HIGHWAY TO HER HEART

Chapter 13

The course that Penny and Cleve were following took them along the Peace River in the general direction of Fort St. John. They went along the stream, but never very close to it now. Deep cut banks, rocks and driftwood were the show. It was impossible to walk there and make any progress so they had climbed the long, deep slope of the river valley to its top where the ground was more level.

The day following Cleve's injury Penny estimated that they had traveled only four miles. Cleve had to pause every little while to rest. The land they were traversing was cluttered thick with brush. Branches kept snapping back, no matter how careful they were.

When they made camp, Cleve said, "I guess we're well, but tomorrow I'll be feeling better."

"I'm sure you will," Penny said. "But you're still flushed. His eyes had a strange glassy look. Cleve, vainly checked his pulse. If you'd just listen to me, Cleve, we'd stop and rest for a day or two. It's not worth the risk."

He forced a laugh. "Not on my account."

"If you should play out, what would happen to us then?"

Cleve waved the possibility away by law to advertise that he was not a man to be trifled with. "We can't be more than five or ten miles from Long Portage. If there's any trail on the river at all, we should meet it by some body here. Perhaps, wangle another canoe."

"Possibly," answered Penny. "From Long Portage it's just twenty miles to the mouth of Moose Creek."

And from there, twenty-five miles to Le Pre's shack," said Penny.

"They were gazing at an inventory of the miles. Penny said, "I've been thinking of you for a long time. I like what you're doing. You're a man of action. You're a man of action
