SEEKS AGREEMENT ON RAIL PROBLEM

Gen. Johnson Wants Further Cut in Hours — Owners Making Stiff Protest.

Washington, March 16.—(AP)—Responding to insistent demands by certain groups of railroad labor for benefits under NRA, Hugh S. Johnson again has approached railroad executives with a proposal for discussing a minimum wage and further limitation on work hours.

This was made known today while representatives of railway labor and the managements deliberated on whether to agree to a request by President Roosevelt that nothing be done now toward changing the basic pay of the employees.

Railway managers have proposed that the present ten percent slash be continued until April 30, 1935. Previously they had suggested an additional five percent cut. There were strong indications the President's request would be granted.

BROADER POWERS FOR RFC SOUGHT

Jesse Jones Wants It to Engage in General Banking Business—His Plan.

Washington, March 16.—(AP)—Unprecedented power to engage in a general banking business, heretofore confined to private banks, was sought today by the Reconstruction Corporation.

Jesse J. Jones, chairman of the corporation will be called before the Senate banking committee tomorrow to explain the necessity for the legislation just submitted on behalf of the R. F. C. board. Under the corporation could loan direct to industry.

Long a critic of the lending policy of private banks, Jones is expected to urge the measure as a means of providing sufficient credit for industrial recovery.

Broaders Powers
The proposed power would be conferred under the broad terms of a bill drafted by the R. F. C., which would also grant authority for financing foreign trade and extend the corporation's functions in other directions.

Whether the bill had the approval of President Roosevelt was not immediately disclosed, but many argued the Chief Executive must at least have known of the proposal.

Could Make Loans
If this banking system is completed, he said, "it would not be necessary for the R. F. C. to make such loans; but they could be in a position to do so if desirable."

The R. F. C. bill would authorize loans up to five years to industrial and commercial concerns "to enable such business to obtain working capital, reduce its outstanding indebtedness, or make plant improvements or replacements."

MOTHER, CHILDREN DROWNED IN AUTO

Three Die When Car Leaves Road After Crash and Plunges Into River.

North Wilbraham, Mass., March 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Edward T. Crimmins of Ware road, Palmer, sister-in-law of Police Chief Timothy J. Crimmins of Palmer, and her two daughters, Miss Alice M. Crimmins and Miss Ellen Crimmins, were drowned when their automobile left the highway after a collision with another car late last night, rolled over upon the ice of the Chicopee river, which skirts the road at the point of the accident, and broke through about 75 feet from shore, plunging into 12 feet of water.

Despite efforts of police, firemen and others, working under the glare of automobile headlights and with all emergency equipment that could be mustered, the car was not brought to shore until 5:15 o'clock this morning, when the bodies of the three women were found in it.

The cause of the accident was a collision of the Crimmins car with one driven by Nazaire J. Forcier of Chicopee Falls, which witnesses said, was being driven along the Boston Post Road at a considerable speed.

So thick was the ice on the river that dynamite was used by the state police to blast a channel through which the car was dragged to shore by the use of a winch of the Central Massachusetts Power Company.

Here's Picture First Lady Asked To Be Taken

When Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, during her study of conditions in Puerto Rico, came across this scene of squalor, she urged the photographer to take a picture "to show really what it is like." Clad in white, the First Lady is here shown surrounded by the awe-struck natives.

MORE JOBS, MORE SALES, LESS GAIN, UNDER NRA

That Is Result of Survey Made in New England — Plea Made to Revise the Securities Act.

Hartford, March 16.—(AP)—The NRA has worked both to the social and material advantage of New England. State Senator Henry Parkman Jr., of Boston, Mass., today told the New England Council.

His address came at the closing session of the 34th quarterly meeting of the organization of New England Businessmen, at which a report of the effect of the NRA on the small industries of New England was presented, showing more jobs and more sales, but less profits.

"The elimination of cut-throat competition," Senator Parkman said, "and the establishment of minimum conditions of labor by the NRA constitute not only a definite advance on general social lines, but a very distinct and material advantage to the New England states."

A change in the Securities Act of 1933 was urged by Henry D. Sharpe of Providence, R. I., president of the council, as he opened the morning session with the report of a survey of the effects of the Securities Act on New England business.

Results of Survey
"The results of our inquiry are conclusive," Sharpe said, "and will leave no doubt in the minds of any fair-minded man as to the situation that has been created, and the need for a remedy."

Three major findings from the survey were presented: 1.—That the stringent requirements of the Securities Act of 1933 have retarded some New England corporations from issuing securities to provide needed capital.

2.—That future issuance of securities will be curtailed because of the unwillingness of directors to assume unpredictable liabilities which might arise under the act. 3.—That the act is largely responsible for the shortage of securities suitable for purchase by institutional investors of New England, such as life insurance companies and mutual savings banks.

A net gain both in industrial plants and numbers of employees in New England was reported by John F. Tinsley of Worcester, Mass.

LINDY CALLS ACTION ON AIR MAIL UNJUST

Insull Is Located On Greek Freighter
Tells Senators Contracts Should Not Have Been Cancelled Without a Trial — If Old Companies Are Not Allowed to Bid, He Says, It Will Take Two Years to Restore Service.

Athens, March 16.—(AP)—Samuel Insull, Sr., who was located early today aboard the Greek freighter Malotis, will be expelled directly to the United States, the Greek government has been told.

Angry because of his coup in attempting to sneak away from Greece, the government has decided to return Insull to America, where he will face charges of embezzlement and larceny.

Athens, March 16.—(AP)—Samuel Insull Sr., Chicago fugitive, was definitely located today aboard the Greek freighter Malotis and will be returned to Greek jurisdiction, the ministry of marine announced.

It was said that Insull paid $10,000 to charter the Malotis and that it sailed at 4 p. m. Wednesday. Previously, authorities had indicated they believed Insull fled from his home and Greek jurisdiction early Thursday morning.

The ministry of marine announced he believed to have marked the close of one of the most widespread police searches in the history of the nation.

Admiral Hadjikyriakos, minister of marine, said the master of the Malotis had replied by wireless to (Continued on Page Fourteen)

THINK DILLINGER'S PAL IS CAUGHT IN MICHIGAN

Negro Shot Down by Sheriff's Officers Believed to Be Herbert Youngblood Who Flew with Desperado.

Port Huron, Mich., March 16.—(AP)—A negro who said he was Herbert Youngblood, companion of John Dillinger, notorious outlaw, in his escape from the Crown Point, Ind., jail two weeks ago, was shot down in a battle with sheriff's officers this morning, and officers armed with machine guns were combing the vicinity for Dillinger, who he said had been with him.

The negro is about 35 years old and is believed to be near death. He was nearly unconscious when he gasped out the information that sent all available officers into the manhunt for the desperado who had been the object of a nation-wide search since he fled from the Crown Point jail with an imitation pistol carved from a broom handle, and fled.

The officers were attempting to get from Crown Point definite information to clinch their identification of Youngblood.

Police Get Tip
Four officers, led by Sheriff William L. van Antwerp, went to a store in the negro section of South Port Huron, on a tip that a negro carrying a gun and boasting of a jail escape was there.

The negro suspect met them at the door, gave another name, and when the officers sought to enter, opened fire.

The officers returned the fire, and the suspect fell with a wound near the heart and three bullets in the abdomen.

Officers Shot
Undersheriff Charles Cavanaugh and Deputy Howard Lohr also fell, with serious wounds. Sheriff van Antwerp was wounded in the arm, but deputy Ferris Lucas escaped injury in the hall of lead.

FLAMES DESTROY HOLYOKE CHURCH

St. Jerome's Wrecked With Loss of $125,000—All Firemen Called Out.

Holyoke, Mass., March 16.—(AP)—St. Jerome's Roman Catholic church was completely destroyed by fire here early this morning.

The church was the mother church of the Springfield Diocese and was 75 years old.

It housed many valuable religious articles, including a $10,000 diamond and gold chalice and paten. All were believed to have been lost.

All Apparatus Out
Loss was estimated at about $125,000.

All available apparatus in the city was called out, and all firemen off duty were summoned from their homes.

The fire was the worst, and most spectacular in this city in many years. As the fire swept to its height the church resembled a gigantic bonfire, with flames leaping 100 feet into the air.

The fire was visible for many miles around and attracted a huge crowd. All available police in the city were available to handle the throng.

Dead Dogs Brought Back To Life, but Die Again

Berkeley, Calif., March 16.—(AP)—Two dead dogs brought back to life by the magic of science gave a doctor hope today that human life may be restored.

Not that the goal is immediately in sight. The operation was a partial success but the two dogs died all over again.

Dr. Robert H. Cornish, biologist of the University of California, directed the experiments yesterday. The dogs were asphyxiated with nitrogen gas and pronounced dead.

Then injections of adrenalin, heparin and oxygen were administered, combined with a "teeter totter" device, to restore the circulation of the blood. The doctor said that heart action and respiration were restored. One dog, a fox terrier, lived again for four hours. Another, also a terrier, came back for five hours.

The trouble with the dogs, Dr. Cornish said, was that on their return journey they didn't seem to take any interest in things. Neither appeared to regain consciousness.

EGAN STANDS PAT ON STRIKE NOTICE

State Labor Leader Says He Will Go Ahead With Present Plans.

Bridgeport, March 16.—(AP)—Replying to the statement of Governor Cross yesterday, asking for industrial peace and asking labor to ignore strike advocates, John J. Egan, secretary of the State Federation of Labor, who plans to call strikes wherever code violations are found, said today:

"Kent Hubbard must be scared to death."

"I'm afraid, too, that the governor has missed the point. I'm going to declare strikes where there are violations—and there are plenty, everywhere in the state. The governor admits that there are violations now and that there will continue to be violations when he points out that machinery has been set up for conciliation between employer and employee."

"As far as strikes hurting earning power, I can assure the governor that it's the custom of the union organization in this state to collect back wages and that we've done just that in countless cases."

"I can assure the governor, too, that in the rare cases where a man does lose a few days' pay owing a strike, he goes back at the increased wage that piles up a pretty good profit for years on the investment of that few days pay."

"I've been expecting that sort of (Continued on Page Fourteen)

NEGROES EXECUTED; GUARDS COW MOBS

Two Hundred Soldiers Guard Jail as Three Youths Meet Their Doom.

Hernando, Miss., March 16.—(AP)—Three young Memphis negroes died on the gallows here early today for a criminal assault on a 17 year old Holly Springs, Miss., school girl.

Two hundred steel helmeted National Guardsmen, who rushed the negroes here from the Hinds county jail at Jackson, Miss., surrounded the jail to hold back a huge throng of Hernando residents, and citizens, from surrounding counties, as Johnny Jones, Ernest McGehee and Isaac Howard were executed.

Jones and McGehee, the first to die, went to their deaths singing religious songs, but Howard did not utter a word.

Father a Witness
The hanging was witnessed by Clyde Collins of Holly Springs, father of the attack victim. A bill which would have permitted him to spring the trap was killed by a House committee after being passed by the Senate.

Sheriff Roscoe Lauderdale acted as executioner.

Despite the secrecy surrounding the plans of National Guardsmen, a large crowd was in Hernando when the negroes were brought in by highway. The Guardsmen and their prisoners traveled by bus and automobile.

Issue Warning
"Tell the other colored boys to behave themselves, and not get into a mess such as we are in," McGehee said, before going to his doom.

