are Machado, who is in the Bahamas; his family, who are in Florida; former Secretary of States Orestes Ferrara, in Virginia; former Secretary of War Herrera, enroute to Jamaica; and Octavio Averbhoff, former secretary of the treasury, and Eugenio Molinet, Machado's secretary of labor and agriculture, who are in the Bahamas.

The gunboat Cuba arrived here last night and it was expected United States Ambassador Welles and Army officers would escort what followers there are remaining to the vessel.

Parades and other demonstrations were taboo under a military order issued to stop looting, arson and bloodshed.

A cleanup in the police department and the Army got under way as scores whose records under Machado were not clear, were discharged. Only nine were retained in the notorious expert, or plain-clothes detective, section.

Meanwhile, the renewal of telegraphic communications brought a flood of messages from all parts of the Republic telling how completely the revolution had swept out of office holders.

Almost without exception provincial and municipal officials resigned office.

Everywhere, too, the populace took revenge on Machadoists and sacked and burned houses of the former President's followers.

LOTTERY TIED UP

Suppression of the lottery was one of the items in the program of the Machado opposition which now controls the government. Whether one more drawing will be held to clear up the tickets now out could not be ascertained today.

The former Cuban president replied laughingly through an interpreter.

"Not so many thanks. Just as many as was convenient under the circumstances."

He is said to be looking for a house here.

His Argument The government's federal government's power over interstate commerce related solely to its regulation and did not permit prohibition of interstate commerce. He told Justice Cox that the court now was called upon "to determine one of the most weighty questions that has arisen since the adoption of the Constitution."

This is especially true, Fischer said, in view of "the apparent public opinion that the constitutional guarantees should be brushed aside and abandoned on account of the unemployment and depression that exists throughout the country in the hope that by conferring legislative powers upon the President he can bring about a relief of our distress."

This was the first court challenge of the constitutionality of the Recovery Act as well as the initial test of the power of the Federal government to help the states in controlling the production and distribution of oil.

FERDE GROFE WORKING ON A NOVEL SYMPHONY

Madison Square Garden To Be Turned Into Music By Noted Composer.

New York, Aug. 15.—(AP)—If you want to know how a sock on the jaw sounds musically, Ferde Grofe, the composer, is preparing to enlighten you.

Also what orchestral sounds go into a bike race, a hockey game, a track meet and other sports.

It looks like a large order, but the modern writer of descriptive music is far from dismayed. He already has created for the modern orchestra about every variety of sound imaginable and it is getting to be child's play to make the saxophone and the tuba tell a story in sound.

The composer of "Grand Canyon Suite" and "Tabloid" now is mapping his next composition, to be called "Madison Square Garden" and containing these movements: 1—A day bike race; 2—Track meet; 3—Hockey game; 4—Horse show; 5—Championship bout; 6—Circus.

The suite will be produced some time in the fall at a charity performance in Madison Square Garden.

When "Madison Square Garden" is finished there are many other projects in mind. Rip Van Winkle is to be told in music some day, and Grofe plans to spend a month in Death Valley to get the atmosphere for a symphony.

"I'M SPOILED NOW FOR ANY CAR BUT Plymouth" A CERTIFIED INTERVIEW WITH OFFICER HARVEY HAYES, DELAWARE STATE POLICE STATION No. 2, WILMINGTON, DELAWARE. "I Couldn't Stand My Old Car after Driving a Plymouth on Duty" THEY'VE had three Plymouths at Station No. 2. Harvey Hayes drives one of them. And pushing his own "old crate" home (to use his words) didn't thrill him any after riding behind Floating Power from noon till midnight. Now he has his own Plymouth. So have five others out of the eleven men at his station. As Officer Hayes put it, they're all "spoiled" for anything else now — after learning first hand how Plymouth flashes away on pick-up, slips in and out of traffic, and brakes to smooth, quick, even stops in the tight spots. You can see for yourself how smooth Plymouth is — how easily it handles — how quickly it responds to the accelerator. You can sample Floating Power engine mountings — hydraulic brakes — rigid-X double-drop frame. Just "look at all three" low-priced cars... ride in them and compare them. AMUSEMENTS AT THE STATE Double Bill Wednesday "Mary Stevens, M. D.," with Kay Francis will be shown for the last time tonight at the State. Jack Holt in "The Wrecker" with Genevieve Tobin and George E. Stone and Helen Twelvetrees in "Disgraced" are the two splendid pictures on the double feature program at the State Wednesday and Thursday. For Friday the State has booked "Gambling Ship" and "She Had to Say Yes" with Loretta Young while the double feature show on Sunday brings Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts in "Her First Mate" and Ann Harding in "Double Harness" with William Powell. And you know of course that "Tugboat Annie" with Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery comes to the State soon for five big days. "Disgraced" tells the intriguing story of a beautiful girl, dress model at an exclusive couturier. There she meets the rich young set whose standards of living are considerably less rigid than those of the previous generation. When she meets the fiance of one of her clients and he professes love, promises marriage, she yields her love gladly. But when she discovers that she is, like all of the others, merely a temporary interest, the story reaches a climax that is a stirring prelude to the events that follow. GAME POSTPONED Due to the fact that several of the players cannot be present tonight, the game scheduled between the Legion and V. F. A GREAT OPINION

When Governor Cross permitted week after week to pass without taking any steps toward a Legislative session to change the state's banking laws in the interest of the federal Home Owners Loan act, he could not possibly have known that the Attorney-General's office would render an opinion apparently making such a session needless. Otherwise he would not have written recently to that office inquiring its views on the subject. Now that Deputy Attorney-General Ernest L. Averill has replied, expressing the opinion that savings banks and trust companies' savings departments can legally exchange delinquent mortgages for the bonds of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, though still forbidden to buy those bonds as mere investments, the Governor is probably as much surprised as anybody. Which is saying considerable.

