5 Lose Lives In Accidents

Former Soldier Dies Of Bullet Wounds Suffered Wednesday.

By The Associated Press

Three automobile and two train accidents cost five persons their lives in Connecticut over the week-end.

In addition, a prominent resident of Monroe and fogger soldier, George Wharton Edwards, died Sunday of bullet wounds in the head which he sustained in a Wednesday.

Killed in automobile mishaps were Della Miller, 26, of West Haven, while walking on the Milford trolley; Mrs. Hannah Knowles, 68, of Narragansett, R. I., when her husband's car struck a tree; and Andrew Scandone, 48, of Hamden, who was crossing Grand avenue, West Haven, all on Sunday.

The train victims were Charles Egan, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cooper of Boston, and North Haven on Saturday, and Stephen G. Wharton, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cooper of Boston, who was the father of 10 children, in that town on Sunday.

Edwards, 38, and a candidate in 1938 for state representative, was found on an isolated road near his home in Monroe, two bullet wounds in the head and a pistol nearby.

and could have done it without disturbing his purely political interests.

Sham More Hostility Tragic

Willkie said Sunday on his way west from New York, working on plans for the final meeting of the presidential campaign. He returned his train to visit one of his sisters, Mrs. Charles H. H. (Mrs. E. J. T. J.), at the latter's home town of Danbury, Conn., on his way west.

It was Willkie who placed Willkie's name before the Republican National Convention in New York City.

The two men discussed campaign strategy and the trip to the lower East side in a hospital where he is ill with pneumonia.

Willkie's slight cold, he said, was contracted at church at Mingo Junction, Ohio, but he was suffering from a slight cold when he was in Cleveland against leaving the train.

After the afternoon the nominee gave out a statement declaring that the New Deal program "has bogged down" because he said it is "paralyzed by a maze of red tape."

Willkie argued that the New Deal's lack of frankness on the New Deal in failing to admit the real extent of Federal Reserve clearance situation.

He said the Federal Reserve is handling various housing programs "complicated with and without even fight each to the death."

The nominee proposed that these agencies be correlated and that any overlapping be removed, "the stimulation of slum clearance and urban planning and housing of a government function."

Willkie declared, "but the efforts of government in this direction should always supplement and stimulate private enterprise and initiative, rather than encroach upon it."

In today's campaigning, Willkie arranged stops at Bloomington, Chicago, and Danville, Ill., and Indianapolis and Columbus, Ind., before he will head east, visiting Jackson, Ohio and Huntington and Charleston, West Virginia.

Willkie's trip was beyond the 100-mile limit which he set when he appeared on the reaction, Ill. His voice, which became hoarse Friday after speaking in Chicago, was better today.

Willkie's campaign manager, J. Edgar Hoover, announced today that Alvin Lincoln had not hesitated to debate campaign issues in Bloomington adding, "in fact, he thought that was an obligation of one who runs for the favor of the people."

"Now the third term candidate, particularly in Philadelphia, the other night, discussed business and have long been settled by the American people. For instance, he spoke about relief. I believe that no American citizen should be taken of relief until he has a job."

WPA workers, Willkie declared, should not be treated as "revolving children of the American economic system."

Touching on farm problems, the candidate contended that the government should get "a more just proportion of the farm income."

He said he would support classes for agriculturally handicapped children, died today at Hartford hospital.

Battle Warmly Waged For New England Vote

Leaders of Both Parties Claim Edge in Presidential Race; Neutrals See 'Close' Finish.

Boston, Oct. 28.—(AP)—A warmly waged battle for 33 of New England's 43 electoral votes swung today to its final weeks with leaders of both parties claiming a presidential edge, but with neutral observers limiting themselves for the most part to forecasts of a "close" finish in four of the six northeastern states.

Only in Maine and Vermont, the states which gave Republican Alf Landon a narrow victory in 1936, did the presidential election seem to be a foregone conclusion. There were few, if any, predictions of Democratic majorities in the other four states.

The Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, however, the tempo was high as the campaign for the states which gave Republican Alf Landon a narrow victory in 1936, did the presidential election seem to be a foregone conclusion.