Howard went to the trap at 4:28 a. m., and was pronounced dead at 4:43. McGehee followed him at 4:58 and was dead at 5:13. Jones entered the trap at 5:25 and was dead 15 minutes later.

SAYS BIG DEALERS IN MILK UNFAIR

Former Clerk of State Board Declares There Is Big Profits in Buying Surplus.

Hartford, March 16.—(AP)—A flurry was caused this morning on the fourth day of the Superior Court battle of the Milk Producers' Densers' Association against the State Board of Milk Control, when the plaintiff's attorney, Hugh M. Alcorn, called to the stand Francis H. Adams, who until recently was chief clerk of the state board.

Mr. Adams told the court that a great many of the big dealers were unfair, and charged that Chairman Charles G. Morris of the board failed to act on his suggestion that the dealers' reports to the board on consumption

STRIKE IS ENDED AT SOMERSVILLE

Workers Go Back at Increased Wages in Textile Plant; Out Since Feb. 19.

Somersville, March 16.—(AP)—The strike of the 350 employees of the Somersville Manufacturing Company's textile mill, which began February 19, came to an end today when such employees as the company could use returned to work. Others will be taken on from time to time as needed until all are re-employed.

The strike was ended by acceptance yesterday by the employees of a second offer of wage adjustment by the company, by which employees in general will receive an advance of 12 1/2 per cent, and automatic weavers 15 per cent.

Announcement of the settlement served to halt abruptly the trial of eight employees who had been charged with disturbance and other minor offenses growing out of the strike and it is believed, likely that these cases will be dropped. A hearing scheduled in Hartford on the application of the company for an injunction restraining picketing also has been withdrawn, it was announced.

Big Crowd Present
A crowd packed the big majority caucus room in the Senate office building to hear the fire. Most of the spectators were women.

Upon arrival of the fire on the dot of 10:30 a. m., the spectators applauded loudly.

Wearing a gray suit and with his hands in his pockets, he shook hands with committee members, smiling.

"I told to give his views in his own way, the aviator had explained that he brought no prepared statement. McKellar remarked that invalidation of the contracts was a fact, and said the present question was to substitute for them."

Senator Barbour (R., N. J.) brought up that section of the bill prohibiting contractors whose contracts were annulled from bidding on new contracts unless they waived any claims against the government.

Lindbergh called that clause the most "unjust section ever placed into American legislation."

Lindbergh, questioned by McKellar as to his financial connections with air companies, said he received $8,000 a year from Transcontinental and Western Air up to the first of this month and $10,000 a year from Pan American Airways.

Barbour suggested Lindbergh could have received much more in other fields, because of his ability and popularity.

"I felt more interested in aviation," the colonel replied promptly. McKellar asked the extent of his holdings of stock. Lindbergh said he didn't recall, but they were all listed in replies to a questionnaire from the Black committee.

McKellar asked if he knew anything about the events leading up to the cancellation of the contracts.

"Very little," he said. "Did you attend any meetings?"

"No sir."

That was our understanding. Now if these contracts were honest you are for them and if they are not you would not endorse them?"

"I feel," Lindy said, "these com- (Continued on Page Three)

RESOLUTIONS

MANCHESTER GREEN BOY SCOUTS TROOP NO. 8

Resolution on the death of our instructor and friend, Bennett H. Spencer.

Bennett H. Spencer has passed from the sight of mortal man to the Great Scout Troop etc. in the Green. As a friend and helper of our Scout Troop he treasured the Scout teachings in a faithful breast, in a true and manly manner and faithfulness to our Scout Troop won for him our esteem and admiration.

As a neighbor, his kindly and sympathetic nature led him to be always ready to help in any way he could by stretching out his hand to assist the distressed and unfortunate. An industrious clean living God fearing man, he has gone before. As an instructor for Scouts he was well trained in the use of the several implements which comprise the working tools of a trained Scout. They also continually reminded him of his duties to God, his neighbor, his family and himself. His work was always well done.

The Scouts of Manchester Green, his neighbors and many admirers of his district greatly mourn the untimely death of so true a friend and as good a citizen as Bennett H. Spencer.

We, therefore, ask that the sympathy of this Scout Troop be conveyed to the widow and family of our friend, committing them in this hour of their bereavement to the kindly consolations of that Great Scout Master in the use of all that we will.

We recommend that these resolutions be placed on our records, be printed in the Manchester Evening Herald, also, a copy be delivered by the committee to the widow of our late friend.

Respectfully submitted,

ARVID H. SEABURG, JR.
GERALD CLARK
ELTON L. CLARK

MOTHER STOPS DOCTORS FROM VACCINATING CHILD

Is Taken to Court and Fined — Says One Daughter Nearly Died After Treatment.

Greenwich, March 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Maria J. Braucht, Bankville, Greenwich, charged on five counts with failure to send her eight year old daughter Alice to the Haverly school here after refusing to have the child vaccinated, was fined $5 and costs on each count today, but the fines were suspended on condition she pay the costs.

Similar charges against Harvey Braucht, her husband, were dismissed when the court held the child's mother solely responsible in the case.

Judge William P. Murville presided and William L. Larnach of West Haven prosecuting agent for the state board of education, presented the people's case. Mrs. Braucht appeared as her own attorney.

"Life is blood," she told the court, "and I am standing before God as well as this court. No one living in this land of liberty should take life blood."

"Vaccination was all right in the dark ages, but that was before sanitary laws were passed."

Mrs. Braucht is the mother of five girls, one of which she said nearly died after having been vaccinated.

U. S. TRADE IN FRANCE GIVEN ANOTHER BLOW

Paris, March 16.—(AP)—American trade was given another blow today when Premier Gaston Doumergue in the first use of his tariff decree powers doubled the duty on certain products.

Although aimed chiefly at Germany, the decree affects United States metal working machinery, automobile horns and a few other items.

Free use of the decree both on imports and in government economies is expected soon, as Parliament adjourns shortly, possibly tonight.

Meanwhile, stimulation of the "double taxation" system on American firms in France was likely to be achieved finally after two years of delay.

A bill to ratify the convention signed by former United States Ambassador Walter Edge and former Premier Andre Tardieu was presented the Chamber by the government and approval was expected.

Under the tax system, American firms here paid both domestic taxes on income and special taxes assessed on foreign firms.

MIDDLETOWN FACTORY HIRES 400 NEW HANDS

Middletown, March 16.—(AP)—The Remington-Union Typewriter Company, a division of Remington Rand, Inc., will employ 400 additional hands as a result of production schedules having been doubled.

Between 100 and 200 new workers signed up yesterday and still others were taken on today. Beginning Monday the plant will operate on a forty-hour a week basis under the office equipment code, operating in three eight-hour shifts.

Demand for a new typewriter model was given by company officials as the reason for increased production.

The company employed 1,200 before the latest move to add to the payroll.

MORSE PUT TO PLEA

New York, March 16.—(AP)—Arthur W. Morse, Wall street broker, today pleaded not guilty to an indictment charging first degree murder in the death of Mrs. Edna Field Leavitt, of Brookline, Mass.

The indictment charged that the woman died from injuries suffered in a beating administered by Morse in his apartment at 7 MacDougal alley, Greenwich Village.

Judge John J. Freschi, in General Sessions Court, committed Morse to Tombs prison and granted his counsel ten days in which to make motions.

THE BARGAIN HOUND

Hail the Bon Ton Imp! It's the snuggest fitting two way stretch imaginable. For $1.50 you're guaranteed one of those "smooth finishes" that fashion absolutely insists upon. You'll find the Imp at the new corset department at Rubinow's.

Feminine Hollywood's latest fad is the individual signature embroidered upon all items of lingerie including handkerchiefs. Whether this is to eliminate laundry losses or an entirely decorative gesture is not revealed.

You'll be amazed how long and well the Norton Shoe stockings wear. They are only 59 cents and you may have your choice in various shades of chiffon or semi-service.

Easter coats swing into the fashion parade. Or else they strut, or swagger with studied nonchalance.

You look as if you'd narrowly escaped being blown to bits by a hurricane, which got you either going or coming. Thus collar juts forward, reverses ripple around your chest, belt is across the front with bunches of fabric gathered under it, or the reverse.

If it's a swagger coat you want, you'll wear raglan sleeves, stick your hands in wide, patch pockets and be a perfect picture of carefree, careless grooming. Or a plain, tailored, double-breasted model may tempt you.

Fresh rhubarb! Doesn't it just make your mouth water?... A rhubarb pie—now there's something new to serve on your Sunday menu. You can get it at Garrone's—2 pounds for 35 cents.

If you must have a collarless coat see that it has wide, rippling coats. These give you a chance to go in for gay scarves in plaid or solid flamboyant shades of red, green, blue, orange and yellow. As a matter of fact, scarves are important. Wear one with suit or dress and particularly with a new spring coat.

You'll bless me for telling you about the hats I found at the Vogue Shop—little top knot affairs that just tempt the wind, sleek fitting afternoon straws—you're sure to find your type here.

Banton, Hollywood stylist, advises all women who strive for chic not to avoid the romantic and period effects of the new hats, or to be shy from the theatrical results.

No need to tell you how good Birdseye products are—you that have had them know, and surely the rest of you have heard about them. Pinehurst has broccoli 23 cents, peas 24 cents, whole strawberries 19 cents. If you prefer sliced strawberries you may have some at 27 cents.

Here's a new meat dish for you—Liver Patties.

1 lb. beef liver
1 teaspoon Rumford Baking Powder
1 cup bread crumbs
Salt and pepper
Tomato puree

Method: Drop the liver into boiling water to which a little Rumford Baking Powder has been added, and set it at the back of the stove, or over a low flame, for about five minutes. This will take away some of the rather pronounced flavor of the beef liver and make it much more tender. Remove the liver from the water, cool and cut off all the skin and tough portions. Put through the meat chopper. With the chopped meat mix a teaspoonful of Rumford, a cup of bread crumbs, salt and pepper and enough tomato puree to hold the mixture together. Form into patties, dot generously with butter and bake in a greased pan in a moderate oven.

While we are raving on about our new Spring hats the masculine members of our circle are probably casting a timid eye toward a new cravat or two. Cheney's will be their favorite place once they see the new spring colors and designs featured in their cravat selection. They are priced from 45 cents up.

White strikes the high note in Spring glove fashions. I found some lovely ones at Hale's this morning. White washable do-litens and white kid with black trimming, four and six buttons at $2.25 a pair. There were also some white kid, six button, the afternoon length featured at $2.98. You'll want a pair for your Easter wardrobe.

Famous ladies in history tossed gloves to knights who rode to battle, but no modern maiden will part with one of her Easter slip-ons for anybody's war. The year's gloves are such an important part of an ensemble that to be without them would be nothing short of a calamity.

Look for longer lengths. And for colors such as you never saw in gloves before. The hands that applaud the Easter fashion parade will wear gauntlets that cover not only wrists but forearms. Their cuffs will be wider and more flaring. Intricate braided bands, unique stitching and all manner of ornaments (pins, clips and interesting buttons) will give them an air.

For the convenience of those who wish high grade pure liquors or wines for medicinal or home use, the Center Pharmacy has opened a new section devoted to such merchandise. They plan to feature only matured whiskeys of age and strength corresponding to the purity demanded by the Pharmacy Commissioners of this state. The wines and champagnes are of an aged vintage, too.

The Bargain Hound will greet spring with a joyous "woot" if you mention her when purchasing the articles advertised in her column.

