

THIRTY HOUR WEEK CRITICIZED, PRAISED

White House Committee Favors It, Leaders of Various Industries Claim It Is Too Great a Burden.

Washington, March 6.—(AP)—In line with the administration goal for reemployment of at least 1,000,000 more men in private industry, the House labor committee today voted unanimously for a flat 30-hour week for NRA industries subject to modification by a governmental board in case of labor shortage of "other emergencies."

This was done while criticism—and some praise—of NRA was being heard in a separate meeting of code authorities brought here in an effort to improve the recovery administration.

Before one of the meeting letters written by Representative Fulmer (D., S.C.) were read, advising South Carolina saw mill operators to work on a "common sense basis" regardless of their NRA code.

The House committee, after President Roosevelt had called for shorter hours and higher pay in his plan to restore prosperity.

Although Secretary Perkins, NRA Administrator Hugh Johnson and CWA Administrator Harry Hopkins opposed an arbitrary 30-hour week in industry, the committee was hopeful the legislation as drafted was sufficiently broad to meet their objections.

Chairman Conner, said he would seek immediate House consideration. It was a bill by Representative Conner (D., Mass.) that the House committee approved.

Many spokesmen of NRA's code authority hearings hammered away against a further reduction of work hours.

A. F. Hanson, Chicago furniture man, told the officials that it was all right to take one pill after each meal but that taking 12 might be fatal.

Irwin S. Adams, of the knitted underwear code authority, said work hours below 40 a week were not practicable.

He argued the unemployed still present too great a load for industry to absorb.

E. P. Hole of the fish tackle manufacturing industry suggested that greater possibilities of reemployment existed in suggesting up "exceptions, jokers and loopholes of all kinds in the codes" rather than by shortening the work week.

Open prices were condemned by I. J. Forstner, representing the National retail code authority, as an obvious means of fixing high and uniform prices.

A. D. O'Shea of the retail code authority, suggested better compliance and restriction of code authority as a job-creating move, asking that final action on wages and hours be postponed to June.

CHILD LOST LIFE IN RAGING STREAM

Waterbury Tot Slips from Bank — Colder Weather Checks Flood Danger.

Waterbury, March 6.—(AP)—With one life recorded as the toll of the flood season in this city, all threat of further danger from swollen streams was fast disappearing, authorities said today.

Charles Root, assistant city engineer, said that the Naugatuck river was receding rapidly this morning, colder weather having practically checked the thaw. He said that no measurements of water depth had been taken, because so far the situation had not been recognized as dangerous.

Child Loses Life
Joan Root, 3, lost her life late yesterday afternoon when she slipped from a bank into the rushing current of a swollen brook and was carried under a culvert. Her body was recovered from within the underpass half an hour later by Raymond Kachercis, a volunteer who joined a fire department and police rescue crew.

Authorities attributed the child's death to accident and would not ascribe it directly to unusual flood conditions.

From Southbury came reports this morning of receding water in the Housatonic river. Along L. S. river road, several houses were threatened by high water yesterday and it was reported that Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Miller were taken from their home in a row boat after flood waters had surrounded the building. They took refuge with neighbors on higher ground.

VOTE 20 MILLS, QUASH OTHER BOARD ITEMS

Town Meeting Accepts Selectmen's Recommendations on Tax Rate, Turn Down Three Proposals.

Four hundred of Manchester's 9,000 voters last night adopted a 20 mill tax rate on the 1933 grand list, but turned their backs on proposals to buy additional voting machines, to build on to the municipal garage and to put teeth in the law on removing snow from the sidewalks.

The 20 mill tax rate was proposed by the Board of Selectmen and was based upon the budget analysis presented by Town Treasurer George M. Waddell. Upon a question from Walter Mahoney it was stated by Mr. Waddell that a 19½ mill rate would actually cover the budget, but it would not include sufficient to cover the appropriations to be asked for at the special town meeting.

Ray's Defense

Jacob Lauffer, in a motion which was referred to later by Charles Ray as "good comedy," suggested that the tax rate be put at 25 mills "just to see what the Selectmen could do if they had all the money they asked for." This drew applause from Lauffer's followers and also brought Mr. Ray to his feet in a stalwart defense of the Selectmen's proposal. Mr. Ray said that he was in accord with those who wanted to save money on taxes, but he thought the voters misunderstood the financial situation in which the town is placed. He pointed out that a 19½ mill rate would probably leave the town with a deficit at the end of the year and "deficit cost money." He told the voters that by voting a 19½ mill rate they were actually "taxing themselves more in the end than if they voted the 20 mill rate now, because the interest cost would keep adding to the amount that must be raised after year by year."

Walter Mahoney amended the motion of Selectman Aaron Cook making the rate 18½ mills. In the vote that followed the amendment he proposed the 20 mill rate was voted without much opposition being voiced. The adjourned annual town meeting was then closed.

Special Meeting

At 8:15 the special town meeting was called to order and William J. Crockett, moderator of the first meeting, was elected moderator of the second. The first item on the call was for an appropriation of $5,580 for the purchase of six additional voting machines. Chairman Cook said that it had been necessary to raise the machine since the eight owned by the town are inadequate. He explained that $1,500 has been paid on rental of the machines and that this would apply against the full cost of the machines.

Charles Ray asked the conditions of the contract and they were explained by Town Treasurer Waddell. He stated that the machines would have to pay interest on the original investment in the machines and that this actually amounted to more than the interest charge on the $5,580 appropriation. Robert N. Vetch, Republican registrar, called upon to explain the need of the machines, said that with 9,500 voters on the list the present eight machines cannot meet the needs of the polls. The appropriation was voted down, a standing vote being required to determine the result.

MORGANS NOW OWN SWERINGENS' ROADS

Rail Magnates Defaulted on 40 Millions in Loans to New York Group.

New York, March 6.—(AP)—The New York Times says a document has been prepared by the Van Sweringen brothers, Cleveland railroad men, has defaulted on $40,000,000 of bank loans.

The loans are understood, the paper says, to have been in default since November, 1931. In that event the Van Sweringens' bankers, chief among whom are J. P. Morgan & Co., have since that date been in a position to take control of the vast railroad empire of the brothers.

The bankers have been in this position because of the fact that the Van Sweringens' pledged working control of their $200,000,000 system against the loans.

No Disclosures

The fact that the bankers refrained from exercising this option is believed to be the reason that there was no public disclosure of the default until today.

The disclosure was made in a sworn statement to be filed with the Federal Trade Commission under the new securities act. It was prepared, the Times says, by a protective committee for securities of the Van Sweringens' group, including the Erie Railroad, a unit of the Van Sweringens' 28,831-mile system.

Born near Cleveland, the brothers sold newspapers in their youth, later going into the real estate and railroad business.

Calmed like a parent quieting a child, Weidmann picked up the angry snake, caressed it and the reptile immediately became quiet.

"I have to do that when one of them becomes mad," Weidmann explained. "If I don't, the snake seems to realize he can dominate me."

And how does the snake trainee regard his strange pet? "Well, when we were married 19 years ago, Mrs. Weidmann didn't care for the snakes," Weidmann said. "But gradually she got used to them, except for the rattlers, which she still doesn't care for particularly."

Cut Hours and Raise Pay, Edict of Roosevelt At NRA Conference

Washington, March 6.—(AP)—Prohibiting marginal trading and placing Stock Exchanges on a cash basis was advocated today before the Senate banking committee by Federal Judge Wm. Clark of New Jersey, who contended that margins lead in "an unconscionable number of cases to either death, dishonor or distress."

Earlier, the committee said a member of J. P. Morgan and Co. would be called for questioning on the sale of 4,500 shares of United Aircraft stock shortly before cancellation of the airmail contracts by the government.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, said he would call the Morgan partner responsible for the sale to find out what caused the decision, although he did not yet know which one had charge of the transaction.

Dickinson Testifies

At the same time, the House interstate commerce committee heard John Dickinson, assistant secretary of commerce, testify that only the Federal government could regulate stock exchanges on account of their interstate character.

Dickinson added that the Fletcher-Rayburn Exchange Control Bill, with its rigid margin requirements, would result in the liquidation of

CONNECTICUT RIVER CONTINUES TO RISE, REACHING 12 FEET

But Four Feet from Flood Stage and Going Up a Foot Every Five Hours Despite Cold Spell—Three Children Killed by Waters in State— Much Damage Done.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The rivers of Connecticut spilled their burden of ice and water over roads, railroads and some communities today, threatening the state with new dangers after bringing death to three children.

Although lower temperatures brought a slackening of the freshets, the Connecticut river, greatest in the state, continued its steady rise, reaching 12 feet—only four feet from flood stage—and still going up about a foot every five hours.

