

CALL MILK HOLIDAY TO BEGIN THURSDAY

Members of National Farmers' Group Cannot Reach an Agreement With the State Board.

Hartford, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The State Milk Control board today issued the following statement:

"The Board of Milk Control is surprised to see the announcement of the National Farmers' group that a milk holiday is to be declared. Every reasonable means has been employed to meet the group, and has apparently failed. The board has had two conferences, one on Wednesday for four hours and another on Friday for another four hours, during which the group presented its plan. This plan was incomplete by their own admission, and according to their leader, Professor Charles A. Beard, was to serve as a basis for future action by the board.

"This was the apparent mutual understanding of the two groups when the conference adjourned at 3 p. m. After Professor Beard and left last evening, the other members of the Farmers' National committee, George H. Robertson, Irving Campbell, and Dwight Wadman, returned to this office at 6 p. m. and demanded that the plan be accepted in its entirety, without change, and that the board should set itself on record as saying that the plan would be put into effect beginning September 1st.

"Since the board has been considering many other plans, some of which have meritorious points which would modify and improve the plan submitted by the Farmers' National group, and since the board realized the necessity of gathering the material which would serve as a basis for any plan to be put into effect, the board cannot meet the demands of the group that their plan be accepted without change and for action within twenty days.

"It was at this point that the group refused to deal further with this board, and left, with the subsequent action of declaring the milk holiday.

"The board feels that it has been charged by the governor and the Legislature of the State of Connecticut, with the task of reaching the best possible solution of the milk situation. It has received the approval of leading groups of farmers that its present policy is satisfactory, and is helping the milk farmer. In the light of this, the board cannot be forced into accepting without change an incomplete plan submitted by a small minority group, nor can it disregard the two months of work that have been put into collecting statistics and methods for the working out of a plan which will best meet the needs of all milk producers in the state, and which will at the same time, be fairest to the consumers and the distributors of milk.

"The board expressed its willingness to accept any reasonable modification of its proposals subject to necessary modifications. When only three

U. S. MISSIONARIES ARE THOUGHT SAFE

Eight Americans Marooned in Center of a Rebel War in China.

Hankow, China, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The belief that eight American Missionary missionaries are safe at Yunchow, although that town was the center of a rebel war, was expressed today by the Rev. Fr. Arthur Benson, procurator of the American Missionary Society.

Father Benson, who is from Pittsburgh, said, however, he had not been able to communicate with the missionaries since rebels took the town June 27. Yunchow is in Hunan Province, about 400 miles southwest of here.

Those trapped there are the Rev. Edward McCarthy of Boston, the Rev. Francis Faherty of Cincinnati, and Sisters Genevieve Ryan, Christiana Werth, Magdalene Ivan, Rosario Goss, Santanne Callahan and Mark Mullen, who were sent to China from Pittsburgh.

It was learned today that United States consular authorities have approached H. C. H. Chen, governor of Hunan, with a request that the Americans at Yunchow be rescued. The belief prevailed here, however, that the representations will have little effect since the governor is considered virtually helpless to interfere with the activities of General Li Chiao, the provincial military overlord and son-in-law of General Ho.

SMALL DEALERS NOT UNDER BAN IN MILK FIGHT

Supply Here Will Not Be Wholly Cut Off If Milk Strike Starts, So Leaders of Producers Intimate.

Manchester is not expected to be seriously affected by the milk "holiday" announced by producers to become effective throughout the state next Thursday, as the result of the Milk Control Board's refusal to accept the marketing plan approved by the Farmer's National Association, it was learned today.

The majority of local consumers are supplied with milk by the small, independent dealers of Manchester, and these dealers, it is understood, will not come under the producer's ban but will be able to obtain enough milk to supply the needs of their customers. This was the prevailing sentiment in Manchester today, although local dealers are not absolutely certain as to the exact standing of the situation.

No Quarrel There. It was said today that the small dealers have been assured by the Connecticut Milk Producers' Association, which is affiliated with the Farmer's National Association, that they will not suffer when the strike is declared, as the producers have no score to settle with the small dealers.

It is pointed out, however, there is just a possibility that the producers may decide to clamp the lid down tight in a blanket "strike," refusing to supply milk through any avenue, in order to force a more rapid agreement with their demands. In the light of a telephone interview this morning with Irving Campbell of Rockville, formerly of this town, who is a member of the committee of three known as the Farmer's National Committee, this course, however, is not considered likely to be followed.

Only State Board Refused for Group. Mr. Campbell refused to comment on the situation as a member of the committee, referring questions to the chairman of the board, George Hersey Robertson of South Coventry, president of Farmer's National Committee, and to the secretary, Miss Margaret Wiseman, secretary of the Consumers' League of Massachusetts.

Only in State. "Boarding houses for tobacco workers were found only in Connecticut, and all of them require immediate attention from the growers themselves and also from the appropriate health authorities," a statement issued by the group declares. "Several of these boarding houses visited by us were utterly filthy, unsanitary and unfit for human habitation."

He was amazed that such disgraceful conditions, so dangerous to health and morals, could be tolerated either by the growers or the general public. There was evidence that an attempt had been made to improve conditions in some of the boarding houses, which were inspected two or three weeks ago by Commissioner Tons and Deputy Commissioner William J. Fitzgerald, but even in these the need of further cleaning was evident."

Norman, Okla., Aug. 12.—(AP)—W. E. (Bill) Anthony, who wrapped Oklahoma's "Capital" in a dirty shirt and moved it from Guthrie to Oklahoma City, died last night at the age of 63.

Climaxing one of the most bitterly disputed phases of the state's history, Anthony spirited the Great Seal of Oklahoma from the heavily guarded Logan county courthouse at midnight on June 30, 1910, and sped it to the Lee Hickman hotel at Oklahoma City, which for a time thereafter served as the State House. Anthony used an automobile.

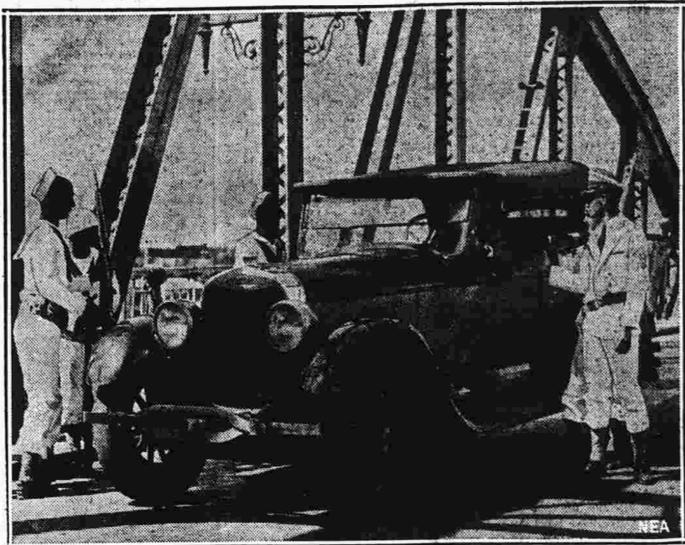

The seal was regarded as symbolic of the Capital's location. C. W. Haskell, Oklahoma's first governor, directed the removal after returns from an election on the question showed that Oklahoma City had won. Haskell, for years credited with making the midnight ride himself, died recently after clearing up the incident.

Hartford, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Tobacco plantation boarding houses are utterly filthy, unsanitary and unfit for human habitation, today declared the representatives of the Massachusetts and Connecticut Departments of Labor, who made a two-day tour of tobacco plantations in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

The inspection was conducted by Commissioner Joseph M. Tons, W. J. Couper and Miss Helen Wood, representing the Connecticut Department of Labor and Factory Inspection, Commissioner Edwin S. Smith and Manfred Bowditch of the Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries, Miss Margaret Wiseman, secretary of the Consumers' League of Massachusetts.

STRIKING MINERS BOMB THREE HOMES

Two Men Wounded by Pickets When They Attempt to Go to Work.

Clinton Ind., Aug. 12.—(AP)—The bombing of three homes in a Clinton suburb, including residence of two miners who were wounded by a mob surrounding the Bunsen No. 4 coal mine at Universal yesterday, added tenseness to the situation at the mine today.

