He is expected to be discharged in a few days and will be returning to his unit in the next few days.

The contingent included men from all parts of the city and was headed by Chief Clerk Edward G. DeWitt, who is in charge of the Manchester office of the Selective Service Commission. Chairman Henry Griswold of the local salvage committee this afternoon issued a warning to local residents. When the scrap metal is left at the curb tonight for collection tomorrow morning, no one, except the men who are helping with the town trucks are authorized to pick it up. Extra Sirens To Be Bought Y D Veteran Is Off To Serve U. S. Again

Eight Small Ones Will Take Care of All the Outlying Districts.

George Samuel McCollum, of 801 Main street, veteran of World War I, left this morning for Fort Devens, Mass., for entrance into the military service for the second time in a quarter of a century. He is believed to be the first Yankee Division veteran inducted into service in this World War II.

McCullum was born in Rockville, Sept. 3, 1888 and came to Manchester with his parents shortly after World War I. He was employed in Cheney Brothers mill as a velvet folder. Prior to 1917 he had service in Company G, 1st Connecticut Infantry, which was the nucleus of the World War Company of the 102nd Regiment of the 26th Division.

He left Manchester on June 29, 1917 and his military record shows that he departed from these shores for Montreal, Canada, for England on Sept. 18, 1917 and arrived in Liverpool, England from which port he was sent to Southampton, England and later to Le Havre, France and then into the interior of France for training at Neu-Chatcau, where he remained three months before returning to service.

According to the official military record of McCollum, he served with the 102nd Regiment, Yankee Division, at Cherin, Des Dames, St. Mihiel, Chateau Thierry, Argonne Forest and Verdun from 1918 and was hospitalized Oct. 26, 1918, and subsequently at Verdun Field hospital, at Base 28, Vichy, and at the hospital at Brest suffering with trench feet.

13 Months Overseas He arrived at Hoboken, N. J., Dec. 20, 1918 on the R. A. Manchuria from Brest, France after 15 months overseas service to his credit.

He was honorably discharged on January 9, 1919 and received the World War medal for his service. On his return to Manchester he obtained employment in Cheney Brothers and subsequently obtained work as a truck driver in the municipal garbage collection department. He was employed when he was called to service two weeks ago.

Quebec Mourns Loss Of Tourist Business

Gas Rationing Results In Big Slash in $72,000,000 Trade; Cut Of 90 Per Cent Seen.

By Don Whitehead

Quebec, July 31.—(Wide World)—This picturesque old city is mourning over the bluffs of the St. Lawrence river is pretty much like a corpse deserted to the mid-air by the hazy sun.

In this case the bridegroom was the American tourist. While the party is only temporary, nevertheless it has cut an air of desolation over the narrow, winding streets of Quebec, long a favorite spot of American tourists.

Last year the visitors from the United States poured some $72,000,000 into the pockets of Quebec port residents. For many years the tourist dollar has been a boon to the thirty French-Canadian.

More than any other Canadian province, Quebec made a big business of luring Americans to see the quaint, historic Chateau de Frontenac, which capacity to explore Quebec city, and enjoy the winter and summer sports and life.

Tourist Business Dwindled Since the United States rationing has cut down travel, the tourist business has declined to a slim trickle. Tourists are permitted only one automobile per family while in Canada and that isn't sufficient to make a trip. Quebec has lost its tourist dollar and is expected to lose even more.

Some sources here estimate that the American tourist trade may be down 90 per cent with few automobiles coming to the province. Many visitors now are arriving by boat and train, but not in the numbers equal the previous years.

During a four-day stay here, I have seen only one automobile with a United States license plate, a car from Massachusetts. In past years this season, the city has swarmed with them from many states.

Beige families, with their automobiles and gift shops and tourist hotels are almost deserted in some cases. One of the big hotels, the Hotel de la Ville, is closed. Many small hotels and rooming houses are being forced to close. French families, who have their incomes by taking tourists, are being forced to close their doors to occupy their spare rooms.

So far as the American dollar is concerned, it is being rationed to such an extent that it is almost impossible to obtain. There is a bright side to the situation, however. The American dollar is being rationed to such an extent that it is almost impossible to obtain. There is a bright side to the situation, however.