Frankly, it has not been customary for Connecticut law officers to place such liberal constructions on the statutes of the state as that which Mr. Averill applies to the law in question. His analysis of the situation is based on the broadest possible footing and displays a grasp of the emergent quality of much of the law lately summoned into being, and of the substantial necessity of very liberal construction of much old law, which is almost breath-taking. Connecticut people are not much accustomed to having the elasticity of their revered statute laws so rudely tested.

We rejoice in the courage of the Deputy Attorney-General in the drafting of this opinion. For it does take courage to declare that a Connecticut statute need not always be construed as meaning, in unforeseen circumstances, exactly what it was intended to mean when the unions had never arisen.

It is to the layman that the banking law's restrictions upon banks' assets, letter by letter, are less sound than Mr. Averill's extremely able interpretation of them as qualified by the exigencies of the occasion. The opinion makes sense. The statutes, as they have come to bear upon the dire necessities of the day, did not make as much sense as, when they were adopted, they seemed to.

It would have been a very easy matter for the Deputy Attorney-General to pass the buck to the Legislature in this matter. He could have pointed out the conflict existing between the statutes as they appear and as they should be, and have proposed that the General Assembly be called to iron out the trouble. That he did not do so, but quite boldly assumed responsibility for the view that the banks might proceed to swap mortgages for Home Loan bonds, under the statute—or, as some will see the matter, in spite of it—shows that Mr. Averill deserves to be regarded as that rather rare thing in any times, a great lawyer.

In any event he has saved the face of Governor Cross—whose luck is axiomatic.

TWO BEER LAWS

The Connecticut Liquor Control Act covers forty-six and a half pages of leaded type—and is a mess. The Vermont Malt Liquor act covers four and a half pages of the same sized type, set solid—and is an eminently satisfactory, reasonable law.

The Vermont law, which was adopted and put into effect before Connecticut's Legislature even began to consider the problem, having become effective April 1, provides for only two classes of retail licenses—first class for places where beer is sold to be consumed on the premises, second class for places where it is to be consumed off the premises. First class licenses are granted only to places "devoted primarily to dispensing food as meals to the public"; and "public" is interpreted as including the patrons of clubs, hotels, boarding houses, restaurants, dining cars and "similar places where meals are served."

The retail license fees are the same for first and second classes, $10 a year, though hotels having fifty sleeping rooms or more must pay $50.

No beer can be sold over a bar in Vermont, the whole theory being that the dispensing of the beverage is intimately related with the purveying of meals—not at all a bad theory.

But where the Vermont law especially makes a show of the Connecticut Control act is in the simplicity of the machinery for the distribution of licenses. Instead of the cumbersome, expensive and tyrannically all-powerful Liquor Control Board of this state Vermont disposes of the matter in this wise:

There shall be control commissions in each town and city. Said commissions shall be the selectmen in each town and the city council in each city. The town and city clerks shall be recording officers and clerks of the commissions.

Just like that.

The Tax Commissioner of the state and the Attorney-General are the administrative officers. Between them they draw up the supplementary regulations, performing without any fuss or feathers all the useful functions discharged by the State Board of Liquor Control in Connecticut. There is no bonding requirement—and the surety companies do not get a nickel out of the beer law of the Green Mountain state. The license fees go to the towns and cities.

There is one other provision of the Vermont law which seems to us to indicate a deal of perspicacity and common sense. The statute provides for local option but also for an exception. No matter if a town or city does vote no-license, any bona fide hotel with twenty or more sleeping rooms is still eligible to hold a permit and dispense beer. There are a good many towns in the state which might naturally be expected to forbid the sale of even 3.2 beer within their borders. The Legislature's view of the question evidently was that that is all right so far as it relates to their own people, but that the state of Vermont cannot afford to allow local prejudices to keep large numbers of liberal-minded tourists out of the state or to ruin the business of many of the commonwealth's hotels.

For the kind of a state Vermont is, it has an extremely good beer law. Nobody is going to build much of a political machine on it, and nobody is going to rake down graft to amount to anything because of it.

DICTATORS' ARMIES

Within the last few days some writers have admitted being frankly puzzled as to the reason for the defection of the Cuban army, on which President Machado had lavished so much of the people's money and in which he reposed so much confidence, depending wholly upon its strength for the continuation of his power.

Various reasons for the sudden right-about of the army have been advanced, oftentimes presented being the one that the army feared intervention on the part of the United States and resolved to obviate that danger even though it had to sacrifice its patron and chieftain in the process.

It seems to us that much of this speculation is superfluous. The trouble with Machado's scheme for keeping himself in power solely through the devotion of a pampered army was that he used Cubans as his soldiers. No ruthless dictator who must rely on force alone should ever enlist his own subjects in his army. He should go abroad, import fighting men of an alien race—enough of them for his purpose—and see to it that they remained alien.

Machado's army was made up of Cubans. Every soldier in it, officer and private alike, had his kinsman among the populace. Being human beings and, like other human beings, subject to the ties and sympathies of consanguinity, it was inevitable that the Cuban army must sooner or later become impregnated with the people's discontent. The affair of a few days prior to Machado's downfall, when more than a score of the people were slaughtered by gunfire by palace guards, probably sickened the army to its very soul.

Machado, to make a success of his plan, should have had an army of Bashi-Bazouks, or Abyssinians, or, better still, Japanese. He picked, instead, men of his own people. What happened was the logical thing.

COUNTIES

Two or three years ago, at one of those moments when the Temporary County Homes were especially under the fire of the well-farers, this newspaper took the fantastic position that the county, as a Connecticut institution, was not necessarily a thing of the past. We dared express the belief that the county, as a matter of fact, would constitute a more logical and effective unit, in view of the modern development in personal transportation, than the sacrosanct town, for the administration of many important functions of local government. Our opinion, however, seemed to be all our own—there were no "seconders."

