STRIKE IN DETROIT TIES UP RAILWAY TRAFFIC OF CITY

No Street Cars Operated During Morning; Bus Lines Run Under Police Protection — Thousands Walk

Detroit, April 7.—(AP)—Upwards of half a million Detroiters who normally use the city's street railway system, sought other means of transportation today as an American Federation of Labor union made effective a strike started because of a dispute over seniority rights. At the rush hour this morning, no street cars were operating and automobile traffic was moving slowly because of the appearance of thousands of additional motorists on the streets.

Bus lines were operating under police protection, taxis were doing the best business in years and thousands walked or thumbed rides. The Detroit Street Railway, a municipal system, which also operates the bus lines, announced that all striking employees would be discharged if they were not back on the job this afternoon. The weather favored the pedestrians. Contrary to forecast it was a bright, sunny day, although cold. More snow which had been predicted, did not materialize.

Strikers' Demands The strike was called in a riotous session last night, by the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, (A.F.E.M.C.E.), which is a union of street car and bus employees, in one line of precedence. At present the bus men operate under a separate seniority plan. In writing the strike, in a closed meeting, the men shouted down their leaders and other militant leaders of the Socialist left wing which planned thereby to show the mass strength of the premier's popular support.

The demonstration call was made in huge red posters, which were plastered this morning, signed by Max Baer, militant leader of the Socialist left wing which planned thereby to show the mass strength of the premier's popular support.

THURSDAY, APRIL 7

Somehow we saw the other day, a rather casual reference to the fact that in the planning of a new government housing project in New York, the architects had omitted any provision for doorbells, and that the intention turned out to have been intentional. The architects, it seems, had concluded that in an apartment house nobody particularly needed a doorbell, and that children were liable to turn the bells into a nuisance.

At first this seemed like a cockeyed idea. To perhaps believe that we, like almost everyone else in the settled communities in this country, had never become a good deal of a nuisance there, at all events, do not doubt whatever.

Suppose you, Madam, recall if you can the number of times your doorbell has rung within the last week. How many of the summons to open the front door came from any visitor who wanted to see you?

Half a dozen, perhaps? Friendly calls, merchandise deliveries, someone wanting to see, or at least didn't mind seeing, you?

And how many times was the bell rung by some one who wanted to know where you were? Mr. McGroarty, or Sweezy or maybe it might be Alfred, who lives on your street or maybe it was the next street? How many times by one of those fresh young men, trained to slide a foot through door opening or push in without invitation, seeking to sell you a combination magazine subscription to which they say "as has so many other people?"

How many times have you been tempted to grant the family entry of the dog which is resting, that doorbell dumb?

But after all, what do you say to merely glance the bell? Would it be the telephone heretofore and the magazine boys and the peddlers and the question hunters and the shabby, misbehaved kids hammer on the door, you accept till, to save it from wreckage, you'd have to come running just the same?

What would cause this problem would be, if some biological Burbank could only produce such a breed, a very large watchdog, with very long teeth, which you accept till, to save it from wreckage, you'd have to come running just the same?

Until there are such dogs, and until you can get one, it seems to us that the problem of the doorbell will remain insoluble. And yet it is a far more vital one than that of a dog which is resting, that doorbell dumb.

"PROPERTY RIGHTS" There may possibly be a very few people who honestly believe that for people to bathe in reservoirs or in streams flowing into reservoirs can do no possible harm to the health of those who drink the water. But in the hands of the health and health authorities are agreed, and the public almost universally acquiesces in the agreement, that there is at least some risk in such a practice.

Men of Irony

It is improbable that William Heller, the wealthy New York banker, who bought a Fairfield County farm and converted it into a summer place, is one of the few who believes that the present hot bathing in public water supplies are innocuous from the standpoint of hygiene. He is, in fact, one of those who go on for the referendum, like outdoor swimming pools.

Mr. Heller built his swimming pool on Ball Wall Brook, which flows into Aspetuck reservoir, which is part of the Waterbury water supply. When he was bathing in the pool he was arrested and fined in the Easton town court. He appealed.

Mr. Heller did not predicate his case on any belief that to bathe in the pool could not harm the Waterbury water supply. He based his property rights; he held that those rights were being taken from him without due process of law in violation of the 14th amendment of the Constitution.

Then he went up to the United States Supreme Court. He lost. Mr. Heller, in effect, didn't give a damn about water supplies. He was interested only in his own rights to bathe on his own property.

BUREAU'S BILL FARE

While the whole world trembles on the brink of incalculable disaster and the concentrated thought of America should be directing itself prayerfully to the solution of the international situation, the United States Bureau of Investigation, Mr. Ganett's personality could help matters a little.