OBITUARY

DEATHS

John H. Moore.

John H. Moore, 47, a native of Vernon, having been born in that place on July 1, 1886, died yesterday afternoon at the Rockville City hospital, Rockville. He has been in poor health for the past two years. He was one of the best known residents of Vernon and made his home in the Dobsonville district, living at 22 Main street until his recent illness and death. He was employed for a number of years at the Talcott Manufacturing company, first as a spinner and in later years as a machinist.

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth; a daughter Mary E. Moore, both of Dobsonville; a sister, Mrs. Fred Behrend of Manchester and a brother, Everett Moore of East Hartford. He was a member of the Sacred Heart church, Vernon Depot, and his funeral will be held at that church Monday morning at 9 o'clock, with burial in St. Bernard's cemetery, Rockville.

FUNERALS

Henry Ahern

Friends from all walks of life gathered at St. Bridget's church this morning at 9 o'clock to attend the mass of requiem celebrated by Rev. John Kenney for the repose of the soul of Henry Ahern. There was a large escort of automobiles from the home on Bond street to the church. As the body was being brought into the church Mrs. Margaret Shea played "Nearer My God to Thee."

The active bearers were David Chambers, Dennis Sullivan, James Shekey, Thomas Sullivan, Ned Cheney and Alexander Jarvis, the latter a former partner of the deceased.

At the elevation John Hughes sang "O Salutaris" and for the waiting hymn Mrs. Maude Foley sang "Sweet Savior, Bless Us Ere We Go." Following the blessing of the body and as it was about to be taken from the church, Mrs. Shea played and sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

When the body arrived at the church a delegation consisting of Matthew Merz, Charles O'Bright, Robert Coleman, Edward Moriarty and Charles Lucas, representing the Holy Name society of St. Bridget's church, walked in advance as it was taken down the aisle, then formed a line as the remains were being removed from the church to the hearse.

Largely attended funeral services were held this morning for James M. Gorman, who died Wednesday, at his home, 128 Maple street at 8:30 and at St. James's church at 9 o'clock, where the requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Walter P. Fraber, assistant priest at Our Lady of Sorrows Church, Hartford, who is a nephew of Mrs. Gorman. As the body was borne into the auditorium Mrs. Claire Brennan sang, "O Patient Heart of Jesus," and at the offertory she sang "O Salutaris." At the elevation Mrs. Brennan and Mrs. Margaret Sullivan sang a duet, "Benedictus." Mrs. Sullivan sang the waiting hymn, "Softly and Tenderly Jesus is Calling" and at the close of the service Mrs. Brennan sang "There's a Beautiful Land on High."

The bearers were Charles Roban, Michael Gorman, William B. Gorman, Edward Gorman, Edward J. Wilson and Arthur P. Burns. The body was placed in the receiving vault in St. James's cemetery.

Stricken in School With Appendicitis, "Danny" Allen Taken to Hospital.

"Danny", eight-year-old son of Rev. and Mrs. Frederick C. Allen of North Main street, was operated upon early this afternoon at the Memorial hospital for acute appendicitis. The little fellow attended the Robertson school this morning. His teacher, Miss Carol Waterbury, noticed as the morning progressed that he was feverish and unable to do his school work.

She telephoned his parents who immediately called for him and summoned the family physician. He diagnosed the symptoms as appendicitis and recommended his removal to the hospital. This was at 12:30. Dr. Caldwell occurred in the opinion that an immediate operation was imperative and it was successfully performed. Daniel Dorchester Allen is the second son of Rev. and Mrs. Allen. His condition is good and hopes are entertained for a speedy recovery.

REPORT IS FILED ON TRAIN WRECK

Safety Bar Placed With "Malicious Intent" May Have Been Cause.

After a long and detailed investigation into the cause of the big freight wreck on the New Haven road near Apal's Crossing in this town on October 14 last, Chief Engineer E. Irvine Rudd of the Public Utilities Commission has rendered his finding. While it is not altogether positive in its terms, it gives as the investigator's best conclusion that the derailment of the leading engine of the "Bullet" was caused by the leading left wheel of the locomotive being lifted when it struck a "safety bar" which might have fallen onto the switch from a preceding train or have been placed there with malicious intent. A "safety bar" is a short iron device placed under railroad trucks for the purpose of catching fallen brake beams.

RABID DOG'S DEATH BRINGS A QUARANTINE

Three Persons Inoculated After Handling Animals Bitten by Hydrophobic "Peg."

All dogs in Rockville and vicinity have been quarantined for a period of 10 days in orders issued by the State Department of Domestic Animals working in conjunction with Dr. J. Ralph Morin, local inspector of animals. The quarantine is effective, Tuesday, March 15, following five days legal notice.

The order was issued yesterday afternoon after half a dozen dogs and a cat were bitten on Tuesday by a dog, known as "Peg," owned by a family on Vernon avenue.

Dr. Roy Ellis of the State Department of Domestic Animals was in Rockville on Wednesday and Thursday and issued the orders yesterday afternoon after it was definitely learned that the dog had rabies.

After the various dogs were bitten a search was made for "Peg" and the dog was killed. The dead was sent to the State Health Department and the laboratory tests showed that the dog was rabid.

Three persons have been inoculated and five others are awaiting inoculation. They either handled the mad dog or one of the dogs bitten by it and may have had saliva on them. The officials urge that anyone handling any of these dogs be inoculated.

Those inoculated were Dr. Roy C. Ferguson, Mrs. Flaherty and Rev. Sigmund Woronicki.

The address of welcome was delivered by Rev. Henry B. Olmstead, rector of St. John's Church and a short talk was also delivered by "Hub" Scheiner.

The Camp Fire Girls of the church had charge of serving the dinner.

Bargains Galore at New York Police Auction; Much Unclaimed Property.

New York, March 16.—The hats, ancient automobiles, empty trunks, pushcarts with broken wheels and tip Van Winkle baby carriages—lotsam and jetsam of the city's streets—went under the auctioneer's hammer yesterday at the Police Department's 273d sale of condemned and unclaimed property held in the police garage at the foot of Thirty-sixth street, Brooklyn.

More than 1,000 persons, mostly junk dealers and small boys, gathered in the huge barn-like building to listen and bid under the compelling voice of J. Lincoln Seide, professional auctioneer, of 220 Broadway. The coffers of the Police Pension Fund were swelled $2,553 by the sale, and junk dealers' shelves, pushcarts and the pockets of small boys were filled at bargain prices.

Two automobiles that had grown tired in East Side streets and chugged their last chug miles from the junk yards brought $1 for the pair, a bundle of flashlights that long ago had emitted their last gleam was knocked down for $4, several teeter chairs on their last legs were considered prizes at $16 for the lot, and two almost lidless trunks were worth $3 to a man from Coney Island.

In the automobile section there were sixty-two vehicles, mostly antiquities. They went for sums ranging from $5 to $20 although one sedan brought on a round of spirited bidding and was sold for $175, the top price of the day.

DOMESTIC POWER USE INCREASING

Average Householder Used 750 K. W. H., Easily Breaking 1932 Record.

Even in the face of the most adverse conditions in recent history, use of electricity by the individual domestic customer of Connecticut public utilities increased by more than four percent during the year of 1933, statistics compiled from reports of the State's larger companies show.

The average use of electricity for household purposes, including lighting and the operation of domestic electric appliances, reached a new peak of 750 kilowatt hours per customer last year. This figure broke the 1932 mark of 730 kilowatt hours per residential customer, but is nevertheless a record which it probably will not equal until the 1934 statistics are compiled.

Although this increase in the average household utilization of light and power during a year when the lowest point of the depression was reached in its early months, can be viewed by the electric utilities as a most noteworthy achievement, the increase which has taken place over the ten years period beginning in 1923 is still more remarkable. During this decade in which the business trend was described in turn by the words "average," "boom" and "depression," the yearly use of electricity by the average residential customer grew from 360 kilowatt hours to the new total of 750 kilowatt hours, a gain of 107.5 per cent.

Steps taken by the Connecticut public utilities as a result of the untoward effects they suffered in the depression of 1931 have done more to achieve the results stated above than any subsequent factors, in the opinion of utility executives. At that time, the electric utilities set out to build a domestic demand or load which would be impregnable to any future depression. In reaching this goal, two factors played the major roles: (1) Improvements in rate structures; (2) Improvement in household appliances.

The steady improvement of existing domestic appliances and the development of new ones during the decade together with betterment of lamps and lighting fixtures served to make electricity more attractive to the average householder. The introduction of new rate structures of the two and three part type, at the same time, made it possible for the householder to utilize his lights and appliances at progressively lower costs per kilowatt hour. That the use of residential customer to make greater use of electricity is shown by the fact that the average use per customer is higher in Connecticut than in states where other rates are in use or where introduction of the promotional rate had been delayed until recently.

WHY USE CARRENE?

CARRENE IS SAFE! The refrigerant used by most manufacturers is a gas that is poisonous under many normal conditions and harmful to plants, pets, and human beings. If a perceptible leak occurs in one of these refrigerators, not only is a nauseating odor immediately apparent, but such a gas leak becomes a menace to health and safety of those living in the house. This cannot happen in a refrigerator using Carrene. If a leak does occur it is in no way harmful to the occupants of the house. No wonder CARRENE is such an important and sensational discovery.

Every home has a telephone

NO FAMILY on this street, nor on hundreds of others like it in Connecticut, need ever have a dull evening. Two minutes at the telephone and the trick is done. Friends gather—there's laughter, games, good companionship.

Important as a telephone is for the service it gives, for its protection in emergencies and for the time it saves—the social side is just as valuable. A telephone not only makes life easier, it makes it happier for the entire family.

Think what a telephone could do for you at a cost of only a few cents a day.

FRIDAY, MARCH 16

LABOR WAR THREAT

It seems to be pretty well taken for granted that the country is on the verge of serious labor troubles, the outcome of which nobody can foresee but which, if they come about, are sure to work great injury to national recovery.

The average person, unless he possesses unusual powers of detaching himself from his environment and his own peculiar interests, experiences the greatest difficulty in surveying the old problem of employer and employe in anything approaching a judicial state of mind.

To him who does, however, succeed in taking himself by the collar and marching himself onto fairly neutral ground the picture that presents itself in perspective is probably considerably more confused than that seen by either the employer group or the employed group.

Because the National Recovery Act has, for the time at least, disposed of one element of confusion, the purely individualistic theory of master and man, the vision of these two groups just now is concentrated, on the one hand, on the single shop union; on the other hand on the federated or affiliated whole-trade union.

Neither side—we are speaking, of course, of the vocal nucleus in each group and not of the uncrystallized elements which may have no firm convictions as yet—can see in the other anything but injustice, unfairness and a determination to rule or ruin.

These glaring and hateful things each is firmly convinced it can see in the opposing force—and each seems to be getting ready for a knock-down and drag-out fight to keep the other side from destroying it.

And the devil of it is that both may be more or less right about the purposes of their opponents—and both may be entirely in the wrong as to their own separate purposes.

In either event such people as Weir and the automobile manufacturers and their associates and followers in one camp and the leaders of the A. F. of L. and its big unions in the other camp appear to entertain no doubts as to the rightness of their respective and highly antagonistic positions and to be preparing for a war "for principle", in which the probable casualties are the last thing considered.

