MONDAY, OCTOBER 30. FOREIGN GOLD. Announcement that President Roosevelt intends this week to extend his price-lifting gold adventure into foreign markets need occasion no surprise.

In his original presentation of the gold-market plan a week ago the President plainly stated that buying and selling of foreign gold might become a part of his program. It could not well be otherwise. It is true, of course, that this country can, if it will, manage its own currency without any relation to the natural movements of foreign exchange but it would encounter considerable difficulty in effectively lowering the purchase power of the dollar if there were concerted action abroad to keep the dollar dear and, consequently, commodity prices low.

Indications have been, from the fact that gold prices abroad have not followed the dollar price in this country but have remained consistently lower throughout the week, that foreign governments have been boosting the dollar and depreciating gold by buying dollars abroad. That is the application of ordinary stock market procedure to this currency of ours. Europe does not want to see the American dollar cheapened with relation to gold because cheaper dollars would allow us to better compete with Europe in the markets of the world, including our own.

It is to meet this kind of attack that the United States would naturally, in such an enterprise as this one of a government gold market, enter the foreign dollar situation. If we offer more dollars for a certain amount of gold than Europe is offering, that is, if we meet the European boost for the dollar by a cheapening move, we nullify the effect of these foreign interferences with the mildly inflationary plan the President is trying to put over.

The effect of the present announcement is likely to be expected to be—to drive these foreign countries out of the dollar market, because nothing but loss can come to them if the United States makes it clear that bull speculation will not be permitted.

Only the bare announcement that the United States is prepared to stand off interference is likely to be necessary. We shall probably buy no European gold at all, certainly not more than enough to prove that we mean business. It will not be necessary.

This latest development amounts to just about the President has hauled out a fiscal gun and, in the eyes of the world, loaded it with perfectly good new cartridges, and laid it on his desk. Now if anybody wants to start anything in the way of juggling with the dollar in the exchange marts, there will be some early and earnest shooting. In such situations it is very rarely indeed that there is any shooting because nobody is going to be silly enough to start anything, especially when the rest of the armaments in sight consist of pea shooters and the United States holds a forty-five.

RECOGNIZING RUSSIA.

Well timed with the early visit to this country of Maxim Litvinoff, foreign commissar of the Soviet Union, with a view to obtaining recognition of the Russian government by the United States, is the publication of the result of a survey of American daily newspaper opinion on this question. The survey, made over a period of several months by the American Foundation through its committee on Russian-American relations, shows the following as the positions of the newspapers surveyed: The Foundation's questionnaire:

In favor of recognition by the immediate establishment of diplomatic relations, with agreement to enter upon subsequent negotiations for the adjustment of all outstanding claims and other matters in dispute. 718 daily newspapers; opposed to recognition, 306; in favor of recognition with qualifications that might negative reply, 59; taking no stand or an inconclusive view, 79; expressing some view but not replying to inquiry, 7.

The Connecticut dailies favoring immediate recognition on the terms of the inquiry are the Hartford Courant, Hartford Times, Manchester Herald, South Norwalk Sentinel, Stamford Advocate, Waterbury Republican, Waterbury American and Willimantic Chronicle—nine; opposed are the Bristol Press, Madison Record, New Haven Register, New London Day, Norwich Bulletin, Norwich Record—six. The other state dailies either did not consider the subject of commanding importance at the time of the survey or call for a reply or had not adopted definite policies toward it.

The Herald has taken the position that recognition of the Russian government is much the same as recognizing the sun or measles or, in pre-war days, the recognition of Czarist Russia; that it would merely acknowledge the existence of a fact. The American people do not endorse the sun or measles and we did not endorse the kind of government they had in Russia before the revolution there. But we are not too silly as to refuse, in the manner of Podsnap, to recognize the existence of either good or bad things when they are concrete components in the existing scheme of things. Would anyone argue that we should ignore a state of war, should this country be invaded, merely because we do not approve of wars?

The only important question, as we see it, is whether Russia has a real government—not at all whether it is a good government or a bad one or the kind of government to which the American people can give approval.

If there are problems to be threshed out between Soviet Russia and the United States—and there certainly are—the way to thresh them out is first to provide ourselves with the customary machinery of diplomatic relationship. We believe in immediate recognition of the existence of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics because it exists, because it has existed longer than a number of other governments that we have recognized and because we cannot in any way deal with it until it has been officially recognized as existing.

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD

There is likely to be more than a little repercussion from the declaration by the "Federal Reserve Bulletin," official publication of the Federal Reserve Board, that the last two months had shown a marked decline in industrial activity in industries, particularly "in industries in which processing taxes or codes have become effective recently."

