WARDENS TRAP TURTLES FOR STATE UNEMPLOYED

Ritz Soup—Gallons Of It—Now Possible Under Game Wardens Trapping Plans.

Hartford, June 23.—County game wardens throughout the state today were under orders from the State Fish and Game Department to inaugurate a turtle trapping campaign with a dual purpose—ridging Connecticut waters of what are considered destructive predators and furnishing unemployed with thousands of gallons of ritz soup.

Over 100 turtle traps will be placed in operation in lakes and ponds known to be inhabited by snapping turtles. Turtles captured will be available in each county where the unemployed may obtain them from county game wardens along with recipes for the preparation of "Turtle Soup Connecticut Style," "Ragout of Turtle," and other dishes familiar to gourmets.

Chief Game Warden A. Joseph Williamson declared that as a result of a similar campaign last year, the demand for the turtles became so great that 22,000 pounds were distributed. The turtle trap which has proven so successful was invented by Robert G. Smith, who is now employed by the Board in charge of the Shade Swamp Sanctuary at Farmington.

Game wardens who will have turtles for distribution during the present campaign are listed as follows: Charles Allhouse, Granby; Philip W. Delbert, Short Beach; W. S. Watson, North Franklin; Charles R. Disbrow, Stratford; Thomas G. Daniels, Plainfield; Seth J. Monroe, Litchfield; Raymond M. Brittingham, Middletown; and Edward G. Wright, Rockville.

One thing more before I close, which might help my fellowmen. We have lots of the Mexican bean beetles here and suppose you folks have down your way. I sent a quarter in answer to an ad a couple weeks ago. "Sure death to bean beetles." I got the recipe by return mail. I find it slow but very effective. I received a box with two small blocks of wood it fit. The directions said: "Catch the bug, place him on one block and hit him with the other." If you folks want to try it. The above are the directions free. You can make the blocks yourself.

Now that we have got the beer question settled we seem to have another one on hand and that is milk prohibition. It seems that the baby cannot have milk unless 12 cents a quart is paid for it. We have been buying milk for 8, 9 and 10 cents a quart which I consider a good price at the present time when work is so hard to find and money very scarce.

Previous to the World War milk sold for 6 cents a quart. There was plenty of work for those who wanted to work and a better average wage than there is today. I see by The Herald that the Board of Milk Control meets on the 23rd to set

I tried hard to get a picture of him to head this article but my camera simply would not stand for it. But here is his description. I should say he's about four feet 12 inches tall with a heavy head of hair where there is any. But he is somewhat like "Old Uncle Ned." He has none on the top "the place where the wool ought to grow." I have often wondered why Murdoch is mostly working where most of the wood butchers are asleep. But as they say in the Grape-Nuts ad, "There's a reason." When that boy comes on a job it don't take all day to find out what to do and it don't take him all his life to do it.

This is not an ad. Neither am I throwing flowers at him, but when you see a good honest workman I believe in letting others know. For what's the use in getting a wood butcher when you can get a mechanic. Besides being a good carpenter he is also a great hunter and fisherman. When he goes hunting he don't need to shoot. When they see him they simply lay down and die. They know if he shoots they will die anyway. He shot at a woodchuck a couple of weeks ago. When the boy brought him home we couldn't find a mark on him. He simply died from heart failure. I could tell you more about his good and bad deeds but I think this is enough about one man so I will quit on that subject.

One thing more before I close, which might help my fellowmen. We have lots of the Mexican bean beetles here and suppose you folks have down your way. I sent a quarter in answer to an ad a couple weeks ago. "Sure death to bean beetles." I got the recipe by return mail. I find it slow but very effective. I received a box with two small blocks of wood it fit. The directions said: "Catch the bug, place him on one block and hit him with the other." If you folks want to try it. The above are the directions free. You can make the blocks yourself.

The Hermit. June 21, 1933. Gilead, Conn. MILK PROHIBITION Editor, The Herald: Please allow me a little space in The Herald to ask a question about prohibition. Now that we have got the beer question settled we seem to have another one on hand and that is milk prohibition. It seems that the baby cannot have milk unless 12 cents a quart is paid for it. We have been buying milk for 8, 9 and 10 cents a quart which I consider a good price at the present time when work is so hard to find and money very scarce.

Previous to the World War milk sold for 6 cents a quart. There was plenty of work for those who wanted to work and a better average wage than there is today. I see by The Herald that the Board of Milk Control meets on the 23rd to set

NEW METAL 'LAB' FOR AERIAL JAUNT

Prof. Piccard's Basket Weighing 200 Pounds to Be Scientifically Equipped.

Midland, Mich., June 22—Picture a metal bubble seven feet in diameter, "with walls" an eighth-inch thick, and you have a picture of the ball, weighing only 200 pounds, in which 150-pound scientist Dr. Jean P. Piccard and 180-pound Lieut.-Com. T. G. W. Settle intend to seal themselves and soar at the height of eleven miles above the earth, they hope, some time next month to study the cosmic ray.

But this 330 pounds of scientist and navigator is a mere start as to the weight that will be carried up in the sphere. Main item is a quantity of lead dust—more Dr. Piccard times the weight of the ball, or 2200 pounds, to be used in the cosmic ray measurements and finally disposed of as ballast.

Add to these items a radio sending and receiving set, batteries, an air-rejuvenating device, oxygen tanks, gauges, barometer, camera, a 24-hour food and drink supply, and a battery lighting-system, and you have an attestation of the faith these stratosphere robbers are placing in a thin shell made out of salt brine pumped from a depth of 1200 feet below the homes of the citizens in Midland, Michigan.

The brine is pumped to the surface and then, like the fairy godmothers of old, Midland chemists wave their wands and behold, a liquid of apparent little value becomes the world's lightest structural metal—and with it Dr. Piccard hopes to set new altitude records; spy on the cosmic ray; obtain valuable information which he expects will be of great value to scientists of the future.

Engineers have fashioned the metal into eight segments of a sphere, welded them together, made a shiny ball, capped it top and bottom for strength, cut ten portholes fitted with optical gas, cut also two man holes for entrance and exit, provided two "collars" so that ropes might be attached. The result is the gondola in which the scientist and his U. S. army airman will spend twenty hours aloft, starting from the Century Progress Exposition at Chicago.

An air-rejuvenating device like that used by Piccard's brother, Auguste, last summer in a stratosphere flight from Zurich, Switzerland, will supply two quarts of pure oxygen a minute.

The two airman will have a living space four feet square and about six and a half feet high.

The cosmic ray instruments, housed in small boxes, will be found on the "equator" shelf. Part of it will consist of cosmic ray meters, one shielded by several inches of the lead dust, another unshielded, so that penetration and direction of the rays may be observed.

Heavy woolen under-and-outer clothing will be worn by the pair, to combat the 100 degrees sub-zero temperature of the stratosphere, and hot water bottles and chemical heating pads will also be taken.

Profiting by the experience of his brother, who found that attraction of the sun's rays on one side of his gondola, which he had painted black, raised the interior temperature of the ball to 104 degrees Fahrenheit, Dr. Piccard will paint the top of his gondola white to repel the rays.

Two of the windows will be of special quartz glass about three inches in diameter for installation of a spectrograph to make photographic records of the sun's spectrum to determine the amount of ultra-violet rays. The question of ultra-violet absorption of the air will thus be answered, it is believed.

The lowly bean plays its part in this dramatic chapter in the history of science. Piccard and Settle will take a supply of beans, canned, with other extra provisions, in case their twenty-four drift from Chicago should land them in the wide of Canada, where no food might be available for hours.

SOUNDS CAN KILL BACTERIA IN MILK

Scientists Announce They Can Produce Chemical Changes by So-Called Noise Treatment.

Chicago, June 23.—(AP)—If the baby could cry at a higher pitch he might make his own milk more digestible.

A study of the effect of sounds in causing chemical changes in milk and other substances including making the proteins in milk more easily digestible, was reported today to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Doctors E. W. Floridoff and L. A. Chambers of the University of Pennsylvania Medical school.

Scientists have recently learned that bacteria and other fluids can be killed by "super-sounds" of very high pitch.

Doctors Floridoff and Chambers discovered they could produce chemical changes by sounds well within the range of human hearing. For example a hen's egg, they reported, appeared to have been soft boiled under the noise treatment.

Their immediate problem, the scientists said, was to determine the effect of these sounds on the quality of milk.

"It might be expected," they said, "that under the sonic treatment the proteins in milk would be rendered more easily digestible, especially for babies. We are conducting experiments to obtain direct evidence concerning these questions and that of vitamins."

FIREWORKS WOUNDS MAY CAUSE LOCKJAW

State Health Department Urges Physician's Care for Accidents On the Fourth.

With the Fourth of July close at hand, the State Department of Health in its weekly bulletin today issued its annual caution to the people of the State to have wounds from fireworks treated immediately by a physician in order to avoid the danger of tetanus or lockjaw, a disease which in the majority of cases results fatally and which may be contracted through a simple infection.

