"Combat" by Day and Night Trains Army Medics in Handling Casualties

Carlisle Barracks Becomes Medical "West Point"

By NEA Service. Carlisle, Pa. (AP)—The soldiers who are wounded in battle are going to get the world's best medical care, and they're going to get it with a speed which their fathers who fought in France would have believed possible... You know the name Carlisle Barracks, the medical "West Point" of the United States Army.

Major Station Can Be Moved Instantly

The knowledge of these service doctors is not a result of mere book-learning. At a recent field demonstration by Army troops, a visiting press contingent, these medics showed that, under conditions of actual battle, they could get to the casualty area and get the wounded men almost at the front line.

Four litter bearers appeared and began the trek to the station and back to the front line. They "broke step" and employed other special techniques for the transport of the wounded men to the rear.