Now Fairfield County is organizing itself on a basis new to this state. It has discovered that it is a political, social and economic entity. It proposes to develop itself as such. One thing it proposes to do, if it can, is to build the Merritt Highway with federal aid. It has other definitely county projects, important ones.

All this is quite new to Connecticut, where for many years we have been educated into the belief that the state and town are everything and the county merely silly. Nevertheless more surprising things have happened than even Connecticut with its obsession for the historic town unit, may before so very long arrive at the realization that the county in 1933 is, for administrative purposes, a more compact, inter-communicable, logical entity than the town was in 1833.

IN NEW YORK

By PAUL HARRISON

New York—Manhattan "meanings: Sixth avenue, in the upper Forties, is a street almost solid with employment agencies, with hundreds of perspiring job-seekers standing all day before the sidewalk bulletin boards. These are people sincerely in quest of work, and at a glance are seen to be different from the delinquents of the park benches. They see a more cheerful now, and report that at least 20 per cent more help-wanted signs—especially for servants in the homes of the wealthy—are being displayed by the agencies.

Police Broadcasting
 It's exciting to visit the radio room in Centre street police headquarters; and you can, too, if you ask permission and then sit by very quietly when things are happening. On a hollow-square table something like a newspaper is spread in a huge room, and on it are thick little brass discs, each numbered and representing one of the 300-odd patrol cars. An alarm comes in by telephone; a glance tells the dispatcher which car is nearest the scene; and in five seconds more the mike-man is saying: "Number 251, number 137, number 152—a hold-up at 1846 Broadway. . . . Half the thrill of a visit is in imagining the action following such calmly-spoken words—the wild, sirened dashes of the little blue-green cars, the pursuit, the shots, and perhaps death. . . . In a few more minutes the telephone will thicken and a voice may say: "OK on that 1846 alarm. They got two mugs, and an M. M. in a 'D.O.A.'" among police ambulance men, stands for "dead on arrival."

By the way, though, it hasn't taken long for the underworld to learn how to take advantage of the police radio system. The crooks are installing short-wave sets in their own automobiles, and the programs are coming in fine. If the patrol cars are told to be on the lookout for Louis the Dope in a green roadster, Louis himself will probably be the most interested listener. A scout reports that while striding warily through Hell's Kitchen the other midnight he heard the police time-signal come out of a parked sedan. Coming aboard he saw four thugs "looking occupants" setting their watches and guffawing merrily.

Speaks Throwing Anew
 Description, why low prices for bootleg liquors, and the return of beer have put so many small speakeasies out of business that the larger ones with established clientele are thriving anew. . . . The fur furnishings, once put away for fear of raiders, are being restored from warehouses, and some of the places are the last word in club-like luxury of Oriental rugs, oil paintings, tapestries and "dear chairs. . . . Practically everyone occupies a fine old mansion. The old Woolworth home, for instance, became the Club Napoleon after it changed hands. The Clews place on Fifty-first Street was transformed into a glorified speakeasy, but was raided. The Club Club, the Embassy, the Club Club, Leon and Eddie's, and the Park Avenue (the latter quite the swankiest of all) all occupy some of the town's most elegant homes of an earlier day.

Speaking of fine houses, considerable notice has been given recently to the fact that the curtains in the Cornelius Vanderbilt town house have been patched again and again. . . . Well, they're in no such state as the curtains of Ogden Mills' house at 2 East Sixty-ninth Street. They're full of holes!

HEALTH--DIET ADVICE

BY DR. FRANK McCLOY
 Questions in regard to Health and Diet will be answered by Dr. McCloy who can be addressed in care of this paper. Enclosure stamped, self-addressed envelope, for reply.

PRESSURE IN BRAIN USUAL CAUSE OF EPILEPTIC ATTACK.

Patients with epilepsy are, as a rule, advised not to marry, but it is my belief that epilepsy is not directly inheritable. One may inherit a tendency to the disorder but not the disease. Persons with the epilepsy tendency might be compared to a loaded firecracker. They have inside them certain tendencies toward epilepsy; that is, they are loaded for it, but they do not develop the attacks unless certain harmful conditions occur which, as the match which lights the fuse. If they are lucky enough to avoid these conditions, they will probably not develop the disease, just as the firecracker does not go off until the fuse is lit. There are thousands of people who might have become epileptics during adolescence, but the attacks did not appear because the igniting agent was not applied.

There is nothing mysterious about the cause of epilepsy, and the majority of cases will recover under the proper diet treatment. The only important common cause of epilepsy I have ever found is poisoning from the intestines. The famous English physician, Sir Arbuthnot Lane, has pointed out that there is a close connection between intestinal poisoning and epilepsy. Dr. Lane cured these patients temporarily by removing a section of the colon in an effort to get rid of a particularly weak place in the intestine where a great deal of poison was being absorbed. The operation upon showed a remarkable improvement for some time, but after the trouble returned.

I believe that the match, which brings on the attack and changes the epileptic from a person who does not have falling fits into one who does, is some kind of a poison developed in the intestines from putrefying food. For many years I have seen one case after another yield to eliminative treatments such as fasting, diet and correct manipulation of the intestines. Practically the only cases that are not readily cured by these methods are the ones caused by injury to the brain from accidents or tumors, or from those whose disease has occurred due to a specific infection.

If we can find a way to keep the intestines clean and healthy and remove all poisons, the attacks disappear. As long as the intestines are kept functioning normally, the patient will stay cured. This does not mean regular daily elimination; it means the correction of the poisons or toxins in the intestines where putrefaction may take place. It seems that the toxin produced in these cases is carried in the blood to the brain where it produces local edema or swelling in certain parts of the brain and creates a pressure just as much as if a tumor existed.

