. There were two arrests for violations of regulations.

Gov. Roosevelt, say the experts, will have a more important role than President Hoover in the next short session of Congress. Mayberry, the reason photographers caught Hoover smiling.

There were two cars in a collision at the center of Wapping early Monday morning. One proceeded on its own power but the other was towed away by the Town Truck. No one was injured, fortunately.

Mrs. O. Burnham is resting comfortably at the Hartford Hospital, and is feeling her friends for a short time each day.

Dispatches from Pernambuco today said that two persons were killed and several soldiers and civilians were injured in a conflict between soldiers and the military police arising from a street dispute. Order was quickly restored.

All members of the Senior choir are requested to be at the rehearsal at the Parsonage Thursday evening.

The Juvenile Grange was organized Saturday evening in the Town Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Tucker of the Trumbull Grange assisted Miss Ina Goldenberg in the organizing of the young people. There are twenty-three charter members and seventeen honorary members. The officers elected are as follows: Master Mortimer Friedrichs, Overseer, Maxwell Hutchinson; Lecturer, Eleanor Finney; Steward, Wyllys Covell; Assistant Steward, Bryant Hilliard; Chaplain, Edith Durston; Treasurer, Eleanor Covell; Secretary, Lois Wilson; Gatekeeper, Russell Friedrichs; Ceres, Gladys Plimney; Pomona, Evelyn Sumale; Flora, Edna Schatz; Lady Assistant Steward, Martha Bartlett; Flamingo, Frances Friedrichs. The meetings are to be held twice a month at six-thirty on Friday evening. Other members who joined on Saturday night, considered charter members, were Doris Parish, Irene Wyllys, Dorothy Finney, Ida Finney, Jeannette Samuels, Carol Friedrichs, Clara Savage, Wilma Savage, and Olive Tuttle. The ages of these children range from five to fourteen years of age. Mrs. John Hutchinson was installed as matron. The Andover Grange No. 76 paid for the charter of the Juvenile Grange.

Proceeds from the clam-chowder supper, sale of articles, and entertainment by the Ladies Aid Society of the Hebron Center Congregational church Friday afternoon and evening amounted to about twenty dollars. The program of the entertainment in the evening follows: Reading by Mrs. Elizabeth Ives, "The Ladies Aid." A duet, "The Voice in the Old Village Choir," by Mrs. Catherine Fickett and Miss Rose Moton. "My Darling Nellie Gray," by Mrs. Walter Vay and Kenneth Ellis, accompanied by Mrs. Asa W. Ellis. A reading by Miss Stella Johnson, "A Country Cousin Speaks her Mind." Two violin solos by Clifford Wright, accompanied by Mrs. Mark Hill.

Here's an idea that will save you money. Remodel your last year's dress by giving it a new neckline. Even your most intimate friend will think you are wearing a new frock.

It's so simple and inexpensive. It will take you about an hour or two to make any one of these adorable sets. Presto! You have an up-to-the-minute frock.

Set A—The Cossack type is exceedingly young and snappy. Perhaps you have a dark blue or a black crepe silk or a woolen dress. Make this set of geranium red crepe or woolen and trim with metal silver buttons. It is ravishing. It requires but 1-2 yard of 35-inch material.

Set B—The nun's collar and cuffs that need no introduction. It is so alluringly flattering. It is made of bias strips of material that may be joined by stitching same on the sewing machine. Another scheme is to have the strips joined by fagoting which may be done professionally at a small extra cost. Make it or white rough crepe silk and you can wear it with several different dresses. The collar closes at the center-back. This attractive set takes but 1-3/4 yards of 35-inch material.

Set C—A neat trim tailored type that is especially nice for a V-neck dress. It closes at the center-back. The jabot fabric attached to the collar at the front, gives a very becoming slimming line. Note the unusualness of the matching cuffs. It would be nice of plique, crepe silk or white crepe satin. On a tweed effect woolen dress, it could be made of plain toning woolen. It can be made with 5-8 yards of 35-inch material. Style No. 3259 comes in one size only. It includes the three different styles.

Our Large Winter Fashion Magazine contains the most popular styles for the adult, miss and child. Street clothes, party dresses, coats, blouses, home wear, lingerie, etc.