The United States Weather Bureau in New Haven predicted fair and colder weather tonight, with freezing temperatures tomorrow morning, but rivermen say that warmer weather after tomorrow would renew the threat of serious floods.

Water Covers Tracks

An ice jam at North Kent bridge poured the waters of the Housatonic over the banks and the Berkshire division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford river was tied up as water covered a mile and a half of tracks above the Kent station.

At East Derby, near where the Housatonic and Naugatuck meet, the water was within a foot of drawing near the station, and the water at Stevenson Dam of Lake Zoar receded slightly during the morning as did the Naugatuck at Waterbury, with the chill ending the spring thaw that broke up river ice and melted the deposit of February snowfall.

Cottages Flooded

Still, cottages were being flooded below the Stevenson dam and homes in Southbury, about Sandy Hook bridge were menaced by a rise in Lake Zoar where ice, about twenty inches thick, had not yet broken to any great extent.

The High street bridge, between The Haven center and the Foxon section of the town was swept away from the Farm river, cutting off all transportation over that route. The entire wooden bridge floated away and the road was closed last night to travel.

Homes in North Haven, abandoned by families yesterday as the Quinipiac flowed about them, remained empty. Other homes have been deserted, along the Housatonic in Newtown and Southbury.

The swollen waters still held early today two of the bodies of three children who drowned yesterday. The body of John Root, three years old, was recovered after he slipped into the rushing current of a Waterbury brook and was carried beneath a culvert.

Conrad Major, Jr., 6 years old drowned in a brook at Danielson and John Morris, 7 years old, was swept over a dam to his death in East Port Chester, Conn., after falling into the Waterbury river.

TO DISBAND CWA ARMY BY MARCH 30

It Is Expected, However, That Many Will Be Reemployed on Other Projects.

Washington, March 6.—(AP)—The Civil Works Administration will disband the remnants of its 4,000,000-man work army by March 30.

Arrangements were made for all CWA employees in communities of 5,000 population or more to be transferred April 1 to work divisions set up by state and local relief administrations. This will involve some 1,500,000 persons.

Disbandment of workers in the rural sections already is far advanced on the theory that most will have been absorbed by the end of this month by farm or other seasonal occupations. A date has not been set for their complete demobilization, previously planned for May 1.

In announcing the new move yesterday, Administrator Harry L. Hopkins said all persons who could show need would be given assistance under the new setup.

To Be Cared For

This followed his recent testimony before the House labor committee that:

"A person must have a queer understanding of the Administration if he thinks the unemployed are not going to be cared for."

Federal emergency relief administration funds will be allocated to state and local administrations, which must bear part of the expense.

Able bodied persons, one to a family, will be given jobs if they are found to be in need. They will be paid at prevailing local wage rates, but with a 30-cent an hour minimum, and a 24 hour work week.

Hopkins said public improvements might be carried out and that perhaps 80 per cent of present Civil Works projects might be continued. CWA activities already have been discontinued in the Dakotas and the Minnesota and Kansas drought regions.

FIRST LADY IS ON WAY TO VISIT PUERTO RICO

Given Warm Reception As She Starts from Miami — Party of Six Take Plane on First Stage of Trip.

Miami, Fla., March 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt arrived here today by train from Washington and after a hasty breakfast departed aboard a large seaplane for Puerto Rico to obtain first hand information on health and economic conditions in the island possession.

Alighting from the train, the wife of the President was greeted at the station by delegation of city officials and club women and Mrs. Hortense K. Wells, Democratic National committee woman for Florida.

They chatted briefly and then Mrs. Roosevelt, anxious to begin the aerial trip through the West Indies, hastened to a hotel, ate light breakfast and then motored to the International Airport where she and her party of six boarded the seaplane.

Six other passengers also were aboard the plane with the first lady. Those in the party, who were included in the party was Rexford Guy Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture and several economic experts who are to make a survey of Puerto Rico. Among them was Mrs. Lorena Hickok, investigator for the Federal Relief Administration.

The party expects to have lunch today in Nevitts, Cuba, and spend tonight at Port Au Prince, Haiti. Continuing tomorrow, the plane will refuel at San Pedro, Dominican Republic, make the short water hop across Moca passage and land at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

To See Virgin Islands
While on the trip, Mrs. Roosevelt also plans to visit the Virgin Islands a short distance east of Puerto Rico, with stops at St. Thomas and St. Croix.

The First Lady expects to return to the United States in about ten days.

Leaving the train here, Mrs. Roosevelt was welcomed by a delegation of Cubans, four bouquets and a police captain who was in action when Giuseppe Zangara, the assassin, fatally wounded Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago in an unsuccessful attempt to kill Mr. Roosevelt here a year ago.

Headed Police Detail
"I headed that police detail," Captain W. J. McCarthy, told the First Lady. "I was with Secretary McIntyre most of the night."

"Oh, really," exclaimed Mrs. Roosevelt, shaking hands with McCarthy.

SHIP REACHES N. Y. WITH CARGO AFIRE

Discharges Passengers and Fire Tugs Start Battle to Put Out Flames.

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Fire still blazing in her hold, the steamer City of Montgomery arrived in harbor today, discharged her 33 passengers and was towed into the middle of the Hudson.

The ship was turned over to firemen of the fire tug William J. Gaynor which had accompanied her from Quarantine. A call for land apparatus was issued when fire-fighters opened the hatches of the City of Montgomery and saw the extent of the fire within.

The blaze, which was discovered early Monday morning when the ship was off the Virginia Capes en route from Savannah, Ga., to New York, was in a cargo of resin, turpentine and cotton piece goods.

FLOODS THREATEN IN NEW ENGLAND

Snow Melting, Ice Jams, Rain Forecast in the North — Streams Overflow.

Boston, March 6.—(AP)—Melting snows, ice jams and threats of rain today menaced New England's river valleys.

A terse U. S. Weather Bureau bulletin said, "The thickness of ice in New England streams and the depth of snow make spring floods possible."

The Connecticut river had overflowed in several places and the waters were rising, but in the majority of sections, the river was still well below the flood stage.

Rains were forecast for northern New England and it was in the depth of rainfall that the chief danger lay. Weather Bureau officials were confident that without rain the rivers would carry off the snow and ice without great damage.

Traffic Tied Up

Traffic along the Pittsfield-Albany highway was tied up as four feet of water flooded the road east of Lebanon mountain. Ice jams at the junction of the Chipcoke and Connecticut rivers brought anxiety to that section.

The Berkshire trail was used several inches of water at Cummings ton as a result of an ice jam and

Another "Sea Monster" Washed Up in France

Neither has been identified definitely, but they are believed to be rare members of the shark family.

Cherbourg, France, March 6.—A second mysterious marine animal, washed ashore at Greville, nine miles northeast of Cherbourg, provided a plethora of "sea monsters" today.

The new discovery is the same type as that which aroused the superstition of gaping Norman coastal folk on the Quereville rocks, 13 miles away, last week. The first was described as having a body 25 feet long and 4½ feet in diameter, a thin neck three feet long and—of all things—a head like a camel.

Thus, those who hurried to catch a glimpse pointed out, if "Sea Serpent No. 1" really was Scotland's famous Loch Ness monster, as some jokingly said, it must have brought its spouse along to Cherbourg waters.

Neither has been identified definitely, but they are believed to be rare members of the shark family.

However, Professor Corbiere, eminent scholar of natural history, took a look at the curiosity on the Quereville rocks and dubbed it a rare form of hyperoodon. This, in plain language, simply means a bottle-nosed whale.

A tug captain's contribution to the controversy over the identity of the first stranger was that he had seen it six weeks ago, swimming along near the port.

It had a head resembling a horse and was at least three feet out of the water," the old captain averred.

The body of the Quereville rocks find has been sent to Paris for examination.

PRINCE'S WEDDING SET FOR THURSDAY

Sigvard of Sweden to Be Married in London Despite Pleas of the Royal Family.

London, March 6.—(AP)—Prince Sigvard of Sweden and Erika Patsek—the blond young German screen star he refused to give up despite the pleas of the Swedish royal family—will be married Thursday, it was indicated today when the Prince filed notice of intent at the Caxton Hall Registrar Office.

The Prince appeared somewhat embarrassed when he jumped out of a taxi at the registry office and found a considerable crowd gathered to watch the proceedings.

He walked quickly up the office steps, accompanied by George Gordon, his legal adviser, and hurried into the registrar's room where he gave his name, age, residence, and all the other details which the law requires to know about him and his fiancée.

Wedding Scheduled

Gordon soon reappeared to quiet the curiosity of the crowd. He announced at large that, while the Prince did not wish to speak to the press, he had agreed to let them see him. He was able to inform them that the wedding was definitely scheduled for noon, Thursday, at the registrar's office.

