To Make Tests 700 Miles Out in the Pacific Ocean—Rough Weather Ahead.

Oakland, Calif., March 22.—(AP)—Heading into a lowering sky and promise of rain, the government's radio compass plane took off from Oakland Airport at 7:06 a. m. p. m. today on a test flight that will take it 700 nautical miles out to sea.

The 600 miles between these two vessels constitute a "blind spot" so far as weather is concerned, the airman not having any information as to conditions in that area.