ANTITOXIN HELPS BODY COMBAT POISON OF DIPHTHERIA GERM

Confusing Terms Are Simply Explained.

This is the fifth of a series of six articles by Dr. Fishbein on the prevention and treatment of diphtheria.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Few people understand the difference between toxin, antitoxin, and toxin-antitoxin. When a horse is injected with the poison which diphtheria germs develop, he develops in his blood a substance which opposes the poison of the diphtheria germ. The poison is called toxin.

The material in the blood which opposes the poison of diphtheria is antitoxin. If a child does not have enough of this antitoxin in his blood to overcome diphtheria infection, the physician gives it antitoxin to help it. If a child has been exposed to diphtheria, and it is necessary very promptly to give it something to help it ward off the disease, antitoxin may be injected.

However, this antitoxin does not protect for a long period of time. It must be remembered that it has been elaborated in animals and not in the patient's own body, and that therefore its effects wear off in about three weeks.

Of course, if a person has diphtheria, the antitoxin, when injected, helps to overcome the disease and when the person recovers he has developed in his own body his own antitoxin, which is one reason why no one seems to have this disease twice.

If one is injected with small doses of toxin or poison, he builds up resistance to diphtheria in his own body. If it is desirable to stimulate his resistance-building factor still more, it is necessary to give him larger doses of toxin. However, such procedure would be unsafe. Therefore it is customary to add antitoxin to the toxin, which prevents it from working harm, but does not prevent the body from responding to the injection of the toxin by building up more resistance. Toxin is rarely toxic, but is detoxified by the addition of formaldehyde.

Few people realize the background of the way in which the body opposes disease. The process is called immunization. The terms vaccination, inoculation, injection and similar terms refer to the fact that the substance is being put into the body in order that the body build the materials to oppose it.

NEXT: Eradicating Diphtheria.

AVERTS A PANIC

Montreal, Dec. 13.—(AP)—W. Forest, operator of a motion picture projection machine, was recovering today from severe burns suffered when he attempted to extinguish blazing films in the Majestic theater. A spark from a short circuit in the electrical apparatus set the films afire in the projection room last night.

Panic among the audience was averted, with property damage small.

ANTITOXIN HELPS BODY COMBAT POISON OF DIPHTHERIA GERM

Confusing Terms Are Simply Explained.

This is the fifth of a series of six articles by Dr. Fishbein on the prevention and treatment of diphtheria.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Few people understand the difference between toxin, antitoxin, and toxin-antitoxin. When a horse is injected with the poison which diphtheria germs develop, he develops in his blood a substance which opposes the poison of the diphtheria germ. The poison is called toxin.

The material in the blood which opposes the poison of diphtheria is antitoxin. If a child does not have enough of this antitoxin in his blood to overcome diphtheria infection, the physician gives it antitoxin to help it. If a child has been exposed to diphtheria, and it is necessary very promptly to give it something to help it ward off the disease, antitoxin may be injected.

However, this antitoxin does not protect for a long period of time. It must be remembered that it has been elaborated in animals and not in the patient's own body, and that therefore its effects wear off in about three weeks.

Of course, if a person has diphtheria, the antitoxin, when injected, helps to overcome the disease and when the person recovers he has developed in his own body his own antitoxin, which is one reason why no one seems to have this disease twice.

If one is injected with small doses of toxin or poison, he builds up resistance to diphtheria in his own body. If it is desirable to stimulate his resistance-building factor still more, it is necessary to give him larger doses of toxin. However, such procedure would be unsafe. Therefore it is customary to add antitoxin to the toxin, which prevents it from working harm, but does not prevent the body from responding to the injection of the toxin by building up more resistance. Toxin is rarely toxic, but is detoxified by the addition of formaldehyde.

Few people realize the background of the way in which the body opposes disease. The process is called immunization. The terms vaccination, inoculation, injection and similar terms refer to the fact that the substance is being put into the body in order that the body build the materials to oppose it.

Gate Receipts Fell 27 P. C. In College Football Campaign

Yale and Harvard Had Forty Per Cent Drop; Brown, Purdue, Wisconsin and Columbia Report Increases.

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—College revenues based on a cross section of financial reports made available to the Associated Press, declined approximately 27 per cent for the 1932 season. This compares with an estimated 15 per cent drop in attendance, a difference due to the fact that ticket prices generally were reduced throughout the country.