The first bomb, which police said was placed in the kitchen of the John Swickard home, ripped off the rear of the house. The others did but slight damage at the homes of Henry Drake and of a family named Holden. No one was injured by the blasts.

Swickard, with twelve shotgun wounds in the back, and Drake, suffering painful cuts where stones struck his head and arms, were in Union hospital at Terre Haute. They are members of the Associated Miners Union, and were ambushed in their automobile as they drove to work at the Bunsen mine.

Mine Picketed. The mine has been picketed all week by United Mine Workers of America sympathizers, seeking to dissuade the men from working. The first violence at the mine occurred last Monday when Sam Enroute With Mrs. Roosevelt. Aug. 12.—(AP)—White Top, second highest mountain peak in Virginia, took first place among the peaks today, with Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, the President's wife, journeying there for a sample of pure mountain melodies.

Mrs. Roosevelt left Washington shortly before midnight for Abingdon, the town at the foot of White Top mountain where her father, Elliott Roosevelt, spent the last few years of his life.

A strong personal pull, as well as her deep interest in the 3-year-old White Top folk festival movement to give annual expression to mountain lore, drew Mrs. Roosevelt to the place.

Find a Traveling Bag Belonging to Sanborn

Port Chester, N. Y., Aug. 12.—A Gladstone traveling bag believed to have belonged to Henry F. Sanborn, slain rail executive, was turned over to New York detectives today. It was found here on July 29, a week before Sanborn's body was discovered in a shallow grave at Bayside, N. Y.

The New York police planned to show the bag to Miss Magnehd Almskaar, Sanborn's fiancée, to identify it as his property. It was empty except for a 1929 penny.

Frederick Dettmer of Port Chester found the bag on Ridge street, which forms a link of a main highway from New York to Connecticut points. He said, he attached no significance to the find until he read the description of Sanborn's bag, which police had reported missing.

When found, he said, the bag was partly open and appeared to lie as it had been thrust from a passing automobile. It bore the initials "E. S." and Port Chester police said they understood Sanborn sometimes used a different first name.

Searching the scene of the find last night, the Port Chester police found a man's handkerchief about twenty feet away.

Sanborn was last seen by Miss Almskaar, July 16, at a Connecticut camp, which she refused to name. He was seen the next day in New York by employees at his office and, so far as is known, not seen again by anyone who knew him.

JOHNSON MAKES READY TO ENFORCE NRA RULES

Officials Cite Developments in Support of Views That Time for Gentle Persuasion Has Passed.

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Several things led various officials today to forecast that the glove might soon be peeled back from the harder hand that is guiding the National Recovery drive.

First, bituminous coal men themselves expected the National Recovery Administration probably would settle their differences over pending wage-and-hour-fixing codes for that industry by ruling in or out of the points of controversy.

Other developments cited to support the conclusion that more than gentle persuasion is in store: Appointment of 33 women "lieutenant-generals" in many states to organize family buyers into groups purchasing under the Blue Eagle.

Announcement by NRA that motion picture stars whose names were not made public, will donate their services for a series of featurettes on recovery.

Explanation by Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, that if necessary the Federal trade commission and the Department of Justice eventually would use stern measures to enforce the recovery act.

Refusal of Johnson to accept the code submitted by newspaper publishers.

Instruction from William Green, president, to 48 state Federations of Labor to investigate and report violations by those displaying the Blue Eagle.

NRA Stores. Announcement by Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, that hereafter his agency will buy supplies from NRA stores.

Submission to Secretary Wallace for approval of a sugar stabilization plan despite a threat of its rejection by western sugar beet growers.

In coal hearings continuing today, Johnson made clear he would not permit the final code to include a stipulation that miners must exchange through company stores.

The law, he said, guarantees collective bargaining by labor, without such a restriction, and cannot be modified.

In the women's drive, chiefs were

Cuba's President Takes Leave of Absence—Secretary of State Also Resigns and Peace Looms in Island Republic Following Last Night's Bloodless Coup D'Etat.

Havana, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Cuban State Department today formally advised the diplomatic corps that President Machado will take a leave of absence and that it is the President's purpose later to resign.

The department's communication said that Orestes Ferrera, secretary of state, had previously resigned but was continuing and that the department would attend to routine matters until Ferrera's successor was appointed.

The resignation of the secretary of state as well as the President was part of the American peace plan in order to permit the appointment of a new secretary of state acceptable to all factions who should succeed to the highest office.

The President's decision to retire from office followed closely on a bloodless coup d'etat by the Army last night in which military units seized fortresses and other strategic points in Havana and demanded that Machado get out.

Sumner Welles, United States ambassador, recently presented a proposal to the President calling for his retirement as a solution for political turmoil in the island Republic.

Strikes in Havana and throughout the island have added to the dislocation of normal activities in Cuba.

AWAITING CLIMAX. Havana, Aug. 12.—(AP)—President Machado had until noon today to resign or defy an ultimatum of Cuban defense forces.

The Army, Navy and Air Corps—his support in eight years of stress—swiftly and without bloodshed snatched strategic points about the city and, backed by guns, demanded Machado end a political and industrial crisis by quitting.

His answer has been written, his intimate friends said, who have torn by strikes and hunger and revolution, awaited it as a climax in her history.

From his successor Cuba will ask peace. That man may be Secretary of War Albert B. Harra, whom Machado proposed, or Colonel Horacio Ferrer, a 61-year-old doctor, who in a few hours yesterday emerged as a National hero.

Dr. Ferrer was one of the leaders who rallied the armed groups for the coup d'etat, and the Cuban Army, the center of a situation marked by a paralyzing general strike and mediation efforts led by United States Ambassador Sumner Welles.

The President spent the night at his country estate at Havana. There, said Senator Wilfredo Fernandez, he wrote a statement for presentation to Congress, asking a leave of absence so that, according to Cuban law, a new secretary of state can be named, who will enter the Presidency.

The Army's display of strength in uptown Havana, was withdrawn at midnight, and policemen alone remained. No resentment toward Machado was apparent among the crowds.

Ambassador Welles, who proposed Machado's resignation in the interests of peace, continued his conferences with army opposition and administration leaders late into the night.

Strike to End. Their conclusions, Havana believed, would be announced before noon.

It was generally expected that the general strike, which now is openly described as a move to accomplish Machado's withdrawal, will be terminated tomorrow.

Cheering thousands greeted the soldiers in the city's streets last night when news of developments spread.

There were more cheers as Lieutenant Cesar Lorie, assistant Army auditor, proclaimed the facts of the coup, and declared "his sole purpose was the avoidance of American intervention," and "the Cuban Army does not want to indicate anyone for President, but we want no military man for President."

The populace followed the Army's request that no violence attend the military move and avoid disturbances.

Senator Fernandez, meanwhile, disclosed that Ferrera informed military detachments in six provinces he was assuming the Presidency temporarily and provisionally.

The Senator indicated the technical procedure would involve the resignation of all members of the Cabinet, except Ferrera, who automatically would become President when that office is vacated.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

HANNAH—A DEVOTED MOTHER

Text: 1 Sam. 1:19-11, 24:28; 1:2. The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Aug. 13.

By WM. E. GILROY, D.D., Editor of The Congregationalist

The story of Hannah is a much less adventurous atmosphere than that of Ruth and Naomi in our last sermon.

Here we have a woman in a somewhat troubled and unsettled days of the time of the Judges, but whose life was apparently chiefly domestic, a devoted and faithful woman, concerned primarily about the duties in her own home.

The life of Hannah, however, like the lives of so many in such a time and unexciting environment, was marked by a deep element of tragedy. Despite her strong instinct of motherhood she had been denied a child, and the life and environment of the home were marked on that account by the deepest disappointment.

In grief of soul she prayed that what to her was a real affliction might be removed, but she might have a son. So intense was her prayer and her earnestness that she vowed that if her petition should be granted she would devote this child to the service of the Lord from the days of his babyhood.

Hannah's petition was granted, and in the day of her rejoicing she did not, as many others have done, forget the vow she had made in her time of yearning and distress.

The story henceforth is the story of Samuel, whom she raised as a child to Eli, the High Priest, that he might grow up in the service of the temple.

The story as it comes to us in our lesson is that of a mother's devotion and of the preparation of a life for goodness and service through her consecration.