"There will be no reception afterward," said Gordon, "and there will be only two persons present to act as witnesses, the bride's mother and her brother, George Patsek—besides myself."

Tragic Death of Son Ends Parents' Quest

In a little village in Poland the hopes of the parents of a former Manchester man will soon be dashed when they receive the long awaited information, sought through the local Red Cross Chapter, that their son is dead. Mike Anow Waickowski, a veteran of the World War, long sought by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Wojdner of Nowojelna, Poland, died in 1919, a suicide, after murdering his wife on September 22, of that year.

Search Complicated

The local search for Mike Waickowski or (Wojdner), was complicated somewhat by the manner of spelling of the name. Miss Jessie Reynolds, welfare and social service worker, who has conducted the search upon the appeal of the director of civilian relief of the National Red Cross, first received a letter from the bureau on February 27, to which correspondence was attached an appeal from the Polish Consulate, endeavoring to locate the local man, also photos of both Mike and his sister, Mrs. Charles Chaponis.

Miss Reynolds responded to the appeal for information and wrote the director of Civilian Relief in Washington that she had contacted Stanislaw Wojciechowski of 39 Union street, an uncle of the deceased, who gave her the information that the sister of Waickowski, (Anastasia) Chaponis, widow of Charles Chaponis of 527 Burnham street, Buckland, had been found, and that she was overjoyed to receive news from her parents after repeated attempts to find out their whereabouts.

FIREMEN AIDED BY LOCAL FOLKS

Residents Assist by Shovel-ing Snow from Around Hydrants After Storms.

Residents of the South Manchester fire district have been cooperating with the officers of the district and the fire department in several ways. In case of a fire, instead of sending in a bell alarm which would put out several pieces of apparatus they have telephoned calls in 13 of the 14 fire to which apparatus in the department responded last month.

When the heavy snow fell and it was found apparent that there was going to be the need of having hydrants shoveled out, the district officials and Chief Foy decided to start the work. There are nearly 300 fire hydrants in the South Manchester fire district. Men armed with shovels were taken to different streets, but found that residents of the district had taken a hand and had shoveled out many hydrants.

The result was that every hydrant in the district was clear before night. The cost to the district for this work was less than $75 and the reason that the cost was so low was due to the co-operation of the district's residents.

shorter hours would be dangerous at the present time.

The "apparent assumption of some speakers that code authorities are dishonest" was condemned by Frank A. Bond of the chain manufacturing code authority, defending open prices, received continued applause when he said there had been "too much talk here about the necessity of watching what we do about prices."

"Administration of codes has been delegated to us and we resent the implication that we are going to be dishonest in administering them," he said. "We are going to administer the law and we will certainly make it hot for anyone who breaks it."

Bond said that "if you eliminate open price fixing, you have taken away the thing which industry most desires."

Different Approach

George S. Brady, N.R.A. deputy administrator in the capital goods division, told business men they should consider a different approach to their problem. He said he recognized that current application of shortened work hours to skilled and unskilled labor alike was causing grave difficulties in many points.

A serious situation existed in Detroit, he said, because the automobile plants under their own code were permitted to work the highly skilled tool and die workers unlimited hours, not running 60 to 80, without payment for overtime; while the independent tool and die shops doing exactly the same work for the same purpose were limited to a maximum of 48 hours with penalty for overtime above 40.

Burden Too Heavy

R. R. Fauntleroy of St. Charles, Ill., representing a branch of the iron industry, said his group would find further hour reductions too heavy a burden.

Robert Gaylord, Rockford, Ill., machine tool manufacturer, also argued against hour reduction, contending the CWA should be permitted to "socialize the loss" caused by inability of industry to absorb the loss.

Harry Kendall of the industrial advisory board said limitation of machine hours was the "only effective way" of controlling production in some industries.

J. L. Davis of Indiana, representing mid-western wheat flour millers, advocated some method of production limitation for his industry.

John W. L. Young, of the Federal Leather Company, said code authorities should "remember" that producers are also consumers.

STATE NRA BOARD MAKES ITS REPORT

Handled 25 Complaints Last Week and 12 of These Were Adjusted.

Hartford, March 6.—(AP)—The National Emergency Council, NRA organ in Connecticut, handled 25 complaints last week, according to William S. Meany of Greenwich, director of the council for the state, today. The complaints brought the total number handled by the council since February 1, to 143. Twelve complaints were adjusted last week, he said.

Of the 143 complaints received, 131 have been about labor conditions, wages and hours of labor. About 10 per cent of all complaints were made by competing employers, with the remainder being made by employees.

As to Complaints

All complaints should be made to his office, Mr. Meany said. These are referred to the proper authority. Complaints against firms operating under the President's re-employment agreement are turned over to the Federal Reserve Bank and those against operators under codes where code authorities have been set up are referred to those authorities. The council has its own investigators for complaints not under any other property designated board, Mr. Meany said.

Clark, who attracted nationwide attention a few years ago by declaring the 18th Amendment invalid, his "insurance" witness to urge strengthening of the marginal provisions of the Fletcher-Rayburn Market Control Bill.

Otes Experiences

In colorful language, the Federal judge cited his experiences on the margins of trading leads to "tragic consequences."

Judge Clark said he had been forced to send men to prison because they used money entrusted to them by poor depositors to "protect their margin accounts."

The district attorney for my district, he added, "advises me that about one-half of our National bank embezzlements in the last five years are the result of stock speculation."

He testified also that in an increasing number of cases involving life insurance policies before his court, death had been established as suicide motivated by being "wiped out in the stock market."

Situation Serious

The situation became so serious, the judge added, the life insurance company considered "abrogating the suicide clauses in their policies."

Evidence presented to the Senate committee yesterday disclosed that less than two weeks before the armistice contracts were cancelled by Morgan firm disposed of the block of stocks at 50 per cent below.

It fell to almost $20 when the contract cancellation was announced.

Pecora said he would not begin his investigation into reports of a Stock Exchange and submitted additional information now being gathered.

The Exchange has sent a questionnaire to all brokers asking for details of all transactions in the air stocks this year and the addresses of clients involved.

These addresses will be used by Pecora in checking up on the identity of the sellers.

Cat Appoints Itself Guide of Blind Dog

A little white cat has become the eyes and guide of a white Spitz dog that has gone blind. The way that the cat keeps the dog out of mud puddles and from running into objects in its path was watched with interest this morning on North School street.

The dog owned by Stanley Noren of 15 Minis Place, was given to him a few months ago. It was only a puppy and was a playful thing. It learned to make its way about the house and six weeks ago trouble developed in one eye. Later the eye became blind, but the dog was able to see with the eye not at first affected. The same trouble appeared in the other eye and for the past month it has been totally blind.

In the same household is a white cat. The cat seemed to realize that the dog was blind; and appointed itself guardian. The dog, when let out into the yard for exercise walks around, lifting its feet high in the air and seems to be feeling its way about. The cat remains close by the dog and when it sees that the dog is going to walk against some object, hurries to its side and shoos it away. The dog understands that it is being directed away from some object by the cat and follows instructions.

Today there was some mud in Noren's yard. A plan had been laid over the muddy surface. The cat did not like the mud and when the dog started to walk into it the cat shouldered it onto the plank and kept its feet dry.

VOTE 20 MILLS, QUASH OTHER BOARD ITEMS

Board as a whole, then moved that $6,000 be appropriated for an addition to the municipal garage. Thomas Lewis said that since Mr. Cook had said the garage was needed to house water department equipment he wondered why the voters had been told the water department would be self-sustaining.

Mr. Cook explained that the water department would not require all the added space and that the water department would be charged for the space it used. Frank V. Williams, member of the Board of Selectmen, explained that the garage space is badly needed and he pleaded with the voters to approve of the appropriation.

Charles Ray said that he did not have any desire to cross the selectmen but he pointed out that industries today are finding it more difficult to improve business under the restrictions of the NRA than it was possible a year ago. He said that practically all business leaders are adopting a policy of not adding to their capital investments. He said that a study of the budget would show that the town's indebtedness item now exceeded the schools appropriation. He said it was necessary to stop all further expenditures unless it could be shown that they were of necessity. He opposed the proposed indignation from these grounds and apparently the voters believed with him because the item was voted down.

