H. S. Graduates Face Greatest Test in Years

From the A Cappella choir under the direction of G. Albert Pearson.

Then followed the address by G. Howard Jones on "The World Is Yours."

"Need to say, I am greatly pleased to have been asked to address the graduating class of the Manchester High School—more than seven days to make the world."

Every generation has had its own pocket of unfinished business which it has had to cope with and cope with the progress has undoubtedly been made. I believe that no one so bigoted as to deny that each generation of men and women has had more of a social conscience than the generation that preceded it.

More Progressive World

"We don't have to look very far to find this. We have come to a day when we can no longer accept the responsibility which we have inherited from our fathers. We are today a more progressive world than we have ever been before. We are today a more progressive world than we have ever been before. We are today a more progressive world than we have ever been before.

House Favors Law to Curb Strike Heads

Following the general line of the Senate, the House today passed a bill which would prohibit the War Labor Board from issuing orders for the maintenance of the union membership drive.

Four hours of heated debate yesterday failed to produce any of the several pending measures and left the House in a state of indecision.

House members are expected to return to their jobs. Resolutions against support of the bill are expected to be introduced.

Senator Roosevelt's bill, which would prohibit the War Labor Board from issuing orders for the maintenance of the union membership drive, was passed.

The measure, passed without dissent by a vote of 372 to 12, would prohibit the War Labor Board from issuing orders for the maintenance of the union membership drive.

Mr. Roosevelt, referring to the bill, said it would prohibit the War Labor Board from issuing orders for the maintenance of the union membership drive.

The Showdown Has Come
 The President, finally convinced that the government of this country must reassert itself, whatever the price in temporary loss of coal, violence, and national prestige, has decided to do what we should be free to turn all eyes toward victory abroad, has given today's showdown his own stamp of approval. No one knows today, whether the miners will accept his offer to return to work by Monday. Rumor has it that they will not, unless Lewis orders them to do so. No one knows today, whether Lewis will give that order. No one knows today, just what will follow if the President's order is disobeyed. No one knows whether it will still be possible to do this matter ad hoc if we were a democracy, or whether it will be necessary to call in the method of Hitler, who would have us governed by such a strike, but whose method of handling it should be the very last American resort.
 In this uncertainty, there is potential trouble of all kinds. One still mill has already shut down. Others may follow. We are just getting into the details of the war abroad. Prolonged lack in the production of coal could well dictate a complete change in military plans adopted at the recent White House conference.
 There may be violence and bloodshed on American soil, for this too can become just as serious a war as our war against Hitler and Top.
 But with all this number onlooker, there is one satisfying and thoroughly comforting thing to be seen. The President has stood squarely behind the established and orderly processes of government. He has said nothing beyond any doubt, that Lewis must stand by the decisions and the authority of the War Labor Board. He has joined the same strength of the presidential dignity in decreeing that there can be no negotiation with miners who are out on strike against their government. He has obviously decided that Lewis cannot win, no matter what price the country has to pay for its victory over him.
 In all this, the President has the widespread and well-nigh unanimous backing of this country. No political opposition is small enough to hope for the President's defeat in this instance, for his defeat would be a permanent defeat for the American people. Every hour brings new testimony from organized labor itself that the President must win, and that the above-the-law, above-the-constitution, above-the-law tactics of Lewis must not be tolerated. Before Monday, if he waits that long, Lewis will have little doubt as to this country's attitude. And that makes no difference in him, the country will give whole-hearted support to whatever measures are necessary. One of our best hopes for the future lies in the fact that Lewis will be arrested. Lewis himself.
 For if that commander-in-chief is not obeyed, it will be because of Lewis more than that of the individual miners.

If He Were Joan
 That French unity which was supposed to result from the meeting in Algiers has, temporarily at least, been shattered into fragments. It would appear that of the two generals, de Gaulle has the superior political tactics, and is using them in an attempt to make unity with complete dominance for himself, while General Giraud, caught slightly off balance by the de Gaulle political tactics, is being outmaneuvered. The other probably get it, but, as our State Department seems to get along with him while the British are still with de Gaulle.
 If it is fantastic that two French leaders, on the eve of the rebirth of France, should indulge in the kind of quarrel and quarrel which laid France low in 1940, it is perhaps no less unusual that our State Department should have so much distrust of de Gaulle, while at the same time, it is not in doubt that Lewis cannot win, no matter what price the country has to pay for its victory over him.
 In all this, the President has the widespread and well-nigh unanimous backing of this country. No political opposition is small enough to hope for the President's defeat in this instance, for his defeat would be a permanent defeat for the American people. Every hour brings new testimony from organized labor itself that the President must win, and that the above-the-law, above-the-constitution, above-the-law tactics of Lewis must not be tolerated. Rockville
 Lewis H. Chapman, 840, Rockville
Daylight Test - Seen Secret
 Rockville, June 4—(Special)—The daylight test on Thursday afternoon was termed "fairly successful" by Chief Air Raid Warden John D. Daley, Jr., after Vernon and Rockville had received a theoretical bombing and one of the buildings had been hit. There were various types of damage to gas and water mains and damage to the highway caused by the test. Three use of four emergency ambulances, a call was sent to the District Warden, and a truck with more than 1,000 gallons of water to the area. The test was a success in that it showed the area was a high priority area for protection. The test was a success in that it showed the area was a high priority area for protection. The test was a success in that it showed the area was a high priority area for protection.
Roosevelt Views Strikers Liable For Army Duty
 then becomes liable for Army service, the president said. "We are not going to have any more strikers who are liable for Army duty," he said. "We are going to have a law that will make it clear that any man who strikes while he is liable for Army duty is liable for Army duty."
 "The nation's 500,000 striking coal miners were confronted today with a momentous choice. Obeying President Roosevelt's command to return to work by Monday or striking by the union's half-century old refusal of the coal without a contract with the operators.
 Reaction from the idle coal fields was sparse and wary. The president gave the strikers four days to think it over, and to consider these possibilities:
 1—Advance points of view as coal supplies dwindle, steel and production plummeted, and the war effort would be delayed.
 2—Loss of their deferment from military duty, which has started already in Alabama and Tennessee by gubernatorial order.
 3—Involvement of laws affecting many coal diggers are.
 4—Use of Federal troops to protect the mines.
 Whether any of these possibilities will be chosen is uncertain. The union's position is weak. The president's position is strong. The president's position is strong. The president's position is strong.

Passes Physical Tests Despite His Appendix
 Waterbury, June 4—(Special)—Severe nausea overcame Dr. Ian C. Fink when he started a series of examinations for entrance into the Army Medical Corps, an examination he was prepared to undergo in his native Waterbury, Conn.
 The young physician knew what the "royal road" would be. Finishing the last paper, he hurried to Waterbury hospital, where he underwent the tests. He underwent an appendectomy last night.
 "Asked about his condition after the tests, Dr. Fink's colleagues were not surprised at the results. They said he was a "dandy" and that he was "just as good as dead."
 "He's all right now," said his colleagues.