Not only is tetanus a summer disease, but more cases and deaths are reported in July than in any other month. Fireworks wounds are not the only ones through which the germs of tetanus enter the body, however. Any punctured or badly macerated wounds, such as those which might come from toy pistols, splinters and nails produce a chance for infection and should receive the attention of a physician.

Automobile accidents in which dirt is ground into wounds, injuries received about stable, and all other wounds in which dirt may be carried beneath the skin should be considered as potential sources of tetanus infection. Wounds received in stables or on ground upon which horse fertilizer has been used are very dangerous, for tetanus germs are normally present in the intestinal tract of the horse.

Unlike the germs of diseases like typhoid fever, diphtheria or scarlet fever which soon die if discharged from their natural habitat into an unfavorable environment, the germs of tetanus, when discharged and subjected to adverse conditions, immediately go into the spore stage where they will withstand drying and even heat greater than that of boiling water. Spores retain the spores longer than others.

Fortunately, in this modern day there is a tetanus antitoxin which if promptly administered will render the germs of lockjaw harmless. In case of bad burns or cuts, effort should be made to reach a physician as soon as possible, so that no time will be lost in receiving this inoculation.

AUTO REPAIR MEN MUST BE LICENSED

Suitability of Applicant Must Be Determined Before It Is Granted.

Dealers and repairers of motor vehicles were warned today of the necessity under the law of making application for a license to operate their businesses in a bulletin issued by Colonel Michael A. Connor, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. The law, passed by the recently adjourned General Assembly and effective Saturday, July 1, provides for the issuance of a license on payment of twenty-five dollars after the suitability of the applicant has been determined by the department. All applications for such licenses shall be made at the main office of the Motor Vehicle department at Hartford.

"The primary object of the law," Colonel Connor stated, "is to furnish regulation for responsible dealers and repairers with the end in view of eliminating certain questionable practices of fly-by-night sellers of used cars. A feature of the law that should be effective in tracing down accidents is that which requires that repairers report to the Motor Vehicle department those vehicles which have been brought into their place of business, either for repairs or storage, and which have been damaged to the estimated extent of twenty-five dollars or more."

Dealers and repairers number plates will be issued under this act for ten dollars a pair. Under the provisions of the statute, the bulletin stated, the furnishing of a one thousand dollar bond is no longer required, and the minimum fee of fifty dollars, formerly the rule, is eliminated. A "repairer," it is explained, is not required to take number plates if the nature of his business is such that the operation of a motor vehicle is unnecessary.

Heretofore dealers or repairers who used cars in connection with their businesses were required to pay a minimum fee of fifty dollars which entitled them to five sets of plates. Under the new law the minimum fee for one set of plates is ten dollars with a charge of ten dollars for each additional set. The small dealer or repairer, it is pointed out, actually is benefited financially under the new arrangement. Instead of a fifty dollar fee for a license and an additional ten dollars as payment for a bond, the small dealer or repairer is to be licensed for twenty-five dollars and may obtain one set of plates for an additional ten dollars which permits him to conduct his business at a total expenditure of thirty-five dollars.

The new law defines a dealer as "any person who is actively and regularly engaged in the business of buying, selling, or exchanging motor vehicles, who has an established place of business in this state and who may, incidental to his business, repair motor vehicles, or cause them to be repaired by qualified persons in his employ." Repairers shall include any person actively and regularly engaged in the business of rebuilding and repairing motor vehicles who has an established place of business in this state, and who may, incidental to his business, buy, sell, or exchange not more than five motor vehicles in any calendar year."

ROADSIDE EATING PLACES INSPECTED

Public Can Help Enforce Cleanliness Through State's Sanitary Code.

Warning motorists and vacationists of the danger to their health involved in patronizing roadside eating places which are not kept in a sanitary manner, Warren J. Scott, director of the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering of the State Department of Health today described the provisions of Connecticut's sanitary code concerning such restaurants and asked that the public help the cause of sanitation by refusing to patronize places which do not abide by these regulations.

Roadside eating places are under the supervision of local health officers, but in some sparsely settled sections, it is difficult for local health officers to make as frequent inspections as desirable and safeguard of health protection may develop in the interim between inspections, Mr. Scott explained.

The more important features concerning roadside eating places in the sanitary code as told by him are the following:

"Water supplies available for drinking and washing dishes must be of safe sanitary quality. Public water supplies are under the supervision of the State Department of Health and can be used with safety. Private wells and springs properly protected against surface wash, not open to dipping of utensils, and located away from sources of sewage pollution, are usually safe. Some enterprising proprietors are saving their private water supplies analyzed at frequent intervals and are posting the laboratory reports.

"Toilet facilities must be provided for employees and in most cases are also available for public use. Sanitary conditions are required.

"Foodstuffs must not be exposed to flies and dust. Keep away from restaurants where you see food spread out in the open without protection. The person who precedes you may have stood over or near this food and subjected it to an infectious spray from his mouth or nose. Single service cups, dishes, spoons and drinking straws should be protected from flies and dust. Sugar bowls should be covered. Washing facilities for dishes and glasses must meet the approval of the local health officer. Clean refrigerators must be maintained. Drinking beverages not bottled must be kept in fly-tight containers, from which the liquid may be removed only by faucets. Persons with communicable diseases must not be employed in public eating places.

Liberty Magazine has given "I Cover the Waterfront" three stars which places Ernest Terrence's last picture in very select company.

FRIDAY, JUNE 23.

posals to restore citizenship rights to some ex-convict.

The independent milk dealers who are now preparing to give battle to the Control Board in the courts assert that the bill was railroaded through the Legislature at the behest of paid lobbyists for the big milk distributing concerns and was calculated, not to assist the dairy industry but to make possible a wider spread between the price paid to the producer and the price paid by the consumer.

There appears to be, in this matter, all the elements of a first class political disturbance which may very well have far reaching effect in the country towns—and perhaps awaken them to the realization that they must pick, as their Legislative representatives, a more wide awake and self reliant class of citizens capable of doing their own thinking.

IMPROBABLE.

An unofficial report this morning to the effect that President Roosevelt may rush to the London Economic Conference at a signal from Professor Moley would seem to lack the element of probability.

It is unlikely that the experience of President Wilson at the peace parley after the Armistice would deter Mr. Roosevelt from going to Europe if it appeared that his presence there was demanded by the exigencies of the occasion, even though there exists in this country a sort of superstition against such proceeding; but there is no apparent reason whatever for his taking the extraordinary step.

On the contrary, there is daily less and less reason for concern in this country over the fate of the London conference—daily the conviction grows that never in many years has advantage to America lain so directly in the line of self contained independence of European thought, European policies and European actions.

GETTING BACK TO WORK.

The American Federation of Labor which whatever its other merits or demerits certainly for a long time had more accurate information on unemployment than was given out by the Department of Labor, announces that more than a million six hundred thousand more persons now have jobs than were at work last March. If the Federation's figures are at all accurate that is a surprising gain in employment in such a short time. It falls a long way short of putting things back to normal, to be sure, since the Federation's figures on unemployment in March were well above thirteen million. However, it is a fine start.

It is a gratifying fact that after the bottom of a depression is reached and re-employment begins the effect is exactly the reverse of that when the peak of business activity is passed and things begin to go down hill. In the latter case every person thrown out of a job and so deprived of purchasing power adds to the difficulty of keeping the rest employed. In the former, every one who regains a job makes it easier for industry and business to provide more jobs because there is an addition to the country's purchasing power.

The re-employment of more than a million and a half persons, whose purchasing power had been nil and who can now become customers in some degree in the nation's markets, is no small influence, in itself, on the general situation. It may only mean for the moment the gaining of a job by one out of seven or eight of the unemployed, but in contrast with one out of seven or eight losing his job it makes all the difference in the world.

Very obviously we are going up. If we gain at anything like this rate for the rest of the summer and autumn the country will be facing a very different and immensely less discouraging situation next winter.

SHIRTS IN GERMANY.

The shirt business ought to be looking up in Germany. As fast as a political group is organized, adopts a certain color of shirt for uniform purposes and becomes equipped with the garments, it is suppressed and the members can no longer wear their distinguishing shirts. That means, of course, that they must buy some other kind of shirt. Hitler's BrownShirts alone have been able to get any considerable period of service out of their distinctive garments—and the chances seem to be that pretty soon they will be appearing in a variety of colors judging from the factional difficulties within their organization. Possibly Germany's "return to prosperity" will come through the shirt making business sopping up the pool of unemployment.

A MISSING MANDATE.

President Roosevelt appears to be surer of his position regarding the stabilization of international currency than, a few days ago, he seemed to be when it was understood that the 25 per cent gold coverage plan was proposed by Americans in the World Economic conference, presumably with Presidential sanction. Recent developments, including the sudden dispatching of Professor Moley to London, indicate that Mr. Roosevelt does not propose to be trapped, by any stabilization project whatever, into making a muddle of his commodity and property revaluation program.