Sidewalks Argument

The proposal to make failure to clean sidewalks after a snowstorm a misdemeanor brought forth a burst of indignation from many quarters, resulting in tabling the matter indefinitely. Walter Mahoney moved to table the question and Robert Martin asked what action would be taken if a property owner cleaned his walk and then the town

WOODBURY ROBBERS GET $200 CASH AND PURSES

Woodbury, March 6.—(AP)—Store thieves, believed by police to be the same gang responsible for recent burglaries in Litchfield, Bantam and Waterbury, smashed their way into the Woodbury drug company late last night or early this morning and stole $200 in cash and a case of pocketbooks valued at $12. WILLIMANTIC MAN FINED IN COURT

Charles E. Paquetti Pays $25 and Costs for Reckless Driving in Town.

Charles E. Paquetti, 21, of Willimantic pleaded not guilty in town court this morning before Judge Raymond A. Johnson, to a charge of reckless driving last Saturday afternoon on Center street but was found guilty and paid $25 and costs. Paquetti was arrested by Sergeant John McGilina at 12:30 Saturday afternoon after the car driven by Paquetti had struck an automobile being driven west on Center street west of Knox street, and owned by John L. Sullivan of Pawtucket, R. I. Sullivan testified in court this morning that he was going west on Center street and while proceeding at about five miles an hour past a parked car, he was struck on the left rear bumper by the car driven by Paquetti. Paquetti told the court this morning that his car was on the trolley tracks, and pulled sharply to the left to avoid striking an oncoming car. His car overturned injuring a passenger slightly. Judge Johnson stated that he was convinced that the story of the accident as told by the accused was improbable, and found him guilty of the charge. He paid up. Both cars involved in the crash were considerably damaged. The town court was held in the hearing room in the municipal building due to repairs being made in the interior of the town court building.

HOUSING CORPORATION IS CONSTITUTIONAL

Washington, March 6—(AP)—Constitutionality of the Emergency Housing Corporation was upheld today by Attorney General Cummings. He gave this opinion to Secretary Weeks, president of the corporation. He added, however, that its charter gave it powers in excess of those intended by the National Industrial Recovery Act. Taxes asked the opinion as the result of a contention by Comptroller General J. R. McCarll that the corporation was not legal in all respects and that he, as comptroller general, should have final control of fund disbursements. Housing officials said the immediate effect of the attorney general's opinion would be the filing of an amended charter in Delaware where the organization was incorporated. Housing authorities said they did not know whether the ruling would affect the attitude taken by McCarll. It was remarked that the comptroller general still could refuse to honor requisitions by the corporation, thus continuing to tie up a $100,000,000 fund allotted by the public works administration. Whether the corporation would seek court action to force the comptroller general to honor requisitions has not been determined.

HARTFORD POLICE NAB ROBBER OF POOR BOX

Hartford, March 6—(AP)—When Anthony Pascoli, 23, formerly of New Haven, broke into St. Anthony's church at Talcott and Market streets at 3 o'clock this morning, he touched a wire connecting with an electric bell signal in the home of the Rev. Andrew J. Kelly in the rear of the church. Awakened, Father Kelly realized that there was an intruder in the church and he notified the police headquarters by telephone. While the police were hurrying to the scene, the alleged church thief was pilfering the poor boxes, taking a total of $7.90. Arrested in the church, the prisoner did not resist. In 1931, Pascoli was apprehended in the same church under similar circumstances and he was committed to the Cheshire Reformatory. He will be presented in police court Wednesday morning.

MILLEN BROTHERS IN DEDHAM JAIL

Brought Safely from New York by Police Who Feared Violence from Mob

Dedham, Mass., March 6—(AP)—With the Milzen brothers and Abraham Faber tucked away in Dedham jail, defense counsel today laid plans to seek a stay in the trial of the trio for the slaying of two Needham policemen. District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing of Norfolk county indicated he would oppose both a stay of trial and any attempt for a change of venue. Dewing said Mrs. Norma Milzen, wife of Murton, and Miss Rose Kneller, Faber's fiancee, would be called to testify at the trial of the trio. Irving and Murton Milzen, who also allegedly killed a Lynn theater employe and a Fitchburg store clerk were brought here from New York last night. They were taken from the train at the Readville in the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad and, heavily guarded, rushed over the road to the Dedham jail. Hoots and cries of derision from a crowd of 2,000 persons attended their entrance to the jail. The Milzens were promptly photographed and fingerprinted, given a light supper and locked up. Seem Unconcerned. They appeared unconcerned and posed for photographers before entering the institution. They were bare-headed and still bore marks from combat with police when they were arrested in New York a week ago last Sunday. Murton's 19-year-old bride, Norma, and Abraham Faber, alleged accomplice of the brothers, were in cells at the jail, but were not informed of the Milzens arrival. Faber was arrested in Boston on a murder charge the same day the Milzens were picked up in a New York hotel. Norma Milzen was arrested last Friday night on a charge of being an accessory after the fact in robbery. As the Milzens stepped from the train at Readville last night, Murton was handcuffed to E. A. Hall, a private detective, and Irving to State Detective Michael Fleming. Troopers on Guard. Seventy-five state troopers, assigned to guard the youths against harm, awaited them on the station platform. The brothers were whisked into a police car for the ride to Dedham, only a few miles away. Four police cars, all occupants heavily armed, preceded their machine and two other police cars brought up the rear. The Needham Trust Company holdup, during which the two policemen were slain, netted the bandits $14,000. The Milzens and Faber were scheduled to go to trial March 28 and a special session of the Superior Court will be called tomorrow or Thursday, Dewing said, for the arraignment of Norma Milzen. Mrs. Milzen's father, Rev. Norman Brighton, tried unsuccessfully yesterday to have his daughter's bail reduced from $50,000 to $10,000. Miss Kneller is at liberty in bail of $1,000. She had been charged with receiving stolen property after attorneys for her turned more than $30,000 over to General Daniel Needham, state commissioner of public safety and head of the state police. She later told state police she received the money from Faber and quoted him as saying it was a wedding present, not to be opened until they were married in June.

INSULT IS GIVEN 48 HOURS GRACE Must Leave Greece Then, Officials Say; He Calls for Heart Specialist.

Athens, March 6—(AP)—Samuel Insull, Sr., ordered to leave Greece within 48 hours, called a heart specialist to make an examination today. The specialist hurried to Insull's side but did not immediately make his findings public. At the same time, Insull's lawyer, P. Rhalis, filed an appeal for clemency on behalf of his client with the Foreign office which earlier in the day had formally informed the United States that he was being wanted on charges of embezzlement and grand larceny. Lincoln MacVeagh, United States minister, refused a request that he appoint a physician to examine Insull. The request was made by the ministry of the interior which telephoned the American minister. MacVeagh replied that he could not make such an action unless it was requested by the foreign minister of Greece. The Legation said that for the minister to direct such an examination would be most irregular and that the American government to take such action in a matter which was described as purely the affair of the Greek government. The weather had turned cold and sleet was falling when two policemen went to his home this morning and informed him he must leave the country within two days.

SWOLLEN STREAMS BRING NEW DANGER Much Damage Done by Waters in New York State and Pennsylvania.

Floods menaced eastern river valleys today as streams raged, swollen by melting snow. Roads and farms were inundated in many sections. In others, families were forced out by rising water. Swelling streams brought death to three children in Connecticut, converted watered New York farmlands into shallow lakes and carried away a bridge in Pennsylvania. Although in Central Pennsylvania conditions were improving, water was still six feet deep in places. Army bombing planes were sought to break an Allegheny river ice jam. Whirlwinds were blown to warn residents of flood danger at two Allegheny river dams in Western Pennsylvania. Swept along on the crest of the water were three abandoned dwellings and an old barn. Fight New Dangers. Communities that have barely recovered from the onslaught of recent snowstorms fought new dangers, as springlike warmth added to the slush and increased the water burden. Several streams receded below flood level in upstate New York; but the waters left in their wake a trail of damage. More than seventy small homes along the banks of the Chenango several miles above Bingham were still flooded. In some low-lying areas near Kirkwood, N. Y., hundreds of automobiles were stranded. A colony of summer cottages at Stillwater, N. Y., was destroyed. Several were swept downstream and smashed against bridge abutments. Conditions in the Hudson river valley from Waterford to below Albany grew more acute every hour.

He said no difficulty was experienced with the passengers, that they did not lose their heads during the harrowing trip. Many of the passengers told of being awakened early Monday morning by the billowing smoke and the scurrying of persons from their rooms. Mr. and Mrs. T. M. POSTAL WORKERS GET ANOTHER CUT

Forced Four Days Furlough Without Pay Further Reduces Income. Thirty-one clerks and carriers, including the postmaster, assistant postmaster and superintendent of mails in the Manchester postoffice, are forced to accept a furlough without pay for four days during the remainder of the fiscal year which ends June 30, according to an order received by Postmaster Frank B. Crocker from Postmaster General James A. Farley. "The only one not affected by this order," Mr. Crocker said today, "is the rural mail carrier." Budget requirements of the department make necessary the reduction in personnel and the curtailment of services. Deliveries by carriers will be reduced to one day in residential sections, not more than two days in mixed business and residential territory and not more than three in strictly business districts. Annual leave with pay for all employees will be discontinued at once, and allowances for the employment of substitutes and auxiliary services will be restricted to emergency requirements. Clerical workers may be used to deliver mail when found to be necessary. Mr. Farley's latest order came as a shock to local postoffice employees, who entertained hope of having a part of their 15 per cent pay cut returned. The order, however, actually further reduces the pay. The total reduction in pay, it was said, amounts to 22 per cent.