Custodians of the intercollegiate gate receipts were in most cases reluctant to give actual figures. A combination of estimates and percentages furnished the Associated Press revealed declines ranging from five to fifty per cent within a representative group of forty colleges and universities.

A small and widely separated group reported increases, including Brown, Purdue and Wisconsin. Columbia's receipts went up, despite some reduction in prices, but official figures were withheld.

The extent of Notre Dame's contribution to the national football business was shown by the aggregate "gate" of $1,415,000, the highest in the country.

The "Big Three" on the Pacific Coast, Stanford, California and Southern California, did a much better business than the East's old triumvirate. Princeton had a better season but receipts at Yale and Harvard fell off around 40 per cent.

Following are figures on college football gate receipts, in most cases estimated for the 1932 season:

Purdue, 1932, $115,000; 1931, $99,440.
Wisconsin (5 games), 1932, $112,093; 1931, $88,821 (four games).
Brown (5 games), 1932, $47,021; 1931, $38,848 (8 games).

Notre Dame (9 games), 1932, $1,415,000; 1931, $1,554,000; Stanford, 1932, $880,000; 1931, $417,541; California, 1932, $350,000; 1931, $380,000; Northwestern, 1932, $276,000; 1931, $400,000; Minnesota, 1932, $147,900; 1931, $229,037; Illinois, 1932, $141,463; 1931, $280,061; Vanderbilt (net), 1932, $56,000; 1931, $72,000; Michigan, 1932, $52,000; 1931, $70,000.

Percentage decreases reported for others: New York University and Ford, 25% each; Yale and Harvard, 40% each.

HORNBY THINKS CARDS WILL WIN LEAGUE PENNANT

St. Louis, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Rogers Hornby, the player-manager who has been shoved around the National league quite a bit in his 18 seasons of big time baseball, believes his new-old teammates—the Cardinals—will be out in front again in the 1933 race.

"I can't see how anybody can lick the Redbirds," panted Rogers, pausing in one of the strenuous workouts he takes five days a week and which he intends to keep up until time to go south in the spring.

Medicine ball, stall bars, pulleys, rowing machine and 10 laps of an indoor track are helping the Cardinals star sacker of other years to shed the 10 or 15 pounds he doesn't need.

"I'm not figuring on any trouble from the Cubs," the Bruins' late manager continued. "Last season their pitchers carried them, and they won't be as strong as they were last year."

"I pick Pittsburgh to finish second to the Cardinals. The Waner boys will be as good as ever, and Vaughan at short and Piet at second ought to be better."

The Cubs will face the toughest opposition of any club, he asserts, because "all the teams try harder against the pennant winners."

GREENLEAF, CARAS LEAD IN BILLIARDS

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The road that Ralph Greenleaf must travel to retain his national pocket billiard championship grows much tougher from now on.

The dapper New Yorker has hung up four successive victories in the current championship tournament but his five remaining matches all will pit him against tougher opposition.

Greenleaf's fourth victim, George Kelly, of Philadelphia, bowed to the champion's wizardry last night, 125 to 53. Jimmy Caras of Wilmington, Del., earlier in the day had trounced Walter Franklin of Easton, 125 to 6 for his fourth victory.

Frank Taberski of Schenectady won the other match on yesterday's program, beating James Mills, San Jose, Calif., 125 to 54.

GUARDS TO OPPOSE BRASS CITY TEAM

Brooklyn A. C. Here Tomorrow; Farr Out With Badly Injured Ankle.

The National Guards will probably be minus the services of "Ding" Farr, one of their star guards, when they meet the Brooklyn A. C. of Waterbury here tomorrow evening.

The Guards were practicing against Trinity College in Hartford and during a lively scrimmage, Farr leaped into the air to take the ball off the backboard. He got the ball but in landing struck on the side of his left foot. He had to be assisted from the floor.

The trainer of the Trinity team worked on Farr's leg with cold and hot appliances and rubdown preparations which gave him considerable relief. However, he was unable to walk without assistance late last night.

The Guardians were practicing against Trinity College in Hartford and during a lively scrimmage, Farr leaped into the air to take the ball off the backboard. He got the ball but in landing struck on the side of his left foot. He had to be assisted from the floor.