It could be wished that the President's mind were clearer as to ways and means of price-raising through controlled inflation than it appears to be; but so long as he sticks to the cardinal principle of infating values as opposed to the principle of deflating them, all will be well. Eventually no doubt he will work his way around to an definite understanding of the means of broadening the currency base as he appears to have of the fact that it must be broadened, not a little but a great deal.

Just the same, if Congress had passed the Wheeler bill for bimetallic coinage instead of leaving authority to establish such coinage with the President there would have been no middle over currencies in London; that problem would have been automatically solved. And the conference could now have been going on with other matters.

LAST-MINUTE WHITE HOUSE ORDERS MADE SENATE ANGRY

Roosevelt's Reorganization Plan Looked on as Needless Affront to Dignity of Upper Body

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, June 23.—Roosevelt's dispatch to Congress only an hour or so before it was expected to adjourn was an unnecessary affront to the Senate and the President is getting few credits for tactical shrewdness. It's impossible to affront the house, but there are certain vestiges of pride left in the Senate and it was a little too much to ask that body to let an important schedule of reorganizing to go through without give a chance to read it. The reorganization message came along at a time when considerable earnestness had piled up on various accounts—especially over White House dictation—and there were plenty of Senators glad to help block Roosevelt's hopes for an immediate adjournment.

The Senate had absolutely nothing before it to indicate that the reorganization scheme was a wise one, nor any evidence to prove the administration claim that it would save $25,000,000 a year.

Roosevelt's side it could be said that the two-man plan is a part through omnibus reorganization measures by ordinary procedure had failed, although recently the President has had extraordinary powers to effect such programs which become automatically effective after 60 days unless both Houses reject it by a two-thirds vote.

The real large-scale reorganization program contemplated by the administration is yet to come. Budget Director Lewis Douglas will work on that during the summer.

which would keep their bodies in a fit condition to carry on their work. Many times in the past here have been glorious epochs in man's history, sudden rushes in the development of art, science and philosophy, only to have these periods go into sudden decline because of the intemperance and gluttony that accompanied the periods of prosperity. It is to be hoped that we will learn a lesson from this world-wide depression to go back to simple living and eating. We know that the death rate and the sickness rate have been considerably reduced in spite of the hardships of many. The percentage of illness and death was the highest prior to the peak of our era, while so-called prosperity. Once one can learn the thrill that accompanies achievement and progress, he finds that the pleasures of life are so vivid, indeed, compared with the satisfaction and accomplishment that result from living a clean, healthful and constructive life. If mankind can learn this, we will enter once more into a period of golden achievement that stands well to surpass those in the past records of human history.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Best Non-Starchy Vegetables)

Question: Mrs. Franklin D. writes: "I have been reading your health articles and am very much interested. Will you please give me a list of non-starchy vegetables?"

Answer: Practically all vegetables are non-starchy except potatoes and sweet potatoes. Here is a list of those I consider best to use, both raw and cooked: Celery, spinach, small string beans, asparagus, summer squash, cucumber, eggplant, beet tops, turnip tops, small hearts, small onions, small parsnips, pumpkin, lettuce, okra, choyotes, oyster plant, mallow, kale, zucchini, parsley, endive, salsify, pear, and ripe pines.

(Suffers from Gas Pressure)

Question: Max A. writes: "I am a young man sixteen years old, underweight, and have been troubled with shortness of breath for more than a year. My appetite is too good and I dream and talk in my sleep. Will you give me your advice?"

Answer: You are probably suffering from some gas pressure on the diaphragm. You should take deep breathing exercises to develop your breathing capacity, and be careful of your food combinations to avoid the gas fermentation.

(No "Remedy" for Diabetes)

Question: M. writes: "What remedy do you recommend as being correct for the treatment of diabetes?"

Answer: I do not recommend any "remedy" for diabetes outside of living on a carefully planned diet. Stop eating starches and sugars, and write me a personal letter, enclosing me your name and address on a stamped envelope so I can send you more information on this subject.

(Contracting Facial Muscles)

Question: Miss V. writes: "I am suffering from a contraction of the facial muscles due to a cold. What would you advise in order to cure my illness?"

Answer: As the contraction of facial muscles is due to a cold they will automatically relax when the cold disappears. If the contraction still remains, there is some disorder of your nervous system which would require an examination.

(Arms Sore from Vaccination)

Question: G. G. C. writes: "I know several children who were vaccinated about a year ago. Their arms were not sore and appeared to be entirely well. The next day an indentation, as usual, and recently the piece has puffed up and formed a hard, knotty cone. The children also complain of their arms being sore. Please tell me what causes this and also the remedy.

Answer: The remedy for such a condition as you describe is for the children to be put on a fairly long fast of, say, ten days or two weeks. This is the only method I know of for getting rid of such a deep-seated infection. The experience of these children is very common and comes from the infection from the streptococcus or staphylococcus bacteria, which are sometimes present in the smallpox vaccine.

A BOOK A DAY IN NEW YORK

By BRUCE CATTON

"Ranchero" is a Fine Novel of a Day, Adventurous Era.

In "Ranchero" Stewart Edward White opens another tale of the American west of a century ago, and a swinging, romantic, he-mannah tale it is, too.

If you read "The Long Ride," you'll remember Andy Burnett, the lad from Pennsylvania who took his Dan'l Boone rifle, became a fur trapper in the west, and compressed a lifetime of high adventure into a decade along the unknown slopes of the Rockies.

"Ranchero" finds Andy heading into California. The Mexican frontier there and Americans are not welcome; but Andy makes his way, strikes up a friendship with the son of a rich Spanish landowner, establishes himself as a Californian and, in the end, is the settled squire of broad acres, a peaceful advance guard for the host that is eventually to make California part of the United States.

I don't know just why it is that this novel makes such good reading. It has abundant faults. It is often more than a little obvious. But somehow it is exceedingly entertaining.

Perhaps it is because we have already made a golden age out of that far-off era when the west was young—when those trappers like Andy Burnett, as Mr. White points out, found the west uncomfortably crowded ten years before the first "explorers" came along. Those were great days, and Mr. White has given us something of their flavor. "Ranchero" is fine stuff.

Published by Doubleday, Doran and Co. It is priced at $2.50.

William Lyons Phelps, resigning from Yale this year, is perhaps America's most-schooled man. He has been going to school, you might say, for 41 years. Started at the age of three, in kindergarten. Went from college right into teaching. Has taught at Yale for 41 years and at Harvard one year. Being slightly prejudiced, he has stated that he felt that the proportion of time spent at the two places was about right.

At a luncheon for Mabel Walker Willebrandt at the Bankers Club, Mrs. Willebrandt denied that being a woman was a handicap in law... "except when it comes to making money." Practicing law again now, there are two kinds of cases she never takes—divorce and libel. "It is impossible to get the truth in either case," she gave as her pre-justice.

Mrs. Willebrandt is a motor addict. She prefers driving at night, when there is less traffic. Frequently she drives clear up here onto a concert or dinner in Washington, stays a day or so and drives herself back. She will leave for Russia at the end of the month and is going on a freighter that will land her in Leningrad. She hates the pomp of first class steamers where you have to dress for dinner every evening.

Alice Inspires
It's interesting to trace through the origin of styles. Eva LeGalienne produced a play version of "Alice in Wonderland" at New York's Theater Guild. This inspired a designer to make a children's frock like Alice's, with white organdie apron, puffed sleeves and rows of bands around the bottom of the skirt. You've seen them in Manchester stores. These Alice in Wonderland hair bands appeared in various metals, and this last idea caught the fancy of designers. They are making flower bandeaus for the hair, and gold fillets that are most attractive. Francine Larrimore wore a beautiful new type of gold fillet in the play "Shooting Star," based on the life of Jeanne Eagles.

DUNLAP IS BEATEN BY MICHAEL SCOTT

Veteran British Gifter Eliminates Only American Entry at Hoylake, 4 and 3.

Hoylake, Eng., June 23.—(AP)—George T. Dunlap, Jr., sole American survivor in the British amateur golf championship, was eliminated in the semi-final round today 4 and 3 by the veteran British internationalist, Hon. Michael Scott.

The slim young American, twice holder of the United States intercollegiate title, held his own with Scott through the first nine holes of the match, which they finished all square but failed to win a hole on the incoming route, Scott taking the lead at the 11th to end the match four holes later.

On his way to the semi-final Dunlap defeated several leading golfers of the British empire, including C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, Canadian holder of the United States amateur title, and Lister Hartley, British Walker Cup star.

The real break in his match with Scott came on the eighth hole, a 482-yarder, where George shot his par 5 only to have Scott sink an eight-yard putt for an eagle 3, to square the match and apparently shake the nerve of the 24-year-old American.

Scott, twice Australian open champion and four times winner of the amateur title there, was a member of the British Walker Cup team in 1924 and scored two of Britain's three points.

He defeated Jess Sweetser, former United States and British amateur titleholder, 7 and 6 and paired with Robert Scott, Jr., to defeat Bobby Jones and W. C. Fownes 1 up. He is 55 years old.