Some very interesting work has been done by a doctor who found that keeping epileptic patients on a diet containing a little more than a pint of water a day would inhibit the attacks. It is his belief that a person with severe attacks of epilepsy keeps water in his system during the seizure in excess of the amount. That method will undoubtedly retard the number of attacks, but I do not believe it constitutes a cure. I have found that the best method is to cause the patient to eliminate the excess water by altering the normal control of the water retention. The patient will then keep fluids in the body in normal amounts and not be harmed by an edematous accumulation.

It is my belief that, during fermentative and putrefactive processes in the colon, poisons are formed which are carried from the intestines through the blood stream to the brain. These poisons or toxins then alter the fluid osmotic pressure in the brain, and force the organ of consciousness and

Secretary And Assistant Held In 'Perfect Accord' On 'Brain Truster's' Job

The one certain thing about Prof. Moley's sudden appointment to investigate the crime wave is that this selection will have the heartfelt approval of his superior officer at the State Department, Secretary Hull.

Other delegates, returning ahead of Hull, brought tidings of what might be expected once the secretary set foot again in the State Department. They told Mr. Roosevelt who regards Hull with affection and respect, that something must be done at once.

There is not the slightest sign that Moley's removal to the Justice Department, to oversee the crime crusade about many things. But he knows now that the State Department belongs to Mr. Hull.

Book a Day

THE ONLY WOMAN IN ALL THE WORLD
 By BRUCE GAYTON.
 "The Lord of Life," by Neil Bell, is a slightly labored but ingenious tale of how human nature acts in the face of a world catastrophe.

An eccentric inventor finds a way to annihilate the atom. His experiment gets away from him and almost annihilates the earth as well. It causes a sort of combination of earthquake, hurricane and volcanic eruption which destroys everyone on the globe—with the exception of the occupants of a British submarine, which, being below the sea at the time, missed the full force of the upheaval.

These people land, realize what has happened, and set to work to build a new society. The catch is that there is just one woman in the crowd, and if the earth is to be repopled it is strictly up to her. Being a conscientious lass, she accepts the nomination, and in the next decade or so she takes as husbands, successively, practically all of the male survivors.

She has children, in plenty—but they're all boys.

Finally the one male survivor who hasn't married the colonist's most notable lady steals the colony's most precious and sails off on a voyage of discovery. He finds another survivor—a girl who was up in the stratosphere in a balloon when the apocalypse turned over—and he and she marry and have several daughters. They thereupon go back to the colony, steal the boy children, and go hitherby off to start the race anew, leaving the colonists to suffer.

Published by Little, Brown & Co. It sells for 95c.

The arrangement worked without any real hitch until Moley made his dramatic dash to the London conference, where Hull was presiding over the tangled affairs of the American delegation.

Hull's friends and associates showed no enthusiasm for the manner of Moley's coming, or for the tenor of messages he sent on ahead. No one knows yet what will be done about Moley's expense bill of several hundred dollars for an airplane to drop him out of the sky on the British capital.

The climax arrived when Moley

TWO ASSESSORS SEEK TO DIVIDE A BALANCE

Would Share Unexpended Part Of Salary Fund Covering Deceased Member's Pay.

The final statement of the Board of Assessors, in which claim is being made for back pay of $253.06 which they say is the balance of the account due the Assessors for 1932, will be rendered tonight at the regular meeting of the Board of Selectmen. The claimed deficiency in the salary account of the Board of Assessors was caused by the death of Loren C. Clifford, assessor, who was elected for the three-year term on the Board in October, 1931, defeating E. Emil Johnson of the old board.

At the death of Mr. Clifford midway of the term of office, two months pay was allowed the estate of the deceased member, totaling $375. The work was completed on the tax lists last fall and early winter, remuneration to the two-month board for their services of $1,990.94 being paid.

The vacancy on the Board of Assessors was not filled after the death of Mr. Clifford. The assessment was completed by the remaining members of the board, assisted by Neal Cheney, clerk of the board, and Henry Thornton and Otto Nelson, part-time workers. The account rendered the selectmen lists the pay the latter two at $121.94, which amount is included in the expense account for the period named, leaving $253.06, claimed by the assessors as the unpaid balance of the total assessors' appropriation.

The account shows that Thomas Lewis, chairman of the board and E. L. C. Hohenenthal, the remaining members, have each been paid one-third of the amount of the appropriation or $75 each. This is the full amount due them under a plan of equal distribution of the appropriation. From the remaining third of the appropriation $57.84 was paid to the estate of assessor Clifford, the assessors seek to collect the sum of $253.06. A total of $121.94 was paid Henry Thornton and Otto Nelson for part time work in the assessors' office last fall.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Young hellions in a boys' reformatory, running amuck under the old system and being reclaimed to society under self-government, is a new theme for a screen plot.

As usual, my own interest was in the beginning, especially in the scene in Moral Court where the parents had to appear when their boys were finally caught and tried.

It was the old story of the worthless father and the protecting mother. One father was too busy to be detained. He told the judge his time was valuable and looked at his watch.

The next addresses on the list proved equally discouraging. At last they stopped before an old house on the opposite side of the city. It stood at the corner of a main thoroughfare and tree-lined side street.

"This house needs paint," Eve objected. "There's no use bothering to go inside. Look—the front steps are broken, too. I like the place next door better."

"That house next door is the home of the soap magnate, John North," Dick told her. "I used to room a few blocks from here."

The woman who owned the house was a widow. She and her two sons and daughter occupied one section of the rambling old mansion and the rest had been divided into apartments. One inside, Eve admitted the charm of the place.

"How much did you pay for that cooker?" Eve demanded suddenly. "When he told her she gasped.

"It costs so quickly it will pay for itself in gas saved," he defended. "But even if it didn't, think of the convenience! When you get home at night you won't have much bother getting a meal this way."

