Over 400,000 Cotton Textile Workers Come Under Code—Other Industries to Follow Suit.

Washington, July 10.—(AP)—Upwards of 400,000 employees in cotton textile next Monday will begin working only 40 hours a week instead of 48 to 50 for no less than $12 or $13 against $8 to $9.

This was assured when President Roosevelt, with reservations and in operations, last night approved and promulgated the first work-spreading, wage-raising code of fair competition completed under the National Recovery Act.

Approval of this agreement, officials said, would bring more cotton to the market and help to recover from the depression. The President calls a "partnership" between business and the government.

The situation now is this: A majority of the cotton textile industry has agreed on minimum wages for a part of their employees and the maximum number of hours they shall work.

About 23 per cent of the industry, officials reported have not signed that agreement. They will be granted hearings this week. If they do not accept, then the government will be ready to demand that they apply for Federal licenses to operate.

FORESTRY EXPERT COMMITS SUICIDE

Theodore S. Woolsey, Internationally Known, Takes His Life in New Haven.

New Haven, July 10.—(AP)—Theodore Salisbury Woolsey, 53, internationally known forestry expert, shot himself to death today at his home. A verdict of suicide was given by Dr. M. M. Scarborough, medical examiner.

Woolsey, who was cited by General John J. Pershing for his services during the World War and honored by three European governments for his forestry work, was found dead in his bedroom by a maid. He shot himself in the temple.

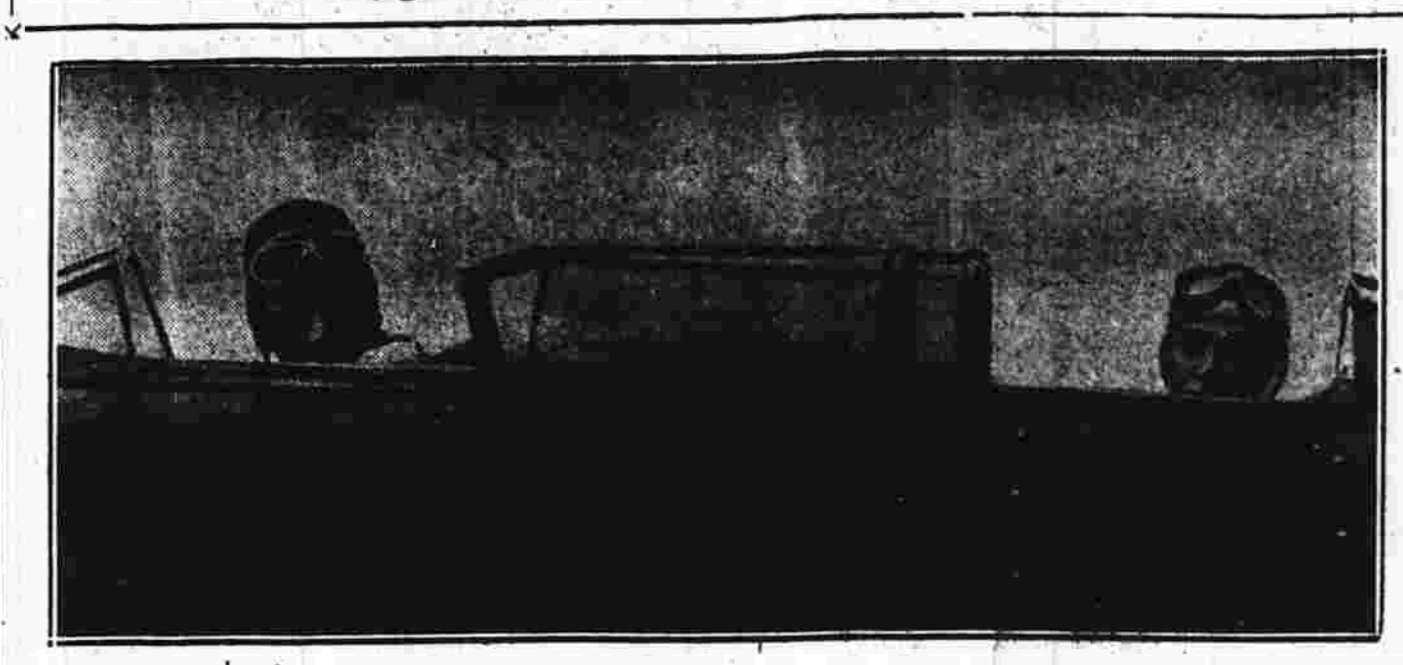

Dr. Scarborough said Woolsey had been depressed by illness in his family. Born in New Haven, he was the author of several books on forestry and had made studies of the forestry movement in India, Austria, France, and Tunisia.

Woolsey was awarded the rank of lieutenant colonel of engineers and was attached to Paris headquarters staff. During 1917 to 1919, he was the American delegate on the intra-allied war wood commission.

A graduate of Yale University, Woolsey served in the United States forest service as an inspector and assistant district forester from 1907 to 1915. He was lecturer in the Yale School of Forestry in 1912 and again in 1916 on organization and management of National forests.

He was a member of the Society of Foresters. He was married and had two children. He was a member of the Society of Foresters. He was married and had two children. He was a member of the Society of Foresters.

The sum of $1,125,000 has been appropriated for disbursement this year to states cooperating in the movement. The law directs the new agency to promote and develop a national system of employment officers for men, women and juniors who are legally qualified to work, to maintain a service and a farm placement service.

W. Frank Persons, director, and his aides, say the new system will be able to find more jobs for the idle because the higher standards should convince employers that they can obtain a better type of workman from a great pool rather than depending on those who call at the gate.

LINDYS ON WAY TO MAKE STUDY OF AIR ROUTES

Fog Delays Trip to Greenland—Famous Couple to Spend Day With Mrs. Lindbergh's Mother.

North Haven, Me., July 10.—(AP)—The monoplane in which Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are making a flight to Greenland appeared over this island shortly after 9:30 a. m. (e. s. t.), today and circled about, apparently preparing to alight.

In a few minutes the Colonel brought his plane down in the water, and he and Mrs. Lindbergh went ashore. The Lindberghs flew here from South Warren, about 20 miles away, where they alighted last night.

Originally intending to make Halifax, N. S., his destination last night the Colonel was forced inland by banks of fog along the coast. He brought his plane down on South pond, and he and Mrs. Lindbergh spent the night there as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Dorman.

The Lindberghs stop here will give them an opportunity to visit their son, Jon, and Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, at the Morrow summer home. Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh were delayed somewhat in getting away from their mooring at South Warren as a result of the plane's pontoons becoming mired in the mud on the bottom of the pond.

A cable on the plane which it was reported snapped on the flight up the coast yesterday, apparently was causing the Colonel no concern. Last night he walked two miles to the nearest telephone, in a garage and telephoned to New York for a replacement part.

RUSSIA TO LOAN MATTER A PLANE. Then from Nome, Alaska, He Will Continue Flight in American Machine.

Washington, July 10.—(AP)—Arrangements were in the making today for Soviet authorities to send the stranded American round-the-world flyer, James Mattern, from Moscow, Siberia, to Nome, Alaska, from which point he would continue homeward in an American plane.

In a telegram to Boris Skvirsky, chief of the Soviet Information Bureau here, Irving Friedman of New York, who is backing the expedition to rescue Mattern, said: "Just received word from Alexander (William Alexander, head of the Mattern relief flight now in Alaska) that Mattern is willing to fly back in a Soviet plane to Nome where he will continue the trip eastward in an American plane."