Dunlap was playing about as well as he did in his previous matches but was no match for the aroused Scotsman, who was even fours through the 15 holes played, with an eagle and one birdie on his card. Scott was only over par three times and two of the holes he lost that way.

Scott is a brother of Lady Margaret Scott who won the first British women's championships, in 1893, 1894 and 1895.

COURTS DIG RUINS OF LABOR 'EMPIRE'

Boom of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Once Powerful, At An End.

Cleveland. — Concluding chapters are being written in organized labor's first and greatest venture into the realm of capitalism.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, at one time the richest and most powerful labor organization in the country, made the experiment on a grand scale. Today, all that is left of the financial empire which grew from its first bank is a burden of debts and millions in losses. And recently a grand jury in Cleveland returned indictments against three officers of the closed Standard Trust Co., the only remaining unit in its maze of financial organizations.

The three men indicted were Alvanley Johnston, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood, and former director and chairman of the executive committee of the bank; J. H. Cassell, general secretary-treasurer of the Brotherhood and former director of the bank; C. Sterling Smith, the bank's former president. All were charged with false entry and misapplication of the bank's funds. The grand jury meantime is continuing an investigation of the bank's affairs.

The indictments were handed down while the Brotherhood was in convention here. An active movement for reinstating Johnston and his administration had been in progress, but the convention voted confidence in him and Cassell, and asked suspension of judgment until present proceedings were concluded.

Stone Was First Chief
Warren S. Stone, who had become an outstanding labor leader in the 17 years he had headed the Brotherhood, was chief advocate of that first bank which opened back in 1920, under the name of the Locomotive Engineers' Co-operative Bank. Back of it was the rich and powerful Brotherhood, its members highly paid and highly-skilled workers.

Stone himself swung naturally into the presidency of the bank. He had won notable labor victories and led the movement which culminated in passage of the Adamson eight-hour day plan in 1908. He had made a famous fight for the "Plumb plan" for government railroad operation with union crews.

The bank's growth was rapid. Starting with $2,000,000 capital and $100,000 surplus, it reported in 1922 assets of $11,000,000. The bank was something new—it was commercial in form, and co-operative in nature, since all profits above 10 per cent were to be returned to depositors. It induced a large mail patronage from Brotherhood members throughout the country.

Expanded Over Nation
The showing looked good, and expansion began. In the next few years the Brotherhood was to set up banks from Cleveland to Birmingham, and from New York to San Francisco. It was to operate coal mines, finance and securities companies, deal in real estate, run business, operate a hotel and a mail order house, and have numerous other interests. At one time firms in the network totaled more than 70, with their affairs interlocking and interwoven.

The story of the growth has all the elements of high finance, with pyramiding, mortgaging, borrowing, securities flotations, high-pressure salesmanship. And rapid as the rise had been, even swifter was to be the crash.

Stone turned from banking to coal mining. With William B. Prenter, his right-hand man, and others, he bought a large tract of coal lands in western Virginia and eastern Kentucky. The Coal River Collieries Company was formed and mines put into operation. The stock list was opened to Brotherhood members. Living conditions were to be good, wages high—and there was to be a good return on the investment. Some 4,500 engineers sunk more than $5,000,000 in the coal company.

In Wall Street
The Brotherhood Holding Co. was formed in 1922 with capital of $1,000,000 subscribed by Brotherhood members. Its first deal was the purchase of a bank. During the next six months expansion proceeded with amazing rapidity. Banks were opened, other holding companies established and real estate developments undertaken.

The Stone and his Brotherhood associates decided to enter Wall street itself, and they did so in a big way. Ten million dollars worth of shares were purchased in the powerful Empire Trust Co., along with an option for complete control. The Equitable Building was bought for $38,000,000.

In 1925 Stone was ill. It was known that he was worried, that he had talked of rehabilitation of his financial enterprises, and that he feared their dissolution. Millions had been borrowed from E. L. E. funds, from the banks and investment and holding companies, and from outsiders. Then Stone died on June 12.

Building a City
Probably the "biggest" single venture of the organization had been projected by that time—the development of a city in Florida, then in boom. Others carried on, among them George T. Webb, banker; Alvanley Johnston, now under indictment; W. E. Dunlap, J. H. Cassell and T. J. Bissett. A month after Stone's death Acting-President Prenter and his associates bought 27,000 acres of land near a small railroad station called Venice. The

BRAZILIAN COFFEE BASIS OF BARTER TRADE IN EUROPE

Rio De Janeiro (AP)—Brazilians are getting used to international barter, following the official coffee-wheat swap with the United States.

No further official trades have been made but the coffee growers have gone out on their own hook and negotiated several similar transactions.

The first was a swap of coffee for German coal. This was arranged by German interests to surmount exchange difficulties.

Later a Greek coffee corporation contracted to exchange products of that country for Brazilian coffee.

The newest deal was between a Turkish coffee importing company and the Angora government. It calls for the swapping of 3,000,000 pounds of Turkish olive oil, figs, raisins, nuts and carpets for coffee.

Down in the state of Rio Grande do Sul a German trade delegation has been trying to barter steel rails for Brazilian lard, rice and other commodities, with the state government assisting in the negotiations.

MARCH OF TIME IS DRAMATIZED AT GRADUATION

The boys and Vice President Barbara Hyde, leading the girls, directed their long lines down the aisles to the center section reserved for the graduates. Four members of the class were unable to be present to receive their diplomas; Raymond Berger and Thomas Freeburn who are now in government employ and Edward Macaulay and Kenneth Rogers whose work also prevented them from attending the exercises. The 210 remaining seniors made an excellent appearance in their gowns and caps, marching with dignity and in excellent formation. President Hultine gave a few words of welcome and introduced the program without further introductions.

Musical Program.
The first number was a group of three selections by the glee clubs singing under the leadership of Albert Pearson, director of vocal music. "Passing By" by Purcell and "The Great Awakening" by Kramer was sung by the girls' club alone while the boys' glee club joined in an ensemble number. "The Evening Are Falling" taken from "The Creation" by Haydn. Each number was heartily applauded, the young voices carrying to all parts of the auditorium. Many complimentary things were said afterwards by those who appreciated the tone quality and technique exhibited under Mr. Pearson's careful guidance.

When the applause accorded the glee clubs diminished, James Toman, second highest ranking student of the class, gave the salutatory address, as follows:

SALUTATORY
By James Toman

"The class of 1935 extends a hearty welcome to our parents, teachers, and friends—to our parents, whose love and self-sacrifice have made it possible for us to get an education. We are here to search for knowledge, and to our friends, who have watched from the side-lines with words of advice and encouragement.

"Although we are leaving Manchester High school at a time when the world appears to be in a state of confusion, we realize that there is always room for active minds and strong wills. The world is economically upset, but the hardships of the last few years seem to have stimulated the human race to greater activity. The achievements of our artists, scientists, statesmen, athletes and writers during the past year will go down in history.

Therefore, from the whirlpool of passing events we select a few of the most outstanding to present in review.

On completion of his address, Toman announced the pageant with appropriate remarks on each section devoted to the various fields of endeavor in the world. A description of the tableaux follows:

Salute To Architecture
The first tableaux showed Architecture, portrayed by Kenneth Leslie, holding a model of one of the unusual types of architecture, a building from the Science units at the Century of Progress Exposition. A group of architects, artists, architects, scientists, statesmen, athletes and writers during the past year will go down in history.

Betty Walworth then explained a bit about each of the twelve buildings as the pictures in colors flashed on the screen. The inverted dome, hung on suspension cables, was a particular modernistic touch which she explained in detail. She ended by saying that this fair of wonders surpassed anything of its kind ever before attempted.

"Who can say what the Inter-planetary Exposition of 1975 will produce!"

Salute To Sport
The Sport tableau showed the insignia of the Olympic Games of 1936 on a huge banner supported by two athletes, the latter being Ernest Neill and Robert McCormick. A second tableau in this episode showed the emblem adopted by the Olympic Games Committee, an athlete bearing the long garland of laurel symbolic of victory. Victor Davies posed for this tableau while Stuart Joslin told the legend of the Olympic games. He explained the value of the games to modern times as bringing the nations together in a common interest, peaceful competition. He told how the prizes were awarded and gave the Olympic Oath which an American athlete took for the entire group of competitors on the opening day of the games. A final tableau showed athletes grouped across the stage representing diving, Dana Cowles; fencing, Victor Davies; boxing, Ernest Neill and Elmore Hultine; running, Francis Della Fera; field athletics, Robert McCormick; javelin, Kenneth Leslie; swimming, Clifford Treat; sprinting, Francis Mahoney.