If there were more mothers like Hannah, there would be more children like Samuel; and more children like the grown man who served Israel as a wise and righteous prophet and ruler, a man supremely devoted to the commonweal, courageous and unselfish in all his motives and actions, though some of his deeds pertained to an age of violence when cruel and toward enemies prevailed as the rule instead of the disposition of love.

The Hannahs of the world have never had their proper recognition, nor so far as the world is concerned, their reward. The contribution that they have made to life has often been made in the narrowness of a closely confined home environment and the daily drudgery that home and family have demanded; yet there has been a glow about such lives, and perhaps such women have not altogether failed to sense the glory and the satisfaction.

Sometimes I read of a woman in a Scotch village who had raised seven sons. The world did not know her, but everyone of those seven sons became a man of distinction and power in his profession. An eminent surgeon, an eminent minister, and others of equal distinction in the respective fields, through the character that that mother instilled and the ambition to service, went forth to play a great part in the world.

It was the heritage that a modern Hannah had given to the world, and though the sons found a fame that never came to the mother, her own was the real greatness.

WOMAN

By GEORGE KENNEDY DOLE

International Sunday School Lesson Text, Aug. 13. "A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised."—Proverbs 31:30.

In normal woman (mark "e" word normal), affection predominates. She is a form primarily and predominantly receptive and expressive of love from the Lord. In normal man the intellectual predominates. He is a form primarily receptive and expressive of intellectual things from the Lord.

The difference between man and woman descends to the body, and makes it a corresponding form. Hence a woman wants a husband to whose intelligence she can look up. Man chooses a wife from the quality of his affections.

Marriage is not merely physical union, but the conjunction of the masculine and feminine essentials, whereby two souls are one as affection and thought are one in a person's mind. Such union is constantly perfected in true marriage, and its perfection and blessedness continues to eternity. Marriage is essentially chaste, holy, and sacred, for it has its origin in the Lord's love for His church, which He calls His bride, wife, and our mother. The second birth is from the Lord through the Church as mother, for like a mother, she cleanses, nourishes, and feeds the soul.

Because normal woman is a form of love, she is by nature tender, chaste, sympathetic and her love is her life.

Woman predominates in the churches, because she is in the affectional. Many men have rejected it intellectually. As the church ascends in rational faith, the balance will be regained.

"A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised."

blissoms into that wondrous mother-love. Her love can go out to one only. Because normal man is intellectual predominantly, he is comparatively coarse, rough, harsh, inclined to adventure. He is stronger and takes the heavy work. He is roaming in his affections. In marriage the wife's affections purify, stimulate and exalt the husband. The intelligence of the husband reciprocally elevates the affections of the wife, hence with "barbarians the wife is a slave and drudge."

Because normal woman is instinctively chaste, pure and loves only one, and normal man is the opposite, some sins are more grave for women than for men, though the law is the same for each. Practically everyone acknowledges this fact, even if not admitted. Because in going wrong a woman violates her fundamental nature; so few reform after departing from it.

Some things in one sex that do no harm to the other are offensive in the other. A man who would use perfume, lipstick and face powder would be ridiculed by every normal woman, though such things are proper to the fairer sex. They are in harmony with her instincts. The woman who smokes is not the highest type of the normal man's conception.

it for the rectitude of our intentions—why should it? And we cannot be a savior to Cuba at the expense of our standing with a whole Continent.

THE TAVERN.
 As our worthy friends—they are numerous and very respectable—who some few months ago were boosting so vigorously for the present State Liquor Control bill drive about their town, city or state they may now, if they have eyes, behold the Tavern—noblest work of a slightly idiotic conception.

It is not, on the whole, a thing of beauty. It is a tawdry, shabby, frequently dirty hole, in the great majority of instances. It is, for the even slightly fastidious, a squalid and unattractive substitute for clean, often finely equipped and furnished speakeasy. In contrast to the average soda spa it is a ragged beggar. The Connecticut liquor which is not full of flies and smells, into which a customer could wear a good suit of clothes without ruining it, is distinctly above the average. We have, in a word, reduced the business of purveying beer to somewhere between the vocation of the itinerant pitch-man and that of the scavenger. And we have made our beer dispensaries about as elevating as a kitchen-kenn.

The Tavern, as an institution in this state, is what this much-touted State Liquor Control act has made it, and was bound to make it. It is less well-conducted than the old time saloon, and very often by individuals less responsible and of no better intentions than the so-called old time rumrunner. Also it is permitted to grow, weedlike, without control as to numbers; so that soon we may see three or four taverns side-by-side, competing for the beer patronage of a small neighborhood—with the inevitable result that their proprietors can make a living only by bootlegging illicit liquors.

Cheap, shabby, sordid, the rapidly multiplying Tavern is the fruit of the stupidity of people who, ignorant of the purposes underlying the creation of the State Liquor Control Board, cheered for this wretched liquor bill and panicked the Legislature into passing it.

However, the consequence of their advocacy ought to be obvious enough by this time. Before the next state election, perhaps, the state's go-goers may be able to perceive that we got off very much on the wrong foot in adopting this abortive system of handling the liquor problem in Connecticut. And that the sale of alcoholic beverages must be controlled in some drastically different manner if it is to be made what it should be, a particularly responsible, closely supervised, orderly, decent business—in the hands of persons fit to handle it, or perhaps in the hands of the state or the municipality itself.

THE OPEN ROAD.
 One of the best ways to convince yourself that most of your fellow citizens are, after all, pretty friendly and kindly folk is to take a leisurely vacation tour by automobile. Such a trip will bump you up against filling station employees, garage men, inn keepers, housewives who have "Rooms for Tourists" on signs in front of their homes, tea room hostesses, lunch counter waitresses and an infinite variety of chance acquaintances in other automobiles. And nothing could be much more surprising, or pleasing, than the way in which 99 per cent of these people will turn out to be men and women whom you are glad to have for fellow-countrymen.

Maybe the automobile has brought a change in our national character; maybe the people of this country always were pretty nice; whichever way it is, there isn't any medicine much better for a man than the series of personal contacts that arise during an extended motor tour.

Writers are fond of saying that Americans are hurried, discourteous, irritable, snappish and lacking in warmth. This may be so, in places; but the motorist usually has a different story to tell.

You can travel thousands of miles without finding, for instance, a filling station man who doesn't go out of his way to be helpful and obliging. You could usually write on a postage stamp the names of all the people at overnight stopping places who are anything but exceedingly pleasant. A telephone booth could hold all of the peevish or inattentive waitresses you are likely to encounter.

And if you go through a moderately long trip without encountering a good many other tourists whom you would really like to know, you are far less fortunate than most.

All of this, of course, is an old story to anyone who has done much cross-country driving. But it is worth repeating, somehow; for it provides a wholesome and encouraging background for the day's grip of news, which now and then does get a little depressing.

Read the day's record of our follies, our crimes and our passions, and you sometimes are brought close to despair. Get out and see your fellow countrymen as only a roving motorist can see them, and you get back your faith.

MILK FUROR.

Judging from the tremendous furor throughout the state in protest against the Milk Control Board's edict raising the retail price of milk to fourteen cents, this newspaper may have been a little premature in expressing the opinion that a single day should suffice for a special session of the General Assembly. No doubt that length of time would, if the business were undertaken in the proper spirit, be sufficient for the passage of necessary legislation to make the federal Home Loan Act fully operative in Connecticut. But it now appears entirely probable that the people of the state will very soon be storming the Governor's office with demands for the repeal of the whole milk control act. The Legislature might easily find itself in the position of being unable to avoid some action toward getting rid of that law; at least toward insuring Milk Board proceedings in the interest of the consumers and producers instead of exclusively in the interest of the big dealers.

IN NEW YORK

By PAUL HARRISON
 New York, Aug. 12.—What with so many once-wealthy New Yorkers staying in town for the summer and languishing in their penthouses, the debutante season is starting earlier than usual, and less extravagantly than of yore. Time was when a daughter couldn't be well launched for less than $200,000. And $100,000 wasn't an unheard-of figure when social custom dictated that the matter of a girl's education, her big orchestras, orchids, star entertainers and guests one had . . . Now, though, a girl can be swept into the social swim on a few bottles of champagne, together with a hundred friends, a small band and the ballroom of one of the more modest hotels. . . . This season 181 deb's will attain social-register maturity.