He who manages to get a little way off on a hill, however, though he can see more than he could see from either of these opposing camps, is unable to perceive any such sharp cut outlines of right and wrong. To him it is likely to appear like a fine big muddle of right and wrong in which both parties are inextricably mixed.

There is much suspicion on the part of the employing group throughout the country of the intentions of the national labor organizations and a feeling of resentment that those bodies have been unreasonably supported by the Roosevelt administration without any sufficient investigation of the administration's part into the quality, the objectives and the character of their leadership; a suspicion that the national federations and unions are less interested in the restoration of an industrial system that will function than in the creation of a new one in which their leaders would gradually take over the complete control of industry on a basis wholly experimental and almost as wholly unplanned.

Neither is there any more doubt that these suspicions and fears are driving those who entertain them into defensive methods as unfair and as destructive as the unfair and destructive purposes of which they suspect the other side.

It is not believable that the adoption of the principle of collective bargaining is in the least responsible for the bitter antagonisms now developing between employers and employes in the industries of this country. That principle is too manifestly fair and necessary for any such effect. Obviously, then, the trouble must arise out of the methods by which the application of the principle is undertaken.

Plainly there can be no virtue in a labor organization in any way controlled by the employer. The "company union" is a manifest sham. But just as plainly the nation-wide solidarity of single crafts and subdivisions of crafts is unintelligent and tends to blundering and tyranny, racketeering and exploitation.

It must be possible to effect a system of labor organization possessing all the force and strength of the present system without fostering the evils that challenge unfairness and revolt on the part of industrial employes—with the result of labor wars.

No attempt at all, however, has been made by this administration to bring about the establishment of a fair and well regulated labor unionism or, for that matter, to learn anything about the insides and the actual workings of the kind of labor unionism to which it has given such lavish and one-sided support. And it's high time the administration—or Congress—took a look at this side of the question.

Not by a jugful is all the fault on one side—either side.

KOPPLEMANN BILL

In times past we have ragged Congressman Koppelman a wee bit on his oratory. Perhaps our sense of humor is distorted or hysterical, but when any public speaker begins to pluck the stars out of the firmament and pin them in his hair, to try to do in speech everything that Isadora Duncan used to do with her arms and legs, he becomes, to us, funny. He challenges our dead cats and our razberries and we can't help beginning to throw.

But the orator, for all his forensic whoop-la, may be and no doubt often is a good man and an able one. He certainly is courageous, always.

In the case of Mr. Koppelman we trust we are capable of differentiating between the representative from the First Connecticut District on his job in Washington and the gentleman whose stump speech on Center Park in 1932 so powerfully impressed us. And, because what Mr. Koppelman is driving at in his bill to provide commercial and industrial loans to small industries is so obviously of vital importance and so desperately needs to be done at once, we sincerely wish that we could about our unequal approval of his bill at the top of our voices.

We are for Mr. Koppelman's bill—but we haven't a great deal of hope that, if adopted, it will accomplish what the Connecticut man hopes it will.

So far as the bill proposes to authorize a billion dollars of Reconstruction Finance Corporation money to be loaned as working capital to distressed but capable and solvent industries, it is admirable. But when it calls for the loans to be made through the Federal Reserve System, with federal reserve bankers deciding on the merits of the credits, and when it requires the mortgaging of plants, bills receivable, etc., to these Federal Reserve bankers who are to put up only 20 per cent of the loan, it becomes difficult to see much relief ahead for the industries and businesses that most need the relief.

Mr. Koppelman's bill seems to us to be very much like many other proposals which, excellent in their purposes and generous in their offers of aid, fall of the purposes for the very simple but wholly destructive reason that they attempt to combine far sighted generosity with short sighted conventionalized banking. The whole philosophy of the banking business is opposed to the chancy and lavish sportsmanship involved in any movement to have the government replenish the impaired working capital of concerns that have suffered serious depletion through NRA activities.

Moreover there is considerable question whether Federal Reserve banks which at the same time are state banks could, under their own state laws, participate even to the extent of twenty per cent in capital loans. Probably most of them couldn't. And even if it should develop that they could they are not, by tradition, by custom or by trend of thought, capable of doing such a thing in a truly helpful way.

With a very sincere respect for what Mr. Koppelman is trying to accomplish it is not unduly critical, we hope, to suggest that he would probably be doing something more effective if he were to come out in unqualified support of the Vander-lip bill, which proposes to make a Federal Monetary Authority not only the source of all money issues but the ultimate source of all credit—free from conventional banker control and from worry over responsibility to depositors.

Mr. Hoover and his Congress got absolutely nowhere depending on the banking system to set federal funds flowing in the channels of industry and trade. And Mr. Roosevelt and his Congress, in turn, will most certainly arrive at no different place so long as they turn their irrigation money into these same ditches—because the ditches lead to nowhere but bankers' strongboxes.

NOT SO HOT

The Pathfinder, middle aged weekly of Washington, is falling into the reminiscent mood that goes with greying polls and furrowing brows. It is perhaps altogether natural that to this more or less ancient publication should go the credit of discovering that, going back over a period of 48 years of national administrations, the Democrats have not been so hot.

Plenty of people may feel that they knew that fact long ago—people of Republican predilections. The Pathfinder's discovery, however, is not just a matter of opinion but of scientific fact. It has found out that the mean atmospheric temperature during seven Republican administrations was 52.9 degrees above zero while the average temperature during the three Democratic administrations previous to the present one was only 51.7; moreover, that the chilliest of the Republican administrations, that of Mr. Coolidge, was warmer than the warmest of the Democrats, which was that of Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Roosevelt's administration hasn't, of course, been figured in, since we've only had a relatively small part of it as yet. But unless it warms up a good deal more than it has done so far it certainly won't help out any in the temperature record.

However we doubt if, in 1936, we shall be urging our readers to vote the Republican ticket so as to bring about milder winters—though we may be advising them to vote that way for much better reasons.

IN NEW YORK

By PAUL HARRISON. New York, March 16—Now that the pajama manufacturers named Katz has his telephone working again it is probably all right to tell about what happened while the phone was temporarily disconnected.

Somebody called the number and an operator asked sweetly: "Are you calling Katz Pajamas?" The caller giggled and told a couple of friends. The friends giggled and told more friends that if they'd call a certain number an operator would ask them if they were calling Katz Pajamas.

Calls began pouring in and doubled by the hour. By the next day the telephone company had to put on several emergency operators, just to ask the same daily question. On the third day someone think like 3000 calls came in.

Officials of the exchange were frantic, and wondering how soon it would get into the newspapers—which would mean hundreds of thousands of calls. Finally they had to abandon the set formula in such cases. The operators were instructed to ask: "Are you calling Mr. Katz?" That stopped the fun.

Storm Story. Wood Cowan, who draws "The Newangles" and lives the life of a comic artist in Connecticut, was driven into the city by a recent blizzard and took up residence in an apartment hotel. Establishment of credit required recommendations of a couple of business men, and during a lapse of his customary canniness Cowan cited for references some friends named Harold Ross and James Thurber. He might as well have given the names of Mahatma Gandhi and Samuel Inaudi as far as character testimony was concerned. For Ross and Thurber, besides being editors of the New Yorker magazine, are a heartless pair of practical jokers.

When the customary inquiries were sent out by the hotel, Ross solemnly noted at the bottom of his that "This man Cowan, alias Coleman, has owed me $2.50 for ten years." Thurber was even more succinct. "Never heard of the fellow," he declared.

These replies were too much for the credit manager of the hotel, who cornered the unsuspecting Cowan in the lobby next day. "I'm sorry, Mr.—Cowan," he began sternly, "but we shall have to ask you—"

Just then Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the tune-tracer and music lecturer, strolled up and hailed Cowan, his Connecticut neighbor delightedly. "Why Doctor Spaeth?" exclaimed the credit manager. "Do you know Mr.—Cowan?"