Salute to International Relationships
The students in social science class their idea into a Tour with Alice in Wonderland, the part of Alice being played by Irene Pola and the Mad Hatter by Sadie Copeland. Alice proceeded to take the Mad Hatter by an underground passage (represented by total darkness on the stage) to four different countries. First, Madeline Jacquemin as a Mademoiselle from France explained France's national position on the payment of the war debts; then to Germany where Hitler, Victor Davies, gave a stirring speech on the importance of a new national unity in Germany; then to Idaho, McDonald's home in England where she described her recent trip to the United States with some of her impressions, and finally to Washington, D. C. where a Congresswoman, Lillian Carney, was interviewing President Roosevelt, Chester Ferris. These various characters were dressed in the costumes appropriate to their status and posed in front of their respective national flags.

Alice concluded with a compliment to President Roosevelt with the admiration, "We are with you, Mr. President, the whole nation is behind you, but don't let them get too far behind!"

Salute To Science
This clever episode showed a laboratory technician, Miss Mildred Sutherland explaining to a guest scientist, Edith McComb, one of the most spectacular events in the field of science for the past year. A man had been overcome by carbon monoxide gas in his garage. Given up for dead he had been rushed to a hospital where it was found that his heart action had ceased but where a brilliant young intern conceived the idea of injecting methylene blue and a short character sketch of the author of the play was given by three seniors; Archibald MacLachlan by Betty Moorehouse; T. S. Stripling by Anna Gill and Maxwell Anderson by Truman Cowles.

The "Omniscient" was told in brief synopsis by Hallett Stiles with William Braithwaite posing as the leading character. Dolores Trotter told the story of "The Store" while three different scenes were enacted to show a bit of the atmosphere of the novel. In these scenes Walter Wright took the part of Millardus Valden, the trader; Arthur Fallon of Handback, the farmer; Norman Lashinske of the trial court judge and Betty Quimby of Drusilla who tried to give Valden counsel for his heart.

Kingsley French outlined the story and purpose of "Both Your Houses" a story of political affairs and the men who seek to run them for personal profit. Fred Milred Sol, the unprincipled politician who almost got what he wanted; Fred Beiber was Allan, who was defeated but stood for justice and a square deal for the people and also loved Marie Gray, played by Doris Mohr. The dramatic sketches made a fitting climax for a program of varying appeal but which showed the many-sidedness of the type of education which the students of today are receiving in regard to current events.

After the five salutes that comprised the pageant, Miss Lucy Barrera, highest ranking student of the class, delivered the valedictory address, as follows:

VALEDICTORY
By Miss Lucy Barrera.

"Members of the School Board, Teachers, Parents and Friends: "We have presented to you this morning a pageant of the most important events of the past year in several fields of endeavor. Although the world is at present in a state of financial depression, this pageant has shown that it is marching onward in almost every other way. Daily conquests are being made in the fields of literature, science, sports and art. The world is determined to succeed in the face of difficulties, and it shall do so if the present generation does its task faithfully.

"As has shown in the foregoing program, the annual Pulitzer Prize awards are a stimulus for better literature. They ever draw the attention of the majority because it is through literature that the comfort of life and the resistance to disease. All these milestones of progress, together with the great marvels of art, are depicted in the Century of Progress Exposition. This great epoch-making event is a challenge to the times; a clear note of confidence ringing out above the many gloomy notes of despair that have caught the world in their throes.

"We have also given you this morning an idea of the national and international affairs which have such a vital effect on us all. We are living in an age of changes, a breaking away from traditions, an age of which Walter Lippmann has said, "There is no making the conclusion that we are in the midst of one of the great revolutionary periods of history, and that upon our generation and its successors the task is imposed of discovering and organizing an order of progress and of new relationships among the peoples of this planet."

"It was fitting, therefore, that the honor students of the Class of 1935 should have planned and presented this program to you on the day of their departure from Manchester High School. They have shown you that our school career has aroused a keener interest in the daily occurrences of the world and that it has prepared us for future triumphs such as those we have just depicted. With these examples of achievement before us, we are now ready to take upon ourselves the task of continuing the march of progress and of doing our best to make this world a happy and prosperous place in which to live.

"Today the Class of 1935 realizes the debt it owes to you, parents, teachers and members of the School Board; and we wish to extend to you our deepest gratitude for all you have done for us. It was through you, through your interest, your patience, your good advice, and your ever-ready helping hand that we have spent these four happy, successful, and profitable years at Manchester High School.

"Classmates: This morning we are assembled together as a class for the last time. This is a sad occasion; for many of us it is the end of our school careers and the parting of our ways. Yet again, this is a glorious occasion for we know we have achieved something. We have mastered our school work. We have spent four memorable years together, sharing our joys and sorrows. We have gained experiences from our own little triumphs in drama, literature, art and sports.

"Today we are entering a world that affords at present little opportunity in the industrial field. Let us make our leisure hours profitable by participation in worthwhile pastimes and by keeping up our interest in the affairs of the day so that in a few years when it will be our duty and privilege, as active citizens, to voice our opinion in matters of state, we shall do so intelligently and beneficially. Let us continue to work steadily and earnestly at every opportunity, always remembering our motto, 'They can because they think they can.' If we do this, classmates, I am sure that in the years to come we shall reap the full benefits of our education and shall look back with ever-increasing pride and gratitude to our own Manchester High School."

Presentation of Diplomas.
Superintendent F. A. Verplanck, representing for the first time in one individual the administrative leadership of all the schools in the district, presented the diplomas. He concluded his remarks with a few words directed to the graduates themselves during which time the class stood in respectful attention. The diplomas were again the small, or large, folded into red cases bearing the inscription in gold "Manchester High School, Class of 1935" and in up-to-date cellophane covers. The class marched onto the stage. Each one in turn received a diploma and then proceeded around the outer aisles completely around the auditorium and back to the original seats. Here the changing of tassels process was followed by the class song, words and music for which were written by the small committee as the best from a group of submitted original compositions, was as follows:

Class Song.
"Sing once again, my comrades; Raise up your voices in a thunder-song. Hard is the road of life that stretches before us. While we're together it will not seem so long. Soon we must drift apart. Each with a breaking heart. Thinking of comrades we no longer shall see. Sing once again although a shadow hangs o'er us. Daughters and sons of '35. Sing of the pleasures we are leaving behind us. Sing of the labors that we cheerfully bore. Sing of the customs that no longer shall bind us. Sing of the studies that shall hold us no more. Sing from your hearts again Mem'ries of what has been. Let us remember them wherever we be. On to the destiny which fate has decreed us. Daughters and sons of '35!"

OUT OF BOUNDS

By HELEN WELSHIMER

YOUR garden isn't well-behaved. Your flowers haven't manners. Defiant flags run anywhere. To wags casted banners.

STRAY panics hide beneath slim veils. And roses climb all over. The trellises and window sills. Andandelous and clover.

GO tumbling on bush-bordered lawns. The patchwork's nice and crazy. Most any place you look you'll see. A hyacinth or daisy.

MY garden spot is orderly. . . The landlord has allies. A window ledge designed to hold Six tulips, nicely posted.

YOUR flowers' pranks are innocent. Mine have a dreadful habit. Each crock picks out a head to hit. Before my hand can grab it.

IT's spattered some crocuspat's hat. . . I'm giving up my garden. I'm getting much too bored and tired Of begging people's pardon.

Dunlap Reaches Semi-Final; Senators Tie Yanks

HARDMAN IS EASY VICTIM OF YANKEE IN HOYLAKE MATCH

Only American Entered in British Amateur Wins 5 and 4; Is Favored to Meet Tolley in Finals.

Hoylake, Eng., June 23.—(AP)—George T. Dunlap, Jr., pushed his way into the semi-final round of the British Amateur golf championship today by defeating Ronald Hoyle Hardman of Birkdale, 5 and 4.

Playing the same steady brand of golf that enabled him to eliminate C. Ross Somerville, Canadian holder of the United States amateur championship, in the sixth round yesterday, Dunlap disposed of Hardman, an experienced tournament player, without trouble.

Is Never Headed

ster gained a one-hole lead at the first hole where Hardman pulled his second shot and missed a short putt and Lever was headed. He held a three-hole lead at the turn and finally ended the match on the 14th green.

Dunlap held a lead of four up at the end of the first eight holes but Hardman got one or these back at the ninth where he carded a birdie three.

Wins On 14th
The New Yorker, twice winner of the United States Intercollegiate championship while a student at Princeton, again went four up with a birdie three at the 10th, halved the next three holes and then clinched the match with a birdie four on the long 14th.

Cyril Tolley, big Briton who has lived in the United States for several years, defeated H. L. Holden of Bowdoin, 2 up to gain a berth in the semi-finals.

The Hon. Michael Scott, veteran from the Royal St. George's Club, defeated Martin Schunch of Saultway, 2 and 1, to gain the right to battle Dunlap this afternoon.

WEST SIDES EDGED BY ALL-ROCKVILLE

Lone Tally in Sixth Gives Windy City Nine Win, 1 to 0; Godek Pitches Well.

The West Sides went to Rockville last night and lost a hard ball game to the All-Rockvilles by the score of 1-0. Jack Godek pitched good ball and didn't give a hit until the fifth inning. Genovesi also pitched good ball for the All-Rockvilles. Both pitchers allowed 4 hits apiece. Genovesi struck out five men and Godek struck out three. Godek allowed one base on balls and Genovesi didn't pass any.

