White House Lifts Censorship on Journey Of Roosevelt After Return to Capital

Washington, Oct. 1.—The White House lifted a two-week censorship on the movements of President Roosevelt today and disclosed his return from a ten-day tour of war factories throughout the country.

A formal statement said: "The President left Washington Thursday evening, Sept. 17, and returned shortly after noon today, completing a trip of 8,704 miles, during which he inspected Army and Navy bases, shipyards, tank, airplane and shell producing plants, Army, Navy and Marine training centers, supply depot and embarkation points."

The President left Washington Thursday evening, Sept. 17, and returned shortly after noon today, completing a trip of 8,704 miles, during which he inspected Army and Navy bases, shipyards, tank, airplane and shell producing plants, Army, Navy and Marine training centers, supply depot and embarkation points.

 It would be a mighty good thing to get the battle against inflation of the national chest and get it out of the realm of debate and legislation and decision into the realm of regulation and administration. For we seem to have capacity to handle only one big domestic problem at a time, and there's something quite as important as inflation loomed ahead in all its intricate phases. It is a question which, like inflation, advances the lives of almost all Americans.

Baldwin's Labor Record
 Former Governor Raymond E. Baldwin told the Manchester Young Republicans last night that "we have been in Connecticut a new liberal, forward-looking, progressive Republican administration." That is a claim happily substantiated by the record of his administration in office, by his own conduct on issues in and out of office. It is why, except for an occasional bit of apprehension to the new labor program, many of the workers who have stood squarely behind Wendell Wilkie in his attitude on the French and Indian wars. Mr. Baldwin's record is clear and described the enemy accurately. He neglected to add a footnote saying that it is his Marines who are winning the battle he described.

Riddle of the Year
 Through the tall grass or wait motions led and suppress patient for, leashed to treetops or alike need to know the riddle. If employers are going to have to lose key men in one way or another, they need to know it now. If they must have the key man, they need to know it now. If they must have the key man, they need to know it now. If they must have the key man, they need to know it now.

Washington in Wartime
 By Jack Stinnett
 Washington.—There probably is a lad going off to the war in the front lines. He is carrying something or using something that was made in this country's plants. There are for example cotton clothes, fabric, shoes, socks, hats, caps, and many other things. These things are made in the factories of this country. They are made in the factories of this country. They are made in the factories of this country.

Army Solutes the Press
 The Army solutes the press. Beginning today, the nation will see in the "National Newspaper" the medium for most of the Army's contact with the people. In turn, the press will be able to get to the press for information about the Army. The first news of direct regulations, of rationing, of selective service, of war bond sales, of scrap metal needs, of nearly everything pertaining to the war effort has been carried to the people by the press.

Old Jarvis Steam Shovel Healed by Bombs, Planes and Bullets

The local scrap pile got a big boost yesterday when Alexander Jarvis, local contractor and builder, donated a 24-ton steam shovel to the war cause.

The Jarvis steam shovel, which was built in 1920 to 1923, since which time it has been used by Jarvis for many years. It is the largest single donation of scrap steel to date. Workers will cut up the big piece of iron equipment with acetylene torches and reduce it to size suitable for shipment to the scrap yards.