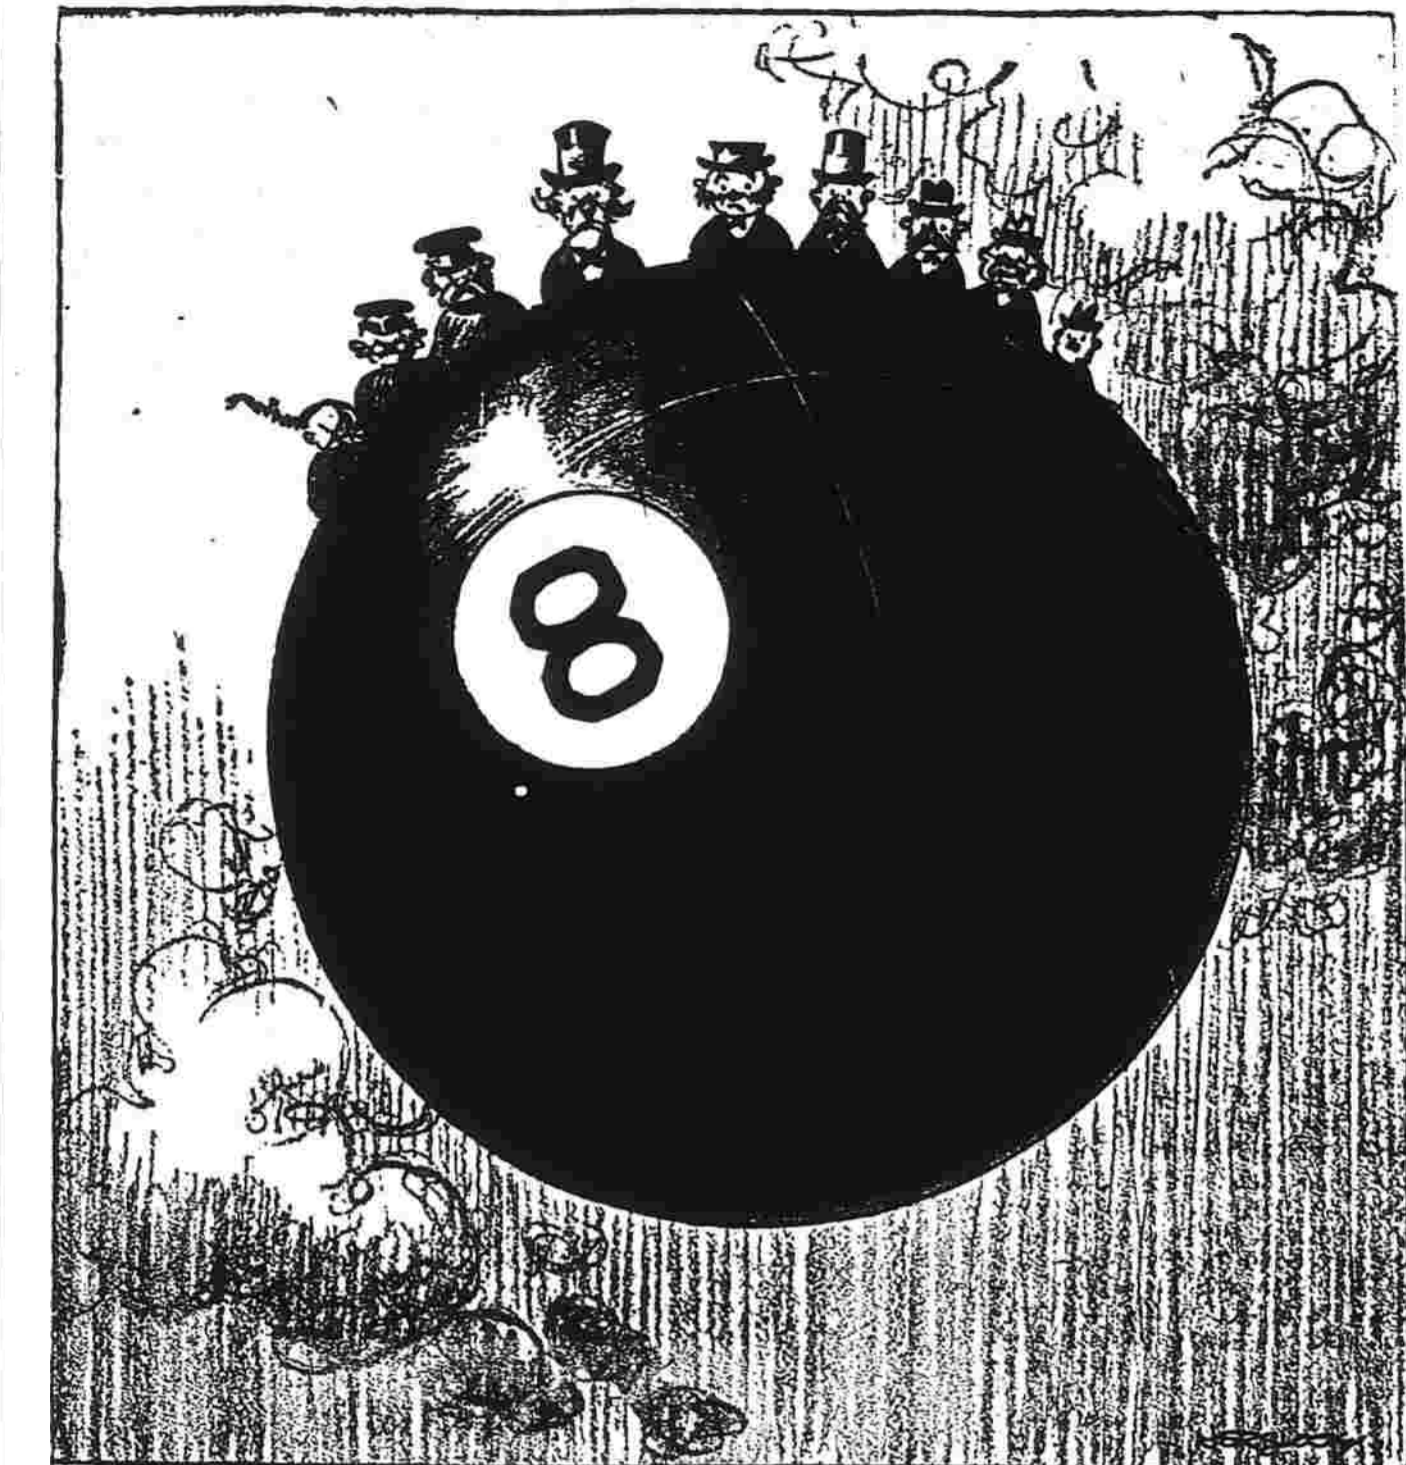

"I do indeed. A fine artist, an even better tenor, a renowned judge of Connecticut cider, and a great raconteur. Some time get him to tell you how he once tried to kill his Uncle Pesch. It's the funniest—"

"A racketeer, you say? And killing—"

"A raconteur, I said. A story-teller. It came out all right, finally—about the letters and everything. But the hotel man is pretty certain that all writers and artists and musicians are a little crazy."

On Even Terms. Fresh evidence of a new level of social democracy came out of a swank dinner party the other evening. One of the guests was a young man who'd graduated from college a couple of years ago and had tried unsuccessfully to find a job suitable to his former prestige. Without letting anyone know, he finally began working as a steam-fitter's helper. When this party came along, he got out his collegiate dress clothes and gamely attended.

During the dinner he got to talking with another man from his old crowd whom he hadn't seen in a long time. He dredged what he knew was an inevitable question, and pretty soon it came. "What's your line, old man?" asked the neighbor.

"I'm a steam-fitter's helper."

"You don't say!" exclaimed the other youngster as he dipped into the pale de fols gras. "Just now I'm driving a laundry wagon myself."

Health and Diet Advice

By Dr. Frank McCoy

LAUGHTER GOOD LIVES

It is said that the highest salaries and the greatest lasting popularity come to those moving picture stars who are comedians. I believe that this shows that the public is eager for a laugh.

I sometimes think that we may not appreciate laughter as a possible help to health. Undoubtedly, laughter is found most often in health, and a happy, hearty laugh is frequently used in expressing an overflow of abundant vitality. We say of a person who is always ready to laugh that he is just "bubbling over." Frequently, the bubbling over takes the form of contagious, rollicking laughter such as is so often found among healthy children.

Watch the faces of those whom you like at first sight and I am sure you will find they have a cheerful expression. You will be likely to be drawn to the person who has "laughing wrinkles" around the eyes, and a jolly laugh or a cheerful chuckle.

The ability to laugh at our troubles is a blessing as it relieves strain and tension. While the healthy person laughs fairly often, the sick person laughs seldom and a patient with liver trouble or with stomach trouble finds it hard to see the sunny side of life. The face of the sick person drops downward and after the same person is returned to health, the whole appearance of the face changes and the mouth is then ready to turn upward at the corners.

One of the benefits of smiling, or of laughing is that in doing it you lift the muscles of the face upward. Laughter thus becomes a way of giving yourself a natural face lifting treatment. Go over to your mirror and watch your face while you smile. You will quickly see that the muscles are lifted upward. Place your fingers over your cheek and you will feel the flesh raised up from one quarter to one-half inch just by smiling.

Another benefit from laughter is that the act of laughing serves as a natural massage of the internal organs, and a hearty laugh is good for the liver. Put your hands over your diaphragm just below the chest—now, laugh heartily and you will feel these parts of the body vibrate. You will also feel the movement of a good laugh in the front part of the throat.

Laughter likewise has a mental or psychological reaction and your troubles seem easier to bear after a laugh. He who can get a laugh out of minor mishaps has formed a constructive mental habit. You may feel that you can not laugh because you have no sense of humor, but I feel sure you can learn to laugh at the funny things of life.

Yes, laughter is helpful to health and the person who can laugh will get well more rapidly than the person who is always gloomy. I want you to watch and see how you feel the next time that you come out of the motion picture theater after having seen a good comedy. You will note an increase in well-being. After hilarious laughter, you feel as though your vitality has been aroused, you feel stimulated, you face life more light-heartedly. Get all the fun and laughter out of life that you possibly can and remember the saying, "Laugh and the world laughs with you."

Behind the Scenes in WASHINGTON

Washington is Deprived of Scottsboro Play Thrill. Society Before Business for Soviet. The Passing Parade of Notables As They Work, Play and Eat.

By RODNEY DUTCHER, The Herald's Washington Correspondent.

Washington, March 9.—The Theater Guild's play based on the Scottsboro case never did open here, but it caused plenty of advance excitement.

Somewhat apprehensive as to its reception in this semi-southern city, Guild people wrote their liberal friends here, asking what might be done to start the show in the national capital with a large spurge.

Complimentary seats were assigned to each Supreme Court justice. The hope that they'd be seen sitting nine in a row, down in front, on the first night, probably wouldn't have been realized. But Justice Stone was one who sent for his tickets.

Another project afoot was a cabinet tea, at which New Deal big shots would meet the east.

Those and other ambitious plans were dashed when telegrams from New York revealed the show wouldn't be ready in time to open in Washington.

Society Before Business. Social necessities are an actual factor in delaying Russian-American trade negotiations. A new ambassador must call on each of the other ambassadors and ministers as soon as possible after arrival here. They, in turn, must call on him.

Since many nations don't recognize Russia, however, Ambassador Troyanovsky has to make only a couple dozen calls as against the usual 50 or more. Even when the point of call is but half a block away, a diplomat gets in his automobile and is driven to the door.

PRINCE MDIVANI SILENT ON RUMOR

Report Has It That Couple Have Quarreled and Will Soon Separate.

Hongkong, March 16.—(AP)—Various passengers and members of the crew were inclined today to believe that Prince Alexis Mdivani and his bride, the former Barbara Huton, had quarreled about the Italian liner Conte Verde which docked here today after a voyage from Shanghai.

They said that, although the Prince and Princess occupied the same suite, they were scarcely on speaking terms.

Today, accompanied by members of their party, they made a joint sightseeing expedition in Hongkong, but, as soon as they had returned to the ship, they parted company, Alexis locking himself in his room.

Seldom Together Shipboard companions said the two rarely were seen together, Alexis spending most of his time alone on the deck or in the lounge.

Princess Barbara's private secretary denied such rumors, characterizing them as having the same foundation as the oft-mentioned expectation of an addition to the family, which the Prince himself has denied.

The Associated Press correspondent asked Prince Mdivani point-blank whether he would deny these rumors of a disagreement with his wife and additional rumors that they intended to separate when they reached Europe — to which they are headed by way of Venice — but the Prince refused to reply.

MOVIE DANCE DIRECTOR TELLS HOW IT'S DONE

Entire Picture Full of "Shots" Planned Carefully — Girls Made Individual.

"It isn't the size of the sets that counts in a picture like 'Roman Scandals,'" says Eubay Berkeley, "It's what happens on those sets."

"Roman Scandals" is the fourth Eddie Cantor screen musical for which the dances and production numbers were created by the noted dance director.

Samuel Goldwyn, producing "Whoopee" as the first of his annual Cantor song and dance carnivals, brought Berkeley to Hollywood four years ago for his initial fling at musical pictures.

"Palmy Days" and last year's "The Kid from Spain," followed, and at other studios "42nd Street," "Gold Diggers of 1933" and "Footlight Parade."

It was Berkeley who helped Goldwyn realize his ambition to make girls as important on the screen as they are on the musical comedy stage. When Berkeley made his first picture for Goldwyn, stage musical comedies were being photographed and recorded as they were played on the stage.

Girls were a hazy line of unrecognizable figures. "Roman Scandals," the United Artists release at the State Theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, and the old-fashioned screen musicals have this vital difference: Berkeley now uses but one camera, shooting from the angle from which he visualized the shot beforehand.

The old style musicals that killed themselves off because they were not constructed for the screen put eight or nine cameras haphazardly on a scene and then picked the best "take" or "takes" later. It had to be fitted into a master shot, Berkeley now prepares a "camera script" in which each shot is plotted and planned in continuity as a kind of revolving eye.

And in the new order, the screen showgirl looms up big, warm and friendly in the eye of the camera.

MARTIN J. INSULL TO BE RETURNED

Brother of Samuel Ordered Extradited by Canadian Court; Loses His Appeal.

Toronto, March 16.—(AP)—Martin J. Insull, former Chicago utility operator and brother of Samuel Insull, today was ordered extradited to the United States.

The order of extradition was passed by Chief Justice Sir William Mulock on Insull's appeal from an extradition order previously issued.

It was regarded as ending Insull's fight against a return to Chicago to face a trial on charges of embezzlement and grand larceny.

Martin Insull started his legal battle against extradition nearly 17 months ago, shortly after his arrest in Orillia, Ont., where he was found following the collapse of the Insull utilities.