The "Bulletin" is edited by E. A. Goldenweiser, director of research and statistics for the Federal Reserve Board. He is not a member of the Board but rates as one of the several assistants to the governor. Inasmuch as this is the most direct challenge that has come from any federal agency to the wisdom of the Roosevelt program and since it is calculated to seriously affect confidences in the NRA and the AAA, we shall probably hear considerably more about this Bulletin statement because it would seem to indicate a determination on the part of the Federal Reserve Board to disavow any sympathy with the administration's measures. The Federal Reserve Board is likely to come under general observation in a new and searching light.

The Reserve Board, which is the directing force of the Federal Reserve System, consists of seven members, five of whom are Presidential appointees subject to approval by the Senate. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Controller of the Currency are ex-officio members. Four of the five appointive members at present on the Board are appointees of previous administrations, the term being for ten years.

The present governor-member, Eugene Black, an Atlanta, Ga., banker, was appointed to that position by President Roosevelt in May last when his predecessor, Eugene Meyer, resigned. That leaves a majority of the board as holdovers from former regimes, though the status of one of them, Wayland W. Magee, is somewhat questionable, since his appointment by former President Hoover has not yet been confirmed by the Senate.

Since the majority of the Federal Reserve Board is made up of men who were steeped in the traditions of the big bank interests of pre-depression days and who notoriously were largely responsible for the promotion of the income tax and the Army of the latter invention, it is not surprising that there is little sympathy between that body and that part of the administration that is attempting to bring about reduction of values by whatever expansive measures may be necessary.

SOTHERN.

With the passing of Edward E. Sothorn there will come, no doubt, many expressions of appreciation of the genius of the veteran actor. Perhaps there will be raised, here and there the piping voice of some philistine who will shock the congregation by observing, "He never had any." If so there will be a good many old timers who will know what the interruption means. Edward E. Sothorn was a "made" actor if there ever was one. He had all that schooling could give him. He had the face and the figure. He was almost born on a theater stage. He had the whole basket of technical tricks. But it is highly probable that if his father's name had not been one to conjure with on the American stage the son would have remained all his life just a well trained, usable actor of no celebrity.

There is such a thing as the spark of genius of the theater. Sothorn's father had it. The son was handsome, gifted of voice, easy and unconstrained. But he lacked the spark. Who ever heard of an actor, filled with the urge of a genuinely dramatic instinct, quitting the stage at 66—and staying away from it—from choice? The real ones die in harness—or, broken and old, in some refuge of the theater, hoping to the last for another chance to tread the boards.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

By WILLIS THORNTON, Herald Washington Correspondent. Washington, Oct. 30.—Beside President Roosevelt at a recent press conference sat a small dark man with straight black hair, neatly dressed in a blue suit. He was the president of Panama, Senor Don Harmonio Arias. El presidente smiled broadly throughout the demonstration which he was witnessing of the now-famous Rooseveltian "open forum" with the press.

His presence, an unusual event at a presidential press conference, was explained by the president as typifying the new neighborly spirit he is trying to introduce into international relations.

Craft Plan is Upheld. The conservative and traditional leadership and policies managed to keep control very handily in the American Federation of Labor convention.

The 2-1 triumph of the Green element in the last case of an effort to enlarge the executive board and get "new blood" into the A. F. of L. shows this, and so does the 12,872-5859 victory of the craft-union advocates on the proposal to unionize brewery workers vertically, on an industrial rather than on a craft basis.

A clear-cut issue was presented here. An effort was made to organize brewery workers on the industrial plan; that is, carpenters, steam engineers and anyone else who works in a brewery would be eligible to join. The craft unions, especially the engineers, yelled their heads off, and they won handily.

Vertical Union Boosted. Nevertheless, the organization of the NRA is such as to give a boost to the vertical union. Industry is now organized vertically. A shop appeals upward to its trade association and then to its government body above that. There is a strong feeling in the NRA that labor should be organized along the same vertical plan, instead of on the horizontal plan, cutting across many industries as a single craft.