"Change of plans due to fact it would take too long to repair or send a new plane to Mattern. Will you kindly inform Mattern through the commissar of Foreign Affairs at Moscow." Skvirsky immediately repeated the telegram to his government at Moscow and said arrangements would be completed very shortly to send Mattern by seaplane, to Nome.

The Russians have a large airplane now supposed to be on the way from Khabarovsk on the Amur river to Anadyr. This craft fortunately stopped at Khabarovsk on its way from the Crimea to Wrangel Island in the Arctic ocean, where it is to assist in meteorological investigation connected with the sending of an expedition this summer through the Arctic from European Russia to the Bering Sea.

A similar expedition was sent through the Arctic last summer by the Soviet Government. The monetary commission which composed of the leaders of the conference agreed to eliminate subsidies and commercial policies including tariffs and quotas from the further deliberations. This was agreed with the gold bloc's desire.

The committee, however, was unable to decide whether monetary questions, which the European countries say cannot be dealt with until stability is realized, should be treated and asked a drafting committee to consider this controversial matter and report to the steering group tomorrow afternoon.

CLAIMS KILLING WAS ACCIDENTAL

Young Student Tells Police Woman Was Shot During Fight for Gun.

Springfield, Ohio, July 10.—(AP)—The twice-repeated confession of Theodore A. Holmes that he was with Mrs. Nora Coffey when she was shot to death was weighed today by Prosecutor Marcus McAllister of neighboring Greene county as he sought to determine what action to take against the 20-year-old Antioch college student.

Both he and Prosecutor Orville Wear of Clark county said they believed Holmes' story that the shooting was accidental. The youth repeated for them soon after he was returned here from Winsted, Conn., the confession he made to Sheriff George W. Benham of Clark county snoutro from the eastern city.

From it, McAllister learned that Mrs. Coffey, a 24-year-old Springfield woman, died in Greene county instead of in Clark county as had been believed. Holmes, McAllister said, told of a struggle with Mrs. Coffey for possession of a revolver while they were parked on a road near Goes station, Greene county. During the scuffle, the revolver was discharged, killing Mrs. Coffey.

When he found the woman had died, Holmes said, he became frightened and drove to the little Miami river near Xenia where he pushed her body into the river. It was found May 13, two days after the shooting. McAllister said he would take Holmes to the scene of the shooting to check up on the details of the confession.

AMERICANS HELD IN SPANISH JAIL

Tourists Get Into Trouble With Civil Guards—State Department Probing.

Washington, July 10.—(AP)—Five American tourists have been imprisoned without bail since June 4 in a Spanish prison despite protests of State Department officials.

Senator Bulkley (D., Ohio), said efforts to help had been directed to him by friends of the jailed tourists. One of the five is a woman, Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood, 24, wife of Clinton Lockwood, New York City artist, who is one of the four men held in the Palma City jail, island of Mallorca.

The others are Rutherford Fullerton, 53, a retired Columbus, Ohio, businessman; Roderick F. Mead, an artist of New York City, and Edmund W. Blodgett of Stamford, Conn., also an artist. The matter has been taken up by the State Department and Ambassador Claude Bowers has been cabled instructions to try and effect their release.

Reason for Arrest given the Ohio Senator by friends of the imprisoned quintet, the imprisonment followed a clash between one of the Americans and an officer of the Guardia Civil, Spanish military police. GLACIER PRIEST AND PARTY ALMOST KILLED BY STORMS

False Pass, Alaska, July 10.—(AP)—Father Bernard Hubbard, the "glacier priest," was back here safe today after the second successful ascent of Shishaldin volcano, during which he said the expedition endured "almost fatally."

Already the conqueror of the dangerous Mummik Island peak while it was in eruption last year, Father Hubbard reported that this season his party was repulsed twice in six weeks, before the summit was reached, on July 3.

While struggling along the perilous glacier on the cone, Father Hubbard said, "a sudden gale registered at least 80 miles an hour swept our party off its feet and blew the men helpless along the swirling snow."

In the lee of an ice pinnacle, we managed to get a fly tent over our heads. There, four men and three pack dogs crouched freezing for hours, until a slight lessening of the gale allowed us to get to the bottom of the mountain.

When the summit was finally reached, he said, the mountain again "blew a hissing" at the climbers, and all had to enter the gassy, steaming cone at the top to thaw out their clothes and freezing fingers before starting downward.

Washington, July 10.—(AP)—The production of an American price-level program to justify continuance of the world economic conference was awaited today with both anxiety and skepticism as the parley entered its fifth week.

Committee Hopes for Fair Weather—Band Concert Precedes Display.

Another big fireworks display, a "make up" showing because of the poor exhibit given here Fourth of July night, will be held at the Old Golf Links off East Center street tomorrow night starting at nine o'clock, under the auspices of the American Legion. A band concert, one in the weekly series, will be given by the Salvation Army band starting at about 7:30. The public is invited to tomorrow night's fireworks display and there will be no charge for parking.

The Legion committee has made satisfactory arrangements with the concern that put on the Fourth of July display and the local group has been assured that a fine exhibit will be given in order to hold the good will of the Manchester people. The Fourth of July show was delayed until a late hour because of the uncertainty of the weather and when the set-pieces were finally started rain nearly ruined the show.

NEW NAVY PROGRAM A SPUR TO TRADES

Employment Looms for Thousands in American Shipyards and Shops.

BY WILLIS THORNTON NEA Service Writer. Washington, July 10.—Nearly a quarter of a billion dollars will find their way into the pockets of American shipbuilders during the next three years because the United States has a sailor President.

That would be labor's share in the $28,020,000 to be spent in building 32 new naval ships, the $9,352,000 to be spent on 290 new naval planes, and an additional $75,000,000 that may be spent on modernizing existing ships. For Rep. Carl Vinson, chairman of the House Naval Committee, calculates that 85 per cent of the money spent on new ships goes for labor, and a large percentage of the remodeling expense and plane cost would reach the same destination—the pockets of skilled workers.

The 32 new ships are all to be laid down this year. Navy Secretary Swanson has announced, in addition to the 17 ships spent this year. Sixteen vessels will be built in the government yards at New York, Charleston, Mare Island, Bremerton, Portsmouth, Philadelphia. Bids will be opened July 26 from private yards for the other 16 ships, with Col. H. L. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy emphasizing such bids must be "satisfactory" or practically all the work will go to government yards.

16 Major Trades Stimulated. The work, Secretary Swanson points out, will employ "many thousands" directly and "many more" indirectly. Sixteen major trades and 100 smaller mechanical trades in many states are affected. Steel, iron, lumber, cork, rubber, metal fixtures, fittings, valves, electrical equipment, brass lead, sheet metal, interior decoration, insulation, tiling, furniture and furnishings, galley and pantry equipment, hardware, tools, castings, all these lines should feel almost immediately the stimulation of the navy's program.

Material readiness stressed. In 1933, even with today's new 1933 program carried out, the United States will be under its treaty limits by two or three plane carriers, two heavy cruisers, four or five light cruisers, ninety destroyers and about fifty submarines. The actual number of ships is approximately given, for it depends on the size of ship built within the tonnage limitations of the various classes.