Pastimes of the Plutocrats
 Hobbies of the high-hats: Philip Rhineland collects heads; at least, he has a number of them which originally were collected by a tritico of head-hunters and straggle to the airplane designer, is always criticizing his friends' houses because he wants to help remodel them. He planned his own modernistic house on Long Island.

Clarence Mackay, papa-in-law of Irving Berlin, has a collection of armor valued at more than a million dollars. . . . And Mrs. Harry Horton Benckard owns the most valuable collection of Duncan Phyfe furniture outside of any museum. . . . Tommy Hitchcock, the poloist, likes prize fights so well that he goes around unrecognized, to some of the palooka matches at neighborhood sporting clubs. . . . And Anthony Biddle is so clever with his fists that he could like the average amateur. . . . Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson's social work specialty is placing children for adoption. . . . J. P. Morgan knows more about blooded cattle than the average farmer. . . . And John D. Rockefeller, Jr., knows more about precious stones than many a jeweler.

Socialites at Work
 The NRA code hasn't done much so far for the bored or impoverished socialite; but a lot of them are making more than cigaret-money from their jobs. There's Prince George Sherbatoff, for instance, who has gone in for chicken raising on a farm upstate. Just to be sure that his eggs are not confused with any common, run-of-the-coop variety, he stamps each one with a neat crown before it is crated. . . . Then there's Whitney Bourne, historically inclined daughter of Mrs. Harvey D. Gibson and the outstanding deb of last season. She'll be on the stage in the fall, and so will Janet Wyatt, one of the ingenue sensations of '33. . . . Two society matrons, Mrs. John Duncan and Mrs. John H. Iselin, Jr., started and are now managing the maternity department of a Fifth Avenue store. . . . And among the ex-debbies working in stores are Jane Bishop, Faith Hollins, Carol Barnes, Margaret Stafford and Louise Huntington. . . . Princess Troubetzkoy, another of the scores of titled Russians hereabout, gets exactly $16 a week for selling stockings. . . . With the market revival, lots of blue-blooded youths have gone back into the business of peddling bonds. One of them, though, Mr. William Fanshawe White, is now guiding the business destinies of a jazz orchestra.

FRESH AND DRIED APRICOTS

The apricot is a little earlier on the market than the peach and may now be found in most markets throughout North America.

The fresh apricot is an excellent seasonal fruit but is more perishable than some of the other summer fruits. Most of the commercial crop is raised in California and, since the fruit does perish so easily, the bulk of it is either dried or canned before being shipped.

If you cannot find the fresh apricot in your market, you should at least learn to use the apricot in its dried form. As much as 85 per cent of the apricot crop is dried. You will find that these dried apricots make a wholesome food if prepared properly. They should be well washed and soaked overnight in enough water to cover them. They should then be cooked in the same water for as long as possible in order to bring out the sweet, palatable flavor. No sugar should be added as the slow cooking will bring out the slow cooking which will make them taste more delicious than if commercial white sugar is used. If you may possibly obtain the dried fruit which has not been prepared with sulphur, you will find it a great deal more desirable in every way. The ordinary dried apricots are treated with sulphur and some of the sulphur elements are generally left in the food, and I find that this tends to cause flatulence in the same way as it is caused by the sulphur in onions and garlic.

If you live where you may enjoy apricots, you will find that they make an excellent fruit for the fruit fast. They should always be eaten alone or with such protein foods as nuts, cheese, or milk. If they are used in this way, the skins may be eaten if well washed.

The apricot shares the excellence of the fruit family; it furnishes mineral elements and vitamins; affords bulk; is a cooling summer food, may be classed as a mild laxative, and possesses the natural fruit sugar.

Over three million cases of apricots were packed in 1931-32, showing how popular this food is for a canned fruit dessert. The canned apricots are put up in a thick syrup and those with impaired digestions will find that the combination of canned apricots and any form of starch food is likely to cause fermentation. For this reason apricots made from the canned fruit is not wholesome.

Apricots may be used for an ice cream flavor, if mashed, strained and combined with cream and a little honey and frozen.

Apricot fluff or whip is made by mashing the fruit, straining and then mixing the pulp with the whites of eggs which have been beaten very lightly. This makes a tempting dish for a hot day.

(Belts Unsuccessful With Floating Kidney)

Question: E. M. Y. asks: "What shape of belt would be the best for one to wear with a floating kidney and should it be worn through the night as well as through the day? Is taking half a wine-glassful of brandy a day any harm to one with a floating kidney?"
 Answer: I have attempted to raise floating kidneys through the pressure of belts but have never been able to do so with any success. The x-ray examination will show that these belts do not actually raise the kidney or any other propped organs, although sometimes the patient feels more comfortable when the belt is worn. Most people do not have any symptoms from a

BUYING POWER MAY INCREASE BY SIX BILLIONS

That's an Unofficial Estimate, However, and Depends on Success of Plans

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 Herald Washington Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 12.—Six million persons re-employed by Labor Day may mean $6,000,000,000 of increased purchasing power. There aren't any accurate, comprehensive statistics on which to base a dollars and cents computation of the result of the NRA re-employment plan in case it is successful. But amateurs are making some rough estimates from the material available.

If 6,000,000 persons are re-employed next month after the general minimum wage maximum hour code becomes effective and they receive the $14 minimum wage, they will have $84,000,000 a week to spend. Six million re-employed is the immediate NRA goal.

May be More or Less
 NRA economists think perhaps half of the 6,000,000 employed persons receive less than the proposed $14 minimum and say 12,000,000 would be a comparative figure. If 12,000,000 persons received $2 more a week there would be an added $24,000,000 of purchasing power weekly. The total increase by this rough method of computation, would run up to some $5,000,000,000 a year.

The increase might be a lot more. Or a lot less, if the scheme doesn't work as well as is hoped.

Did "Chip" leave the peaches? He did not. He toted them off so he could bring them back again when he could present them in person.

About 7,500 copies of every code are made for distribution, but the biggest job is the mimeographing of transcripts of each code hearing.

Gehrig, In His Prime At 30, Has Chance To Set A Real Consecutive Game Record

By ALAN GOULD (AP Sports Editor) New York, Aug. 12.—(AP)— In the process of cracking the all-time major league "iron man" record for consecutive games played, Henry Louis Gehrig has an opportunity to build it up for a long time to come, unless he or Manager Joe McCarthy decides an enforced rest for the Yankee first baseman is essential at some future date.

The Yankees have had only one first baseman for so long that it is hard to recall when they last had an understudy for Gehrig, although Babe Ruth has taken a whirl at the bag in exhibition games while Lou Rosted up in right field.

Gehrig is only 30 years old now and has the advantage of being in his prime in approaching consecutive game No. 1,200 for a new record whereas Leslie Everett Scott, familiarly known as the "Deacon," was 33 and distinctly on the down-grade when he ended his record run of 1,307 games on May 6, 1925, at shortstop for the Yankees.

Scott was traded to Washington the same year, later released outright to the Chicago White Sox and in a short time dropped into minor league company. Never much better than a .250 hitter, the "Deacon" slunk up during the latter stages of his long streak, playing in a position that took heavy toll in his legs, but he played a lot of games while at shortstop in "A.A." company.

Scott weighed only 154 pounds and stood a trifle short of 5 feet 10 inches in his playing prime, while Gehrig scales over 200 pounds and measures an inch over 6 feet. While Gehrig's chief off-season recreation and exercise for keeping in condition, while Gehrig prefers handball and golf.

Scott began his record run while with the Boston Red Sox in 1916 and continued it with the Yankees from 1922 on. His total of games does not include 27 world series contests as well as about 200 exhibition appearances. He was handicapped in setting a much higher mark by the fact that he was limited to only 120 games in 1918 and 198 in 1919, the war years during which the major leagues shortened their schedules.

There are two coincidences in the Scott and Gehrig streaks. Both began their record endurance runs as substitute players. Scott replaced Hal Janvrin at short in the ninth inning of a game between the Red Sox and Yankees on June 20, 1916, and kept the regular job thereafter.

Gehrig went in as pinch-hitter for Wally Pipp, then the regular Yankee first sacker, on June 1, 1925. The following day he got the starting job at first and has had it ever since. Thus he began his record only three weeks after Scott's was ended.

