Heard Along Main Street And on Some of Manchester's Side Streets, Too

Christmas seems a long time ago for just a few days ago, although it dates back to the words "priority" and "rationing" are so common.

The local man was telling his troubles to a friend, remarking the fact that he was losing quite a bit of business because he had a lot of golf balls to sell.

The condition of the surface of Main street from the Center south has been discussed many times. It is a bad one, and when Spring comes it will, no doubt, be worse.

It is said that there are 24,000 tons of trawler nets in the Connecticut. Certainly there must be about 400 tons in Manchester.

With rationing of sugar due to the shortage of that commodity, many of the sugar manufacturers are in a bit of a predicament.

Not all the Negro soldiers are behaving themselves here, according to some stories. Although at the army only a few days, reports are starting to filter in.

At the story goes, a young man who lives in the Hornet and Park section, was walking home Tuesday night. As he passed beyond the railroad tracks he was set upon by two soldiers who badly beat him.

Officers Here Issue Appeal

White Executives of Negro Regiment Need Office Equipment. Officers of the 77th Coast Artillery, now stationed at the Manchester State army base.

There have been several stories along the street following the drummer's meeting this past week. The fact that he was losing quite a bit of business because he had a lot of golf balls to sell.

There are about to be a few hot-leads in every such gathering. It will take some time before the natural "agin everything" fellows come into line.