"What's that?" he demanded sharply. "Well, my mother always cooked boiled vegetables when I was a kid. You might eat them at noon if you like them so well," she said angrily.

"But you can't buy a vegetable dinner the way I like it," he answered. "And besides I was hoping to get away from restaurant cooking after I married."

"What you wanted was a first class cook and not a wife!" Eve accused. "You should have considered my qualifications more thoroughly if you wanted a mere cook."

"Well, Dick answered slowly, "I did expect to get a home."

Eve could not answer. She had thought herself beyond reproach. That there might be something to be said for Dick's side of the argument also, she had not realized.

"Where are you going?" Eve demanded. "Out for a breath of air," he told her.

"I should think you'd need it when the house is filled with cabbage," she said.

He disappeared without answering. Eve hurried to tears but nevertheless hurried to the kitchen and heaped herself to some food. She was frightened because Dick had left her. Her marriage was taking on an entirely new aspect. Was it going to be the best she had anticipated?

FOR THE LOVE OF EVE

By Lucy Walling

She was on the verge of tears. "Take off your wraps, dear," he said. "We can have dinner in a few minutes. Everything is done but the horseshish."

"What's the matter?" Dick asked. "I'm not hungry."

"Well, that's too bad," Dick answered. "Don't you want to try a bit anyhow? This horseshish sets everything off just right."

Eve arose and left the room, murmuring under her breath, "Oh, this is impossible!" But Dick went on with his meal, apparently undisturbed.

Eve sat in the dark living room looking out at the street. Dick entered with a tray. "Oh, there you are!" he exclaimed, turning on the lamp. "Have some candy, Eve!"

And with a smile he held out a box of chocolate centered butter creams. "Eve grudgingly allowed herself one of them. 'It's the only kind of candy I really care for,'" Dick explained. "This and fruit cake. You'll never have for your meals, pies and fancy cakes for me; just keep a homemade fruit cake on hand."

"Isn't that interesting?" commented Eve. "But Dick apparently missed the sarcasm. 'I'm not going to be difficult to cook for,'" he assured her.

Eve's heart sank. Why, with all her years of studying, had she never learned anything at all about cooking?

"Dick threw a leg over the side of his arm chair, lighted his pipe and went on. 'I'm going to be nice to have a wife to cook for me. I used to get so tired of hotel and restaurant food that sometimes I've taken an apartment with a kitchen-just so I could do my own cooking.'"

"Indeed! Where did you learn to cook?" she asked in a low voice. "Oh, in the woods. Spent a summer up north peeling bark for a medicine company when I was a kid. Fine training."

"You like the woods, don't you?" Eve asked, in spite of herself. "I'll take you up north some time, see if you don't like it. Dick said in answer, 'I used to go in the fall with a group of friends. But that was different. Then we stopped at a lodge and there were cooks to prepare the food. That was wonderful, too. But you never really learned the woods until you have to fend for yourself, much better getting a meal this way.'"

"What's that?" he demanded sharply. "Well, my mother always cooked boiled vegetables when I was a kid. You might eat them at noon if you like them so well," she said angrily.

"But you can't buy a vegetable dinner the way I like it," he answered. "And besides I was hoping to get away from restaurant cooking after I married."

Tommy Sipples, local baseball veteran and former manager of the Savitt Gems, is the outstanding hitter in the six-club Meriden city league, hitting the pill at a .485 clip as player-pitcher of the New Departure Manufacturing Company nine, the Endless.

Joe McCluskey, who is having a marvelous vacation as a member of the American track and field team now touring Europe, seems to be having a difficult time finding opposition. In the last meet Saturday at Budapest, McCluskey did not compete, according to reports reaching here.

Most local tennis fans are looking for another Bissell-Holland final in the local singles tourney with the Holland being picked to win his sixth straight title, but James Britton, who faces the champ in one of the semi-finals, is hopeful of defeating the title holder.

Getting back to McCluskey, Max Syring, the German ace who defeated the Olympic star twice in Germany, met his match recently against Otto Gebhardt, who ran the 5,000 meters in 15 minutes, 35 seconds. Syring was timed in 15:44.

This department is wondering just how long the town swimming championship will remain in the Aron family. Anne seems good for many more years of title winning and her sister, Helen, with a H.T.'s more improvement, should be ready to step into Anne's shoes.

It grieves this column to see the decisive manner in which the Yanks are being relegated to second place in the American League, liking the world champs as we do. Unless the Senators collectively break a leg or something, many local fans are already picking them to top the pennant.

ACCIDENT PUTS DODGE BOAT OUT OF SPEED RACE

But Owner Has Another Still In Factory With Which He Will Defend Title.

Detroit, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Convinced by an accident, coming with only 17 days to go that a jinx rides his Delphine VIII, Horace Dodge is going to depend upon a motorboat not yet out of the factory in his defense of the prized gold cup.

With Miss Delphine VIII undergoing repairs necessitated by a pop bottle she struck at high speed yesterday, Dodge ordered work speeded up on the new boat, Miss Delphine IX which he expects to be the lightest yet fastest boat ever constructed for gold cup competition.

The hull weighs 1,010 pounds measures 26 feet over all and will be powered with a 850 horsepower motor capable of 8,500 revolutions per minute. That is sufficient, Dodge believes, to send her through the water at 80 miles an hour.

The motor will be installed within two days and two days later she will start her first workout. That will leave only a few days for final adjustments, as the race is set for Sept. 1.

Meanwhile, Miss Delphine VIII, which was doing 70 miles an hour when the motor was broken, never has been repaired to racing condition and will be put back in shape. The only apparent damage is a hole in the second step, but the 24-cylinder engine will have to be torn down and inspected as a precautionary measure.