BUYERS TEAM UP TO BEAT AUCTION

Try to Hold Down Price of Goods at Mintz Store But Local Bidder Breaks It Up

The dry goods and boot shop conducted by Harry Mintz on North Main street closed several weeks ago on an attachment served by Deputy Sheriff James H. Johnston in favor of Mrs. Ellen Murphy, was sold at auction Saturday afternoon by Deputy Sheriff Johnston. There were eighteen out-of-town visitors present to bid. They played together and instead of buying the place for $80 as was at first considered about the proper price, a local bidder started the sale with an offer of $100. The final offer was $135 and it was sold by the deputy sheriff to one of the bidders, who offered a check in payment. The check was refused and Goltz Brothers of Hartford took it at that price paying in cash. When the key was secured the eighteen bidders gathered inside of the store and had a auction all their own. Myer Saunders, who at one time was a partner in a sale with Mr. Mintz and holds a judgment of $300 against him because Mr. Mintz locked up the store when Saunders was away and had to start a suit to get a lock off, was among those who were at the sale and with others engineered the sale for $135. The eighteen were selected to go inside, when another sale took place and the goods sold to Fazzino Brothers of Hartford. They paid $325 for the stock and fixtures as resold. Mr. Saunders took occasion to remind Mintz that he had a part in the final ending of the business. After the sale the group who took part in the auction inside of the store each received $10 for their part in the public auction, or pay for not running the price up.

POLICE PAY HONOR TO EX-PROSECUTOR

Members of Local Department Give Chas. R. Hathaway Chair and Pipe.

Charles R. Hathaway, who retired as prosecuting attorney of the town court of Manchester on Monday, July 3, after 32 years' service was given a pleasant and unexpected surprise Saturday afternoon in the police court room. Mr. Hathaway, still assistant prosecuting attorney of the court, was asked to come to the police station on the pretext that an important warrant was to be drawn at once. He complied and to further carry out the effect that it was important a police car was sent for him. Arriving at the police station he found all but two of the regular policemen and the four supernumerary men, present. Chief Gordon made known to Mr. Hathaway that he had not been called to the police station on business, to which he had so often responded in a hurry when matters of importance had to be taken care of, but for a different reason. On behalf of the members of the police department he presented to Mr. Hathaway an easy chair and a pipe, that he might rest at ease and enjoy the pipe for many years to come. It was an entire surprise to Mr. Hathaway. It was much appreciated by him. Actions showed this far greater than the words that he had trouble in uttering. He recalled several interesting incidents as they came to his mind and some dated prior to the birth of some of the members of the department. He had, he told them, felt each time that a policeman had been called upon to make an arrest that the arrest was not made unless justified. He knew the work of a policeman and felt at all times that they should be supported when they did their duty and when the policeman had performed their duty it was his opinion that they should be backed up. He complimented the present and past members of the force in the judgment they had used in making arrests. He thanked them for their remembrance and assured the policeman that as he sat at ease in the chair and smoked the pipe that there would be many recollections that would come back that would bind further the friendship that had been shown.

Y. M. C. A. Notes

A baseball game worth 50 cents of anybody's money but put on free was staged Saturday morning between the boys from Hollywood and the Y. Juniors. Seven innings were played and at the end of the sixth the score was tied at 15 to 15. Then the Hollywoods got ahead the first half of the seventh. The Y Boys made a last minute push and ran in two scores with enough to put them one ahead. The two croquet courts were occupied all morning also and Saturday morning and today Miss Dwyre's craft workers were busy in the wood carving, decorative float painting and making of scrap books. The float paint work is artistic and exceedingly interesting as the oil paints are floated on the water and mixed there; then the glass jar or flower pot is dipped into the water and the most gorgeous designs come off onto the article dipped into the watery paint covered mixture. These designs are more wonderful than they could possibly do if they were to design them. The color schemes can of course be worked out as they plan the mixing of the paints they pour on the water. The three play wood paneling will be hand painted and then calenders attached for wall decorations and useful calenders as well. Two car loads of the north and boys went to Lake Amston for three hours swim and picnic Saturday noon. This was a surprise for the boys who had come on the hike of seven miles last time and who came expecting another such hike. A lot of good stiff hike and did not show up were sorry that they did not tackle the hike this time when it turned into a nice auto trip to the lake. Wednesday morning this week all arguments in its favor. In Senator Bone's speech at Ogdensburg he said: "These hydro stations take one man or none to operate. The labor cost in producing power is the lowest of any business in the world for the amount of money invested." "In this statement he admits that my argument that the St. Lawrence project would not relieve unemployment is absolutely correct, and that it will not put to work many thousands of men as Commissioner Walsh and Vice Chairman Cosgrove of the New York power authority have so freely stated to the public. The senator's trip to the St. Lawrence at this time is cleverly camouflaged propaganda."

The Federal service, too, will provide a sort of nationwide clearing house, so an unemployed man in one state may be told about a job in another if he cannot be placed at home. Regional offices will be developed gradually to provide this service, to see that states comply with the new standards and to collection statistics for information.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE A CHAMPION FENCER!

● ABOVE—THERE IS NOTHING LIKE FENCING for bringing out the condition of a man's nerves. The quick reflexes and perfect coordination of healthy nerves helped George Santelli, former Olympic fencer, win the Open Saber Championship of the United States.

● LEFT—GEORGE SANTELLI, who says: "I can enjoy as many Camels as I want and still know that my nerves are fit."

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

"A man can't fence his best unless his nerves are healthy," says George Santelli. "Fencing is one of the fastest sports there is—you've got to keep your reflexes and nerves in perfect condition. As a coach, I have fencing appointments from seven-thirty in the morning until ten or eleven at night. I can enjoy as many Camels as I want and still know that my nerves are ready and fit when fast action is needed."

Camels, with their costlier tobaccos, give a pleasure that never fades. Steady smokers find them always mild...cool...pleasing. They do not fray the nerves or leave a "cigarette" aftertaste. Start smoking Camels today—for the new enjoyment you will find in a milder cigarette—for the sake of your nerves.

MONDAY, JULY 10.

McNEILS. Time was, so legend runs, that the seneschal of the Castle of Kilmul, standing upon the battlements at a certain hour each day, proclaimed four times to the quarters of the earth: "The McNeil o' Barra having finished his meal, the princes of the earth may now dine!"

Old are the McNeils. So old that it is well known in the clan that one of them, a wanderer with a genius for engineering stunts, in a remote period of the world's history changed the course of a mighty African river at the beseechment of some forgotten monarch—and they named, in their benighted foreign way, the river after him; that's how the Nile came to be the Nile.

Away back in those distant days there were Archibalds among the McNeils. And Kenneths, and Duncans and Malcolms and Rodericks. And among McNeils there have been Archibalds and Kenneths and Malcolms and Duncans and Rodericks ever since—and like enough always will be, world without end.

So why should the fact that an Archibald McNeil, Jr., and his brother Kenneth were indicted in Rhode Island for taking a whirl at the Volstead law back in 1920—something involve the political prospects of Archibald McNeil, Jr., of Bridgeport, who also happens to have a brother Kenneth, any more than the prosecution of John and James Smith for cattle rustling in the Texas Panhandle should involve the reputations of John and James Smith of Roselinde, Mass.?

To be sure, it is rather difficult to imagine The McNeil of Barra, at any period in the last thousand years, mildly submitting to a law which undertook to put a ban on Scotch mist—or any member of that proud and warlike tribe fraternizing with Andy Volstead of even tolerating that gentleman's ideas. But it's a far cry from that point to accusing Connecticut's Archy and Ken with being identical with the Rhode Island indelicates, and to running down to Washington to tattle to President Roosevelt just so as to keep the Connecticut Archibald from getting a government appointment.

We don't know, of course, whether investigation would bear it out, but we wouldn't bet a solitary nickel that there isn't an Archibald McNeil, Jr., who has a brother Kenneth in every state in the American Union, and maybe several of these pairs in some of the more populous states.