Both changes, the passing of Scott and arrival of Gehrig, marked the reconstruction of the Yankees from a seventh-place outfit in 1925 to a pennant winner in 1928.

GEMS ARE DRUBBED BY BEARDED STARS House of David Turns Game Into Walk-Away, Winning 14-7 on 21 Bingles.

Pounding the Gem's pitchers for a total of 21 hits, the bearded House of David players won in a walk from the Bulleike past-timers, 14-7 last night under the lights. Billy Williams, second-baseman manager of the Gems made the fatal error of dishing up his star finger, Morrell for the Benton Harbor boys to fatten their averages on, and erred further in allowing him to stay in the game under the steady barrage of hits that went to all corners of the field.

Last night's game was not the best played on the Hartford diamond, but the team that played the Gems last night was by far the best that has gone to the mat with the Gems this season. They hit far and wide, when and where they liked.

Neither Morrell, an ex-major and minor league hurler could do anything about it, nor Loftus, slowballer, who succeeded him in the 4th inning.

Swaney Tames Gems Moose Swaney, who was a pennant contender in the early '20's, was in the box for the House of David team, and except in the fifth inning he had the Gems going places at his command. His control was uncanny and he had a world of speed.

House of David first baseman had the customers rolling off their seats when it was apparent after the first few innings that the game was going to be a farce, he made difficult catches at the initial sack with ease, clowning through the entire game with a double, triple and single out of five trips to the plate.

The House went to work on Morrell in the first inning, collecting three runs on three hits and a sacrifice. Again in the third the House of David blasted the Gems for three runs, two in the fourth and by that time the boys had developed into the real clowns that they are, running the bases with careless abandon.

Perry Denies The Rumor He's To Turn Professional

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 12.—(AP)—for 24 hours, then went to dinners and parties, until I got on the boat. I slept all the way across, and I was goaded by newspapermen asking me if I were to turn professional. I knew nothing about it 'til then.

This time, it was Perry, 24 year old Englishman, whose inspired play swept the historic Davis cup to the island kingdom for the first time in 11 years. "Fred Perry," he said, shortly, "is not interested in professional tennis. That is absolutely the final word. It's beginning to rain now."

WHALE PIRATES TO OPEN NEW BID FOR NATIONAL PENNANT

Chicago Only 3 1-2 Games Behind Giants; Senators Have 4-Game Lead on Yanks; Simmons-Fox in Duel.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR. Associated Press Sports Writer

It may or may not mean anything, but just about a year after the Chicago Cubs went out in front to stay in last year's National League pennant race, they have begun a new bid that has taken them into their second game.

The Cubs forged ahead of the Pittsburgh Pirates by a half game yesterday as Guy Bush, whose pitching was an important factor in their 1932 triumph, wrapped up the Buccaner batsmen in a neat package and delivered them to his teammates who knocked out an 8 to 2 victory.

The Senators used six pitchers, and the Sox needed five, for a total of 11 and apparently a new league record. The National League also had an 11-pitcher game Sept. 6, 1924, when the Giants and Phillies staged the parade.

The Chicago White Sox made it two straight over the Detroit Tigers by a 2-1 count as Ted Lyons bested Fred Marberry in a mound despite a great Tiger defense. Detroit equaled another American League record by making five double plays.

The Yankees and Athletics were rained out for the second straight day. Cleveland and St. Louis has an open date.

While Chuck Klein continues to make a run-away race of the bat for the National League batting title, Fox, and Simmons are locked again in one of their old-fashioned hitting duels. Jimmy dropped two points to 366 during the last week. Simmons' batting fell off five points to 374.

Then leading batters in each major league follows: National, Klein, Phillies, .380; Terry, Giants, .353; Davis, Phillies, .346; Piet, Pirates, .333; Schumacher, Phillies, .333; Fulle, Phillies, .322; Vaughan, Pirates, .322; Moore, Boston, .317; Collins, Cards, .316; Berger, Braves, .315.

It was a real game up to the fifth inning, with the West Siders leading by the score of 1 to 0, but in the fifth the All-Stars bore down and crashed home five runs, duplicating this feat in the final frame to turn the affair into a rout. Outstanding features of the game were the sparkling fielding plays completed by the West Sides, including a triple play and two double plays. Sam Massey hit the ball hard getting three hits out of four and leading his six chances perfect.

Others who hit well for the All-Stars were St. John, Kotch, Wallett and Stratton. The All-Stars played errorless ball. BYRD MISSES GOLF MARK Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—(AP)—When George Herman Ruth gets tired occasionally out in the narrow reaches of the Yankees right field, they call in a young, round-faced fellow named Sammy Byrd, from Allentown.

Young Byrd, taking advantage of a day so bad the Yankees and the Athletics could not even play baseball, went out to the Lianerch links here yesterday and shot "himself a magnificent 38-51-59, just one stroke above the record for the course held by Benny Shute, new British open champion, and the course professional.

Byrd is so used to the role of a substitute it felt perfectly normal to turn the trick with borrowed clubs. He had never before played the course.

WEST SIDES ARE LACED BY ALL-STARS, 10 TO 1

NEWSBOYS TROUNCE CHAMPS OF Y LOOP Laced Highland Park, 12 to 5, With Ten-Run Rally in Last Three Innings.

Led by Tommy Sipples, the All-Stars invaded Manchester last night and scored an impressive baseball debut at the expense of the West Sides at the West Side diamond, humbling the locals to the tune of 10 to 1.

It was a real game up to the fifth inning, with the West Siders leading by the score of 1 to 0, but in the fifth the All-Stars bore down and crashed home five runs, duplicating this feat in the final frame to turn the affair into a rout. Outstanding features of the game were the sparkling fielding plays completed by the West Sides, including a triple play and two double plays. Sam Massey hit the ball hard getting three hits out of four and leading his six chances perfect.

Others who hit well for the All-Stars were St. John, Kotch, Wallett and Stratton. The All-Stars played errorless ball. Meisner, shortstop for the All-Stars sure did live up to expectations, by playing a whale of a fielding game at short. Sam Hewitt played a great game for the losers taking part in two double plays.

The triple play pulled off at the West Side last night was the first ever completed on the field. How It Was Done The West Sides, it might be well to explain Umpire Russell's ruling on that triple play. There were runners on first and second and no one out. Meisner batted and he hit the speed of a bullet back at Godek, who did not catch it but the ball was trapped against his body by his arm. Umpire Russell called the ball in play. Godek knew he had not man an 11-pitcher game Sept. 6, 1924, when the Giants and Phillies staged the parade.

The Chicago White Sox made it two straight over the Detroit Tigers by a 2-1 count as Ted Lyons bested Fred Marberry in a mound despite a great Tiger defense. Detroit equaled another American League record by making five double plays.

The Yankees and Athletics were rained out for the second straight day. Cleveland and St. Louis has an open date.

While Chuck Klein continues to make a run-away race of the bat for the National League batting title, Fox, and Simmons are locked again in one of their old-fashioned hitting duels. Jimmy dropped two points to 366 during the last week. Simmons' batting fell off five points to 374.

Then leading batters in each major league follows: National, Klein, Phillies, .380; Terry, Giants, .353; Davis, Phillies, .346; Piet, Pirates, .333; Schumacher, Phillies, .333; Fulle, Phillies, .322; Vaughan, Pirates, .322; Moore, Boston, .317; Collins, Cards, .316; Berger, Braves, .315.

American: Fox, Philadelphia, .356; Simmons, White Sox, .354; Manush, Senators, .338; Cronin, Senators, .333; Hodapp, Boston, .324; Appling, Chicago, .320; Gehringer, Detroit, .326; West, St. Louis, .323; Higgins, Philadelphia, .324; Dickie, Yankees, .321.

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

BEGIN HERE TODAY

EVE BAYLESS, pretty assistant to EARLE BARNES, advertising manager of Bixby's department store, secretly carries DIKE RADER, a construction superintendent. Dick opposes her continued employment and pleads for a home but Eve is determined to go on working.

The same day Eve learns that she is to be sent to New York by the store and must leave that night. She does not tell Dick this news until they are at dinner. He sees her aboard her train.

In New York Eve meets FREDA CARTER, dress buyer for Bixby's, who introduces her to THERON REECE. Reece is much attracted by Eve. He angers her by trying to kiss her in a taxi.

