Shift in Stalin's Aims

The truth that circumstances can alter the degree of loyalty existing among the allies of this war has been recognized by spokesmen like Prime Minister Churchill and Under-Secretary of State Welles, who have urged that the United Nations should agree on principles and specific post-war plans while still united by their military need of one another.

There seems unfortunate confirmation of their theory in the attitude of Stalin today as compared to the attitude of Stalin at other dates in this war.

Last week, on the crest of the successful Russian winter offensive, talking as the commander of the most successful and perhaps the most powerful army in the world today, Stalin ignored his allies, boasted of his own strength alone, talked of fighting on only until German soldiers had left Russian soil and, at the same time, boldly extended Soviet frontiers to include territorial prizes from this war, these prizes, all victims of Russian aggression while Russia was Hitler's partner.

Orthodoxy Much More Tolerant in Two Religions, Long Sore Spot for India

By DeWitt Mackenzie

Editorial Note: Tomorrow, DeWitt Mackenzie, an analysis of the Hindu and Moslem religions will discuss the Moslem claim to the establishment of a completely independent Moslem state in India.

The Hindu and Moslem religions are living and working together in India, and this striking difference has been fostered by the late maharajah who at one time didn't feel that it was right to eat with an unbeliever.

The state officially celebrates the main festival of both Moslems and Hindus. At Christmas time there is a salute of 21 guns as a mark of respect for the Christian religion. There have been no communal riots for years.