When you're a McNeil you have to subscribe to certain McNeil traditions—and instead of having all the given names from Genesis to Revelations to choose from, and all those from Bagdad to Portland, Ore., you just have to be an Archibald or a Kenneth, or a Roderick or some one of the somewhat limited array of personal appellations that have descended from the days when the McNeils o' Barra licked half the Scottish Highlands clean out of their kilts and bossed the world.

We'll say it manifests a lamentable egotism o' history to see owt but the merest coincidence in the two Archies and the two Kens.

NO SUCH DANGER. There is really no such thing as "danger" of this, that or the other obstructive action on the part of unsympathetic and stubborn manufacturers successfully interfering with the operation of the Industrial Recovery act. When the President or Administrator Johnson or any government spokesman comes out with a statement or an appeal which may seem to the casual observer to indicate some apprehension lest the great undertaking fail, it is not because he actually fears anything of the kind.

The government is not trying to save the country from the consequences of refusal or failure of the industrial groups to adopt codes, because there are not going to be any consequences, to the country. What it is trying very zealously to do is to save the operators of those industries from the consequences quite certain to fall upon themselves if they do not play the game. The consequence of loss of control of their own industries.

Nothing is surer in this world than that the industries will be operated in exact accordance with the purposes of the Recovery act. If they do not choose to make their own arrangements the arrangements will be made for them. Very wisely the government is giving them every reasonable opportunity to reach their agreements and draw their codes. But it is quite certain that it is not going to permit anti-trust manufacturers to rush production under old schedules and old wages-and-hour systems in a greedy attempt to grab extra profits by defeating the law's objective.

If there are those—and evidently there are some—who mistake a generous policy on the part of the government for an indication of weakness they are doomed shortly to experience a great shock.

It is simply silly to imagine that the re-establishment of business in this country will be permitted to be defeated because a few stupid and greedy individuals cannot adjust their minds and their characters to a new condition—when there is more than enough of law and more than enough of determination to prevent any such interference.

THE BREAD TAX. An increase in the price of bread was, of course, inevitable under the operation of the Farm Relief Act which provides for a bonus for withholding certain grain acreages, to be paid for out of a processing tax. This was perfectly well understood when the bill was adopted. The miller pays the wheat tax, the baker reimburses the miller, the consumer reimburses the baker. The consumer, if the theory works out, will be reimbursed by the restoration of the farmer's prosperity and buying power and the consequent increase in industrial activity and employment in the factories and elsewhere.

patient has neither tuberculosis nor diabetes but a broken leg and that the only remedy is amputation." And that is more or less the effect likely to be achieved if there should be sent to cover the medical consultation a group of press representatives made up half-and-half from the sporting department and of the veterans of political conventions.

One wonders if the press isn't falling down, in this Conference matter, quite as badly as the conferees.

SUN. Of course somebody would drag old Eddie Gladstone to town and show him an automobile and a movie after he had lived happily for 72 years on his North Carolina mountain farm without having been pestered by sight of either town, gas-buggy or cinema. Now Eddie will never be the same again. Even if he doesn't go clean off his noodle, move to town and buy him a car, as he is said to threaten to do, how will his neighbors up there in the west wing of the Great Smokies ever get along with him and his quite certain prating about the time when "Ah wux to Murphy"—13 far miles away.

Murphy has a whole thousand people—many of whom, despite Secretary Perkins' implication, wear shoes. Imagine what will happen to old Eddie when he wakes at night in his Unaka cabin from dreams through which that vast concourse of strange humanity goes a-whirling, and hikes over to the next mountain in the middle of the night to tell Zeph Ocaln all about it. Sooner or later they'll probably shoot him.

Eddie was a perfectly contented, happy old man. Now he's just a tangle of new ideas—and if there's one thing in this world that the mountain counties of southwest North Carolina don't reckon to tolerate it's new ideas.

They surely did sink Eddie when they took him to town.

IN NEW YORK BY JULIA BLANSHARD. New York—New York has a few intrepid men who dare go in for new summer modes. Every night club nowadays sees one or two cool white linen mess jackets, usually on young collegiates who seem to have a little more nerve about dressing than business men.

At the Waldorf Astoria, one scorching day recently, a dignified man appeared for lunch in a pin-striped navy blue seersucker suit, looking cool, if a bit self-conscious.

At the New Yorker yesterday noon half the men were in white linen suits.

At Dwight Pike's nautical tea party at the Mayfair Yacht Club the other afternoon, Frank Sullivan wore a gay yellow, soft-collared shirt that could not, by the widest stretch of the imagination, be called tan or beige.

Willard Karn, the bridge player, had on one of his brown, tan, red and white, plaid shirt, tie and pocket handkerchief sets.

Frieda Inescort, just back from a tour of "When Ladies Meet," had a good time joking with George S. Hellman, distinguished author who now possesses a very distinguished beard—the kind that Left Bank in Paris usually produces but few Americans have nerve enough to boast.

Best's None Too Good. Peter B. Kyne, novelist, delightful, changeable Irishman that he is, is always surprising his friends by his latest ideas.

On Securing Security. Dorothy Waring, author, got her divorce the day she started writing "Women Want Security."

Eye-Eye Views. Side-glances from a Fifth Avenue bus: As the bus stopped at 18th street, for red lights, the conductor, a dapper young fellow, whistled hastily to a street ice-cream vendor who rushed over with a little cup of raspberry ice, which the conductor licked up as the bus rolled on.

Suppose it was some very notable individual, instead of the economic world, that was ill. And that the conferees at his bedside were physicians. And suppose the press wires were kept hot with such messages as these:

"Dr. Jones scored heavily on the consulting physicians of the tuberculosis bloc today when he obtained four more signatories to his theory that the patient is suffering from diabetes." "Insulin advocates ran up against a snag today when the forces of exclusive dietary treatment, rallying Drs. Jones, Smith, Brown, White, Grey and Robertson to their support, completely overwhelmed the insulin party."

Health and Diet Advice

By Dr. Frank McCoy

Any mucous membrane of the body may be affected by catarrhal inflammation whether in the nose, throat, middle ear, bronchial tubes, lungs, intestines, etc. For this reason there are a great number of catarrhal disorders. For example, all of the following disorders are of a catarrhal type: catarrhal deafness, sinus trouble, hay fever, asthma, influenza, bronchitis, mucous colitis, stomach catarrh, nasal catarrh, mastoiditis, discharge from the ear, catarrhal jaundice and many others.

The main symptom of catarrh is the secretion of abnormal amounts of mucous from inflamed mucous membranes. The first discharge is clear white and often irritating. Later it becomes frothy, thicker and yellow, and it may become quite pasty and brown or black in color.

A bad case of throat catarrh may lead to foul odor of the breath, nausea and coughing. If present in the nose, throat or bronchial tubes, the removal of the mucus that is forced may necessitate spitting and coughing or hacking which is annoying to others and embarrassing to the patient.

One of the most common mistakes made in the treatment of catarrh is to regard it as a purely local disturbance. Catarrhal exudates should not be stopped or suppressed. Usually any attempt to stop it quickly with salves, sprays or other means does not meet with any success as the catarrh slowly and surely returns.

Probably there are more discouraged sufferers from catarrh than from any other type of complaint. Patients who have tried everything and are still at a loss to know what is best for them to do. These patients should learn that (1) catarrh is not a local disease, it is a disease of the whole system; (2) what seems the longest way to cure catarrh is really the shortest way; (3) a catarrhal discharge is really a favorable indication in so far as it removes from the body wastes and poisons which the system is not eliminating through its normal channels.

In a typical case of catarrh the patient first develops partial constipation. The body is not good. Due to improper elimination the weight may go down, or, on the other hand, if the channels of elimination are blocked the weight may increase. As a result of these changes, the accumulated waste in the body too large a quantity of waste materials formed principally from starches and sugars.