Sitting as an extradition commissioner, Justice A. C. Kingstone found the charges facing him in Illinois constituted theft charges in Canada and that he must go back

ASK DISCHARGE

A motion was immediately made before Justice Charles Garrow for a discharge from custody which would have freed Insull and left no legal recourse for the United States authorities. Justice Garrow refused to grant the motion, however. Insull's appeal, pending the appeal of Insull's bail, which had stood at $10,000 was raised to $30,000 after Cook county counsel had objected to the renewing of the bonds.

Pending a decision in the last appeal, Cook county made a new and surprising move to have Insull extradited on a fourth count. Damon C. Woods, attached to the United States consulate here, appeared before Justice H. T. Kelly seeking a provisional warrant for the arrest of Insull to answer an application for his extradition on a charge of having committed an offense under the United States Bankruptcy Act.

It was refused because the consulate was not represented by Ontario counsel.

The villagers, siding with the priest, gathered at the cemetery ready to prevent burial by force.

BUTLER'S SUGGESTION Philadelphia, March 16.—(AP)—Major General Smedley D. Butler suggests that the United States give the Philippines away after paying American businesses for their interest in the islands. "This would cost $250,000,000, he said in an address, and "that's only enough for a day's war anyhow." He added "our whole foreign trade isn't worth a month's war."

ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

By KATHARINE HAVLAND-TAYLOR

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PABLITO, a handsome youth, works at the palatial Florida home of millionaire JIM FIELD. When Field's daughter, ESTELLE, arrives Pablito falls in love with her.

Pablito knows nothing of his parents—a titled Englishman and a servant girl. He makes his home with W O B L I S N O Y E S, wanted for a murder years ago. Noyes flees when a guest of Field sees him and recognizes him. Pablito, dressed as a torseur, goes to a masquerade at Field's home to see Estelle. There is a tender love scene between them.

The same night Pablito strikes a man he has seen mistaking a child. He thinks the man is dead. LOTTIE and BEAU, two thieves, see this. The next thing Pablito knows he is in a motor boat with these two. Beau has a gun and tells Pablito to head the boat for Cuba. They arrive there unscathed and toward evening set out for the nearest town.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIV

Beau and Pablito hurried back for Lottie and after they had done what they could to mose their costumes, presentable the three of them followed the path the ox cart had taken.

For some time they walked in silence. Then, at the crest of a little hill, Lottie paused. Below in a small hollow, framed by pines, was a cluster of one-story, one-door and one-window houses with grass thatched roofs. Beyond these, looking like tumbled pearls in the soft twilight, were the cement houses of the grandes and still farther beyond on another rise stood the cathedral, its heavy towers etched in black against the silver sky.

"Hurrah—a town!" cried Lottie.

Beau put his hand on the bag that was slung around his neck. At that moment he realized, smiling, he would give two of the famous Jeffries pearls for one fried egg. It was fortunate that he had money in his purse to save him from this predicament.

He was faint and dizzy from lack of food, and the long afternoon in the still, heavy air of their hiding place had added to his weakness. Moreover, the water in the thermos bottle had run low and toward the last he had had to dole it out a swallow to each and no more.

"I didn't could ever be so thirsty for water," Beau confessed.

"Shut up about it, can't you?" Lottie flung at him in a roughened, strained voice. She scratched one arm viciously. The gnats in the jungle had stung constantly and sharply and Pablito's alert watchfulness had warned her there were other and greater dangers to be guarded against.

Now when they were at last in sight of relief Lottie realized, with a little wonder, that she was close to tears. She was as much ashamed of tears as a strong man would have been. She swallowed hard and blinked quickly.

Beau spoke then. "Let's go to the Ritzy roof. I could do some mean work to get little food."

"I have some money," Pablito said.

"Don't go tellin' it around, innocent," Lottie advised. "If you do you won't have it long."

They had reached the first grass-thatched hut. A goat, tethered to a tree stump and chewing absently, reared its long bearded head to survey the strangers. A small black baby played on the doorstep and back of the hut a line of wash fluttered white in the growing gloom. Near the roadside a banana tree waved its tattered long leaves to greet them.

An olio made of the heavy scent of tropic flowers weighted the air. Somewhere in one of the hovels a lover with a gift for real music gently strummed a guitar. The place would be a paradise, Pablito thought, if only he could forget the grief and misery in his heart.

"This place looks like something in a movie, don't it," asked Lottie, succumbing to the enchantment. No one answered. "Well, these are the suburbs," she said next, her misery making her assume an armor of false jauntness.

"Ain't you the little wit?" Beau inquired sarcastically at a moment Pablito forgot indifference. He understood Lottie, admired her and also pitied her.

"You've been a good sport about all this," he said gently, "and it won't be long now before we can get you something to eat." She could not quite keep the tears back at that, so she lagged behind the two men in order that they might not see her "makin' a damn fool of herself." Pablito's words had touched her strangely. "Nobody else," thought Lottie, "ever laid awake thinkin' of gettin' me something to eat." Her blurred gaze did not waver from Pablito's broad back and her heart swelled within her.

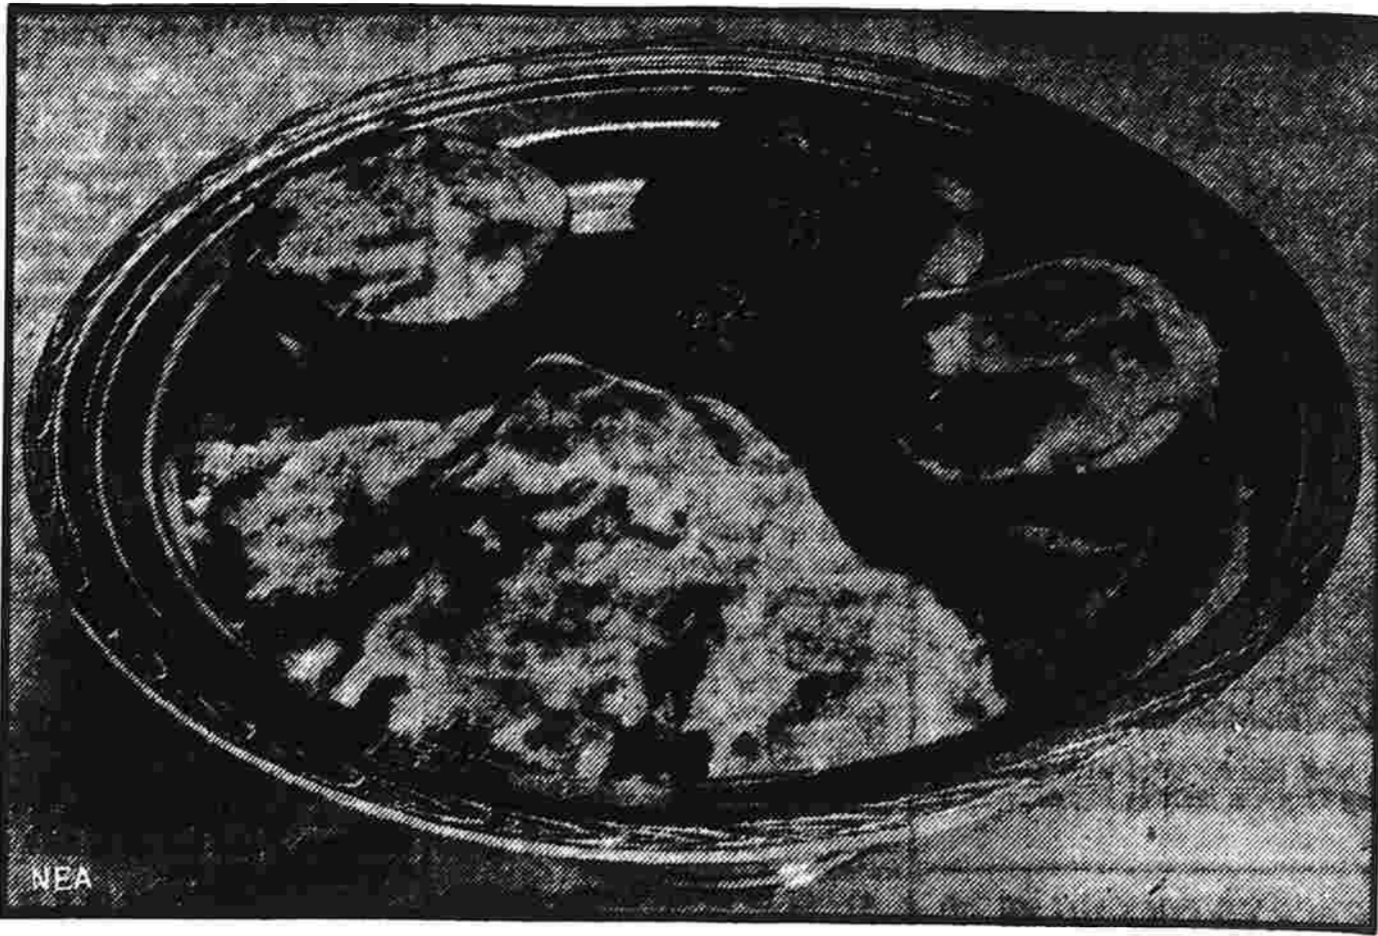

Years before a masculine brutality that had rubbed the first dust from her tawdry wings had made her decide she would "do in an' do dirty" and male who crossed her path. Now she knew she could not keep that vow.

She stopped and bent down so that she could mop her eyes with the edge of her wide skirt. Beau turned. "Come along," he ordered with a short forward-beckoning nod of the head.

Lottie sniffed, lifted her chin, smiled stiffly and joined them.

Back in Florida the camp was cloaked in gloom. Several of the more sensitive feminine visitors had gone to their beds with hysterics to lie there flinching noises and, in choked, fluttering voices, to ask their frightened maids about those noises. Most of the men stalked the beach, smooched hard and incessantly and talking in undertones. The doctor who had come by airplane from Palm Beach sat at the side of Therese Jeffries' bed. She alone of all the visitors had not indulged in hysterics. He wished seriously ill. This time the doctor coughed a little and frowned. He always did this, having learned that fashionable clients invariably prefer to be considered seriously ill. This time the doctor feared his patient really was seriously ill, or that she soon would be.

Therese Jeffries had not spoken once of her husband and that, too, was unnatural.

Marcia Treadway paced the length of the veranda that lay across the front of the cottage she had chosen as her home at the camp. No one—no one, she decided—was so woefully and tragically bereft as she. There was nothing she could say except to make the usual comment and she had to be careful lest even that be made in too deep a tone.

Marcia knew that many of the other guests had been aware of her flirtation with Ted Jeffries and that they had watched with the keen interest that arises from vicarious savoring of sensation. They had expected her, perhaps, to run away with Jeffries. Marcia smiled over this and her smile was seared by an edge of scorn. Well, she had been willing enough but these others had not learned to know Ted as she knew him.

If his voice had been silenced a few hours sooner Marcia would have believed in all her life. As it was, she would always see him and hear his reply to her frank offer to go away with him. Jeffries had evaded clumsily with random remarks about a man's duty to civilization, his duty to his wife and his duty to protect Marcia against herself.

Utter could he had been, Marcia knew now, and a weak one. For the first time she was sorry for Therese Jeffries because Therese too must have learned long ago how weak her husband was.

Marcia thought then of the boy called Pablito and her heart missed a beat. She did not want to think of the boy called Pablito. She thought, moistening her lips. After all, he must have done something that made him run away." She tried to shape this fact into an excuse for her own silence.

It was a horrible burden, this feeling of a young life at her mercy, in the palm of her soft, weak hand.