IN NEW YORK

By JULIA BLANCHARD. New York, Oct. 30.—The comic opera element was rampant aboard the S. S. Jacob Fossard on her (or is it his?) last day in port. . . . Hundreds tried to get aboard Admiral Byrd's Antarctic-bound ship, but it took a special pass and those who did scramble on deck were mostly newspaper folk, photographers and contributors. It seemed as if most of the 14,000 commercial firms who had contributed something did get aboard and all were starting here and there to see with their own eyes what had become of the old ship. . . . A young Johns Hopkins geologist was in charge of the 180 sled dogs. Oil had overflowed the decks; the chained dogs were yipping as it flowed about their legs; the crew—with good intent—threw buckets of water onto them, and the dogs howled at the leader as they ducked the water. . . . The only man on board who gets paid in the public opinion. The usefulness of the crew was remount of a college campus. The boat itself, built in 1863, was bought from the government for $1. Just before sailing time, the wife of the boat's doctor dramatically begged to be taken along. . . . A young Johns Hopkins geologist was in charge of the 180 sled dogs. CONNECTICUT votes for Quality. Connecticut has always wanted quality. Even during the leanest days of the past, Quality seekers came to Watkins. Here was one store that kept faith in Quality. That Connecticut still "votes" for Quality has been especially emphasized the past three weeks when more Quality Furniture has been selected at Watkins than in any previous three consecutive weeks this year. Watkins prices MUST be right, too. Chippendale inspired! The fat top desk sketched is a Colonial interpretation of Chippendale. The Ogee bracket foot . . . the raised fronts of drawers . . . the brackets under the center drawer . . . are typical. Genuine maple throughout. $24.75. For lovers of the old seeking something new! Irwin House. Old as the Pyramids in spirit. New as tomorrow, but not "modernistic." Nothing else just like this "modern classic" model home in all New England. See it at Watkins. $119. Quality in SLEEP. There were just 36 of these $35.00 Innerspring Mattresses in the country and we bought all of them. A wonderful purchase. Cotton upholstered; invisible inside "French" roll edges; exclusive Watkins woven ticking and seven other major features. Full or twin size. $24.75. 18th Century. A new interpretation. Distinctive . . . this new 18th Century Dining Room we've just reproduced. The China with its deep cabinet base and drawer, its authentic Sheraton top with brass eagle and bracket feet . . . the excellent pierced-back Chippendale chairs of solid mahogany . . . are pieces rarely reproduced because of their higher cost. The buffet is Sheraton while the table is of popular Duncan Phyfe design. Crotch mahogany veneered and inlaid. $179. OPEN THURSDAY AND SATURDAY EVENINGS UNTIL 9 O'CLOCK. 3 MUST APPROVE

NRA WORKS PLAN

Engineer, Treasurer and Solicitor Must Endorse Filing of Application.

(This is the third in a series of short statements by the Connecticut Advisory Board, NIRA, setting forth some of the pertinent facts and regulations governing the making of loans and grants for public improvements that will result in practical unemployment relief.)

The services of three officials in a city or county are indispensable for the proper filing of applications for an NRA loan or grant to aid in the construction of a public improvement. They are the Engineer, the Treasurer and the Solicitor.

The Engineer is needed to provide the plan or report which will indicate the cost, desirability and utility of the project, and also what revenue it may be expected to bring in, if it comes within the classification of self-liquidating projects.

A statement from the Treasurer on the financial status or borrowing power is necessary so that state and federal authorities may determine financial responsibility and the terms under which a loan may be made when a project is approved.

It is the function of the Solicitor to interpret the regulations governing the loans and grants, and also to make certain that all legal requirements have been complied with when the application is submitted.

In some cases an ordinance or resolution to be made at a formal meeting in necessary before the city or county can undertake a construction project. However, an application for a federal loan or grant need not be held up pending the time when formal authorization of a project may be obtained.

Connect Queer Acting Stranger With Theft of Attorney Lesser's Auto.

Attorney George Lesser reported to the police last evening that his Dodge sedan, which had been left standing in the roadway in front of his home at 23 Laurel street, had been stolen.

The report came at a time when there were many cars along "ferret" streets in town and a check was made of all of the side streets and into the country, as there was a report that a man answering the description of Alexander Kaminski, alleged jail guard murderer had entered a local restaurant about 2 o'clock Sunday morning.

In Day's News

Neillsville, Wis.-A group of farm strike pickets near here wants no arguments with run-runners.

A truck approached their picket line they said today and stopped. The driver was asked what he was hauling.

"Milk," was the reply, "so," and with a wink, he took the lid off a can.

The pickets looked and took a whiff. "We'll have a couple of cans of that," they said.

Just then a car drove up and a man poked a submachine gun through the window. "Put the lid on and get out of here," he commanded.

Truck and convey car drove on unharmed. Ardmore, Okla.-William Williams is a partner in the law firm of Williams, Williams and Williams.