The fact that the foods which most easily aggravate the condition are the starches and sugars can be demonstrated by one suffering from a catarrhal attack. If he will eat heavily of such foods for two weeks, the mucus elimination will gradually increase during this time, while, if he eats little or none of these foods, the catarrhal discharge will gradually lessen.

The overcoming of catarrh depends upon the elimination of starches and sugars from the diet for a time and upon stimulating the natural channels of elimination. Do not be satisfied with any remedy which when applied locally brings quick relief. Such treatment results in a suppressing of the poisons which will return in other catarrhal troubles.

In tomorrow's article I am going to answer some common questions about catarrh.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (Red Veins Appear on Nose.) Question: T. E. V. writes: "Kindly tell me the cause of small red veins appearing on either side of the nostrils, also the remedy for same. I am 23 years of age."

Answer: The small red veins in your nose may be due to chronic catarrhal condition which keeps the blood vessels of your nose engorged. I suggest you adopt the non-catarth-forming diet and see if this does not remedy your trouble.

Behind the Scenes in WASHINGTON

By RODNEY DUTCHER, The Herald Washington Correspondent

Washington, July 10.—The ancient feud between the Army and Navy blossomed bitterly again when the soldiers heard that the sailors had copped $239,000,000 on the $3,300,000,000 public works bond issue for construction of naval ships.

The Army had its, but was quick on the uptake. It hastily assembled a swell $135,000,000 program for construction of barracks, officers' quarters and military road improvements. Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring rushed over to the public works board in the Interior Department and applied for the money.

The honor of the Army, considering what the Navy got, was obviously at stake. But the public works board, which scrutinizes every application with a cold and fishy eye, turned the application over to a sub-committee for careful study.

First they asked Woodring whether it had been taken into consideration that some of the ports for which construction money was asked were likely to be abandoned—which they are, under the administration's hard-boiled economy program.

Woodring admitted that probability hadn't been considered. Those on the inside of things at the Commerce Building, where the National Recovery Administration is housed, have been eagerly watching the situation that has developed between Administrator Hugh Johnson and Secretary of Commerce Dan Roper.

The air has been thick ever since Roosevelt, at a secret midnight conference during which Secretary of Labor Perkins and Secretary of the Interior Ickers made strong representations about the dangers of a one-man dictatorship over industry, appointed the National Recovery Board to work with and over Johnson and appointed Roper its chairman.

Johnson had gone on the job with a rush and there was no doubt before that that he was going to run this show with his own people and his own ideas. But Roosevelt's action clipped his wings and it became an increasingly large question whether he or Roper was to be the real boss of industry.

Roper isn't spectacular, but he is no fonder of the back seat than Johnson is. The first dispute to arise was as to whether Johnson's organization should take over scores of people from the commodity divisions of the Bureau and Foreign Commerce, as Roper desired.

Johnson wanted a completely free hand in picking his own people. A lot of the commodity division people are due to be let out in the economy program, though theirs is the one group in the government service which has made intensive studies of individual industries, their trade associations and their codes.

The issue remains unsettled, but there is plenty of blue smoke to be seen in the privacy of certain offices. Johnson's rugged determination to put over the huge program and his expressive, outspoken speech continues to impress all those who have conferences with him. It was officially denied that any "code of fair competition" had been received from the coal industry, but it is known that at least one large group of coal operators had a tentative plan which Johnson looked over. Then the proposed code was withdrawn.

"What the hell do they think we are?" he demanded.

ELINOR STAFFORD, 20, falls in love with BARRETT COLVIN, 25, returned to New York after years abroad. Barrett has made a name for himself as an archeologist. Elinor returns his affection but her jealous, scheming mother, LIDA STAFFORD, breaks up the romance by convincing Barrett that Elinor is a heartless flirt.

When Elinor's aunt, MISS ELLA SEXTON, dies she leaves her entire fortune to Barrett. Then drunken VANCE CARTER shoots BENTWELL STAFFORD, Elinor's father. Barrett who does not want the Sexton fortune tells the girl that if she will marry him and live in his home as a guest for a year he will give the entire sum to her to divide among the relatives. Elinor agrees, knowing the money may save her father's life.

The marriage takes place next day and Elinor and Barrett go to his home.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV
 Elinor said firmly, "The most important thing is that I don't want to bother you. Not in the least!"

"You won't!" Barrett answered. Lord how he wanted to kiss her, to say, "Don't be afraid of me. We'll do our best to make a go of this as long as we must!"

Instead he patted her hands. "Powder your nose," he said brightly, "and come down to lunch. I suppose it's to be a bang-up affair. The cook will want to show you just how skillful she is. And I heard Higgins ordering enough flowers for a hot-house. By the way, the bath is behind the door to the right. He turned and went to the room with critical eyes. "I left those shelves empty so you can fill them with the books you really want. Meantime there is a selection in my room from which you may be able to choose something that will send you to sleep. Is that right working, I wonder?"

He moved toward the head of the narrow, four-posted mahogany bed to pull the small chain. "Yes, it's all right," he said with satisfaction. He was at the doorway when she halted him. "Barrett?"

He wheeled, again moved toward her. "Yes?"

"I—I can't thank you enough for all this—" Her face, lit up as he was infinitely appealing in its gratitude. "I'm awfully glad you like it," he said. "I had a suspicion (a smug) that you might be rather fed-up with Chinese red and chromium and modernistic furnishings in general."

"I was," she agreed.

"I'll telephone to ask how your father's been," he said, "and report at luncheon. It's to be served at half past one if that suits you."

"Perfectly. And thank you so much for everything!"

He smiled at her from the doorway leading to his room, gave her an airy salute and was gone, closing the door after him.

For a moment she stood staring at the closed door. Then once more she turned and looked around her. It was a lovely room. Lovely!

Her traveling bags had been placed in the adjoining dressing room. Elinor opened them, suddenly wished she had something that was very, very pretty to wear down to luncheon. She finally selected a soft tan milk frock which brought out the warmth of her hair. Celeste had said it was becoming. She must remember to tuck Celeste's minkolinet into her sleeve in order to show it to Barrett.

She dressed her hair in a roll at the back of her neck. She had worn it that way during those false-happy days when Barrett had meant to much time with her. He had admired it that way.

Then, looking at the small clock on the mantelpiece, she hesitated. It was only one o'clock. It seemed incredible that her whole world, could have changed as it had in the space of an hour. She wanted to go down but she did not want to intrude upon Barrett. Perhaps he would not want her to come down before she must. A she hesitated she heard a tap on the door. She opened it and Higgins, the scold of the perfectly trained servant's face erased by the smile he could not subdue.

"Thank you, Higgins," Elinor said. He disappeared and after a deep breath she stepped into the upper hall. Barrett was standing at the foot of the stairs, one hand on a novel post, looking up at her.

"Look out for that treacherous step!" he called warningly. He found he could not keep his eyes from her as she came down. He had never seen her looking more beautiful.

"I've good news for you!" he announced. At his words she paused, two steps up, her face level with his. "Your father's nurse—Miss Hemmingway, I think—answered my call and said that for the first time your father has shown real improvement."

"Oh!" she whispered on a deep intake of breath. "I'm so glad!"

"I want you to know right away because I understand what it means to you."

"It means—everything," she stated in a hush.

He smiled down at her. "Suppose we go into the library," he suggested. "You haven't seen it yet, have you? Odd how old houses insist upon having libraries, isn't it? Remember the hushed, important way Miss Ella always spoke of her library?"