Dodge's plan is to defend the title with the new boat, Miss Delphine IX, which he expects to be the lightest yet fastest boat ever constructed for gold cup competition.

'Breakdown Jinx' Faces Scott-Paine In His Bid For Harmsworth Trophy

The danger of breakdowns and hard luck as well as the task of out-speeding Gar Wood confront Hubert Scott-Paine when the Britisher makes his attempt to win the Harmsworth trophy at Detroit, September 2. Previous challengers of Wood all have been stopped by breakdowns or accidents before completing the necessary heats.

Hubert Scott-Paine will be competing against both Gar Wood and a "breakdown jinx" when he roars out in his oddy-constructed water speedster, Miss Britain III, at Detroit September 2 to challenge for the Harmsworth trophy.

Seven times since the gray-thatched Wood won the international motorboating prize in 1920, challengers have come from across the seas and not one of them has still had his boat running at the finish.

Troubles Aplenty
Mechanical difficulties and accidents have put out five of the eight competing craft before they had completed even one heat and of the three which have been able to negotiate the first race none lasted through the second.

Under the Harmsworth rules the trophy is won by the winner of two of three heats but Wood, roaring along in his various Miss America's, never has been broken for quite a while. Their Manager, Mr. Enrico, had a verbal battle last Saturday with one of the chief cops of the team and now the team lacks a manager.

Many fans wonder about the strange faces that appeared in Sunday's game with the Pirates. The Alpine lacked three regular players, all good hitters. When the Alpines heard that two of the three players would not be around on time to start the game they quickly secured two others.

KING OF SLUGGERS IN BRILLIANT FEAT OF HEAVY HITTING

Raps Out Homer, Triple, Double And Single To Break Record Made In 1911.

By Edward J. Nell
There's a more brilliant shining today in the bonnet of Pink Cheeked Jimmie Foxx, a new American league record of nine runs batted in in one game added to the walloping achievements of the new king of baseball's sluggers.

As the old dynasty of Babe Ruth fades slowly, the easy going farmer boy from Maryland's eminent eastern shore steadily rises.

What An Outburst
He hasn't the flair of Ruth this 26 year old barrel chested "outside buster," he has not the instinct for publicity, but never in all 17 years of big league play has he looked more devastating at the plate than Foxx unleashed yesterday, as the Athletics laughed Walter Johnson's Cleveland Indians 11 to 5 in the first game of their Western invasion.

In the first inning, Jimmie tripled with two on; in the second he hit his 35th home run of the season, with the bases loaded. A double in the fourth chased home another run. A single scored two more in the sixth. And to add the perfect Ruthian touch, Jimmie fanned magnificently in his final try in the ninth.

Broke 1911 record
The nine runs he drove across the plate broke the record set eight years ago by Toppy Harvill of the Yankees in 1911, and tied since by Harry Heilmann, Lou Gehrig, Carl Reynolds and Earl Averill. He fell three shy of equalling the major league record set by Jim Bottomley of the Cardinals with an even dozen in 1924.

Aside from the glamor of Foxx's achievement, it's day in the majors was a typical busy Monday with "trot beat" Boston, 6-5 in the only other game played. The National league's lone match between the Phillies and the Giants was rained out.

Behind the excellent pitching of Norm Lashinski the Herald vanquished Highland Park 8 to 4. The Herald also hit the delivery of Dutch Senkbel at timely moments. Kovis, Haraburda, Vince, Borowski and O'Leary collected timely hits.

Salmond's fielding at first base was outstanding on the defense. This victory was the second straight victory over the Y. M. C. A. champs. The Herald would like games with the Green, Arrows, Pioneers, or any other team in town. See Manager Elmer Euliano for more. Telephone 7955. The Baldwin Aces and the Herald will clash Friday at Mt. Nebo at 6 p. m.

ARCHER USES FEET TO BREAK RECORDS

Ohio "Robin Hood" Wings Arrows From the Ground; Sends Shaft 518 Yards.

Dayton, O., Aug. 15.—(AP)—Robin Hood, Little John and William Tell were well-known archers in their day, but their names are not in the record books so there is no way of telling whether young Curtis Hill, of Dayton, is champion of them all.

At any rate young Hill knows something about sending the "clothing shaft" high and far. In the Ohio archery meet at Cincinnati he shot an arrow 503 yards, two feet, 4 3/4 inches—nearly a third of a mile.

Keeps His Promise
"I am going to keep right on trying to better this record. It really gets under your skin to see that arrow going some place," he said, and then as if to make his words good he sent the shaft spearing through the air at the national meet in St. Louis for a new record—518 yards.

As far as anyone knows such a record never has been equalled before for with bow and arrow in a free-style event. At any rate it beats the modern mark of 466 yards set last year by Homer Prouty, of Portland, Ore., in the Oregon state meet.

Hill uses a peculiar method and "stance" in his long distance shooting. Powered By Feet
Instead of the conventional bow, held in one hand and drawn with the other, he uses one of his own devising—a foot-power or stirrup-type bow.

To shoot it, he sits on the ground, hitches his feet through stirrups in the center of the powerful bow, notches his arrow, and then draws. Before he lets go his back is almost touching the ground, the arrow point pulled back almost to the bow itself. When he lets go, the arrow is off almost too fast to see.

As a matter of fact Hill doesn't see it, for when he lets go he naturally bumps hard to the ground. Something of the power behind one of these arrows may be judged by the fact that Hill exerts a pull of about 130 pounds, as compared to the 50 or 60 pounds used in most men's bows for target shooting.

LATEST STOCKS

New York, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Security markets stepped carefully today as the grain price situation and firming dollar rates tended to cloud the speculative and investment horizons.

Stocks and bonds milled about in unusually dull trading, with the ticker tape silent at frequent intervals and most board rooms all but deserted. Grains at Chicago were unchanged at their minimum levels and only a few scattered trades were made at the restricted quotations.

