Heard Along Main Street

Flipping a coin is often resorted to in sports events or sometimes in more serious matters. But the height of all coin flipping occurred recently when it decided the martial career of a Rockwell soldier. The coin was tossed in a "Man" street store here. His number was coming up in the draft and he had intended debating whether or not he should be married before the date of his induction examination. Lady Luck decreed that the coin should be tossed.

With shortages of various articles cropping up in all lines a force-carrying racket evidently has been developed by some jobbers who come into Manchester to judge by a story told about one of the men who was surprised when a woman said: "I know how you are buying cigars from a different source than that which I told me you had been procuring candy." It is not clear whether the man was a customer or a jobber.

It was that night, you may remember, when cars were strung along the highways useless on the glassy surface of the main artery. The driver of an early evening car just entering Manchester near the Pine Acres tract on lower Center street was surprised when a woman said: "I know how you are buying cigars from a different source than that which I told me you had been procuring candy." It is not clear whether the man was a customer or a jobber.

It would have been almost impossible to walk through the snow on December 22 had it not been for the regular traveler and when he got traction again on the snow he was surprised when a woman said: "I know how you are buying cigars from a different source than that which I told me you had been procuring candy." It is not clear whether the man was a customer or a jobber.

Several others in the bus spoke up and he was surprised when a woman said: "I know how you are buying cigars from a different source than that which I told me you had been procuring candy." It is not clear whether the man was a customer or a jobber.

Just the other day we heard the news that a fire had broken out in the home of a local carrier. It seems that the fire was caused by a cigarette that had been left burning in a wastebasket. The fire was extinguished by the fire department.

By the same criterion, if you refer to the Manchester Evening Herald, you will find that the paper is one of the best in the city. It is well written and contains a great deal of interesting news.

When the papers blazed up high in the air, the fire was extinguished by the fire department. The fire was caused by a cigarette that had been left burning in a wastebasket.

Recently, this column remarked on how unnecessary the traffic light which is placed at the High School is at times. Cars must stop, waiting gasoline, when there aren't any students nearby, and it is a waste of time.

A suggestion was voiced concerning the traffic light at the High School. It was suggested that the light be turned off when there are no students nearby.

There have been lots of imitations of the "Man" street store. The original store is still the best. It has a great selection of goods and is well served.