At the end of a week Eve returns to Lake City. Dick meets her and takes her to the fashionable Hotel Miramar. They are about to go down to dinner when a woman telephones, asking for Dick. He leaves immediately saying something has happened "on the job" and does not return all night.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

desk that had been Alice Marshall's was a note which read: "Memo to Miss Bayless from Mr. Barnes: "After you correct proofs of today's ad, please see Miss McElroy and get details for Basement hat sale" Tuesday. Select six or eight hats for sketching. Make 3-col. layout for Press and 2-col. for Times and write copy and heads to fit. See layout on my desk for depth of ad and approximate size of cut.

"Send proof of your column in today's Press to Mr. Bixby for his O. K."

Eve read this through a second time. Basement hats! Well, why were starting her at the bottom, literally. She had taken it for granted that there would be a nice girl to fill the place made vacant by her promotion. A new girl to write relatively unimportant bits of copy and do the errands that could not be trusted to Charles, the office boy. But there was no time to waste on injured feelings. Two messenger boys entered at that moment, both in great haste.

"Anything for the Times?" asked one of them. Eve went into Barnes' office to see. There was a manilla envelope on his desk marked, "Times - Classified." The boy snatched it from her hand and was off. Eve turned to the other lad. "Anything for the Times?" he inquired. He carried a box for a florist's shop.

Flowers! Eve wondered if Earle Barnes could have sent them in honor of her promotion. Perhaps even Mr. Bixby. There were six yellow rosebuds, long-stemmed with glossy, deep green leaves. The card in the tiny envelope read, "Love from Dick."

Eve brushed one of the fragrant buds with her lips and with a topaz bar pin fastened it below the collar of her frock. The other five buds she arranged in a pottery vase that she kept on her desk.

Arlene Smith and Marya Vlad entered the office together. Arlene was modern, inclined to be slinky. She wore the extremes in fashion and wore them well. Her dark eyes were shaded by an intriguing long black fringe and her soft black hair was kept sleek through weekly visits to the beauty shop. Marya was a pretty young Bohemian girl whose fair hair was parted above a broad white forehead and whose gentle dignity gave evidence of the careful training to which her old world mother held firmly.

The girls showered Eve with questions about her trip to New York and exclaimed rapturously over the girls she had brought them—a dram of jasmine perfume in a crystal bottle for Marya and a new lipstick for Arlene.

Eve corrected the proofs and sent them to the buyers of the departments represented for their approval. Then she went to the basement hat shop to discuss tomorrow's sale. She jotted down descriptions and prices and selected several hats for sketching. "Please send these up at once," she said.

"I'm sorry but I haven't any one to send now," Janet McElroy replied crisply. "All the girls on the floor are busy and there isn't an errand boy in sight. I'd bring them up myself but I have to go to the receiving room to look over a new shipment that just came in."

Eve stacked the hats into an unwieldy pyramid and carried them to the office herself via the freight elevator. She regarded this task as beneath the dignity of her position and did not wish to be seen by anyone she knew. The buyers, she suspected, did not feel about this as she did. One of them was likely to appear in the advertising office at any time with a great armful of new merchandise. Even Mr. Bixby could be seen at times balancing a stacking gown over his arm. Mr. Bixby believed firmly in the dignity of any useful, honest labor. At staff meetings he frequently enlarged on that theme.

Eve entered the office and dropped the hats on a table near Marya's drawing board. A girl she had never seen was sitting at her desk—the desk that had been Alice Marshall's. A small, blond girl with round, blue eyes.

"This is Miss Allen, Miss Bayless," Marya said. "She's going to have your old place."

Eve smiled and offered her hand. "How do you do, Miss Allen. I hope you will like it here as much as the rest of us do."

Languidly the young woman withdrew a limp hand from Eve's friendly clasp. "Oh, I know I'm going to adore it here," she drawled, taking Eve's measure with a hostility that she scarcely took the trouble to veil.

Eve brought a layout sheet, a ruler, sharpened pencil and a piece of art gum to the desk where the new girl was seated. Miss Allen made no move to vacate her place. "That will be your desk over there, Miss Allen," Eve said, indicating, with her shabby desk stacked with newspapers and merchandise. "I haven't had time to clear it out because I've been away for a week. But I'll get my things out of the drawers by the time you return from lunch and I'll have Charles put those newspapers and that merchandise somewhere else."

The new girl surveyed Eve with cool impudence. "Oh, I think there must be some mistake," she drawled. "I am sure this is the desk Mr. Barnes meant me to have."

Eve thought rapidly. Miss Allen, she suspected, was trying to "put something over" on her. But Eve had no way of knowing what Barnes had said or implied. Fortunately Marya interrupted to ask Eve's advice about the sketch she was making. They went to Barnes' office to compare it with the layout he had prepared. Then Miss James, head of the glove department, called up to ask for Mr. Barnes. Informed that he had not yet reached the office, she asked if Eve would come to her department to see some new gloves that she was eager to have advertised in the Times next morning.

When Eve returned to the office 20 minutes later Miss Allen was nowhere in sight. "Tell me all about it at lunch," promised Arlene, looking up from her typewriter.

"It was this way," she said gleefully after they had given their orders at the fifth floor tea room. "Barnes came in while you were talking to Miss James. He gave Marya and Miss Allen and me a cool, distant good morning as if we were molecules and sailed right through to his office and slammed the door.

"I think that dashed the new girl's little, but not for long. She took out the good old plant box and revised her face some, and was about ready to go into conference with the boss when little me barged in ahead of her with a message. While I was there she thought I might as well call his attention to the fact that your former desk had become a dumping ground for this and that and should I have Charles clear it out so the new girl would have a place to park her vanity case. He grinned and agreed it was a good idea and I should go ahead. Then I happened to remember that Mr. Bixby wanted to see him. He stopped a moment on his way out to tell our new playmate to browse around the store this morning and take notes on anything she saw that seemed interesting and that by the time she got back Charles would have a desk cleared for her. Then he said you and I should make out a new schedule of lunch periods so one of us would be on hand all the time to take care of phone calls."

Eve did not tell Dick that evening of her unpleasant encounter with the new girl. She owed it to him, she felt, to keep their first week together free from office gossip and office cares. But she was uneasy. Miss Allen was not one who would easily forget a defeat. She would try to make trouble in some way, Eve was very sure.

NEW SCHALLER STATION OPENS

Third in Local Man's Chain Opens at Hollywood Junction This Morning.

Hollywood Super Service Station at 342 East Center street opened for business this morning. This is the third station to be put in operation by Schaller Motor Sales, Inc.

The building is of brick construction with white stone trim. There is a store and office in the center, flanked by wings on either side which will accommodate four cars to be serviced at one time. Tire changing, washing, greasing, oil changing and all kinds of other work and checking can be done under cover. One of the compartments has a hydraulic lift. The doors to these sections are of the type that roll up out of the way overhead so that all working space is absolutely unrestricted. These doors are exceptionally well adapted to this type of building and are very easy to handle in winter weather as there is no trouble to be had from snow and ice.

Schaller Motor Sales, Inc., will feature a complete line of Socony products including the various kinds of gas and lubricants. Two pumps of the latest type are located next to the building on either side of the entrance to the store and office. Two more are located in an island between them and East Center street. The yard is so designed that traffic must come in off the main highway. Cars cannot drive up between the outer edge of the island and East Center street. Besides ample room

BRIDGEPORT SEEKS U. S. AID FOR NEW PAVEMENT

Bridgeport, Aug. 12.—(AP)— Mayor E. T. Buckingham of Bridgeport today asked the State Public Works Advisory Board to rule whether municipalities may undertake highway improvements under the National Recovery Act to take advantage of the 30 per cent federal contribution and pay its share of 70 per cent balance in yearly installments from State aid road grants.

The proposal, first of its kind to be advanced in the state, was put before Archibald McNeil, Public Works Board chairman, today when the mayor outlined a comprehensive city paving program for which Federal aid was asked.

ITALIAN-ARGENTINE TRADE PACT BREWS

Buenos Aires, Aug. 12.—(AP)— An Italian-Argentine commercial agreement moved closer to consummation today with an examination by the ministers of agriculture and foreign affairs of proposals for mutual tariff concessions. Argentina is especially interested in preferential treatment for her meat products and an Argentine mission now in Rome reports that Italy is willing to make concessions in import quotas.