In the sixth inning Godek was knocked out when he and Lessig met in a head-on collision on the first base line. He finally pitched the rest of the game. It was at this time when the All-Rockvilles scored. Chapman was the first man up and singled. Lessig next man hit a high fly on the first base line, he was called out for interfering. Foster and R. Burke, next two men, both singled and Chapman scored. This was the only inning Godek was in trouble. A very unusual feature of the game was the West Side outfield which didn't make any putouts. The same two teams will meet here next Thursday night at the West Side.

BARGAIN BRIDE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
BARRETT COLVIN, back in New York after four years, meets 20-year-old ELINOR STAFFORD and falls in love with her. Barrett is 35, wealthy and has made a name for himself as an archeologist.

Elinor's beautiful mother, LIDA STAFFORD, has kept the girl in the background, wanting attention for herself. Lida is carrying on a flirtation with VANCE CARTER and is constantly scheming to keep in the good graces of MISS ELLA SEXTON, her husband's aunt, in order to inherit a share of the Sexton fortune. Elinor hates this hypocrisy. Barrett's half sister, MARCIA RADNOR, is terrified for fear her husband will learn of an unfortunate episode in her past. Years before Barrett's arrival Marcia when a youthful romance ended disastrously, married a man whom Barrett adopted. The boy is nine years old now. Marcia insists that if her husband learns the truth he will never forgive her.

HAROLD DEXTER, the boy's tutor, threatens blackmail. Barrett, hinting at knowledge of Dexter's past, frightens the man into promising he will not make trouble.

Barrett takes Elinor Stafford for a drive. She seems so attracted toward him as he is toward her. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XI

Elinor rose quickly and left the room. She returned, flushed and smiling, from the telephone conversation with Barrett Colvin. "He wanted," she said, "to know if I didn't think it would be better to take our drive tomorrow since the weather forecast is clear. We were going to go Tuesday."

"Did it take seven minutes for him to say that?" her father asked. Elinor laughed. "Oh, but that wasn't all. He said he hoped I hadn't been killed driving in this afternoon and he said he'd never enjoyed an afternoon more and thanked me for it. And I thanked him and said I'd enjoyed it too."

"Twenty in June weren't you, dearest?" Barrett asked. "Yes, but why bring that up?" she replied lightly. She was so happy!

They moved to the room Lida called the study. Elinor's heart was crackling with small, sharp silvers that cut at each beat. He didn't want his little girl to grow up, to fall in love and leave him. But, on the other hand, he did want her settled and away from her mother's bold lies and frail deceptions, from his drinking himself to forgetfulness.

In the big room Elinor turned to put her arms around his neck. "You mustn't feel sorry," she entreated. "You're first! You'll always be first with me, darling!"

He held her close, laid his cheek against her soft hair. And when she stood away she saw that his eyes were wet. "I'm so foolish," she admitted. "And I've made you so! Aren't we being rather dramatic over nothing? I don't know what's the matter with me!"

Her father knew what was the matter and the recurring possibility of Colvin's hurting her brought color to his cheeks. "Thank God," he thought, "Lida will be out of the way for a while! If only they could have everything settled before Lida's return, assuming, of course, that Colvin really cared for Elinor as she seemed to care for him. Then it would be all right. If the affair were still in the air when Lida returned she could — and would — smash it if she wished. Stafford knew her — her strength, her lack of principle which made her the most formidable of foes, her willingness to stoop to and use any weapon.

Marcia had telephoned, Barrett learned when he arrived home. He called her for the second time that day — a day that had been stretched to unnatural length by worry and ecstasy. That the unpleasant interview with Dexter had occurred only that morning he could hardly believe.

"Is that you, Marcia?" he said into the telephone. "Yes, dear. Thank you so much for calling. I wanted you to know that I've been so relieved and happy since I heard from you at noon."

"I'm glad of that," he answered but he could not feel the situation as he had before; the menace of it, and hopelessness of it. He could feel only of the understanding and loveliness and gentleness of the girl who had reached beside him in the gray of the early evening and the truth that had come to him so suddenly that he was still dizzy from its strong impact.

"Dear," he heard her say, "can you run up to have dinner with us? We had an engagement but we begged off."

For the first time in his life Barrett lied expertly. He couldn't talk to Marcia this evening. He had to be alone to think. He said goodby to her and then telephoned Elinor.

"Are you dining in, sir?" Higgins questioned a short while later. "Yes, Higgins," Barrett answers happily. Before he left the room he wrote, "Flowers, candy, pink box" on day-by-day pad. That it was an absurd and unnecessary reminder he realized, feeling slightly a fool. Nevertheless it was a satisfaction to write it. He stood looking down at the words. She didn't think he seemed old. He had said, "I usually feel frightfully decrepit when I'm with anyone your age," and she had answered with a bluntness that had elated him. "That's the silliest thing I've ever heard!" He had said. "Really do you mean it?" and she had replied, "I certainly do!"

"ABOLISH HONEYMOONS? NEVER!"

Novelist's Startling Proposal Draws A Fiery Counter-Attack. Ideal Start For Happiness And A Memory To Be Cherished Forever; They Contend.

By JULIA BLANSHARD
New York—Abolish honeymoons? NEVER! That is the answer given by a quartet of famous folks to a glowing proposal made by Mary Borden, author of "The Technique of Marriage!"

"Please don't do away with honeymoons," pleads Judith Anderson, well-known stage star, now rehearsing for "Reunion in Vienna."

"One by one, the romantic things in life are being done to death by stern realists," Miss Anderson maintains. "Why remove them all? Other things being equal, the honeymoon is an opportunity to start married life in an ideal realm which two people build for themselves, away from familiar scenes and familiar faces."

"Honeymoons give couples a chance to make the adjustments in temperament and disposition that are necessary when two lives are joined. Even if everything does crumble later, at least there is the memory of the honeymoon. But it shouldn't crumble, if the honeymoon sees them off to a good start."

A society woman, Mrs. George Elliman, backs all that Judith Anderson says on the subject. Mrs. Elliman is a popular member of the younger New York-Long Island society circles. She was Nadia de Acosta, niece of the late Mrs. Philip Lydig, who was the beautiful Rita de Acosta.

"It is very wise for young couples to start their married life with a honeymoon," Mrs. Elliman asserts. "If they are really in love with each other, as they should be, the happiness they have had alone together without any of the outside sliders, yet in some mysterious way he is allowed to shift for himself. Of course I am speaking in generalities. Many mothers are very careful of these little folk. And even those who are inclined to think the two-to-six child needs special attention are hardly to be blamed, because the needs of such children have never been accentuated. The emphasis has ever been on the baby and on the school child.

To show how important this age is now considered, it has been proved over and over that diseases springing suddenly to life during adolescence (thirteen to eighteen) are direct results of trouble, unnoticed, beginning during these early years. Tuberculosis, chronic infections, bone trouble, malnourishment and its dire effects—every kind and variety of disease that seem to spring from nowhere at the "developing" age are found to have their beginnings away back in early childhood.

What then should be done about the two-to-six child? First of all he should be nourished. "But he eats all the time," his mother may say. That is just it. But what does he eat, how much and when?

Stuffing Is Not Enough Food does not necessarily mean nourishment. Quantity does not mean quality. To stuff him with bread and jam isn't feeding him. He needs three regular meals a day. When very young he needs milk only. Later he needs only three.

He needs cooked foods (yes, in summer) and plenty of milk. He needs cereals twice a day, well-cooked vegetables, celery, spinach, lettuce, beans, peas, cabbage, cauliflower, tomatoes—the list could go on. For very young children make purées (puddings) when cooked, or cut up the vegetables finely and make them into soup. Not all of these things every day, of course, but some of them—a variety! He needs milk, some fresh meat, never fried, and no thick gravy—also eggs, fish or chicken. Some plain sweets, fat such as butter, and a certain amount of fruit—cooked or plain—but ask the doctor about the fruit. Whole wheat bread is better than too much fine white bread.

His meals should be regular. His bedtime should be seven o'clock every night. He should have a nap or rest period during the day. He should be bathed regularly. He needs fresh air day and night and his own bed if possible.

And if he isn't well, or is round-shouldered, a bad color, or has no appetite, he needs a doctor. There are ten million malnourished children in the United States. Most of these are too late to "catch." They come from rich and poor families, and they got their start in the pre-school age.

HOME-MADE MASKS PERFORM WONDERS

Masks are the most cleansing, soothing facial treatments that your face can have. You can make them at home and get marvelous results, if you are willing to spend the time. If you have a muddy look, or a tired, drawn look, take a couple of hours and go to work on the old face. The relaxed, cleared countenance that will smile back at you after the job will more than repay you.

You don't have to buy ready-made facial masks to get good results. You can make them of things right out of your ice box or your pantry shelf.