The girl laughed, nodding. She liked the rear room to which he led her. Its solidity spoke of all she had missed without knowing it. The room had a look of plenty and of peace. She could not imagine her mother whining for money in that room or anyone planning to deceive

DELIGHT YOUNGSTERS WITH A PARTY!

Make Youthful Birthdays Memorable With Surprises, Games and "Eats"

Here's a table that's sure to bring shouts of glee from youngsters at your birthday party. With a Jack-in-the-Box as centerpiece and surprise favors at each plate there's lots of fun in store for the little guests!

Lucky the family that has a summer birthday child!

Vacations are such a long stretch to children that the right kind of a birthday party during the summer can be the most dramatic, memorable occasion of their young lives.

"Eats" are what make a party to children. And the way they are dressed up makes one party more of a high spot than another. Therefore, the Mother with imagination will pass her child's party so that every child's eyes will widen with pleasure when refreshment time rolls around.

A Jack-in-the-Box centerpiece is a sure-fire hit with children. You can buy one or make it yourself. Any store selling crepe paper will show you how. He should have some kind of a little favor for each child hidden in the bottom of his box a toy whistle, a fancy ten-cent ring for the girls, a rubber ball with elastic attached so you can bounce it and still hold it, or any little trifle that will amuse a child.

Strings to the Gifts

Each gift should have a little paper string attached to it and run out to a place at the table. Then each place should have a snapper can to amuse the youngsters and keep them quiet while serving takes place. Also, it is a good idea to put fruit drops or little white mints, instead of nuts, in the nut dishes, because they are less likely to upset the children's digestion.

Don't have all active games—the children will get too tired out. Let them race around a half hour, then sit down to table games. And they get prizes for everything! Children just love prizes.

no and Barrett parted. She was to order. Hatten to bring the car around when she was ready to go to see her father. Barrett was going to look in upon Marcia for half an hour or so.

Perhaps, he suggested doubtfully, with keen eyes on her face, they could have tea together at a little after four. He spoke casually, and not to force upon her any more intimacy than she liked. They could talk then about several business matters that must be settled. If this did not suit, he went on, they could put it off until another day.

It suited her perfectly, Elinor assured him. With quickening heart she saw him turn from her. "Until later then," he said. (To Be Continued)

An old lady in order to be remembered in a will.

"I don't think you must have been very happy in this house," she said as she sank into a chair.

For a moment his face clouded. "I don't suppose," he said, "that there are many old houses without some unhappy echoes. Let's hope that we shall not add to them."

The table in the stately dining room had been arranged with the best the house afforded. Higgins had seen to it that the bowl of faint pink roses in the center of the table was a low one across which hungry, eager eyes might rest. "You're looking beautiful!" Barrett reflected, seeing Elinor under the soft confusion of bloom.

They served a clear soup, deliciously seasoned. Higgins appeared, disappeared silently.

"Your feet don't touch the floor when you're perched on that chair, do they, dear?" Barrett asked as the butler re-entered the room.

He did this masquerading very nicely, Elinor thought. She flushed. "No, dear, they don't," she admitted. "Higgins had been standing at his elbow starting at the contents of a dish he offered. 'Souffle, sir,' he reminded after a cough.

Barrett said, "Oh, yes, to be sure! Souffle." She had said that "dear" quite convincingly, Barrett reflected. "This is one of cook's special dishes," he went on. "We are being honored, darling."

Higgins had never heard "the like of it." Most young married people hid such moods and tried to seem only casually interested in one another at first, hid them even from their servants. And Mr. Barrett was usually so slow to voice a feeling!

"Higgins," said Barrett, "can't you hunt up a small footstool for Mrs. Colvin? I want you to be perfectly comfortable, dear," he added across the table.

"Thank you, darling, you are so thoughtful!" she murmured. Suddenly they both laughed and then, as suddenly, sobered. In light moments it could seem a joke but for both of them, for one shaken stretch, it had been too real.

Higgins came back to raise the Venetian cut work cloth and push a small stool in place for Elinor's feet. "Is that better, Mrs. Colvin?" he asked.

"Yes, thank you, Higgins." The butler bowed. The new mistress was going to bring spring and sunshine to the old place, he was sure. Already the house seemed changed. And never had he seen a sweeter, lovelier face.

After the meal was finished Elinor

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

OVERWORKING MOTHER'S LITTLE HELPER

"Nettie, take out this garbage. I'm through now and I have to do some telephoning."

Mrs. Smith untied her apron and hung it up.

When Nettie had finished her task her mother called: "Nettie the front porch is covered with flies where the baby broke his bottle. Get a mop out of the cellar and some water and wipe it up." Then she turned back to the phone.

It took Nettie half an hour to do what her mother could have done in five minutes, but she was only ten years old.

"Can I go over to play with Helen?" she asked then.

"Wait—there's something else I want you to do." Her mother pursed her lips and thought hard. There was really nothing in her mind at the minute but she knew there must be something. "Oh yes! the bird cage! It has to be cleaned."

"I'm always afraid he'll get out like he did the other day."

"He won't get out. What's that on your leg?"

"I cut it on a piece of glass."

"Get me the iodine. I'll put some on."

There wasn't any in the medicine closet, so Nettie reported.

"Oh, I remember. Mrs. Smith borrowed it March right over and left Mrs. Smith we want that iodine and tell her I didn't expect to have to send for it."

But Mrs. Smith was out and Nettie had to go to the drug store. While she was out her mother told her to go to the baker's too. Six blocks altogether in the sun. That took about an hour.

Evening had fallen. Now the baby's and the birchage cleaned. The process by Nettie's tempo took another hour.

"Can I go over to Helen's and play, mother?"

"No, not now. You should have gone after lunch. Now the baby's gone and I have an errand to do. You'll have to give him his bottle and watch him till I get 'ack."

At five o'clock Mrs. Smith returned, hot and weary.

"I meant to tell you to peel the potatoes," she said. "You might have thought of it anyway. You must learn to think of things."

"The baby cried the whole time and I had to wheel him."

"Well then—set the table. I can't stand up another minute."

"Can I get dressed first? Helen's got on a new pink."

"You'll have to do the dishes. I'm too tired. I've been on my feet the whole day."

Approved by Parents

"Why don't you let Nettie help you more?" said Mrs. Smith that night on the porch. "She's old enough now."

Mrs. Smith sighed. "What can a child of ten do? She's always wanting to go over to Helen's."

"Well, if I were here she'd help, by Jimminy. Nettie, you must help your mother more."

"Yes, sir," said Nettie.

"Come on over, Nettie," called Helen.

"I'm tired."

"Tired!" exclaimed her mother. "And you haven't done a thing all day. Go on over. I'm afraid, she added when Nettie had gone "she's going to be lazy."

MEN RAN WORLD DOWN—WOMEN SHOULD RUN IT!

Noted Author Says Females Should Take Globe From Man's Hands and Make of It a Paradise

Inez Haynes Irwin . . . contends it's time for women, to take over the world . . . to better it.

Inez Haynes Irwin was chosen by a large committee of the National Council of Women to write a history of the woman movement from 1838-1933, in connection with that organization's participation in the Chicago "Century of Progress" Exposition.

Her book, "Angels and Amazons" (Doubleday Doran) covers the period during the formation of women's organizations and shows development from individual isolated fights for various kinds of freedom to the tremendous power various women's organizations now wield.

Inez Haynes Irwin, an outstanding feminist, is now the first woman president that the Authors' League of America has ever had.

"Men have failed utterly, completely . . . in the business of government . . . They know nothing about systems, efficiency or economy . . . They don't know how yet to stop going to war . . . Women should take this filthy, battered, broken, run-down-at-the-heels, old globe and make of it a Paradise of comfort, cleanliness, health and beauty."