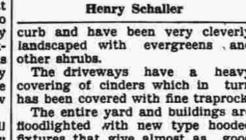

Extensive instructions were cabled the Argentine Ambassador in Washington regarding a projected trade treaty with the United States.

WEST IS SWELTERING.

San Francisco, Aug. 12.—(AP)— More of the same broiling heat, already in the indirect cause of one death, was the Weather Bureau's forecast for much of California today.

The death was that of A. B. Howard, 35, an engineer, in Los Angeles yesterday. Police said he succumbed to a heart ailment aggravated by the heat as the mercury bubbled up to 92 degrees, one degree less than the hottest day of the year, July 26.

From Needles in the south, where the mercury registered 114, to Red Bluff in the north, with its 112 degrees, interior valleys sweltered. San Francisco and the northern coast remained cool.

SAVED FROM BURNING CAR, BADLY HURT, MAY GET VITAL

Danbury, Aug. 12.—(AP)— An X-ray examination at Danbury hospital disclosed that Miss Muriel Rawley, of 845 West End avenue, New York City, one of four persons rescued from a burning automobile after the car left a highway several miles north of this city, Thursday night, has a fracture of the skull. Her condition is not considered serious.

CHAPTER VI

It was nearly time for Eve to start to the office when Dick returned next morning.

All her anger and suspicion were lost in concern when she saw him. She ran to him contritely and clung to him. "Oh, Dick, what happened?" she cried. His clothes were grimy and ruined. His shoulders sagged with weariness.

"Somebody tried to wreck the foundation," he explained briefly. "Used a crude bomb."

Eve's eyes widened. "Racketeers?" she asked.

"I don't think so. A man was fired last week—a sullen, spiteful chap. He's the one they're hunting for. We worked all night trying to get at the bottom of the mischief and trying to estimate the damage. How about some breakfast?"

Solicitously Eve started the hot water running in the tub for Dick's bath and ordered breakfast sent up.

Over their coffee Dick told her of the night's work and she learned, among other things, that the woman who had telephoned the night before was Mrs. Hall who owned a barbecue stand across the street. She had overheard conversation which led her to suspect trouble.

"I should have called you," Dick said regretfully. "But things were in such a mess and by the time I could get around to it, it was long past midnight and I hoped you were asleep. You see we had to make sure there was nothing more that could cause damage."

"But you might have been hurt!" Eve was remembering that while Dick was risking his life in the interests of his employers she had been doubting him. She must make that up to him—never hurt him by letting him know.

Eve reached the office half an hour late. She hoped this tardiness would not come to Mr. Bixby's notice. He always was at his desk early and expected everyone else to be prompt. On Eve's desk—the

AMUSEMENTS

STATE THEATER
"Mary Stevens, M. D."
Zane Grey's "Man of the Forest" with Randolph Scott, Harry Cary and Buster Crabbe, the Lion Man together with "Midnight Mary" with Loretta Young, Ricardo Cortez and Franchot Tone, are the two pictures on today's double feature program at the State.

The first chapter of "Phantom of the Air" with Tom Tyler will be shown today as an added attraction to the regular screen show.

"Mary Stevens, M. D." with Kay Francis starts at the State on Sunday. No one who has watched the development of the delectable Kay from featured player to one of the most popular stars on the screen, will be disappointed in "Mary Stevens, M. D."—or surprised that she has made such a success of it. She is the typical professional woman from the tips of her small toes to the close-fitting bob of her shapely head.

She comprises in her personality that rare mixture of professional efficiency and capability with the softness, sympathy and attractiveness of a real woman in just the right degree to make this one of the most moving and worth while things she has done.

The picture is further fortunate in having two very outstanding personalities instead of just one. Lyle Talbot, who has shown such promise in the past, has been elevated to the position of leading man opposite Miss Francis, and does it with a sincerity and ability that mark him as one of the newest Hollywood actors who can be watched for sure development.

LONDON APPROVES NEW DEAL IN U. S.

Press of Great Britain Sees Roosevelt the Champion of Lamb of Prosperity.

By MILTON BRONNER, NEA Service Writer.

London, Aug. 12.—For the bulk of Britons the two most interesting men in the world today are President Franklin Roosevelt and Chancellor Adolf Hitler. More space is given to them and their doings, more editorials are devoted to them than about any of their own statesmen or any personalities in their empire. The difference is that Roosevelt has a good press, while Hitler has a very bad one. With very few exceptions, the great London press has expressed itself in the most cordial and sympathetic terms about the great experiment the President is making. Some as diverse as a reactionary Tory paper and a radical Labor paper express the fervent and pious wish that their own government would get a move on—a la Roosevelt.

Editorial Comments—The Thunderer—the Times—in a grave and weighty editorial says: "Mr. Roosevelt was—and is—charged by law, and by the eager approval of the public voice, with a task that was nothing short of revolutionary. The failure of the American experiment would amount to a universal disaster. Its progress should be watched with deep and friendly interest. Its success should be devoutly desired everywhere. "Today by a turn of the political wheel, the White House is occupied by a man exceptionally gifted in the qualities demanded of leadership in a democracy and by force of dire emergency this man is vested with powers not less than his need. It is not in him, more than in other mortals, to command success, but he richly deserves it."

The ultra-Tory Morning Post said of President Roosevelt's broadcast address asking the people to join him in the fight: "The address was instinct with leadership, with faith in works, with the conviction that man can; if he will be the master of things. 'Whatever' we may think of some of the items in his program or even of the program as a whole, the President is certainly approaching his task in the right spirit. "If he fails, he will have failed the noble, and it is conceivable that even failure will not leave America in a healthier condition than if nothing had been attempted. It is impossible not to contrast the energy and initiative of President Roosevelt with the government with the comparative inactivity of our own."

Speaking of Roosevelt's great summer offensive against unemployment, the Labor-Socialist organ, The Daily Herald, with the biggest circulation in Britain, says: "Such language as the President uses is no doubt regarded as indecorous in Downing Street, where Ministers prefer to regard unemployment as a divine visitation or an 'economic blizzard' not to be controlled by human means. There is a note of common sense and courage running through the President's pronouncement—a note which has been tragically absent from British Ministerial speeches for two long years."

Heavy Weather Due—The Daily Express says that the President and his friends are in for heavy weather, but are not in danger of destruction. The blanket code will not exhaust his remedies. He still has two in reserve—the devaluing of the dollar and the spending of money on public works. The first was employed by France with undoubted advantage. The second has never yet been thoroughly tried out anywhere. About the main dissenting note was struck by The Financial Times, organ of London's Wall Street, which sourly observed: "If President Roosevelt's apology has no warmer reception in the United States than in London, it will not float the country to prosperity on a wave of enthusiasm."

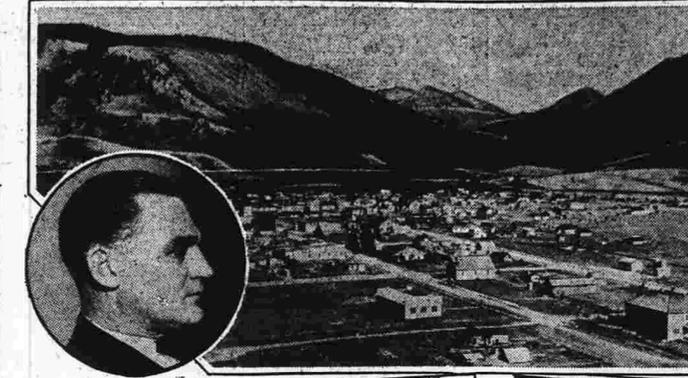

Some of the prominent weekly magazines express doubts as to the outcome in America, but the New Statesman and Nation, which is no lover of capitalists, says: "If an man can put capitalism on its feet again, President Roosevelt certainly seems to be the man to do it."

The Week-End Review, a comparatively new and very independent weekly, prints a table of events of a fortnight in America and Great Britain, the whole purpose of which is to show that Roosevelt was acting, while the British government was fooling around. It also runs a brief editorial, which concludes: "This at least is certain, that the President will not be beaten so easily as certain interests hope he will."