"Ding" Farr night and indications were that he will not be able to play before Saturday at the earliest. He probably won't even be in uniform tomorrow night.

The Brooklyn A. C. is the team which gave the Hartford K. of L. a neat trimming in Waterbury over the past week-end. They have a high class team, one which should last the Guards. Saturday night the locals travel to New Britain to meet the Nettletons, the outfit which beat the St. Mary's a few days ago.

The DeMolay basketball team will play the preliminary to the Guards' game tomorrow night and will practice at the West Side rec from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight.

Six lettermen from last year's team will return for basketball at North Carolina State college.

Schaaf K. O.'s Winston With Sharkey As Pilot

Boston, Dec. 13.—(AP)—It drops Winston three times in the sixth round, the last for the full count, after sending him reeling in the fourth with a terrific right to the jaw and wearing him down in the fifth with a lusty body barrage.

Schaaf turned in one of the best battles of his career, which became a bit erratic last summer. During that season, while Sharkey was occupied with his own fistie affairs, Schaaf went down to three straight defeats under the gloves of Max Baer, Stanley Poreda and Winston.

Now that the Negro is erased from his record, Schaaf has high hopes of wiping out Poreda's unexpected success before evening his slate with the sensational Baer. He has mended his recent breach with Sharkey and it is likely that the heavyweight champion will direct him in his future campaigns.

Schaaf succeeds Sharkey as this section's heavyweight titlist. The world champion won that minor title back in 1925, and despite the fact that he has not fought in Boston ring in several years, he held it until he voluntarily relinquished it several weeks ago in favor of the victor of the Schaaf-Winston bout.

Giants Trade Lindstrom To Pittsburgh Pirates

Manager Terry Hands Out His Crack Outfielder and Chick Fullis For Glenn Spencer and George Davis In Three-Cornered Deal.

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Inspired by the first big player deal of the annual convales, the magnates of the American and National Leagues settled down today to three solid days of barter, lobby lounging and serious efforts to prune the baseball business of all unnecessary expense.

In every corner of the major league hotel headquarters, bidding for talent broke out afresh at the example set by Bill Terry, young manager of the New York Giants.

Bill vowed, soon after he took the reins from the hands of John McGraw last season, that he'd trade every man on the club if he got the chance.

Last night he sent Freddy Lindstrom, a crack outfielder to the Pittsburgh Pirates in a three-cornered deal which also involved the Phillies and changed in all, the residences of five ballplayers.

In exchange for Lindstrom and Chick Fullis, a sub-outfielder, who moves on to Philadelphia, the Giants receive Glenn Spencer, the tough right handed pitcher from the Pirates, and George Davis, a fine outfield prospect from the Phillies.

To balance the third corner of the trade, the Pirates sent Gus Dugas, 21 year old outfielder, and a sum of cash, not announced, to the Phillies.

To the mind of the experts assembled in great numbers for the annual meetings, Terry's second big swap of the off season gives the Pirates just about the strongest outfield in the National League in the two left-handed Waner brothers, Paul and Lloyd, and the right-handed Lindstrom.

CRAIG WOOD WINS WEST GOLF CROWN

New Jersey Pro Captures $560 and Title in San Francisco Tournament.

San Francisco, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The title of 1932 San Francisco national match play open golf champion, and $560, went with Craig Wood, today, as he headed for Southern California winter tournaments.

The 31-year-old former Ryder Cup team member won top money by defeating Al Espinosa in the 36-hole final yesterday. Frozen fairways and icy greens provided a freak setting and handicapped the players.

Espinosa went into the lead at the first hole and finished the first 18 holes one up, posting a medal score of 41-38-79. Wood had a 42-38-80.

Wood won the twentieth to square the match and the pair halved the next nine holes. The veteran Espinosa took a one-up lead again by winning the thirtieth, but Wood eyed up the affair on the next hole.

It was the turning point of the match. The New Jersey pro sank a 35-footer from off the green for a birdie two, Espinosa making a par three.

By winning the thirty-second, Wood went into the lead for the first time. He had a par four for the hole, while Espinosa was a stroke over, having had to play his second from a bad lie. Wood clinched the match on the thirty-fifth as he dropped a 15-foot putt for a birdie four to go two up.

