Washington Daybook

By Jack Sackheim
Washington—The answer to Adolf Hitler can make Germany's political dependence on France a blackboard for a third-grade arithmetic class. The answer is 30 minus 22. There has been much idealistic talk from both sides about preventing the war, but the world knows it is the Allies' job to win it. The crux of the problem is Germany's annual demand for iron ore. Germany needs 30,000,000 tons of iron ore a year to maintain her economy. The desperate situation—the 22,000,000 tons Germany must get outside her borders.