HIGH ENOUGH—IF

If that short but potent word enters largely into any consideration of the success of last night's town meeting.

If the federal government continues to provide a large measure of relief, in one way or another, to the many hundreds of unemployed. If the number of the jobless does not substantially increase. If business conditions continue to slowly improve. If no town department is allowed to exceed its appropriation. If the tax money comes in as well as it did last year or almost as well. If there comes upon the community no extraordinary and inescapable demand for emergency expenditures. If all goes well, in a word, then the probabilities are that Manchester will be able to squeeze through the fiscal year without creating a deficit with no visible means of financing it.

There is really no active reason for apprehending disappointment in any of these conditions. It is most unlikely that somehow a patched-up substitute for the CWA will not be provided by the federal administration; it is most unlikely that there will be any less industrial unemployment; it is most unlikely that the volume of general business; it is most unlikely that the tax collections will fall off appreciably. Therefore we can go along, with a fair amount of equanimity, particularly when we reflect upon the very great number of municipalities there are which have been consistently going in the red year after year.

The tax rate of 20 mills appears to many Manchester people as being high. In contrast with the millage in the vast majority of communities like this, in these times, it is actually very low. We shall be fortunate indeed if we can meet our carefully pared municipal expenditures and the accumulated burden of carrying charges from years of too low tax rates, out of a twenty mill tax. And we probably shall.

ROOSEVELT'S CHALLENGE

With every disposition in the world to sid rather than to combat any rational scheme for the better distribution of income among the workers and to increase the purchasing power of all of them, thousands of industrialists will be sure to receive with profound discouragement the cheerful, not to say gay, "challenge" of President Roosevelt to cut down the hours some more, boost the pay some more and take more of the jobless off the various doles and put them to work in the factories—at the expense of their businesses.

Throughout yesterday's Presidential address there seems to be an assumption—a talking for granted—that the only thing necessary to bring about these further reductions in hours and further increases in hourly wages and further extensions of industrial employment is a still more robust determination on the part of industrial employers to create them. "Only in this way," says the President in effect, "can you provide the nation with enough purchasing power to buy your products and restore business."

Blithely Mr. Roosevelt ignores the fact that countless numbers of these industrial enterprises have been able to finance their increased payrolls and their lowered production under the NRA agreements only by tapping their very last resources of credit, by shutting their eyes to all consideration of profits and by taking a desperate leap in the dark, the issue of which they have even yet no clear idea.

Under just one condition could the leader of national recovery go to the industrialists fairly with such demands for new and greater sacrifices at this time—and that condition would be the assurance of ample credit for the financing of the New Deal he proposes. Some slight suspicion of this may have entered into Mr. Roosevelt's calculations, because his speech did touch ever so lightly on the question of credit. He quoted a letter from the president of the American Bankers Association—a letter glowing with faith and gratification in the President's policies—in which the writer expresses belief that bankers generally are now about ready to be somewhat more liberal in the extension of credits. Now he hastens to add, doubtful credits; no "bad banking" is to be thought of. But now—by inference—that the President has given the bankers plenty of reassurance that they are not to be interfered with, they may loosen the screws a little and give business and industry a slightly better chance.

But the cold fact is that, if general industry is to pick up new burdens of payroll and production costs without any assurance, except a purely theoretical one, of a market for their goods, a large amount of decidedly "bad banking" is going to be absolutely necessary. Probably not one manufacturing concern in ten in this country would be a traditionally bankable proposition for three weeks under a thirty hour week and an expanded payroll. If Mr. Roosevelt is prepared to make no arrangements to finance this New Deal in industries beyond saying to the banks, "You really should be a little more liberal with credits," then he might as well have saved his breath yesterday.

There are, of course, a few very big industries that are in a position to pick up a still greater load if they can be induced to do so. But the vast majority have already gone every inch of the way possible for them to travel.

If the President wants more co-operation from industry he will have to do some of the co-operating himself. A year ago he promised to take the country out of the grip of the "money changers." He has taken neither the country nor industry out of that grip.

His "challenge" to industry is more than likely to be answered by a demand that he do his own part first.

VOTING MACHINES

The action taken by last night's town meeting, denying an appropriation of $5,860 for the purchase of six voting machines, apparently was taken under the presumption that if the town could not somehow manage to conduct its elections with the eight machines it already owns it could get along with a return to paper ballots.

Quite possibly it could do so, and ascertain the will of the electors quite as effectually, though perhaps not so speedily or without a good deal more labor, if it were not for one thing. That thing is the existence of a law passed by the Connecticut Legislature in 1931, which provides:

"Each town and city having a population of ten thousand or more, as shown by the United States census of 1930, shall use voting machines at all elections. The provisions of this section shall not apply to votes taken on matters pertaining to appropriations or schools in towns and cities where by special act the duly constituted authority has been granted the power to determine whether the vote shall be by machines or paper ballots."

That's all there is to that law. Although it might possibly be contended that the letter of the statute would be complied with if both machines and paper ballots were employed, it is doubtful whether a court would so construe the law, even though it does not specifically forbid the use of any but machine ballots. Apparently Manchester has no choice in the matter. She must hold her elections by the machine method and in order to do so she must have machines enough.

These six machines in question have already been in use here and we have paid in rental for them a considerable sum. That sum, in the event of purchase, would apply to the purchase price. By the action of last night's meeting we must either continue to hire the machines at a rental exceeding the sum of the interest on the proposed appropriation, or we must return them, paying a considerable sum in freight. We should then have paid out a very substantial part of the purchase price of the machines, have nothing to show for our expenditure, and still be under legal obligation to provide an adequate number of machines for future elections.

Obviously this is not good business. But the meeting is hardly to be blamed—it still had the paper ballots in the back of its mind and was out to keep down expenditures wherever possible. The appropriation would doubtless have been made if there had been any adequate presentation of the case to the meeting by the Selectmen; which, un-

MILK DECISION

The decision of the United States Supreme Court that for a state to empower a commission to fix a minimum price on milk is not a violation of the Constitution will be hailed as a victory for the Connecticut Milk Control Board as well as for that of the State of New York, where the test of the principle was inaugurated. We cannot see the matter in precisely that light.

To us it is merely a very significant indication of the attitude of the Supreme Court toward the much broader question of government control of business generally and really ought to be greeted with more enthusiasm by the consumer than by the vendor; because if the Supreme Court holds that price fixing in one direction is constitutional it will quite surely hold that it is also constitutional in the other direction—in other words, that a state has the power to limit maximum as well as minimum prices. It merely happens that in this instance the price in question was a minimum one.

Of course the Supreme Court does not pass on the merits of the price established—it was dealing solely with the right of a state to assume this kind of control over business; and on that point the court's opinion is definite. The state, it rules, has all such right. And with the establishment of that principle is opened the way to any number of measures of control which, until now, might have been assumed to transgress the constitutional rights of business.

We people in Connecticut will know how to attend to our milk price problem, now that there is no longer any question about our right to do so. We shall know enough to see to it that at next year's legislative session the present milk commission law is chucked into the discard and the present Milk Control Board with it—and that the regulation of the milk industry is so arranged that the farmers shall get more for their milk and the consumer pay less.

Health and Diet Advice

BRIGHT'S DISEASE OR NEPHRITIS

I find that many patients who have backache decide that it can only mean kidney trouble. This is a mistaken idea, for backache may be due to many other causes besides a kidney disorder and as a matter of fact backache does not always occur in some forms of kidney inflammation, called Bright's disease, although it may be present.

Bright's Disease develops very slowly, almost secretly in its chronic form with few noticeable signs. At the time the symptoms attract the attention of the patient, much serious damage to the kidneys may have taken place. If you have a backache, take care of it, but do not believe that it always means kidney trouble.

Bright's Disease is the popular name for Nephritis which means inflammation of the kidneys. Several different forms of this disorder are known but in today's article I am going to discuss the chronic form.

You probably know, the word chronic comes from the Greek word for time, and this indicates that the chronic disease is one which is present over a long period of time. "Chronic" is a very suitable term for a stubborn form of nephritis as chronic kidney inflammation will often take as long as ten years to develop. During these years, the patient may have no idea that anything is wrong.

