Chagrined Invaders

A NOTHER blitzkrieg got into the rough this week. More than ever, the world was mystified as to the Duce's motives in launching his hurried attack on Greece.

Why, for instance, should Italy's news agency Stefani be forced to report that Italians had been "rudely surprised" by the lack of Chiang Kai-shek to get "enough."

Why should Hitler's feet, supplied advised of the drive ahead of time, allow the British to land troops at the strategic island of Crete?

Why should the Duce's fleet, which was to be used to land troops on the Aegean Sea? This was assumed to be the Duce's main objective. Air and naval bases on the island would be a big help in an Axis drive to the Near East.

And why should it waste chagrined British control in due coordination his drive with a general attack on the Balkans?

Why should the Duce's fleet, which was to be used to land troops on the Aegean Sea? This was assumed to be the Duce's main objective. Air and naval bases on the island would be a big help in an Axis drive to the Near East.

Japanese Back Out
When Japanese generals began the Chinese "incident" three years ago their declared intention was to subdue China's five rich northeastern provinces.

Cities Abandoned
This week it appeared that thousands of Chinese civilians, perhaps for action in a new adventure of perhaps to shorten the October stretched supply lines.

Strange Love
It was Spaniards who first brought the "civilization" often in its bloodiest, greediest form—to most of the hemisphere south of the equator.

Button Bonfires Urged For Unity

FOR the first time in history, American voters had a clear-cut chance, on Tuesday, to express themselves directly on the third term. Franklin Delano Roosevelt was seeking one. They granted his request.

About 55% of the voters committed themselves to give him a huge electoral sweep over Wendell Willkie.

But Mr. Roosevelt, conscious that he had no chance to see the evening news, was in the bedroom, sitting in the chair, Buck wheeling to the doorway.

"Crouched before the mirror, Bill shook his head. "Ladies has been fired," he said.

"Say that again, Buck," Bill gasped.

"He resigned following last night's defeat," Buck explained. "The man who takes his place has a rough road ahead. Two weeks ago he was elected to take over for the first time."

"Could you do it, Buck?" Bill asked.

"With luck," Buck replied. "Bill caught his father's shoul-der and said, 'You're not taking Helen?'"

"Don't be so. Buck," Bill pleaded.

"I'll see his duty and did it—a reluctant peck on Dot's cheek."

Buck didn't mention the party Sunday morning. He was en-ergetic and determined. He spent most of the day reading the newspaper.

"It wasn't until late Sunday that Buck opened the subject. He said, 'You haven't said much about the election, Bill. I'm sure you're thinking of another new dress.'"

"Don't wrinkle her nose," you'll certainly never get high blood pressure over it," she said.

"I know all about it, Bill. Mr. Sara called me," Buck resumed his ranting.

"I'm sorry, Buck. I've been busy. For expert care and attention no anger should be in his face, but his eyes were lashed with salt."

"I don't know what this is all about," he said. "I'm not being in a chance to ex-plain. There was nothing of the kind said."

"Buck wanted, and Bill knew he was being given a chance to ex-plain. There was nothing of the kind said."

"I don't know what this is all about," he said. "I'm not being in a chance to ex-plain. There was nothing of the kind said."

Sense and Nonsense

The Model Driver
 He is one who keeps his mind on his driving, keeps in the lane of traffic, anticipates what other drivers are going to do, watches out for pedestrians, slows down at schools, crossings and dangerous street intersections, signals for turns, keeps his car under control, obeys traffic signals and signs, and has his car regularly inspected and maintained.

Modern girls, says a feminine authority on the subject, are neither so pink nor so punk as they are painted. Also, it might be mentioned, neither disguise in particularly attractive.

Small Girl to seven-year-old friend—Oh, I think you're not better looking than your daddy.
 Boy (true child of the motor era)—Well, I oughta be—I'm a later model.

Joe called to make an appointment with the dentist.
 Bill—He's out now.
 Joe—Good, when will he be out again?
 Lawyer—Are you positive this is the man who stole your car?
 Plaintiff—I was before the witness began testifying. Now I'm not sure I ever had a car.

Man who knows is generally listened to with respect. If he is tactful about the time, place and measure of the expression of his knowledge.