It was a sample of the demagogues who are peering through the keyhole of the door of the United States Supreme Court. He lost.

Easter Cruise

By MARIAN WHITE
Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.

CHAPTER I

Joyce moved one of the suitcases and sat down on the narrow berth to read the letter from Aunt Martha. She glanced at the envelope a second time, just to assure herself that it belonged to her. There was no doubt that it came from Aunt Martha; one could never mistake that fine, precise handwriting. The surprising fact was that it should be addressed to her in such a way. The words danced before her eyes.

Mrs. Joyce Miller
Per 28 North River
New York City

And then, down in the lower left-hand corner "Sailing Saturday, April 8."

It was altogether true. She was here on the Empress, in her own cabin; the steward had already picked up her ticket, and in about 15 minutes she would be on her way. To the magical islands of the south on her Easter cruise.

She turned the envelope over and took it out.

A Miss Ship fell to the floor. It was a money order for $25.

She pulled the envelope open and slipped it into her pocketbook. For just one fleeting instant she was sorry that she was going. She would have loved to see her aunt and uncle on this wild adventure.

But it was more than that. In the blood of two centuries of sea-faring ancestors runs in your veins, she read, and watched an airplane fly over the water, where you can see palm trees and ships sail out to sea every ten minutes of the day, and if you were born in the entire 25 years of your life—well, then it's sea-sickness. Even though it does take your breath away, and you have no job when you come back.

Of course, she wasn't going to spend every cent she had. She was sure about that. In her bag there were still six crisp $20 bills. And now this money order. The tickets for every shore excursion were bought. Suppose she spent her whole holiday—hang on, as Aunt Martha called them, she would still return "rich" almost $100. That would take care of her for five or six weeks, if she were frugal and in that time she could find a dozen new gowns.

Through the din of last-minute goodbyes which echoed through the ship's corridors, she heard the whistle. Ten minutes to sailing. The boys called out their final warning. "Everything is in its place. Last call! Last call!"

She stood at the rail, watching last-minute passengers a clamor about. Behind her, the white fox cape, a honeymoon couple with rice still spilling from their chests.

Now a man was picking his way up the gangplank, slowly and unsteadily, and close behind him a woman followed, glaring angrily at the crowd back and forth. The man was round and pudgy, and his face glowed like a summer sunset. He had difficulty in placing his feet in the proper position and for every one that forward he stumbled back two feet. She watched him, and she thought of the man who had been with her on the Empress. He was round and pudgy, and his face glowed like a summer sunset. He had difficulty in placing his feet in the proper position and for every one that forward he stumbled back two feet. She watched him, and she thought of the man who had been with her on the Empress.

AUSTRIAN LOANS BOTH OFFICIALS Wonder Whether Germany Will Do Better Than Her Own U. S. Loans.

Washington, April 7—(AP)—Will Germany discriminate against American holders of Austrian bonds as she has done against American holders of her own bonds? This question troubled officials today following the presentation of a State Department note to Germany demanding payment of Austria's debts to this country.

Officials expected Germany to do better on payments to the United States, but the note to Germany with regard to her own obligations. But they were none too hopeful.

If Germany assumes Austria's obligations, as requested by the United States, her bonded debt to private American investors will reach approximately $1,000,000. In addition, Germany will owe the United States government $1,237,000 for costs of the Army and Navy, and for awards of the Allied Claims Commission.

Favored Britain, France and American investors have favored their own currencies. They calculated that per cent of the Austrian bonds have been bought back by Austrian citizens.

At the beginning of 1937 it was estimated that throughout the world scheduled air transport services of 17 human beings, approximately 320,000 miles in length.

Nature Builds New Tissue To Stave Off Dissolution

New York, April 7—A discovery by chemical or mechanical means that the body grows old, some of its tissues become embryonic again, as if nature were using this way of stave off dissolution, was described to the American College of Physicians today.

The new evidence, Dr. William Oshor, of the University of North Carolina told the doctors, that some of the fundamental ideas about the nature of disease should be modified.

The evidence of the youthful tissues was found in a study of liver and kidneys of animals at North Carolina. Verification was reported by Dr. MacNider from several other scientists.

This miracle of nature happened to cats, dogs, guinea pigs and rabbits. In very young animals, the injured parts were replaced by exactly the same kind of tissue. But after adulthood, a new form of tissue appeared. It has, Dr. MacNider said, certain characteristics of embryonic tissue. It is not a specialized for kidney and liver work as the tissues it supplants. But it does the work fairly well.

Most striking was the fact that this new tissue of adults had increased immunity. It was more immune not only to the poisons which had originally damaged the kidney and liver, but to other poisons, too.
