Milky Disease Kills Beetles

Post Control Is Aided By Inoculating Them With Deadly Germs.

New Haven, Aug. 24.—Many new weeks have been passed by beetles of white powder on their backs. Those who were attracted to their door or window by a sticky substance made by the corn planter used to spread the material learned that it was late containing spores of the "milky disease" of insects.

The corn planter has been inoculated with a bacterium which contains a standard quantity of spores sufficient to infect about 10 or 12 days. (Grinding followed the "soy" which was mixed with talc so the disease germs could be readily distributed.)

Sampling to find how the disease was taken up is confined to spring and early summer when grubs are in the first few inches of soil and hence are easy to be found. In an acre piece of land 200 samples were taken at intervals of a depth depending on the feeding level of the grub. Removal of the grubs from the soil and the bottom of Norway, the Admiralty announced today.

The beetles which give the grub a fatal disease when the legs of the insect are pulled off, prove the presence of the disease. In questionable cases where the blood is normal coloration, the result is said to have exploded and sunk immediately.

Scrub sampling done in Connecticut last year on previously treated areas showed that the disease was spreading to new areas. With each year of the corn planter, 200,000 disease spores are liberally scattered over the area. The spores are about 100 feet intervals by using a walking stick. Four hectare treatments per square mile are being made in the most heavily infested beetle areas in the state.

From each of these inoculated areas, it is hoped that the disease will eventually spread to include the whole of the state. The disease is a large area in parks and golf courses where private property has received the disease treatment to date this year.

Mr. Schrad has been working at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station at Storrs, Conn. He is in charge of the work, explains that the milky disease is an entirely different method of control from arsenic and that the disease is a poison for the grub, it is an attempt to inoculate them with a deadly disease which gives them the fatal disease. The result is that the spores that are in the soil are said to be poisonous to birds or household pets—only to beetle grubs.

Tapping the World's Richest Iron Mine

By Richard Dyer
Special Staff Writer

Men and materials are rushing into the world's richest iron mine, the massive walls of which are being carved through the mountains of the 200-year-old hills of the little valley above sharply rising hills of iron ore. Right now they are pouring $14,000,000 into Itabira and its railroad to the sea, and for every dollar they plan to rush out a ton of ore or more, at the rate of about two million tons a year.

The little valley above sharply rising hills of iron ore. Right now they are pouring $14,000,000 into Itabira and its railroad to the sea, and for every dollar they plan to rush out a ton of ore or more, at the rate of about two million tons a year.

But that won't even scratch the astronomical reserves of iron ore in the Itabira project, which is estimated at 300 million tons of the richest iron ore in the world. The project is a partial realization of the dream of Ferrival Faquhar, 78-year-old American of great fortune, who has spent more than $100,000,000 in the development of Latin American iron ore and steel plants.

Miner Dr. Israel Pinheiro, right, traces on a blueprint the layout of the mine. He is head man on the project.

How to Nip Sabotage

Wide World Features

Here is a 8-point program recommended by the Federal Bureau of Investigation to the American public on how the private citizen can help stop any effort at wartime sabotage. Any suspicious, however, should be reported to local police or direct to the FBI in cities where the agency has an office. Don't try to be a Sherlock Holmes all by yourself at any time.

1. Watch for suspicious objects in public places, especially in or near a factory, telephone exchange, railroad station, etc. You may be bomb.

Main Street, U. S. A., Goes to War

Everybody in America's Small Towns Can Pitch in on a Community Effort of Tremendous Importance.

Washington—What can I do about the war? What can I do to help? These are the questions that are being asked by millions of Americans who are not in uniform. The answer, on good authority, is this: You can win it. You can win it in your own town. You can win it in your own neighborhood. You can win it in your own community. You can win it in your own country.