LIFE LONG FRIEND
Keeps Them Fit at 70
This is the all-vegetable laxative... THEIR MEDICINE CHEST FOR 20 YEARS

Twelve Checks
of unusual value

Of all the services that we are privileged to render, we can most heartily commend our One-Year Monthly Income plan.

After the death of the insured we deliver twelve checks, one every month for a year. A favorite amount is $100 monthly.

These ready dollars in that trying first year are beyond valuation. They furnish comfort and assurance, a chance to collect thoughts, revive courage and lay new plans.

The premium, paid once, twice or four times a year, runs about a nickel a day at age twenty, a dime in the early forties or a few cents more if you start later in life.

Larger amounts or longer periods can be arranged. A choice of policy forms is available. Premium referred to above is for "Endowment at Age 55."

Set up this safeguard for your home circle and they will never be caught unprepared. It will make an ideal supplement to your lump-sum insurance.

State Authority Hints No Other Federal Aid Project Will Be Considered.

That the improvement of East Center street, regarded as a storm center two years ago when the taxpayers voted it down, might come ahead of other projects being considered for a "made work" program under NRA to assist the unemployed this winter, is indicated in the attitude of a prominent state official, having authority over the construction and maintenance of highways that he would not place a stamp of approval on any street project here unless the improvement of East Center street is first carried out.

FATHER, SON KILLED IN FIGHT OVER GIRL

Albany, N. SPIRIT OF HALLOWEEN
Halloween is coming fast. When many a horn will give a blast. Witches flying in the air. And black cats creeping everywhere.

Make little children far and near Give out a rollicking lively cheer. For Halloween is almost here!

Teacher—Junior, tell me the definition of the word widow.
Junior—A widow is a woman that lived so long with her husband that he died.

It hasn't been so very long since parents literally owned their children. The tendency today is for children to own their parents.

Your Husband—It seems to me, my dear, that there is something wrong with this cake.
The Bride (triumphantly)—That shows how much you know about it. The cook book says it is perfectly delicious.

Even the NRA can't make men work 40 hours a week.

Native (meeting stranger in the village)—Are you coming to our lecture tonight?
Stranger—Yes, why?
Native—I'd advise you to stay away. It's sure to be very dull.
Stranger—I'm afraid I can't get out of it—I'm the lecturer.

Better times will be here when the Federal government has to get out and hunt a man or woman to take a good government job.

Correct this sentence "She doesn't play a very good game of bridge, but she is a very cheerful loser."

Husband—Are you really embroidering that foot pillow for me, dear?
His Wife—Yes, love, but if you ever dare to put your foot on it, I'll wring your neck.

A HALLOWEEN JOKE
This is the month of Halloween, Time of witches and ghosts. When such spooky faces stare out at you From all the corners and posts.

I made a jack-o'-lantern once Carved from a pumpkin you know. To scare John Smith, but goodness me! Alas! I was too slow.

While going out to play the joke A ghost came following me. All wrapped up in a great big sheet, So that no one could see.

It scared, oh, so awful bad, I tried to climb a tree When John Smith grabbed me by the leg And the joke was played on me.

Teacher—Give an example of period furniture.
Bright Pupil—Well, I should say an electric chair, because it ends a sentence.

Don't worry about what people are thinking about you, for they are not thinking about you, but wondering what you are thinking about them.

ILLEGAL playing in the line is much more difficult for a referee to see than in the backfield, due, of course, to the pile-up of players.

Line men have their tricks of the trade, many of them not commendable. One of them deals with illegal use of hands when a lineman's heart has possession of the ball.

Offensive linemen based on the line of scrimmage, while defensive linemen are more or less erect. At the snap of the ball and the surge of his opponent toward him, the offensive lineman, if he's the type who pulls unconditioned stuff, can plant his hands firmly on one of his opponent's feet and stop him cold.

Often, this routine stop throws the opposing player off balance and under the rule of play.

Stunt linemen are called "stunt" because in many of 15 yards if caught by the referee.

SCHOOL ENUMERATION WELL UNDER WAY

Work Being Done by Former Superintendent A. F. Howes in All Districts.

Alfred F. Howes, former superintendent of schools in the outlying districts in Manchester before consolidation, is this year taking the school enumeration of the entire town. In past years the work was done by several different people, one person being named to take the enumeration in the first eight districts and one in the Ninth, the latter being almost as large as the first eight combined.

Mr. Howes is doing all the districts and has his work well under way. In addition to this work Mr. Howes is also transporting children from the Oakland school district, making it necessary to make two trips each morning and again in the evening to do this work, using a sedan instead of a bus for the work.