The postman handed in a letter. Mrs. Robinson read it. Her face lit up and she exclaimed, "Sue here comes! I haven't seen her for five years. Won't we have a grand time!"

Then she began to think and plan. The guest room looked pretty seedy. She had better get out that cot and mattress and run up those new curtains. Here comes an inspiration to boot it along. "This is the secret for working for a bribe or a prize, both of which by the way are unwise things in themselves. But after all, wasn't Mrs. Robinson working for a prize—the prize of having her house beautiful and her friend's appreciation and comment? There are so many kinds of prizes. Praise is one. The satisfaction of duty done is another. But children have not reached the point

Fate of 'Scenic Paradise' Hinges on U. S. Inquiry

Acquisition by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., right, of 30,000 acres of wilderness, rich in scenic beauty, in the Jackson Hole section of Wyoming, and the proposal to incorporate the territory in Yellowstone National Park, shown in map, will be investigated by a Senate subcommittee at a hearing scheduled to open Aug. 7 in Jackson, center of the area involved. The photo shows Jackson, a town of 500 inhabitants, nestling between the mountains. Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the investigating committee, is shown in the inset. Rockefeller, who offers the 30,000 acres to the government as a wild game preserve, will be questioned when the hearing is continued in Washington.

DRUGGAN, CONVICT WITH PULL, TO BE TRANSFERRED

Loses All Privileges and "Good Behavior" Commutation — Goes to Atlanta.

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Terrence Druggan, Chicago beer baron, not only lost his special privileges at Leavenworth Federal penitentiary but today was awaiting transfer to the Atlanta prison, there to serve five months longer than he had expected.

The board decision was reached by the trial board which recommended that, pending the transfer, the Chicagoan, sentenced to two and a half years for income tax evasion, be kept in the "segregation ward" at Leavenworth.

The board decided to take away 150 days of the total "good behavior" deduction that Druggan would have been allowed. Since Robert S. Hudspeh, warden of the annex in which Druggan had been kept, "has had a splendid record," the board agreed that censure for him was sufficient, especially because he was guilty of "carelessness rather than active participation in the bestowal of privileges." But P. J. Kearney, deputy warden, was suspended and J. A. Ording, chaplain, Lester M. Wahler, guard, and Vernon M. Swearingen, automobile mechanic, were dismissed.

We haven't yet heard the outcome of a trial at Auburn, Maine, where a husband and wife were chosen to sit on the same jury, but if the jury was able to agree it certainly should surprise a lot of people.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Don't let your own natural coloring stop you from wearing colors which your heart craves. A famous American manufacturer of cosmetics says that any woman can wear any color—if she chooses the proper cosmetics. For example, you hear many girls say that they can't wear black and that they can't wear white. They mean in that a combination of the two makes them look deathly. However, with proper shades of powder, rouge and lipstick, they can be worn becomingly. You should have a powder that is slightly rachel in tone. See that its creamy lights are high on the nose and that it has a hint of orange in it, and your lipstick should match the shade of the rouge. Green eye shadow will give your eyes the brightness needed to wear black and white, and black mascara will make your eyes seem larger and brighter. Ace isn't important Young girls can wear black dresses in youthful manner and older women can wear all the vivid shades of green, red and blue without detracting the beauty of their skins. The trick lies, not in the age of your complexion, but in the shades of cosmetics which you choose.

THE TINYMITE

Story by HAL COCHRAN. Pictures by GEORGE SCARBO.

The porpoise shortly grew tired out, and Shrimpy said, "That is about enough of sliding down his back. We'd best give him a rest." "That's fair enough," said Scouty. "Gee, he's been as kind as he could be. To give us lots of fun, that fine old fellow did his best."

Just then another Tiny cried, "Perhaps we'd better run and hide. Here comes an ugly bullhead. My, oh my, but he looks mad." "Ha, ha," laughed Shrimpy. "Don't you fret! That bullhead never hurt me yet. In fact he's very friendly and to meet you he'll be glad."

"He is not handsome. That, I'll say! But shucks, lads, he was born that way." And then the bullhead swam right up and f'pped his tail about. "Wee Scouty grabbed hold of a fin and said, 'His friendship I will win.' But Goldy cried, 'I don't like him. Oh, kindly chase him out.'" She splashed around with all her

SENSE and NONSENSE

JINGLE BELLS!
Jingle fenders, jingle frame, jingle all the way;
Oh, what fun it is to ride in a second-hand Chevrolet.

FAIR MOTORIST (giving lift to stranger)—I am very glad of your company as this is the first time I have driven, and I'm terribly nervous. Somebody to talk to will keep my mind off the driving.

Small brother has his kiddie car, while big brother, with his roadster, has his kidding car.

Auto Salesman—Yes, sir, this car is very economical. It'll run 150 miles without filling the tank.
Prospective Buyer—Gosh! Think how far it would go if you would put some gas in it!

THE OPERATION WILL PROCEED: "I'm sorry, but I'm afraid they must come out. You see a condition exists which cannot be remedied unless I remove them. You can, of course, go on like this for an indefinite period, but it would be far better for you to have them removed now. You would save yourself a lot of grief in the future. Before we do anything definite I could go into consultation with anyone you would care to choose, but I assure you that the decision will be the same as mine. Moreover, you can rest assured that the removal will be a matter of short work. Two hours should complete the entire operation! That's fine! I'm glad you consented. You'll see that I was right when it is all over. And what is more, we won't have to monkey with gas. In fact, I'll start right in now removing those dirty spark plugs.

Now that the censors have cleaned up the stuff behind the footlights, it's about time someone investigated what goes on behind the headlights.

"Poor Harper," mused a friend, "he certainly has all kinds of trouble. He got himself an automobile, and the darn thing blew up. Then he got himself an airplane, and it blew down."

Pauline—Oh, look at the poor old man all bent over with rheumatism.
Paul—Rheumatism, my eye! It's Fred Perry coming back from a ride in a rumble seat.

Why spend money on an electric vibrator when you can get a Model T, second-hand Ford for less than half the price?

Policeman—This won't do, madam. Your car has been here 20 minutes. I timed it by the clock in your car.

Lady Motorist—Timed it by the clock in there? Oh, you can't go by that, it's fast!

Julian—Nice car you have.
Mabel—Sir!

WHAT IS LOVE? Love is when a girl wearing a long white dress will ride to a formal dance in a fellow's rattle-trap, moth-eaten, dust-laden, topless automobile.

Josephine—What kind of car has Frank Warner?
Janet—Well, he'd feel tremendously flattered if you called it second-hand.

THE PERFECT ALIBI: "A woman was driving the other car."

THE HORN OF PLENTY TODAY IS USUALLY ON A HIGH-PRICED AUTOMOBILE.

Joe—It's getting chilly. Oughtn't you to have something around you?
Dot—No, we'd better wait until we're farther out in the country.

Prospective Tenant—I would like to see one of the bedrooms?
Owner—Modern or comfortable?

Miss Cayenne—That new hat makes your face look short.
Miss Fashionable—That's strange. It made my husband's face look long.

Jack—I'm going to kiss you until you yell, "Stop."
Pearl—Well, I'm just as contrary as you are, young man.

"The man who says nobody appreciates him would be appreciated if he would keep his mouth shut."

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:
HEA U. S. PAT. OFF.

Many a social climber is soon discouraged by the overhead.

SMALL DEALERS TO GET MILK IF FARMERS STRIKE

Mr. Campbell, "is this. Consumers, small dealers and farmers are on one side of the issue, and one or two large dealers are on the other side. You'd better make it plainer than that and say that the National Dairy Association is the other side."

"You may draw your own conclusions from this," Mr. Campbell said when asked if the small local dealers would be affected by the strike.

TO REOPEN AUCTION MARKET AUGUST 25

Farmers Leave Exact Time to Directors But Set Approximate Date Last Night.

August 25 will be the probable date for the reopening of the Manchester Fruit and Vegetable Association Market, inc. This is the decision made at the meeting of the members held in the Sub-Alpine Hall last night.

There may be a day or two differences, the question being left open for the board of directors to decide and if in their opinion conditions warrant opening earlier they will make the announcement. Peaches will be the big item that will come to the market, although there are many other lines that will be ready to present.

Art McKay and his Sharps and Flats provided the music. There were 300 paid admissions.