Very often the patient finds out that he has nephritis as a result of a urinalysis made when he applies for life insurance. The report comes back and shows the presence of albumin and the presence of various casts, all of which strongly point to the presence of Bright's Disease.

Unquestionably, regular health examinations at least once a year, if taken by every person past forty, would discover many cases of kidney inflammation long before any very serious trouble develops. If the patient can not afford the complete examination, he should at least have a urinalysis made once a year as this is a valuable way to check up on the kidneys and to discover trouble early while a complete cure is yet easily accomplished.

Chronic nephritis is a degenerative disease of middle age, more common in men than in women and it very often develops along with high blood pressure. In some forms of this disease the chief changes occur in the actual kidney substance, in other forms, the main change is in an increase in the connective tissue which acts as a framework, binding the kidney cells together.

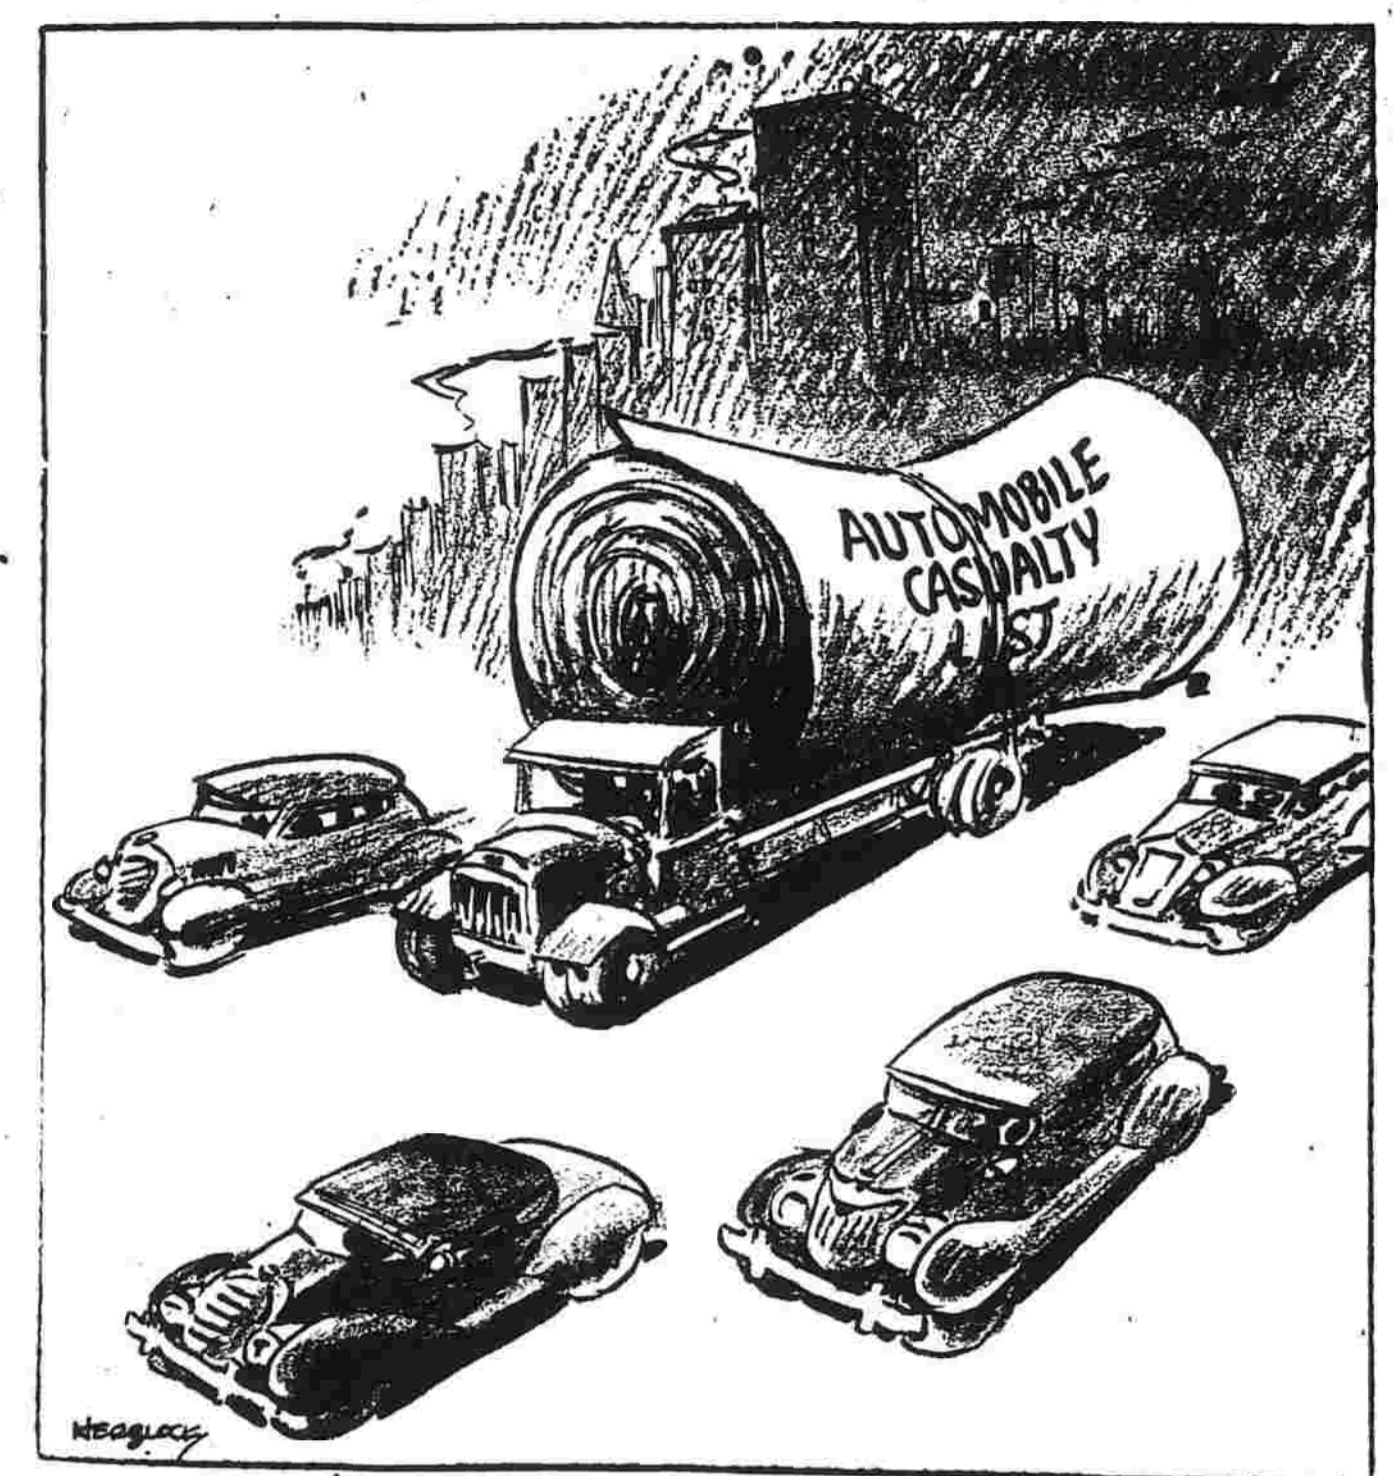

Healthy kidneys are well able to do their work without breaking down, but when the kidneys become diseased, in every case this is due to the fact that the patient has lived in such a way that the blood has become loaded with impurities and poisons. The kidneys will try to cleanse the blood as long as possible, but after many years of such overwork, they will often break down.

The most important causes of nephritis are:

First: Over-eating of all kinds of food.

Second: Excession or weakness

Something Else To Be Streamlined

brought on by overwork or destructive habits of thought.

Third: The use of an excess of sugars and starches in the diet.

Fourth: The use of wrong food combinations.

Fifth: Lack of sufficient exercise which will enable the body to take care of a normal amount of food.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question: J. O. W., Newark, N. J. "I want you to know that I am no coward, but if I walk over a high bridge or drive an automobile near the edge of a steep place, or even if I see in a movie picture of someone falling from a high place, I have a strong fear. In fact, it is all I can do to keep from jumping over the cliff if I stand on the edge of it."

Answer: I realize that to you your fear is very serious one, and I want you to know that many people suffer from exactly the same sort of dread. The causes of such fear reaction are usually quite complicated, and the first step in developing such a fear is some unpleasant happening or strain usually taking place in childhood which aroused extreme fear at that time. In my own experience, I have found that a fear of high places usually begins early in childhood and results from a child becoming frightened while at the edge of a cliff or on a building of considerable height from the ground. It is usually possible for the patient to overcome these fears or phobias, and I suggest that you write to me again giving your full name and also your street address so that I can send you a letter on the subject.