The majority of leading shares moved diffidently. Homestake Mining dropped 6 points, and declines of fractions to around a point were registered by National Distillers, Johnson General Electric, Consolidated Gas, Allied Chemical, and Owens-Illinois. Chrysler, International Nickel, Du Pont and General Motors were up slightly. Many others were unchanged.

While the Chicago Board of Trade problem apparently was the principal deterrent to a revival of stock market enthusiasm, the recent climbing tendencies of the dollar again became a financial factor. In banking circles it was said the strength of American currency internationally could be attributed to several influences.

The principal one, it was believed, had to do with a moderate change in sentiment relating to inflationary possibilities. There is also said to be a huge short position in the dollar throughout the world. In addition, exchange dealers say, there is a considerable seasonal demand for dollars in commercial transactions around this time of year.

Commission houses were viewed the "pegging" of Winnipeg prices largely as a precautionary measure which, it was thought, might be of brief tenure. Owing to the Chicago restrictions—which are supposed to end today—a number of important traders with long positions in the Illinois city were hedging at Winnipeg. This selling gains Chicago holdings, it was understood, was so unsettling to prices that officials of the Canadian exchange decided to impose temporary barriers.

Wall street, while hoping for normal signs of a fall upturn in heavy industry—particularly in steel—feels that this may be delayed somewhat this year. There has already been considerable stocking up of materials this summer in anticipation of a possible price rise in the next few months. Many traders, waiting for further clarification of codes and industrial price trends, are finding the side-lines most comfortable.

FIERY LA GUARDIA HOPES TO TWIST THE TIGER'S TAIL

Fusion Choice for Mayor Is Arch-Foe of Gotham's Political Ring.

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Writer

New York, Aug. 11.—The Tammany Tiger is at bay in the labyrinthine jungles of New York City politics. And fiery little Fiorello La Guardia, fusion candidate for mayor, is getting ready to go in after him.

Whichever way the tide of victory turns, it should be an exciting counter, for the champion of the united enemies of Tammany is crashing in with dynamite as well as fancy fireworks.

Gotham knows its La Guardia scarcely better than does the rest of the nation; for he spent 16 years in Congress as a live-wire liberal, Progressive, a Socialist and an Independent, an arch-enemy of extravagance, and the most vaudevillian and colorful figure in the House of Representatives. Usually identified as a Republican, he has acknowledged no political master, and has run for office as a Republican, a Progressive, a Socialist and an Independent. He was endorsed by both Republicans and Democrats when the Socialists nominated Scott Nearing to oppose him for Congress. He was elected aldermanic president here on an anti-Hylan ticket. He returned from the war to lead for the League of Nations. In 1924 he bolted his party to support La Follette.

Opposed Jimmy Walker The most consistent thing about him has been his hatred of Tammany. Not even his enemies—and he has plenty of them in every party—ever have accused him of compromise with the Tiger. La Guardia ran for the presidency of the board of aldermen only to strengthen a woefully weak ticket, and surprised everyone, including himself, by winning. In 1929 he opposed Jimmy Walker for the mayoralty because nobody else dared to run. La Guardia was backed, but not until he had put a couple of knots in the Tiger's tail.

Last election, running for reelection to Congress he was defeated again. Friends of La Guardia, seeking to prove that his opposition to Tammany isn't dictated by personal ambition, cite the following facts: When the fusion movement began to get under way, he first offered to back Aldermanic President Joseph V. McKee for mayor—specifying, however, that he first must be convinced that McKee had obtained "an absolute divorce from Tammany, without alimony." Next he proposed a fusion ticket headed by Alfred E. Smith, Robert Moses and Norman Thomas. But Smith refused to run. Then he backed Samuel Seabury, hero of the New York City reform element. But Seabury also declined. Not until then did he threaten to run himself, as an independent if necessary, unless a strong fusion candidate were found.

Persistent Tiger Chaser There was, announced the dynamic little politician, only one issue to chase the Tiger out of the city hall. And only one major task—to rehabilitate the credit of a city now on the ragged edge of bankruptcy, to govern it efficiently and honestly, and to aid the national recovery program. La Guardia, by the way, seems to have been definitely slated for a high post in the National Recovery Administration had he not been picked to make the local fight.

When the fusion leaders were gravely considering various hopeless nonentities to carry the reform banner, La Guardia proceeded to cut his G. O. P. ties by charging that the party leadership in city and state were unsatisfactory and ineffective, and that two county Republican leaders had been picked because of their loyal support of Tammany in 1929. After that bombshell, nobody expected that "The Little Flower" (that's the hotel translation of his name) ever would be endorsed by the Republicans. But he was.

He was born on New York's east side, in 1882, the son of Achilles La Guardia, who became an army bandmaster. Fiorello was reared in army posts of South Dakota and Arizona. Learned to ride cayuses, Opposed Jimmy Walker The most consistent thing about him has been his hatred of Tammany. Not even his enemies—and he has plenty of them in every party—ever have accused him of compromise with the Tiger. La Guardia ran for the presidency of the board of aldermen only to strengthen a woefully weak ticket, and surprised everyone, including himself, by winning. In 1929 he opposed Jimmy Walker for the mayoralty because nobody else dared to run. La Guardia was backed, but not until he had put a couple of knots in the Tiger's tail.

Last election, running for reelection to Congress he was defeated again. Friends of La Guardia, seeking to prove that his opposition to Tammany isn't dictated by personal ambition, cite the following facts: When the fusion movement began to get under way, he first offered to back Aldermanic President Joseph V. McKee for mayor—specifying, however, that he first must be convinced that McKee had obtained "an absolute divorce from Tammany, without alimony." Next he proposed a fusion ticket headed by Alfred E. Smith, Robert Moses and Norman Thomas. But Smith refused to run. Then he backed Samuel Seabury, hero of the New York City reform element. But Seabury also declined. Not until then did he threaten to run himself, as an independent if necessary, unless a strong fusion candidate were found.

