The Manchester fire department had a tough two hour brush and woods fire late yesterday afternoon on Hilliard street.

The department had hardly returned to headquarters at this time when another still alarm was sounded. The flames, fanned by a strong south wind roared across the flats and over the hill to the latter bed.

No material damage to property was reported in either fire.

Johnson Advances Views of America On India Problem

Head of Special Mission Named by Roosevelt Holds Exploratory Conversations with Native Leaders; Nehru Not Given Letter.

New Delhi, India, April 6.—(AP)—A special mission named by President Roosevelt, held exploratory conversations with India's native leaders in what was widely believed today to be a projection of United States influence in an effort to smooth the country's difficult political problem.

Another Conference Today Johnson conferred for an hour this afternoon with Nehru and the Congress president, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad.

Johnson's former assistant secretary of war who heads a mission to India, did not give to Nehru a letter which he brought, from President Roosevelt for some one of India's native leaders.

Johnson's meetings were the first of a series of talks which he had with the Indian leaders.

Corkey Makes Statement After Hinman Questions Reason for Hearing Testimony Concerning Cost of Bridge Project in Ledyard.

Hartford, April 7.—(AP)—Connecticut's assistant attorney general today told George E. Hinman, presiding as Governor Hurley's deputy at a hearing to determine Highway Commissioner William J. Corkey's fitness for office, that he would attempt to show there was a link between changes authorized for the Ledyard bridge project and a claim for payment for idle equipment made by the contractor.

Questions Materially Assistant Attorney General Richard F. Corkey, who did not indicate what link might be made between the bridge project and the claim for idle equipment made by the contractor.

Situation Misrepresented The assistant attorney general also stated that he based his inquiry that a letter written by Corkey to the Legislature in 1939 urging payment of the claim, $7,135.32, misrepresented the situation.

Joseph F. Berry, counsel for Corkey, objected to Corkey's line of inquiry, asserting that he could not see how that testimony was relevant to the hearing on Corkey's complaint. The judge agreed with Berry, but said that he would permit Corkey to pursue that line of inquiry on the assumption that Corkey had some theory in mind which he hoped to develop.

Eventually I shall have to decide its helpfulness, said Hinman. Corkey sought to show that while the contract for the job was $75,587, payment of $83,143 was recommended. That included some work done on a cost plus basis as distinguished from work done on the contract itself.

Complaint of Slewness A complaint that the hearing was not progressing fast enough came today from George E. Hinman, presiding as Governor Hurley's deputy.

"We're waiting a lot of time this morning, gentlemen," commented the retired Supreme court justice as the pace of the hearing slowed during the examination of Beebe, who was being questioned in detail concerning financial aspects of two bridge projects at Ledyard which formed the basis of the fourth of 22 principal charges.