At first it had almost unnerved her. Field, told by a frightened servant what had happened, had hurried toward Jeffries' room declaring, "I know who did it!"

Marcia had followed, thinking to tell him that she in some measure knew who did it. That far she had been averted from thoughts of self by the shock. But just when she was on the point of saying, "I saw it! I was there! I saw the footstep!" she heard the footstep. I saw the man's back; he was short and thick-set and dark-haired—"just at this point Marcia remembered that if she said this she would be marked all the rest of her life by her confession.

Now they were saying the boy called Pablito was the murderer. The boy all the women liked, the boy who had such a good voice and such charming manners. "He ran away from something!" Marcia reminded herself, realizing the thought did not help her. Suddenly she knew she could not endure solitude another moment. Marcia descended the two steps and hurried down the beach toward the men who were talking with Jim Field.

When the family tires of vegetables and refuses to touch another leaf of spinach, cube of carrot or stick of asparagus boiled, try baking for a change.

Baked vegetables have quite a different flavor from boiled ones and, incidentally, the home-maker saves herself a good deal of time in the kitchen if she puts the vegetables in the oven along with the roast or baked chops. Once they're in, there's nothing more to do—no watching or basting, for vegetables require about the same baking time as thick chops. Baked asparagus served with mushrooms and poached eggs is an ideal Lenten dish. Here's the way to do it:

Bake a bunch of asparagus in casserole. When it is cooked, remove from the oven, put two poached eggs on top and a few fresh mushrooms on top of the eggs. Four mornay sauce over all of it, sprinkle lavishly with parmesan cheese and a few dots of butter and put it all under the broiler until it's a golden brown.

The mornay sauce is merely a dressed-up cream sauce. Melt one-fourth cup of butter in a pan, add one-fourth cup flour and stir until blended, let it cook for ten minutes without coloring, then gradually pour in cups of hot milk; bring to the boiling point and let cook over a slow fire for twenty minutes.

Now to change cream sauce to mornay sauce: Add to the cream sauce four ounces of grated cheese. Put the sauce on the fire again for a few minutes to insure the melting of the cheese. Stir with a whisk and remove the sauce from the fire and beat in yolks of three eggs and two ounces of butter.

THE RISE AND FALL OF A MANUFACTURER

This Novel Analyzes Recent Industrial Progress

By BRUCE CATTON
"Kindy's Crossing," by Margaret Wynmouth Jackson, is an intelligent attempt to analyze the American industrial progress and find out why it landed us in such a mess.

It's a novel about an industrial genius—a Henry Ford sort of chap, who builds a tiny machine shop up into a vast factory, turns a country town into a huge city, and wins millions of dollars for himself, because of his driving force and his ability to understand the inner secrets of modern machinery.

But somehow nothing seems to work quite right. The great prosperity of the twenties is followed by the depression. The younger generation is confused and aimless. The force and integrity of the industrial aren't in his children or those of his associates. When the crash comes they can do nothing but fall into the ditch and bewail their atrocious luck.

Not until the third generation arrives is there a gleam of hope. Then the traditional, shirt-sleeves-to-shirt-sleeves cycle is completed; and the grandchildren, back on red-bottomed ones, start out anew, unafraid, hopeful, and determined.

In many ways this is a queer novel. It is wooden, stiff, filled with stuffed characters which never come to life.

But the author puts into it a thoughtful desire to analyze and understand American life which partly redeems it. It's a poor novel, but it's interesting reading just the same.

Published by Bobbs-Merrill, "Kindy's Crossing" sells at $2.

FIRST SIGNS OF MANY DISEASES SEEN IN EYE

Specialists Observe Pupil and Retina as Mirrors Reflecting Conditions That Affect Other Parts of the Body.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBELN, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Somewhat, because the eye is such a highly specialized and important organ of the human body, we have come to separate it in our minds from the rest of the body. Nevertheless, you should consider it not only as a part of your body, with special functions, but also as a mirror of the body for many conditions which affect your system as a whole.

When you have trouble with your nervous system, with the blood vessels or the heart, when certain infections invade your body, the very first manifestations may become apparent in the eye.

Sometimes a tumor in the brain is discovered first because of a difficulty with sight. Sometimes double vision, the first sign of an inflammation of the brain.

The pupils of the eye may vary in size due to some condition in the eye itself, but sometimes because of the action of drugs or some condition behind the eye.

In cases in which the nervous system is attacked by syphilis, the pupil of the eye will respond from outside, the competent physician outside, the competent physician can study the back of the eye with an instrument called the ophthalmoscope. In the back of the eye, on the retina, changes occur which sometimes are indicative of disease elsewhere in the body.

In various forms of severe anemia there are frequently hemorrhages in the back of the eye. In many conditions affecting the white blood cells, similar changes occur. In the retina of the eye the doctor can see a blood vessel at close range and observe the changes which occur in disease conditions. When there is hardening of the arteries, the blood vessels in the back of the eye are found to be very much twisted, sometimes narrowed, and sometimes broken with bleeding.

When there are diseases of the kidney which interfere with the ordinary output of this organ, resulting eventually in the condition called uremia, changes in the back of the eye may appear long before other manifestations, such as convulsions. Diabetes, too, produces a large variety of changes in the eye.

Thus you can see that the eye is linked closely to many diseases of the body as a whole, and examination of the eyes, both from within and without, frequently reveals information of the greatest importance in establishing a diagnosis, and sometimes of the greatest value for seeing what the likelihood may be for the patient's recovery.

Of course, where the actual disease of the eye itself is responsible for loss of vision, for headaches, or for various types of nervous disorders, a complete examination of the eye by a physician who has given special attention to the subject is of utmost importance.

The earlier such diseases are detected, the greater is the likelihood of treatment leading to complete recovery.

THIS MATTER OF BEING FAITHFUL APPLIES TO WIVES ONLY

By HELEN WELSHIMER

A woman walked into a clergyman's house the other day and announced that she would like to be married on the single standard basis. Of course the bridegroom was with her. A rather surprised bridegroom who decided that he didn't want to marry the single-tracked after all, and went away, left platinum band securely hidden in his vest pocket.

Of course it was bad taste on the woman's part. She should have settled the matter of special privileges before she signed her name on the marriage license. Her mother should have taught her, too, that men dislike being embarrassed in public.

But just the same there is an inner core of wisdom in the woman's action. She chose the wrong place to exhibit it, that is all.

There is just so much time in anyone's life for love and devotion. Most men have a limited amount of money to lavish on women. A man can't squander his affections over a large area and please a particular woman any more than he can spread a pound of butter on one hundred loaves of bread. The affection simply doesn't reach. It has to be spread so thin that nobody gets very much.

There has been much talk recently of the need of a federal divorce law. After all, men and women in Alabama are the same as those in Maine. People even move from one state to another.

They even feel the same way about things when they move from one state to the other. Inhibitions, devotions, loyalties, sins—none of them change. If something is wrong in Kansas there is a chance that it doesn't rate high in Ohio.

There is one thing that is surprisingly alike in all the states. Though they accept or reject lesser reasons for marital separations they all consider infidelity as a grounds for divorce. If men should be granted special indulgence—as the girl who spoke out of turn had observed frequently happens—why does the law protect women in this respect?

After all, state legislatures which set up this ground for divorce were composed entirely of men. There were no women, a few years ago, to add a soprano assent to the judicial voices. If men as a whole believe that they should stray into strange pastures when they please, why did the woman suggest that that they shouldn't? It's inconsistent. They could so easily have said that when infidelity occurs in a woman it gives a man grounds for a divorce but when it occurs in a man, well, let's talk about something else, the veterans' bonus, birth control, or federal appropriations.

Polygamy has never worked. Plenty of countries and plenty of men have tried it. If Brigham Young, with his subtle cleverness, couldn't keep his harems happy, if the Sultans and the Rajahs can't succeed in a wholesale way, how does the average American man expect that he can't? The Rajahs of the East have opals and pearls and rubies, satins soft as lavender, ice cream, velvets sensuous and glowing as purple fire, to delight the hearts of their lady loves. The average man has nothing but a few garments every season to hold as bait. But the woman seldom minds—much. She is quite satisfied if her lord and master calls her beautiful in calico. He may have fallen arched, knock knees, bow legs, a pronounced Adam's apple, but she will continue to love him.

Of course there are instances of married people who permit each other extra curricular romancing and yet appear to be happy. They are unfortunates. For the most part, when a man seeks romantic delights in other women's boudoirs, his wife has a right to think that she has proved inadequate in one way or another. If she hasn't, well, why don't men change their law or keep it? They asked for it!

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Exercises keep necks supple, chins firm and help remove fat around lower jaws. The glossiest thing about exercises of this variety is that they require little time and practically no effort. So sit down comfortably, and begin.

Drop your head backward as far as it will go; roll it to the left; around toward the front, letting it fall forward on chest and, finally turn it toward your right shoulder. In other words, slowly describe an arc with your head. Rest for a moment and start again.

Then try this one: Tilt your head backward, allowing the jaws to relax and open as you sit up. When the head is as far back as it will go, slowly close your mouth. Feel the muscles pull, tighten and get a little needed exercise as you sit up. Relax and repeat several times.

Use a pattern under your chin or slap it with the backs of your hands until the skin is warm and stimulated. Then dash cold water all around the chin and lower part of the face. Cold water on the warm skin acts as an astringent and causes skin tighten and is beneficial night treatment. If you use ice instead of water, be sure and wrap it in a cotton cloth before you start rubbing.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

After six fantasy gives way largely to realism. This may happen, does happen, earlier, but take six because it is a good average and we see the milestone there. And too there are some children of intense imagination who will continue to indulge fancy. In fact some people never lose it at all.

I am not speaking here of "escapes" or abnormal day-dreamers. In each of us there is a healthy and beneficial imagination that carries us through life. This imagination is responsible for the world's best work, its greatest happiness and hope.

But imagination can be very destructive too. Jimmy needs our help.

Now under this "destructive" imagination I am going to class "fear." Fear can be tickled with almost any of the psychological processes we choose. It is an instinct so closely related to "self" that it controls human destiny almost entirely. It is wrong to think that fear can be entirely eliminated from the mind, or that it is caused only by boggy stories, unfortunate experiences and so on. That such things do cause abnormalities and set certain dread we must certainly know and naming that contributes unnecessarily or cruelly to the fear instinct is to be avoided as much as possible in the young child.

The Cowardly Child

But we must face fear as a fact. Self-preservation is the first law of nature. It is necessary to recognize that in a few people it seems to be absent altogether and in some it is almost negative, but from these there are varying degrees upward, or downward, until we reach the coward whom unfortunately we despise.

The most miserable child on earth is the "coward," poor little soul, who tries to be brave. Sometimes he turns bully, but mostly he nurses his dark secret, thinking he is worthless and weak. Being highly imaginative he naturally gives in to his inferiority emotion and this only makes it worse.

One of the cruelest and meanest things we can do to a child is to brand him a coward, sneer at his shrinking, and try to force him to a bravery he can never feel. Physical courage has no relation to the things we can do to a child is to brand him a coward, sneer at his shrinking, and try to force him to a bravery he can never feel. Physical courage has no relation to the things we can do to a child is to brand him a coward, sneer at his shrinking, and try to force him to a bravery he can never feel.

I am not urging any parent to wrap his child up in wool or build him a brick house to keep out the bad world. As a matter of fact I felt much more akin to the two little pigs that ran for their lives and hid under the bed than I did for their shrewd and extrovert brother.

