Perhaps a Burlesque
 Bolsheviki Russia has always been bitter, sardonic, cynical. But in the twenty-four years of its existence no one would ever have dreamed of calling it silly. Not until a couple of days ago, a Moscow dispatch attributed to Finland the ambition to "spread the boundaries of Finland all the way to the Ural" - "across the whole of European Russia." So immensely ridiculous in that charge, so fantastically at odds with the strength of the two countries, that it aroused in some minds considerable speculation as to whether the Russians are not, after all, pulling off some kind of a huge practical joke in their propagandizing.

Layman as Justice
 The suggestion put forward in unidentified quarters in Washington, that Mr. Roosevelt might name some one other than a lawyer to succeed Supreme Court Justice Pierce Butler is interesting. It appears that in the act of propagandizing, the Bolsheviki is nowhere any provision that its members must be lawyers. Nor, in the opinion of many, is there any inherent presumption that all laymen are ignorant of law or any of their own people's affairs. Of course the chance that President Roosevelt will select a layman as the successor of Justice Butler is slight, maybe one in a million.

Back to First Principles
 Simon Lake, from whose invention of the submarine grew the whole present institution of submarine warfare, is once more trying to draw serious attention to his World War time project of building submarine cargo ships to defeat the Germans' attempted U-boat blockade of the Allied nations.

Federal Projects
 Meriden is the latest Connecticut community to be provided with a modern sewage disposal system. It is being heralded as something extra, almost the last word in efficiency and economy of operation. Yet the cost of the installation is placed at $203,000, of which the federal government through the PWA paid 45 percent. When a city of the size of Meriden obtains a really effective sewage disposal system, it is a great deal at an initial cost of its taxpayers not greatly more than a hundred thousand dollars it would have had to spend at great depths as far as deep basins need not be feared, and designed to make people about the name as those of surface registers. The designs are ready and ready would certainly know how to build such a system.

Washington Daybook
 by Preston Grover
 Washington—Holland's danger in this world war arises out of the fact that astronomical ingenuity has not devised a combat plane that will fly the round trip from Germany to England and back. A combat plane is one of those compact little one-man fighters which are easily maneuvered and are death to awkward bombers, but are themselves in turn controlled by long distances.

 New York Nov. 17 (Genie) - A sentimental fustler has ordered a boat to be made of brass. The boat is to be named "The Boat of the Future" and is to be made of brass. The boat is to be named "The Boat of the Future" and is to be made of brass.