One of the things that interested me most in studying the revolt of American women in the last hundred years was the curious, inconsistent and illogical way in which their various freedoms came. This was not of course because they were women. The graph of a woman's movement would, I suspect, show all the wavering leaps and drops which characterize the chart of a fever-patient's pulse.

The first freedom that women sought was vocal. I mean their first fight—and it was a terrific one, of which many of the records are lost—was for the right to speak in public. What happened that day, drawing the skirts away from merely metaphorical language. On the contrary, literally, they drew them away and so carefully that even the hem could not be polluted by the touch of the noble woman whom one minister of the Gospel stigmatized as "she-hyena." The gesture must have been impressive—there were so many yards of skirt to draw away.

When women achieved that freedom of the voice, they first used it—self-sacrificingly enough—in behalf of the slave.

In the meantime, however, they were achieving intellectual freedom. Oberlin College opened to them in 1833 and from that time on, the American era must have been deafened by the clashing of heavy university doors as they swung wide to admit females. Of all the professor, the women doctors had the toughest fight. But they were all Amazons and the story is magnificent in its display of courage, grit and fighting capacity. That whole story can never be told; for in the classroom professors and male students used weapons to keep women out which took all the women there was in a woman to ignore. The story of the women physicians in America is an epic.

Next came social freedom—the fight which made women in every real sense citizens of the country—the long, long struggle for the ballot. The culmination of that fight is so recent that the history is known to most intelligent adult Americans. The younger generation of course knows nothing about it and cares less. They always laugh merrily when I tell them that I was for some years persona non grata at my own college because I believed to see by the first suffrage meeting that was held in its hallowed halls.

The Revolt in Dress

And then—just as she achieved the ballot—woman attained physical freedom. Some years before she had rejected the old corset which demanded a wasp waist. Hoop-skirts and bustles had long been relegated to the attic. But now, not only were people admitting that women had legs, but legs were actually coming into fashion. Short skirts, knickers, pajamas proved that the female of the species was really a biped. Women could now draw their skirts away in scorn of any other woman because they hadn't enough skirt to draw away.

You ask what is the big issue that women face today. Personally, I believe that their great duty is to establish a matriarchy in every country in the world. Men have failed utterly, completely, absolutely, shamefully and ridiculously in the business of government. In the housekeeping of government, their failure is ever more abject. They know nothing about systems, efficiency or economy. They pay the biggest prices for everything—material and spiritual—and then never get anything done. They don't know how yet to stop going to war.

Men Are Creative, But—

As between the sexes, men are, I believe, as fond, infinitely more inventive, more creative, more intellectual than women. They ought to be left in peace to perform the great engineering feats of the world and ultimately the universe, to get into communication with other planets, to explore the sidereal system, to devote themselves to scientific work, to write poetry, compose music—and think. Perhaps I am saying that man is the genius sex. Special women ought to do these things too. But as a sex, woman's main business will always be child-bearing, child-raising and making the world fit for children. Women should take this filthy, battered, broken, run-down-at-the-heels, old globe out of the precocious, competent hands of men and make of it the Paradise of comfort, cleanliness, health and beauty which women only can achieve.

Hints on How to Keep Well by World Famed Authority

SURGERY, X-RAY OR RADIUM MAY HALT CANCER IN EARLY STAGES

Medical Science as Yet Knows Little About Dread Disease, Except That It Is Not Contagious and Is Not Hereditary

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

While it is true that the medical profession does not know as yet the cause of cancer or any certain method for relief except early diagnosis and surgical removal or treatment with radium and the X-ray, there are certain facts that have been well established.

In the first place, it has been quite well shown that cancer is not contagious. The person who has it does not easily transmit it to any other person, and it is quite safe to be in a room with a person who has cancer or to stand him as one stands a person with any other non-contagious disease.

It is fairly certain that diet is not in any way related to the cause of cancer or to relief from cancer. All sorts of tests and studies have been made, but with negative results. Proponents of whole wheat have urged that the eating of refined foods causes cancer, and another group says that eating food cooked in aluminum utensils causes cancer. There is not the slightest scientific evidence to support either of these points.

Experiments on mice have shown there are certain hereditary factors in cancer. However, there is no scientific evidence that under the conditions of a normal marriage, there is any tendency to perpetuate cancer in certain families. In other words, so far as the human being is concerned, the hereditary factor does not seem to be very important.

Among other common conditions which predispose to cancer is constipation, and the drinking of alcohol. There has been some question as to whether or not the increase in smoking may not be associated with cancer of the tongue, and it has been urged that the drinking of exceedingly rich drinks may serve as a source of constant irritation and thus tend to the development of cancer of the stomach.

Absolutely established is the fact that neither mental worry nor excessive cheerfulness control the causation or disappearance in any way. It is not possible to cause cancer to disappear by adopting a cheerful attitude toward it. Moreover, such an attitude may lead to neglect of the possibility of surgical removal or treatment by radium or X-ray in the early stages when relief by these methods is possible.

Although young people occasionally have cancer, it is essentially a disease that occurs beyond middle age. The mental attitude should never develop into cancer phobia, or unwarranted fear of cancer. Such an attitude does not help the condition in any way. It is desirable that people who have such fears have complete and prompt examination and, if after such examination they are given a negative answer, they may consider their fears as without foundation.

Do not procrastinate with the possibility of cancer. The occurrence of any unusual lumps or of any persistent and unusual bleeding from various organs of the body demands immediate examination.

FAKE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE IS FUNNY
 You'll Find Real Laughs In This Gay Burlesque

BY BRUCE CATTON

These are trying times, and anything that can make you laugh is pretty welcome; and I believe you will find a gratifying number of laughs in "So This Is Science!"

H. F. Ellis.

This little book is something along the line of last year's mirth-producer, "1968 and All That"; it seems, that is, to be a series of scientific observations written by a genial lunatic. Some examples may give you the idea—

"Schmapp" was a German professor who constructed a giant infometer with which he hoped to upset the laws of gravity and create a disturbance in the solar system. However, he was arrested on a charge of impiety on the eve of his experiment and imprisoned for 30 years. When he came out his nerve was so shattered that he converted the machine into a hatrack and retired into private life.

"The actual figure, in tons (the weight of the earth), is too long for insinuation in this book, but it begins with a six and has roughly as many naughts as there are wheels in a good train of rather exceptional length."

"Australians carry their young in pouches . . . and export frozen meat and wool in the book, but it commodities, of which they are very fond. Sheep-dipping is the leading industry."

And so on; nonsensical and pleasantly amusing. It's published by Dutton and sells for $1.75.

Success of Capt. Frank Hawley in flying across the country with a mechanical robot, doing the work hand and wrist in the book, but it somebody will invent a robot to do their back and drive.

THREAD CITY TEAM BOWS TO WEST SIDE

Locals Hit for 7 Runs in Fifth and Seventh—Dowd, Stavitsky, Burkhardt Star.

The West Sides again took the measure of the American Thread with the special help of Ernie Dowd and Freddy Burkhardt. The score was 8-3 but the game was much better than the score indicates.

Wergesien, American Thread pitcher, was very wild, walking seven and hitting three men. Ernie Dowd and Freddy Burkhardt made catches in the outer garden like big leaguers. Dowd's hitting was also a feature, getting three hits.

Along with Dowd in hitting were Stavitsky, Burkhardt, Plitt and Hedlund. Stavitsky tripled with the bases loaded in the seventh. Hedlund doubled in the fifth with two runs on base.