(Gottler)

Question: From Cleveland, Ohio, Mr. F. writes: "My wife has got fatter, or so the doctor says. Could you send me any helpful instructions for her?"

Answer: Since your doctor has strongly suggest that she should be put on a diet, I will write to you on this subject. Will you please accompany your letter with a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope?

(Gall Bladder Trouble and Gotter)

Question: From Phoenix, Ariz. "My doctor advises me that I have gall bladder trouble and also gotter. Which disease do you think that I should be treating first?"

Answer: Since both gall bladder disorder and gotter are often overcome through the use of a fasting regimen, I suggest that you follow the directions given in The Cleanse Diet, as these should prove helpful in your case. I believe that the regime diet would benefit both conditions. I am very sorry that you do not send me your name and address as this prevents me from forwarding you some helpful material immediately. If you will write to me again in care of the nearest newspaper running my health articles and follow the directions given or questions and answers as given at the heading or end of today's article, I will be glad to send you this information. At the time that you write, will you please enclose one large, self-addressed envelope and fee in stamps?

(Underweight or Overweight)

Question: From Sacramento, Calif. "We are having a discussion in our family as to which is better, to be underweight or overweight."

Answer: As a general rule, I suggest that the patient build up the weight to what is normal for him or her. In this way the dangers incident to both underweight and overweight are avoided. In deciding what is the normal weight for any given person, it is necessary to know something about the body framework of the body as naturally the person with a tendency to large bones should weigh a little more than a person of the same height with small bones. Instead of arguing about it, I would advise that each of you try to build your weight up to the approximate normal to fit your individual case as in this way I am sure that you will achieve maximum health.

Airmail Tonic Is Given to Groggy Army

Ballitt Gets Coincidence Shown in Budget Boss Clings to His 'Old Gray Fedora'

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 Herald Washington Correspondent

Washington, March 6.—President Roosevelt's transfer of the airmail to the army came just in time to save the general staff from committing hard-knock.

The general staff barely had survived the White House Army-Navy reception. They don't feel exactly at home in the White House, anyway.

First, there's ex-Assistant Secretary F. D. Roosevelt's fond partiality for the navy. Then there was Mrs. Roosevelt's public disapproval of toy soldiers for children at Christmas time.

And the occasion when a singer at a White House affair who was to have sung "Oh, I Wish I Were a Captain" in uniform was asked to sing "Oh, I Wish I Were a Drum Major" and forgot the uniform.

On the other 364 nights of the year the army and navy, always hostile to each other, maintain their separate social cliques. Generally speaking, they never invite anyone to their parties and no one else invites them.

Odds and Ends

Ambassador Bill Bullitt, when not in or en route to Russia, has occupied the same State Department office in which, two months after the Russian revolution of 1917, he wrote a memorandum to President Wilson urging Soviet recognition. An even stranger coincidence came when, on his recent previous visit to Moscow as ambassador, he was given exactly the same hotel room which he had occupied there in 1914, just before the war. And his daughter Anne happened to occupy the room Bullitt's mother had had at that time.

Budget Director Lew Douglas still wears the gray fedora hat in which he came to Congress from Arizona seven years ago. No one can kid him into changing it.

What Will Rogers said to Alice Longworth: "Hello, Alice, I understand you are getting fat. It must be the Democratic administration, agreeing with you."

ANTI-NAZI 'GAGS' PLUS WHISPERS PLAGUE HITLER

Berlin (AP)—A persistent "whispering" campaign against the Nazi regime has the National Socialist leaders visibly nettled.

"Reactionaries attempting to sabotage the government" are held responsible by Nazi speakers and editorial writers.

Watch Official Ante-Rooms But jokes and stories and rumors about this and that persist.

With the Socialist and Communist party organizations wiped out, the search for the invisible "enemies of state" is being carried into circles close to the federal government.

The organ of the agricultural ministry warns the public against lending an ear to "false prophets who don't sheepskins but in reality are camouflaged moles."

"These reactionaries are to be found waiting in the ante-chambers—from early morning till late at night. Thrown out of the front door they sneak in through the back. Exactly that happened for 14 years under the old system. You can see the same old faces in the ministerial reception rooms, as in the past."

The Essen "National Zeitung," newspaper organ of General Hermann Goering, Prussian premier and chief of the Prussian secret police, considers the province of Pomerania one of the strongholds of the "reactionaries." It relates: "Some jumpers out hunting there named the rabbits they were tracking down after leaders of our movement and almost split their sides over the contemptible jokes."

Hitler warns "chiselers" Wilhelm Frick, Reich minister of the interior, recently warned the Royalists against attempts to "snuggle into the bed that Adolf Hitler had prepared."

Hitler himself has announced a campaign against "chiselers" for 1934.

TRI-PARTY PACT GAINS SUPPORT IN SCANDINAVIA

Copenhagen (AP)—Anti-parliamentary moves in Europe and proposals for reforming the League of Nations have brought new thoughts of a Swedish-Norwegian-Danish entente.

The most concrete proposal has been advanced by Prof. Bertil Ohlin, Swedish economist and one-time lecturer at Yale University, who urges a tariff union and a defensive military alliance.

Prime Ministers Talk

While his proposal has opened a widespread discussion, official comment has been guarded.

"I always have wished the greatest economic co-operation between the Scandinavian nations," said Theodore Stauning, the Danish prime minister, "but am skeptical regarding a military alliance."

Per Albin Hansson, Swedish premier, said:

"Time invites extended co-operation between the northern peoples. I agree with Stauning's comments on economic co-operation, though a defensive military pact, in my opinion, is inexpedient."

It is to the continued existence of the League of Nations, with a change towards increased strength that most Scandinavians look.

Denmark, strategically located for commercial life but in a bad position in any conflict between European powers, sees the league as the one bulwark against foreign aggression.

Denmark Looks Ahead

Germany's resignation from the League was looked upon here as little short of a catastrophe. Acceptance by Denmark of the northern part of Schleswig-Holstein after the world war created a situation now seen as dangerous.

Many influential Danes harbor the opinion that economic and political developments may some day put before Denmark the choice of becoming either a member of the British empire or a part of the reich.

IN NEW YORK

A BOOK A DAY

THIS NOVEL HAS NO HERO AND NO PLOT

"Passion's Pilgrims" Is Great Portrait of Pre-War Paris

"Passion's Pilgrims," by Jules Romains, is the second volume in that monumental novel, "Men of Good Will"; and although the word "great" gets tossed around these days like a zelt barrel in a Japanese juggling act, it is hard to keep from saying that this is truly a great piece of work.

We have here a novel without a hero and without a plot in any ordinary sense of those words. The scene is the Paris of 1908; the characters are a vast collection of Parisians, chosen, apparently, at random.

The only unifying force in the whole book is Paris itself! The paths of many of the people in the book never cross the incidents described have no connection with one another. Only the city itself serves to integrate the story.

And what a story—our collection of stories—it is! We see students grappling with the intellectual and emotional problems of youth, politicians neck-deep in the tangle of the pre-war world, radicals planning for the revolution, rich men extending their business, policemen and demi-mondaines and truck drivers and shopkeepers, all tossed together into one gigantic panorama.

Strangely enough there is no conclusion. Each character is distinctive and memorable; each of the countless sub-plots sticks in the reader's mind.

And from it all there emerges an incomparable portrait of Paris, a microcosm of the Europe that drifted into war and disaster.

It should be added, perhaps, that although this is the second volume in a series, you need not have read the first book to enjoy it.

Published by Knopf, "Passion's Pilgrims" retails at $2.50.

INDIAN WINTER VILLAGE FOUND

Mathias Spiess Discovers Camp Site of Podunk Tribe in South Windsor.

An Indian village site has been found on what is known among older people as the Samuel T. Avery farm on Avery street, just north of the Manchester boundary line in the township of South Windsor, according to Mathias Spiess, widely known local authority on Indian lore. The farm is now owned by Shea brothers.

A few years ago a large soapstone water food on this site by J. W. Watson of Horan street, town, and was given to the late William Buckland, whose hobby it was to collect Indian relics. The stone pot had a small piece broken off and Mr. Buckland spent many days seeking the missing piece but was unsuccessful in finding it, Mr. Spiess says.

Mr. Spiess said that he found, on the west side of the promontory upon which the Indians had their village, and where the plowshare had not disturbed the ground, three campfire places paved with cobble stones. On the south side of the hill are the stone foundations of a large oblong wigwam and possibly storehouses.