In Paris, women treat themselves to a fresh raw beef pack every little while. The thrifty Frenchwoman makes her pattern for it, cutting out strips to fit her cheeks, forehead, chin and nose. Her thrifty butcher cut the thin slices of beef to fit her face and she takes them home to treat herself. You can get the beef and cut your own, or maybe your butcher will oblige as French butchers do!

The best way to use the beef is to bind it onto your face, with strips of gauze, and leave it on over night. Of course your eyes will be left uncovered and your nostrils and mouth. Or you can use it for two hours or so. Wash your face well afterward with warm water and polish it off with a good nourishing cream and tonic.

Masks act as a mild poultice, drawing out the impurities of the skin. They stimulate circulation, too, so no wonder they improve your looks.

HEALTH

SUN BATH HEALTHFUL, BUT DON'T TRY TO HURRY THAT COAT OF TAN.

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

When the heat of summer spreads over the nation, physicians and the hospitals begin at once to receive their quota of persons who have been harmed by contact with the hazards of life associated with summer conditions.

Many times it has been emphasized in these columns that sunlight is beneficial. It aids the growth of the bones, tends to destroy bacteria and has certain invigorating qualities.

Sun baths are healthful because they are associated with life out doors. They bring about a certain amount of rest in the open air. However, there are hazards associated with sun baths which should be borne in mind.

Exposure to the sun should be gradual. It is well to begin with not more than five minutes the first day and to increase this to the point where tanning takes place, rather than to attempt by two or three hours in the sun on the beach, or elsewhere, to blister the skin on the first exposure.

The amount of daily exposure to direct sunlight may be increased until it reaches one hour in the morning and one hour in the afternoon. It should not, however, exceed these amounts.

It is advisable that those who are exposed to sunlight be sheltered from the wind and from dust which is blown by the wind. Such dusts often contain bacteria, pollens of plants, residue from manure and all sorts of filth.

Auto accidents constitute a major cause of summer hazards. Drivers are told again and again to keep their brakes, steering gear and lights in perfect condition, to change tires after they have run long enough to wear off the tread, to

THE 2-TO-6 CHILD DESERVES SPECIAL WATCHING BUT SELDOM GETS IT

This is the last of six articles by Olive Roberts Barton, authority on problems of child-rearing, on "Summer Care of Babies."

The child who needs just as careful watching as the baby is the one from two to six years of age. We bend over backwards to keep the baby safe and that is right. We organize all sorts of regular physical examinations and free clinics for the school child, so that he gets his regular milk in school hours, and in many cases free lunches. And that is right, too.

But what do we do for the preschool child? Almost nothing at all. It is called by certain indignant specialists trying to save child life "the neglected age" and so it is.

The child gets almost his entire heritage of health under six. Then why is it that so many people become careless of him and take it for granted that after his babyhood he can sit at the table and eat the same foods his parents eat—pastry, rich sauces, too much starch, strong gravies and the like?

Needs Special Attention Besides all this, he is not old enough to attend to himself as the six or eight-year-old brothers and foreign markets we must meet world prices. To do this we would have to reduce production costs to levels which would involve lower wages to labor and longer hours of employment.

"Sixth, the purpose of the bill is inconsistent with the present policy to increase wage levels, because without tariff protection our higher standard of living cannot be maintained in competition with the cheap labor of Europe and the Orient.

"Seventh, buying more goods abroad will not help to reopen our own factories producing the same merchandise.

"Eighth, the importance of our foreign trade has been over-emphasized, since our exports even in normal times only amount to about one-tenth value of our domestic production.

"Ninth, what this country needs is more purchasing power and this cannot be brought about by denying American and producers the right to produce the goods consumed in the home market.

"Tenth, to abandon our present policy of equal treatment to all nations would only breed more bitter tariff wars and result in retaliation and unfair discrimination against our goods in foreign markets."

Aimes Temple McPherson-Hutton as man and wife.

Hutton will continue to live in his wife's parsonage. Mrs. McPherson-Hutton is reported to be in Paris, France.

Besides appointing a new business manager, Hutton yesterday dismissed Willed Andrews as his attorney, and hired a new lawyer, Fairfax Cosby.

Nurse Won Sult Andrews represented Hutton in the breach of promise suit in which Hazel Joan Myrtle St. Pierre, nurse, won a $5,000 judgment some months ago. Cosby said the judgment will be settled as soon as Hutton earns some money for himself.

"Hutton," said Brandon, "is entering work with which he is far more familiar. He has never pretended to be an evangelist—and because of this lack of familiarity with such work his presence in temple affairs has been resented in the organization established by his wife."

Brandon said he and Hutton are negotiating with two major movie producers of Hollywood for the purchase of a scenario written by Hutton.

ESCAPES SERIOUS HURTS AS CAR CRASHES TRUCK

George B. Krause of 87 Walnut Street Has Only Scalp Wound as Auto Is Demolished.

Arrested on a charge of reckless driving following an accident which occurred opposite 815 Silver Lane, East Hartford, at 9:15 last night, George B. Krause of Bolton, will be tried in the East Hartford police court Monday morning.

The accident occurred when Krause, driving east on Silver Lane midway between Forbes street and the Silver Lane pickle factory, side-wiped a truck parked near a house.

The truck loaded with vegetables and garden produce was owned by Gaetano Maraskello of 123 Charlestown street, Hartford. The entire top of the Krause car was torn off, the driver escaping with but a cut on the scalp.

After striking the parked truck, the Krause car swerved off the road into a tobacco field nearby. The truck, pushed several feet ahead with the brakes set, was badly wrecked. Krause miraculously intentionally by the United States in order to recover export trade.

"I do not think many people have much hope for the world economic conference, certainly none at all unless British statesmen and financiers manage to see this problem in the same light as it is seen in America and could advance toward stabilization for the recovery of trade with agreement on principal and detail of measures to be taken."

Colonel Wedgwood declared. At the conclusion of the debate the House adopted the finance bill 290 to 42, thus putting the budget provisions into effect.

Academy St. Couple Observe Crystal Wedding When Given Surprise Party.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Crawford of Academy street were honored with a surprise celebration of their fifteenth or crystal wedding anniversary last evening. The party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neill of East Center street.

Mrs. Neill invited Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cheney, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Armstrong, who compose the "Big Four" card club, to their home for a salad and strawberry shortcake supper and cards. About 8:30 another group of their neighbors and friends arrived in more or less elaborate costumes.

Mrs. Thora Stehr who was in the party played the Lohengrin wedding march, and Mr. and Mrs. Crawford realized the party was on them. Those who took part in the mock marriage were William Pitkin as the bride; Roger Cheney, bridegroom; Howard Cheney, bridesmaid, Harry Armstrong, best man, and Robert Neill gave ed back and forth across swampy jungles and lofty highlands, while others sped out to sea.

Not a Single Clue From this vast network of operations, however, not a single valid clue developed to give hope that the Spaniards' plane, the Castro Vientos, or "Four Winds" was safe.

Ignorance of how long the fliers could have remained in the air after passing Villa Hermosa, or how much gasoline remained, or of the course taken when they flew into a rain storm at Villa Hermosa complicated the search.

Before leaving Havana early Tuesday Collar and Barberan said they would not leave established air routes and that they would land if the weather became threatening. It was pointed out that if the Castro Vientos had landed safely in an isolated place, a subsequent take-off would be nearly impossible because compressed air is necessary to start their motor.

LATEST STOCKS

New York, June 23.—(AP)—An atmosphere of indecision pervaded financial markets today and prices of stocks and staples mulled around in an extremely narrow range throughout most of the business hours.

The American dollar was again erratic in foreign exchange transactions, slumping in the first hour and rallying later. Stocks rallied moderately in the first hour, but this early show of hopefulness gave way to apathy that resulted in most of the leaders dropping their initial advances. The ticker tape was lifeless at times. Wheat and corn eased, but cotton held fairly steady. Bonds were irregular. Bar silver was heavy, losing 1/4 of a cent an ounce to 84 1/2 cents.

Gains of fractions to a point or more were recorded by shares of Allied Chemical, Dupont, Case, National Distillers, American Smelting, Celanese, Chrysler, Woolworth, American Can, Bethlehem Steel, Union Pacific, Lockwood and Chesapeake and Ohio. American Can ran up about 2 points at one time, then quickly sank to around its opening level. American Telephone was without much support and dropped a point. U. S. Steel sagged a trifle, as did Westinghouse, Johns-Manville and some of the oils.

Recent firmness of tobacco stocks has been attributed largely to the substantial improvement in cigarette production which reached a new high monthly record in May and exceeded the previous monthly peak, established in July, 1930, by more than 1,000,000,000 cigarettes. Gains over last April amounted to some 6 per cent and the output for May, 1932, was exceeded by 47.6 per cent. Notwithstanding the jump in output, wholesale cigarette prices remain at bottom levels and net earnings of some of the companies are expected to be considerably below those of last year. Rumors of increased prices, however, have been prevalent for the past few weeks.