They improved their golf in the afternoon round, Wood having a 37 for the first nine and playing the eight holes of the incoming stretch one under par. Espinosa chalked up a 38 for the nine and was a stroke over par on the remaining holes.

Espinosa drew down $344 as the runner-up's share of the $2,500 purse.

CONTINUE McMANUS AS RED SOX PILOT

Boston, Dec. 13.—(AP)—President Bob Quinn of the Boston American League baseball club, issued a statement yesterday saying he planned to continue Marty McManus as manager during 1933 and never had any intention of displacing him.

"I have never had any idea other than having McManus manage the Red Sox in 1933 if I were to run the club; for that reason I did not feel it necessary to make any announcement," Quinn said.

McManus, an infielder, took over management of the Red Sox June 19 after the resignation of John Collins as manager.

Rec Girls Meet Burnside In Preliminary Seeking Revenge For Previous Defeat; Dancing To Follow Main Attraction.

The Recreation Center basketball team swings into action again tonight on the Rec Gym court with the American Legion of Housatonic, Mass., providing the opposition.

In the preliminary game, the Rec Girls will attempt to square accounts with the All-Burnside Girls. The first game is at 7:30, the second at 8:30 and dancing will follow until midnight.

Housatonic booked Manager Ben Clune's team for a home and home game on the basis of its showing at Pittsfield last year and again this season. Housatonic is in the same section of Massachusetts and is reported to have a fine team.

Rec, after a poor start, is now playing much improved basketball which means that the Bay Staters will have to be in top form to win.

About the Visitors
Captain Tillie Arcadi of the Housatonic team plays guard. He is a former captain of Northeastern University. Ross La Fontana, the center, played on the Berkshire champions in 1928-30. Brad Polmarter, a forward, was also a member of the Seaboard High school team with La Fontana and he led the league in scoring. Junior Kinne is another forward. He was a member of the Pittsfield Y. M. C. A. championship team of 1931. George Storti played forward for Seaboard High in '29 and '30. Doc Kolwasowski, the other guard, was on the Fordham varsity team in 1929.

The Rec will take the floor with Bychoisiku and Sturgeon up front, Hamilton at the tap, Dowd and Salmonds in the rear. Campbell, Opizki, Falkowski and Faulkner are also available. The latter may start at forward. Manager Clune is elated over the improvement his team has shown in the past two weeks and hopes for a much larger attendance this evening. He feels that the team is deserving of much better support than it has received in the past. Thursday night the Rec plays the Lithuanians in New Britain.

The game scheduled for Saturday in Branford has been changed to January 21st.

The Preliminary
The Rec Girls will be strengthened by the acquisition of Miriam Welles and Irene Buckland, two of the best players in the section. Others on the team are the Misses Pliska, Cole, Dziadosz, Washkevich, Lyle, Gaylor, Emmons and Giglio. The All-Burnsides will have Bell and Athome at forward, Rival at center, Baldwin and Griffin at guard. The Rec Girls will continue to play the preliminary games to the Rec Five in place of the church league contests.

JUNIOR SOCCER CLUB WILL MEET TONIGHT

There will be a meeting of the Manchester Olympic soccer club tonight at the West Side Rec at 6:30 for the purpose of making plans for indoor practice.

The regular meeting of Manchester Chapter, No. 17, D. A. V. will be held in the State armory tomorrow night.

A stoppage in the sewer system on Birch street yesterday afternoon caused considerable inconvenience to Birch street residents but the system was repaired today. Workmen labored until 11 o'clock last night and were back on the job this morning. Four separate excavations were made through the frozen ground before the service could be restored.

EVERYBODY'S STORE
 Pinehurst is a food store of quality, but a million miles from being a food store with a High Hat. What we mean—it isn't a place that you come to or phone to only when you want a fancy rib roast or a roasting chicken. It's a place to come to or phone when you want a Soup Bone.

Our meat line is a complete line—and that means it includes something for every table and for the table on economy days as well as feast days. Get the idea? If you don't, we've somehow missed making clear a very vital fact in this business—that PINEHURST IS EVERYBODY'S STORE and everybody's store EVERY DAY.

The idea is that if it's soup bone you want you get a darned good soup bone here, just the same as you get a darned good roasting chicken when and if you want roasting chicken.