Mr. Spiess says that it was a Podunk winter village and that the tribal spring close by is still bubbling. Traces of many campfire places can be seen but so far only a few have been found undisturbed by Mr. Spiess.

Mr. Spiess has written a book "Story of Wampanoag" or "The Life of an Indian Princess of Connecticut," which has been accepted by a Boston publisher and will be published in book form in the near future. The book alludes to the Squaw Cave at Bolton Notch and is a title of truth based on historical facts unearthed by Mr. Spiess.

NEW HAVEN ROAD LEADS IN EQUIPMENT BUYING

Added 73 Coaches and Trucks for Passenger and Freight Work During 1928.

Pursuing the New Haven Railroad policy of constantly improving service as a means of competing more adequately with other forms of transportation which have made inroads into its revenues during the past decade, the New England Transportation Company, the New Haven's highway subsidiary, placed more orders for new motor vehicles last year than any other railroad or railroad subsidiary in the country. The total number of motor vehicles purchased by the New England Transportation Company in 1928 was 73. Of these, 62 were put into passenger service and 11 into freight service. In addition, the railroad itself bought four automobiles for use in the conduct of company business.

The new passenger service units consisted of 38 motor coaches, 20 of them city type and 18 parlor type, and 24 seven-passenger sedans. The motor coaches have been put into general use to improve highway service throughout the company's territory, while the new sedans have been used to widen a recently inaugurated special type of service on some of the shorter lines where frequent schedules for a relatively small number of passengers are required.

For extending the freight service which it renders in co-ordination with the rail lines, the New England Transportation Company purchased ten three-ton trucks and one five-ton truck. These trucks enable further expanding of the service commenced two years ago, in which motor transportation on a short haul basis is used to "feed" freight to the rail lines, either by carrying it from the shipper to boat trains or to trains connecting with such fast freight trains as the "Speed Witch" and the "Maine Bullet". The motor trucks are a vital element in carrying out the New Haven's freight slogan "Accept today, deliver tomorrow," which applies to practically all points on the system and as far south as Baltimore, Md.

With last year's purchases, the total number of motor vehicles operated by the New England Transportation Company is now 585.

Next in line in the ordering of new motor vehicles last year came the Pacific Greyhound Lines with the purchasing of 38 new motor coaches. The Reading Railroad acquired 16 motors, mostly trucks and semi-trailers. Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines bought 15 coaches and the New York Central an equal number of trucks and trailers. The Boston & Maine added a dozen coaches and trucks.

BEGIN ALTERATIONS AT LOCAL POLICE STATION

Today's police court session was held in the selectmen's rooms in the municipal building, and sessions in the future will be held there until the alterations in the police station and police court building started yesterday, are completed.

The changes are such that the room where the police court is usually held is now littered with brick dust and cement, while the chairs and desks have been placed in one corner while the work is being done.

The workmen yesterday started on the third floor. The brick wall between the police court room and the police station and the vault will be pulled out. The walls are five feet thick and there will be thousands of bricks removed.

The building was erected in 1895 by Charles O. Treat and at the time of construction cost the town $13,000. But to erect a building with as many bricks as used in the old structure, the installation of the two vaults and the general sturdy construction of the building would today cost much more money.

The present vaults take up too much room and when they have been pulled out there will be three additional rooms that can be used.

Boats Damaged The Albany-Rensselaer ice jam began Sunday when ice from the Mohawk and other streams and the upper reaches of the Hudson surged against the Madison Lane bridge, causing thousands of dollars damage to small boats and yachts stored in the basin.

Some Autos Marooned The water reached within a few feet of the new post office at Albany and more than a score of automobiles were marooned by the flood back of the Union station as the water came over the Delaware and Hudson tracks.

At Rensselaer the water crept over the docks and into the streets at the river's edge.

Rowboats were used to ferry merchandise from the warehouses of the Hudson river night line at Albany.

At Troy merchants on streets adjoining the river were warned by police to move their stocks to higher levels.

Estelle said rather shyly as she stepped to the dock, "I think you run this boat better."

"You are very kind," Pablito answered in an undertone that was a little rough.

"Come along, child," he said a trifle shortly. His women must not forget their social plane.

"I'm going to town," he stated and stood up. Pablito wondered what had made Noyes decide to go to town.

"Damn!" Noyes murmured, polishing his way toward the tracks which he would follow toward the mainland and town.

"Is it fair?" he demanded even more loudly. Then, shame-faced, he pulled the flat boat high on a sandy beach.

"I've been nervous-oddy nervous this season," Noyes went on.

"Everyone," he continued, "has these moments of feeling an impending doom. They may be caused by a sluggish liver or an underdone pork chop but one always thinks this particular mood may be a premonition of what is to happen some hour next week."

"We've done well this season," Pablito said slowly.

"Without you I would have had nothing," Pablito said and then he went into the shack to set a pot of water on the stove.

"Give us a hand, will you?" Engine trouble!" Noyes called over his shoulder, "Pablito!"

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

Accurate measurements and precision of procedure will result in perfect pastry every time. If you follow the rules your pies will be the melt-in-the-mouth, tender, flaky kind that every man smacks his lips over.

Plain Pie Crust One and one-half cups flour, 8 tablespoons shortening, 3 to 4 teaspoons cold water, 1-2 teaspoon salt.

A good bread or all-purpose flour makes a flakier crust than pastry flour. Pastry flour makes a crumbly, tender crust.

Add Water Carefully The addition of water is another ticklish point. Too much water makes a heavy, tough dough.

When the pastry is rolled, roll away from the center and lift the rolling pin at the edge of the sheet each time. Make the pastry one-eighth inch thick.

Pre-heat the oven to 450 degrees F. and bake the pie at this temperature for ten minutes. Then reduce the heat to 400 degrees F. and finish baking.

We might just as well try to stop the "carrying a torch" for her I next month from coming as to get Billy to drop his "Oh gee's" and "Oh, boy," and "You bet."

Of course we may be able to cut the average in two and reduce his expletives to two a minute instead of ten, but it is as natural for a spirited boy to use slang as it is for him to breathe.

My greatest objection to slang is not its vulgarity, but its tendency to crowd out real English. If any one ever says to me again, "It's up to you," I'll croak.

Plurk men have not changed since the early spring days when Eve plucked plums and grapes for Adam. They still are searching for wives who can cook?

At least, this is the consensus of the fraternity men at New York University, who insist that they are searching for girls who can cook.

Of course we hate to admit that there was anything to that old adage which advised that the quickest way to a man's heart lies through his alimentary canal.

There is a play on Broadway, called "The Green Bay Tree," in which two men who have made their lives peculiarly devoid of women, as some men do, still hunger for the touches that women bring into a home.

SENSE and NONSENSE

The Buffings of Fate
"Then take this money for the bitterest cup—
There is no failure, save in giving up;
No real fall so long as some one tries.
For seeming setbacks make the strong man wise.
There's no defeat, in truth, save from within,
Unless you're beaten there, you're bound to win."

Mother—I won't have you dancing until 12 o'clock. At your age I had to be in bed at 9 o'clock.
Daughter—Then you must have had a narrow mind and father.
Mother (annoyed)—I had a better mother than you have, anyway!

A man's conscience is like his appendix. They're both useless, and neither one ever seems to bother him much.

Man—Do you spend your time with puzzles?
Neighbor—No. Only with the one I married.

Correct This Sentence: "Sister married the rat," said he, "so we all treat him nice for her sake."

No man is fit to marry a perfect woman, but fortunately few have to do it.

Negro Undertaker (over telephone)—Sambo, your mother-in-law just died.
Sambo—Is you sure, "bout dat?
Negro Undertaker—Shall I bury her or embalm her?
Sambo—Don't let's take no chances, brother! Cremate her!

A woman went to the bank to cash a check.

Teller—Just endorse it, please.
Woman—I don't seem to understand. You see, my husband is away and sent this to me. He always takes care of these things.
Teller—That's all right. Just sign your name exactly as you would your letters and I'll give you the money.
Woman—I think I understand. So she carefully wrote on the back of the check: "Your loving Jane."

The school teacher was giving her class of young pupils a test on a recent natural history lesson.
Teacher—Now, Junior, tell me where the elephant is found?
Junior (after hesitating)—The elephant, teacher, is such a big animal it is scarcely ever lost.

Joe—Darn that guy Jones. He's owed me $10 for two years.
Friend—Can't you get it out of him?
Joe—Not a cent. But that's not the worst of it. I heard that he had opened a debt collecting agency, so I wrote to him and asked him to collect my $10.
Friend—What happened?
Joe—He wrote back that all efforts to collect had failed. And then he billed me a fee of $2.