Railway earnings, in the eyes of most traders, still provide an important basis for judging the extent of industrial improvement. The first six roads to publish statements for May showed a 4.8 per cent increase in gross over May last year, while net operating income was up 10.9 per cent. June traffic, it is estimated in some quarters, may be 12 or 15 per cent greater than in the corresponding month a year ago.

will depend finally on stabilization of all the work that can go on is going on.

He revealed that the question of adjournment was again brought before the steering committee this morning "but it was laughed off."

"Adjournment is foolish," he said, "and cannot be imagined. If we adjourn now and try to come back in August, the chances are 99 1/2 per cent that conditions will then be worse than now. The beginning of a final settlement must be made now."

FRENCH PROPOSAL

London, June 23.—(AP)—France proposed a quota treaty at the world economic conference today which would enable countries using quotas as weapons against importations to keep them indefinitely.

The resolution is considered a counter-proposal to the intensive drive by the United States for complete abolition of all embargoes, quotas and arbitrary restrictions.

The French suggestion calls upon the nations to undertake not to enact new prohibitions or quotas but permits them to maintain quotas presently in force for an indefinite period. Agricultural products, however, are excluded from the proposed treaty.

The resolution was debated in a subcommittee considering commercial policies, where the French delegates explained the exceptional fall in prices of agricultural products prevented France from renouncing her right to recourse to quotas until, by means of international organization of production, a world price level is reached insuring reasonable profit for farmers.

ments in many languages and map out research procedure for assistants.

Mr. Hoover will be devoting himself to an old hobby in his new role. The Hoover war library—the largest collection of its kind—was founded in 1919 with funds provided by him. Ever since, he has talked to university associates of the day when he could find time to outline to librarians the scope of the material awaiting classification.

Secret Documents

Some of the material probably will be edited for publication under his direction, librarians said. Much of it, however, is secret and sealed, not to be made public for many years. Men must die before some of the documents are read. Governments must fall, or pass into other hands.

Among the several million items now included in the growing collection, are documents dealing with war nations of almost all the countries in the world. During the armistice, Mr. Hoover, as food relief administrator, was in intimate touch with all the governments of Europe.

"And I was vernal enough," he said in an informal conference with newspapermen the summer before his election in 1928, "to utilize that intimacy in securing war documents from all governments as a personal favor to me."

In 1936, the first of the sealed documents are to be opened. Others will remain untouched for 35 years or longer.

BRIDGEPORT MAN KILLED IN CRASH

Loses Life With Another When Airplane Falls on the West Coast.

Bridgeport, June 28.—(AP)—J. A. Sheridan of Bridgeport, killed with Emory Mack E. Voorhees in an airplane accident on the west coast, lost his life less than two years after enlisting in the United States Navy.

Born in Port Chester, N. Y., 20 years ago, Sheridan came here several years ago and enlisted in February, 1932, through the Bridgeport recruiting office. He was a graduate of Port Chester high school.

Sheridan died of a broken neck yesterday, two hours after the plane fell near Pasadena, Calif., a mountain resort. His son, Emory Mack E. Voorhees, a native of Finley, Ohio, as mechanic on a familiarization flight over the mountains.

The plane was reported to have fallen from 500 feet after its motor stopped functioning.

Sheridan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Sheridan, reside in Bridgeport. He also leaves a brother and two half-sisters.

Funeral services will be held here.

The social committee served refreshments.

**STUFFED CELERY: Add to peanut butter the desired amount of minced ripe olives, chopped parsley, and enough of the pulp drained from canned tomatoes to make a smooth paste. Work ingredients together with fork and fill the grooves of crisp, well bleached celery stalks of uniform length. Chill before serving.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
(Child Holds Breath Until Lifeless)

Question: Mrs. Harvey S. writes: "Please advise me what to do with a child that holds its breath until it is black in the face and lifeless. What causes this condition?"

Answer: When a child cries so hard that it holds its breath for a long period of time, it is usually because it suffers from periodic attacks of indigestion due to wrong feeding. He is frantic to tell you about it, and probably loses his temper because he cannot properly express himself. The shock from the application of a cold towel over the body is a good cure for this habit. Also see that the diet is corrected.

Speech may be silver, and silence gold, but paper money seems to be doing all the talking these days.

This popular dance orchestra will furnish the music and a variety of entertaining novelties at Rau's, this coming Saturday night. ## MARVELOUS MANHATTAN

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York — The decollete Mr. Ghandi, looking at us from India, and some other well known "furnishings" have had things to say about this country's bathtubs. And they weren't suggesting that our interest in plumbing had anything to do with godliness, by any means. So it seemed we might be in for another slum when Dorothea Wiesel, who was the kindly teacher in the German film, "Mädchen in Uniform," observed after arrival here:

"New York certainly has the best bathtubs in the world," and to have the best tubs may suggest that we have the best of all civilization for an earthy earth.

Wistful Miss Wiesel
Miss Wiesel's charm is of the wistful sort, yet she impresses you as being mentally vivacious. She has large blue eyes — the kind we call dreamy, dark blond hair, and a beauty that is no regular pattern.

Her background is German, but she was born in Switzerland while her parents were on a trip, and spent much of her childhood in Sweden. She gets her English a bit twisted sometimes, in conversation, but hasn't a heavy accent. Says she can master any role in the tongue.

The serious little star (she appeared to be larger on the screen) insists she is more concerned about her acting than she is with being a beauty or a "personality."

As for what she expects of Hollywood:

"I never expect something, I hope nothing. Perhaps it will be good; perhaps bad."

She brought no retinue of servants, as some invading actresses have done. She brought no fancy automobile. But one thing she did bring was a portable phonograph.

At her Park avenue hotel, when her first exciting day here was drawing to a close, she wound her little machine and said to me:

"I will play for you some Bach, yes?"

"Ah, I am so happy that in New York, with all the bathtubs, the people know about Bach."

Coincidence
Don Dickerman, of night club fame, and Katherine Campbell had just finished reading a book together — Richard Harding Davis' "Captain Macklin." The hero of the Davis adventure story is a character based on a real flesh and blood soldier of fortune — none other than Col. C. A. Rice, who was Miss Campbell's father.

It was a bit strange, therefore, when Miss Campbell, and Dickerman strolled into the annual exhibition of the Society of Illustrators at the National Academy, where the works of artists from the civil war to the present day were displayed.

The first picture that caught Miss Campbell's eye was an original illustration for "Captain Macklin" by Walter Appleton Clark.

Clark had drawn Miss Campbell's father exactly from old photographs.

The Models' Guild, enlisting so many of the prettiest who pose for the advertisements, had its money tied up in the last big bank that didn't reopen.

Conductor Stokowald has presented a concert by an invisible orchestra. All right for musiclovers, but how about us fellows who only keep awake at concerts by keeping our eye glued on the kettle-drummer?

Following the first matches in 1928, the boys from the United States met the British at Worcester in 1927. Here, on his own soil, Uncle Sam's first victory was registered.

After that competition was postponed on alternate years, with the Walker Cup matches, a similar competition, for amateurs, filling in.

The series was resumed in 1929, with the American forces again victorious, losing a close match, 7-5. It was in this contest that George Duncan, British captain, drubbed Walter Hagen, American leader, by the score of 10 to 8. The last contest was played at Toledo, Columbus, Ohio, in 1931. That year the British came over and found us playing with a larger and lighter ball. That item had much to do with their rout.

The present picture finds the best American team in years, according to George Jacobus, president of the Professional Golfers' Association, trying for its first victory on foreign soil. But the team will find one of the best British arrays ever assembled facing them.

England is calling on her stock of leading pros to strike their hardest blow at those chappies from the United States, and have revamped the team of 1931 by adding a lot of young blood to the lineup.

On the other hand, the American team is composed mostly of veterans. All but two members, Dutra and Runyan, have seen Ryder Cup competition.

The cup itself, donated by Samuel Ryder, prominent English sportsman, is one of the finest trophies in the world. It represents international team matches designed to promote good sportsmanship between the United States and England.

The matches are a two-day affair. On the first day two-ball foursomes are played. That means that two players play one ball on alternate strokes. We are not so accustomed

BRITISH DENOUNCE JAPANESE TACTICS IN TEXTILE TRADE

London (AP)—Japanese trade competition has drawn the fire of the Federation of British Industries.

A special committee, composed of industrialists representing the principal trades affected by the competition, has concluded a broad investigation and submitted a report to the board of trade.

Charles Reckless, secretary of the committee, said during the past year, "the committee charges," "has been deliberately used to embark on a reckless national sales policy, with disastrous results to British and other traders in various markets of the world."

"It seems impossible to doubt that the difference in wages, labor conditions and standard of living make it impossible for the East and West to compete on equal terms in articles in whose cost wages form a substantial part."

Dealing with the cotton textile industry, the report states that Japan has found in the surplus girl population of the agrarian districts an almost illimitable supply of labor, docile and possessed of manual dexterity."

Find Hour Equals Day Direct wages of male workers in the cotton piece goods industry were reported to be barely one-third of British rates and barely one-fourth in the case of female workers.