Tivone, Dillon and H. Koglar hit well for the American Thread. Both teams got 12 hits each but Godek kept his well scattered.

The American Thread broke the ice first in the third inning. Dillon got a base on balls, got to second on a sacrifice by Baron and scored on a hit by Tivone. Again in the third they scored twice on hits by H. Koglar, Dillon and Baron. This was their final scoring.

The West Sides scored in the fourth when Hedlund and Godek both were passed and Hedlund scored from second on Dowd's hit. In the fifth the West Sides went on a hitting spree. Stavitsky singled, Wilkins grounded out to the pitcher and Burkhardt singled. Plitt followed suit. Hedlund then doubled, scoring two runs and scored himself on Dowd's hit. They scored their final three runs in the seventh. Godek, first man up, hit. Dowd singled, Godek staying on second. McConkey was given a free pass. Smith got on on a fielder's choice.

This filled the bases and Big George, son 2, Brennan; base on balls off Koglar 2, Babcock 0; hit by pitcher, Marlon by Koglar; struck out by Koglar 2, Babcock 2; time, 1:15; umpires, Brennan and Vinco.

Kovic, who started his first game for the Bluefields, allowed only four hits and struck out six of the visitors. Eddie Raguskas went on a hitting spree, collecting three hits out of four trips to the plate. He knocked in both runs, scoring Brennan twice.

Magnuson and Brennan tallied two hits apiece. Burkhardt, Oneco left fielder, outbats his teammates by getting three of the team's four hits. Babcock, pitcher, did very well although reached for eight hits. He fanned only two.

Sunday the Bluefields remained idle due to last minute cancellation by All-Torrington. The score:

Those who catch fish big enough to mount often wish they knew how. Here's one way to do the job:

Place the fish on a piece of soft, basswood or pine and mark with a pencil the outline of the fish on the board. Cut the board to the form of the fish, making it thinner at the tail than the rest of the body, and round off the edges.

Next take the fish and skin it by opening along the side that is set against the board. Clean all flesh and cartilage out of the head and drop the whole skin in to a 50-50 solution of wood alcohol and water.

Remove the skin from the solution, drain it carefully and sprinkle the inside with arsenic. Give the wood form a coat of glue and you're ready to mount the fish.

Place the skin on the form smoothly, ironing out all the wrinkles. Fasten the skin that draps over the back of the form with small tacks, and then go over the entire form, after it is dried, with a coat of clear varnish.

If the fish has lost much of its color due to exposure to air, that it with oil paints before varnishing.

RUTH TWO BEHIND JIMMIE FOXX NOW

Hoists Three Homers into Bleachers at Yankee Stadium Which Brought in Six Runs.

The nation's baseball fans today were faced with the task of keeping one eye on George Herman Rubeen and the other on the Chicago Cubs who have forced their way back into the thick of the National League race.

Ruth, the old gentleman who has been reported "through" at various times for the last half dozen years, hoisted three home runs into the bleachers at the Yankee Stadium yesterday and personally conducted the Yankees to two victories over the Detroit Tigers, 11-7 and 7-6. The three circuit swats which drove in six runs, lifted the Yanks' total to 22 and left him only two behind Jimmie Foxx of the Athletics.

The Yankees, however, gained only a half game and remained four behind the Washington Senators who scored three runs in the first inning and edged out Cleveland's Indians, 8-2.

In Third Place The Cubs climbed into third place in the National League passing the idle Pittsburgh Pirates, as they took a pair of games from the pace-setting Giants, 4-0 and 2-1. They ran up their string of victories to five games and New York's defeat chain to six. The double defeat reduced the Giants lead over St. Louis to 2 1/2 games, but the Brooklyn Dodgers kept things from becoming worse by dividing a twin bill with the Cardinals. A triple by Ralph Boyle with two aboard in the eleventh gave Brooklyn an 8-6 decision in the opener, but Tom Carleton turned in a seven-hit shut-out and St. Louis won the second game, 2-0.

The Boston Braves winning streak took them above the .500 mark for the first time this season as they won two straight games from the Cincinnati Reds, 3-1 and 3-1. The first game went ten innings. The Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Browns divided a doubleheader, the Sox winning the first contest, 4-0, behind the devastating George Fingers, 3-2. The Browns pounding out a 9-2 victory in the nightcap.

Other major league clubs had an open date.

There was no further scoring after this inning, but in their two chances at bat in the eighth and ninth innings, the East Hartfordites gave the Green boys a few anxious moments. "Tuffy" Viot however, rose to the occasion, striking out two of the men that faced him in the eighth, and going one better in the last inning by retiring the rest of the East Hartford batsmen via the strike-out route. During the game Viot struck out an even dozen.

The new scoreboard was in use for the first time yesterday, and gave the largest crowd of the season, many by using data on how the battle was going. It is plainly visible from all parts of the field. "Dan" Sullivan, painter of East Center street, donated his services, and his splendid lettering received flattering comment.

The Green's next opponents will be Hose Company No. 4. The date and location of this game will be announced later.

A lot of fellows who worked up from the bottom now have an opportunity to do it again. And we might add that a lot of self-made men wish they'd left the job to somebody else.

Youth—I simply detest mingling with my inferiors.
His Sweetie—I didn't know you had any.

Any way, property has come near enough for the boys to start speculating again.

Office Boy—Yes, sir, I was at my grandmother's funeral.
Boss—Who won?

"The girls who used to crave to marry a man with a million now would be greatly pleased to have one with a job."

Correct this sentence: "I never tell my own guests to leave," said the parent, "so I won't ask Marjorie to be that rude to hers."

The door to a boy's heart must be a revolving door, judging from the way the girls rush in and out.

Diner (referring to raw steak)—I said well done, waiter, well done!
Waiter—That's the finest compliment we've had in a long time, sir.

A horse named "First Mortgage" recently won a race. We hope he paid the usual 6 per cent to his backers.

Child—Mother dear, what's a stepmother?
Mother—Well, if I were to die and your father died again, the lady would be your stepmother.
Child—Oh, I see. You'd step out and she'd step in.

The fox is very smart but he nearly starves to death in winter. A field mouse has almost no intelligence at all, but it nearly always has plenty to take it through the winter.

Visitor—My husband passed away after two days' illness. We had been married only six weeks.
Visited—Well, it's nice to think he did not suffer much.

"Speaking of contagious diseases," mused a local man, "think of love, its so dangerous you can catch it from just talking over the telephone."

He—It certainly is dark in this parlor. Good, I can't even see my hand in front of me.
Miss—That's all right. I know where it is.

The other day a certain man, while down town, was saying: "What this country needs is a dictator!" went home and changed his mind.

Little Jacob had just begun to earn his own living and brought home his first wages.

Father—How is this, Jacob, you are short ten cents?
Jacob—Well, father, I was so tired I jumped on a bus to come home.

Father—Don't do it again.
The second week saw a shortage of a quarter, and Jacob explained that he had bought some candy.

The third week there was a shortage of half a dollar, and Jacob, Sr., looked very grave and exclaimed: "Father—Now, look here my boy, as a man to man, who is the woman?"

If a man's house is burned and he has insurance there are those who will have a suspicion. If it burns without insurance there is no uncertainty—they know he is a foolish man.

Mother—Jane, why are you putting water into the ink?
Jane—Well, mother, in this part of the letter I want to whisper something to daddy.

The fox understood Tony's ways and Tony learned the ways of the fox, but as it grew it began to show its real nature. Now it is harnessed like a horse and is led around by Tony without apparent harm to him, but Mr. Fox is inclined to do a lot of snapping at others that try to make friends with it.