Persistent Tiger Chaser There was, announced the dynamic little politician, only one issue to chase the Tiger out of the city hall. And only one major task—to rehabilitate the credit of a city now on the ragged edge of bankruptcy, to govern it efficiently and honestly, and to aid the national recovery program. La Guardia, by the way, seems to have been definitely slated for a high post in the National Recovery Administration had he not been picked to make the local fight.

When the fusion leaders were gravely considering various hopeless nonentities to carry the reform banner, La Guardia proceeded to cut his G. O. P. ties by charging that the party leadership in city and state were unsatisfactory and ineffective, and that two county Republican leaders had been picked because of their loyal support of Tammany in 1929. After that bombshell, nobody expected that "The Little Flower" (that's the hotel translation of his name) ever would be endorsed by the Republicans. But he was.

He was born on New York's east side, in 1882, the son of Achilles La Guardia, who became an army bandmaster. Fiorello was reared in army posts of South Dakota and Arizona. Learned to ride cayuses,

Natural-born Fighter

Perhaps the dowdiest looking major in the whole A. E. F., he still feels the same way about his appearance. In Washington he was always busy, attended sessions regularly, read every bill in a search for hidden jokers. He attacked appropriate bills, tax figures, and navy building plans. A natural-born fighter, he introduced a resolution in 1923 for the outlawry of war. He was ever the first to howl for the head of any official suspected of graft; and he wasn't a bit bashful about accusing them of it. He is a personal friend of Franklin Roosevelt, backed many of the President's policies, and helped draft several measures of the recovery program now going into effect. Few pieces of major legislation ever bore his name, but he was the balance wheel of many of them.

His co-workers liked him too, and one loved him—he married his secretary five years ago. He berated his colleagues on the floor of the House by day, and entertained them with spaghetti parties and cornet music at night.

France's greatest mine disaster occurred in 1906, when 1099 men were killed in a mine explosion at Courrières.

THE WINNYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The strange sea horses swam along and duncy cried, "We're going strong! Hang on, then, Scouty, or you'll lose this very funny race." "To beat you fairly I will try, so you will have no alibi. I'm sure my horse is fast enough to set a rapid pace." "Well, don't you worry 'bout me, son," snapped Scouty. "Though this is in fun, I also want to win and I am going to do my best." "Before we've traveled very far, you'll kick about how tired you are. At no time, while we're racing, can you stop and take a rest." They traveled for what seemed like blocks, right in between some great big rocks. Soon Scouty started moving up ahead a little bit. "Hey, Duncy, faster, FASTER, lad," cried Doty, "or 'twill be too bad. You've bragged about the race a lot, but still you're losing it." Just then the racers reached the place to turn around. This half the race was over and wee

Scouty, in the lead, cried out, "Good!" "I'm far enough ahead to win!" Wee Duncy, though, began to grin. He coaxed his horse ahead so fast, the race wound up a tie. "Go that was thrilling." Goidy cried. "Erav' Duncy sure knows how to ride. Then Shrimpy said, "A friend o' mine's behind that great big log." "It's o' Bull Frog. If he's in trim, you all can have some fun with him. I'll ask him if he'll join you in a fine game of leap-frog." The Tines shortly cried, "Hurrah!" as o' Bull joined them in their play. Wee Cobby tried to leap him and he tumbled. "Twas too bad." Then Shrimpy shouted, "Let Bull jump. He'll prove to you that he's no chump!" The frog leaped over Cobby's back, and never touched the lad. (A dogfish entertains the Tines in the next story.)

SENSE and NONSENSE

When you spend your dollar with the stores in Manchester it helps the whole town. When you send it out of town, its gone forever!

Film Actress (meeting former manager)—Allow me to introduce my husband.

Manager—Always a pleasure to meet any husband of yours.

Man—A firm offered me a job but I refused it.

Man—They expected me to work for $10 a week. They must have mistaken me for a college graduate.

"The honeymoon is over when the young husband stops calling 'Hello Honey,' and starts greeting you with: 'When do we eat?'"

Costume Manager—We can only afford enough costumes for three-quarters of the chorus.
Comic Opera Producer—Well, if that's the case, run out and hire fifty more girls, and we'll change this show into a revue.

Bertha—I'm surprised that your mother wants you to marry Eddie when she dislikes him so much.

Gertrude—That's the very reason, dear. She wants to be his mother-in-law.

Woman (in crowded subway car)—Who you showing?
Man—I don't know, what's your name?

First Woman—I don't keep account of the time but I always know when the first of the month comes around.

Second Woman—How?
First Woman—All the letters my husband gets have front windows in them.

INSPECTORS CHECKING LOCAL BEER SELLERS

No Irregular Rear Entrances Allowed; Restaurants, Clubs Must Be Bona Fide.

Inspectors in the employ of the Liquor control board were in town today looking over restaurants, club rooms and taverns, in cases where licenses were granted during the early rush and where changes have since been ordered. The restaurant permits are being very closely checked up. One place, where a rear entrance opened into another establishment was ordered to board it up. Merely keeping the door locked would not answer.

Permits must be properly framed and displayed and failure to do so is looked upon as a violation. A restaurant permit must have sufficient equipment to show that it is a real restaurant and not a luncheonette and that its primary purpose is to sell food as meals. In a club it is necessary to show that there is a bona fide membership and that meals can be had there. Where there was not sufficient equipment the license or permit is being revoked. Manchester has had one restaurant and one club permit revoked for failure to meet these requirements and warnings have been given others.

The tavern permits are being checked to see that the regulation requiring unobstructed view of the interior is being followed under this regulation it is possible that several permits will be called in.
