Must All Get Together To Put Out World Fire Declares Paul Cornell

Republican Senatorial Nominee Warns That Only by Co-operating For the National Interest Can We Stave Off a Catastrophe.

The following address was delivered by Paul L. Cornell, Republican candidate for United States senator from Connecticut, at a meeting of Brown at Torrington yesterday.

Half the world is on fire. This world is getting out of hand. It is already gotten out of hand. America is outside the immediate danger zone but burning brands may leap across the ocean and fall on our shores.

Fire prevention is basically an engineering job, just as the building of armaments is basically an engineering job. You have to design and build buildings that are strong and that are fireproof.
