Smaller War Plants Job Really Hot Spot

Johnson Already Working in New Position; Admits New Task May Be 'Quite Difficult.'

By James T. Carter
New York, Jan. 22.—Coolly and calmly, a slight smile on his pleasant gray eyes prepared Johnson to step into one of the hottest spots in the nation's war effort.

It was a tough assignment that Col. Robert Wood Johnson has drawn as new chief of the Small War Plants corporation, which will be a pretty tough customer.

He takes the reins of the Small War Plants corporation, which was set up by the War Production Board, at a time when it is under fire from the Senate Committee on Small Business, members of which have contended the agency was slow in bringing small factories into war production.

50,000 Workers Being Sent to Rubber Areas

Brazil Seeking to Transport Number in Five Critical Months Before Tapping Starts.

Editor's Note: Here is the dramatic story of how Brazil is seeking to transport 50,000 workers into the Amazon valley to supply labor for expanding United States' supply of natural rubber.

During the 1930 revolution, he pointed out, he himself marched over that region with 1,000 men, covering about 50 miles a day. He admitted, though, that the work of drought-stricken areas, though fed and rested before starting, cannot be expected to do as well.

But, the migration is only half of the job—getting supplies to the workers in the remote areas.

Placing the equipment in the hands of Brazilian distributors—rubber cut of Latin America and trade with the rubber workers—is a task of the Rubber Reserve company.

Baldwin Reports Acute Shortage on Way for Connecticut Now.

Hartford, Jan. 22.—Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin reported last night that acute kerosene shortage is on the way for Connecticut now.

On the beginning of the week, Connecticut had on hand only five days' supply of the fuel used in most homes without furnaces.

But, the migration is only half of the job—getting supplies to the workers in the remote areas.

Enter Nearly 500 New Bills

Total Introduced This Session Close to 1,200—Deadline Today.

Hartford, Jan. 22.—Connecticut legislators spent most of yesterday entering new bills, aware that after today no new bills may be introduced.

Many subjects covered. On the beginning of the week, Connecticut had on hand only five days' supply of the fuel used in most homes without furnaces.

But, the migration is only half of the job—getting supplies to the workers in the remote areas.

Placing the equipment in the hands of Brazilian distributors—rubber cut of Latin America and trade with the rubber workers—is a task of the Rubber Reserve company.

Bombs fall in the city area, but the attacking force was small and properly damaged was slight. It was a heavy rain on the coast.