Of course I think it wise to instill in Jimmy as much courage as possible, both physically and morally. But instead of setting a high standard and then insisting that he touch it, the better way is to slowly and gradually exercise his "courage" muscles and not expect the impossible at once. No substitution for real courage is good enough, and if he is not handled carefully he will substitute some pretty bad ones. He will try to "conquer" an impression of bravery that is not in him at all, and in so doing use pretty cheap means.

A child can and will learn to take tough knocks first through those he does not mean beatings or punishment. He will be illustrated by the simple pillow fight with his dad. He'll fall off the bed and crack his head and call it fun. Don't cry over him. Be "nonchalant" and light a pipe, if you smoke one, and say, "If you don't laugh and don't meer if he cries."

Jump a creek and say: "Do you want to try it?" Perhaps you might fall in yourself, for a reason, (it's most worn a suit of clothes) and then say: "Till bet you're smarter than I am." There are a hundred ways to lead a child to physical courage—a way from imaginative fear to realism. It depends on your resourcefulness.

 Mrs. Crabtree's ears have long been accustomed to applause, not only during the past few days by the willing palms of Manchester's women, but by audiences in all parts of the country. But the ovation which greeted her today when she came out to face her last session of the Cooking School, was something she will not soon forget. "It means so much to have pleased your readers!" said Mrs. Crabtree. "And how could I help it, when they have been so enthusiastic and helpful? An audience's spirit really is the most important part of any program. And the audiences of Manchester have been wonderful to me. I hope I may have the opportunity of seeing them all again; everyone!" Mrs. Crabtree has said repeatedly this week, that she has never conducted a Cooking School which pleased her so much. "It is not only the size of the crowds which, goodness knows, are big, but the type of women who have come to the schools and their enthusiasm. It's thrilling to speak and work before such women. They love their homes, they are intelligent and interested in improving their methods of housework, they listened like well behaved children, and applauded like the best audience at a big New York show. You can imagine that we on the stage did our best to meet them half-way. I hope I meet them all again and have the opportunity of talking to them, and finding out new problems and their new questions on housekeeping. Because there are always new questions! Each day in the house brings its problem as well as in a business office. Please tell them all for me what a wonderful time I've had with them and how very, very much I appreciate their fine attitude and generous cooperation."

Satisfactory Results.
 The Herald feels more than satisfied with the results of this week's homemaker school. This has been an offering to the women of this town and vicinity, and in addition, cookery and homemaker information will play a larger part than ever before in the pages of The Herald. The women deserve help and inspiration; one of the services of their newspaper is to give them these aids.
 At the same time, we are grateful for the enthusiasm and cooperation which they and the local merchants have shown throughout the week. We feel that we are closer and friendlier, more likely to serve your every newspaper need in the future than if we had not seen so many hundreds of you, face to face, during the last four days.

hours later an appendectomy was performed upon Joseph A. Felter, U. S. Naval aerial cameraman.
 The gasoline tank in the shaft of the building caught fire. Four members of the expedition put out the blaze and rescued the surgical instruments of Dr. Louis H. Potaka which were in a crate under the flaming tank.
 This quick action probably saved Felter's life. When the operation was performed by Dr. Potaka, it was discovered that a rupture of the appendix probably would have occurred in a short time. Felter is expected to recover but the intense cold will slow up recovery, the physician said.

WALL ST. BRIEFS

New York, March 16.—Jewel Tea Co., Inc., reports that its sales for the four weeks ended Feb. 24 were $1,376,473, an increase of 20.2 percent over the corresponding period of last year. The average number of store units in operation was 1,480 in 1933 and 1,492 in 1934.

The Annalist index of business activity shows a rise of 3.4 points for February to a preliminary figure of 76.5. The most important factor in the increase was an advance in the automobile production index. Indices of electric power output, freight car loadings, and steel ingot production also rose substantially.

Demand for wool goods was spotty this week, reports the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. Mills began to show fall lines of men's wear fabrics at prices about 10 percent under last season and a few firms booked moderate business. Present indications are, says the service, "that current prices will not last long and will give way to substantial advances once business shows signs of improvement."

The Railroad Credit Corp. will repay about $700,000 on April 30 to the railroads which contributed to its loan pool. E. G. Buckland, president, announces. Loans made by the corporation to railroads have been reduced by about $10,000,000 to a total of $66,819,844.

New business booked at the lumber mills advanced during the week ended March 10 while shipments dropped slightly, according to the national lumber manufacturers association. Production increased.

Ingersoll-Rand Co. has acquired the General Electric Company's turbo-blower business which it will consolidate with its own. The transaction is understood to involve Ingersoll-Rand's securing licenses under General Electric patents.

One Bundle Or A Truckload delivered for the nominal charge of 10c!

For Over fourteen years, or since its origin, Hale's "Self-Serve" has admittedly been able to offer nationally advertised goods at prices substantially under organizations requiring "clerk service" to customers.

But, here's a fact that perhaps you have never realized. Yes! We do deliver (one bundle or a truckload) anywhere in town for 10c. Hundreds of customers take advantage of our low prices when doing their week-end shopping and find that the small delivery charge is more than saved in the final check-up.

And, Too, you can phone your order. The items you desire will be personally selected just as carefully as you, yourself, would shop. They can be sent C. O. D. Everything in the "Self-Serve", of course, carries a "money-back" guarantee.

Take advantage of this feature Saturday in case you don't find it convenient to come to the store and shop.

REMEMBER! "It Pays To Wait On Yourself"

A healthy digestion is worth protecting . . .
keep yours healthy. Cook with CRISCO . . . it digests quickly . . .

You're a good man, Clark, but you're hard for people to work with—

Sorry, Chief—I really don't know why I fly off the handle.

Foods cooked with Crisco don't overtax the stomach. Even the appearance of Crisco foods tells you so. Crisco foods, properly fried, aren't soggy—they're so crispy that they look "dry-fried"! And Crisco pastry doesn't bake up greasy-soaked and brown—it comes out of the oven flaky and golden.

Crisco is made by Crisco's own secret process from pure vegetable oils. Crisco is made to keep fresh, sweet, and creamy. Don't bother to put it in the ice-box. Crisco keeps "quick-digesting" for weeks and months, you know!

Sold in sealed cans—to protect your health

NO CHANCE FOR PROMOTION

Clark was called down for being so cross. I'm sure it's his digestion that makes him irritable.

Try cooking with Crisco, Jean. Why, my husband can eat rich pies now I use Crisco. It digests so quickly!

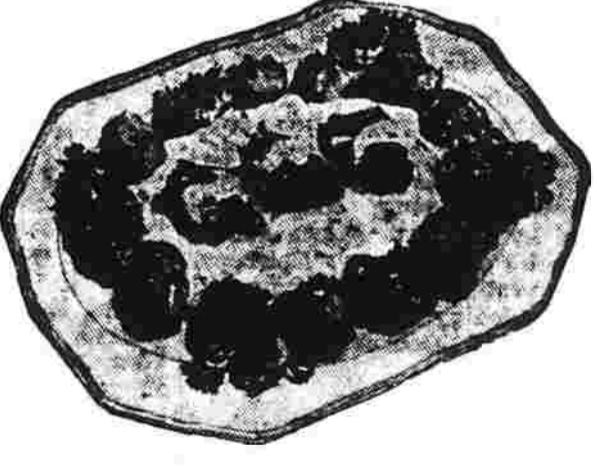

WIFE LEARNS WHY

Jean, the boss went out of his way to say he'd noticed the change in me!

Oh, Clark, how grand! I wish I'd known years ago that Crisco is quick-digesting!

THANK YOU CRISCO!

BOSTON BELLES
3 medium-sized potatoes
1 cup dried codfish
1 beaten egg
¼ cup milk
Crisco for deep-frying

Pure and sub potatoes. Add codfish. Cover with water. Bring to boil. Drain. Add fresh water. Cook until tender. Drain and mash. Add egg and milk. Drop by tablespoons into deep Crisco heated to 375°F. (Crisco is right when it becomes a cube of bread in 40 seconds.) Fry until brown. (Crisco makes fried foods digestible!) Drain on absorbent paper. Serve with Egg Sauce. Don't waste your deep-frying Crisco. Strain it clear and use it for frying again and again. Crisco keeps digestible.

Egg Sauce: Blend two tablespoons Crisco with 2 tablespoons Sour. Stir in 1 cup hot milk. Cook slowly until thick. Str to keep smooth. Before serving, add ½ chopped hard-cooked eggs and seasonings to taste.

All Measurements Level—Recipes tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Crisco is the registered trade-mark of a shortening manufactured by the Procter & Gamble Co.

SENSE and NONSENSE

The fellow who used to sit and listen to an old Edison wax cylinder phonograph grind out the same matchy time hour after hour now says: "For Pete's sake, shut off that danged radio!"

Wife—I can read you like a book, John.
Husband—Why don't you, then? You skip what you don't like in a book, and linger over it in me.

Native—Did you ever have any real exciting experiences?
Traveler—About twenty years ago I was ordered out of a Wyoming town by a notorious two-gun man who didn't like the cut of my clothes.

Native—Well, I suppose you lost no time in getting away?
Traveler—No, sir, I bought him a drink and then sold him a suit.

What if a man does spend one-third of his time in bed. It's the other two-thirds that causes all his troubles.

Wife—Are all men as stupid as you are?
Husband—No, my dear. Some of them are still bachelors.

THERE WASN'T MUCH SALE FOR THE SOFA UNTIL SOMEBODY CHRISTENED IT A "LOVE SEAT."

Woman—What can I do to reduce?
Doctor—Take plenty of exercise. The best form of exercise is to push yourself back from the table three times each day.

The substitution of a few creeds for the many codes we now have might also make the nation better.

Caller—I'm a bill collector, madam.
Newly-Wed—Just a moment, sir, and I'll give you the biggest collection of bills you ever saw.

THE AIM OF MODERN WOMAN IS SAID TO BE TO LOOK YOUNGER THAN THEY ARE AND TO ACT YOUNGER THAN THEY LOOK.

Man—My wife comes from a very large family.
Neighbor—You're lucky. My wife brought a large family with her.

A woman doesn't any more than tell a man that she is proud of him than he does something to spoil it.

Sam—Is that fellow all right to take on a fishing trip?
Burt—Is he? Say, besides doing the cooking he'll think up lies for the whole crowd.

ONE MARRIED MAN SAYS THAT THE JAWS OF DEATH ARE NOT TO BE COMPARED WITH THE "JAWS OF LIFE."

Man—I'm in an awful predicament.
Neighbor—What's the trouble.
Man—I've lost my glasses and I can't look for them until I've found them again.

THE MAN WHO STANDS BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY ISN'T LONG IN FORGETTING HIS RESPONSIBILITIES.

Traveler (to small storekeeper as he watched the man's wife busy in the store)—Hard-working little wife you've got, Bill.

Storekeeper—My word, yes! I only wish I had a couple of more like her.

Jim says: "If a girl marries the boy who kept her waiting, she'll have to wait on him hand and foot."

Man—I've got the greatest little empire in the world.
Friend—What makes you think so?
Man—She always thinks I'm safe when I am not.

LOVE MAKES A MAN THINK ALMOST AS MUCH OF A GIRL AS HE DOES OF HIMSELF.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:
SEE U. S. PAT. OFF.

Men stow eloquent over girls of few words.
