He told the committee that the strike pilots "strongly" favor general use of the instrument landing system for bringing down planes in bad weather rather than the ground control approach system. He said they believe too much margin for error exists in the latter system "at its present state of development."

At the same, he emphasized that the association is convinced that the first steps in improving the safety record should be general standardization and improvement of landing facilities at airports.

He also pointed out that there should be closer cooperation between Federal aviation agencies and the airline pilots whose lives bring them closer to the actual safety problem than anyone else.

Rear Admiral J. W. Reeves, commander of the Naval Air Transport service, read to the committee a statement in which he expressed his opinion that the service's operation which he previously presented to the Senate Commerce committee, also conducting an inquiry into plane disasters.

Milwaukee was virtually snow-bound following a snowfall of 18 inches. Similar conditions were reported in many communities throughout the entire snow belt extending from Illinois into eastern Nebraska.

Federal forecasters in Chicago reported a fall of 20 inches at Alpena, Mich., in less than 24 hours, the heaviest throughout the snow-belt. They predicted an additional heavy fall for the mid-west region. However, snow continued to fall in parts of Michigan and Wisconsin today.

Meanwhile frigid blasts moved from the north and west and were expected to sweep through Illinois and Indiana tomorrow, temperatures dropping to 20 below zero in parts of Michigan, northern Wisconsin and North Dakota.

As the midwest averted and slushed through ice and snow, unseasonably mild weather continued along the eastern seaboard. The mercury climbed to 79 in Washington, D. C., yesterday, the warmest Jan. 30 in the capital's history. Philadelphia, 70 nearly matched the 72 in New Orleans while the two hottest spots were in Miami and Jacksonville, Fla., each reporting 82.

Statehood Aspiration Of Hawaii Since 1900

Representative in Congress Thinks Territory's Chance Better in '47 Than Ever Before

By James Marlow Washington, Jan. 31.—Hawaii wants to be a state and may be well make the grade this year, says Representative Joseph R. Farrington.

At least his representative in Congress thinks Hawaii's chance for "state action" are better in 1947 than ever before.

Hawaii has tried to become a state ever since Congress made it a territory in 1900.

Before anything can be done congressional committees will have to hold hearings.

Farrington expects one of them to be the House Committee on Public Lands to start hearings within a couple of weeks.

He says Representative Welch, California Republican and chairman of the committee, told him this week:

Committee awaits reports from Hawaii. He said that the committee is as soon as the War, Navy and Interior departments can make reports on Hawaii.

Here is the history which led up to the present situation.

Hawaii—a group of Pacific Islands 2,400 miles from San Francisco—was discovered in 1778 by Capt. James Cook, an Englishman.

In the following years the representatives of many nations settled there with the natives.

By the middle of the 19th century Hawaii had its own laws and legislature, under a king. The reigning queen was deposed in 1857.

A republic was set up then. Congress in 1898 annexed the islands, and, in 1900, made them a territory, the last step before statehood.

It has been a territory since. It has a governor, appointed by the U. S. president; two Federal judges; a U. S. attorney and marshal; other officials connected with government departments; its own local laws and judges; its own elected Legislature, with a 15-man Senate and a 30-man House.

Off-Year Vote Plan Approved

Three Other Proposals For Constitutional Amendments Favored

Hartford, Jan. 31.—Veterans' housing legislation will occupy the spotlight today when the subject will be debated at a public hearing in the hall of the House before an audience expected to equal that in attendance at last Friday's tumultuous veterans' bonus session.

Foremost among yesterday's legislative activities was the tentative approval by the General Assembly Constitutional Amendment committee of four proposals for "off-year" elections of state officers for four-year terms.

The other tentatively endorsed amendments would require a two-thirds majority for passage of a governor's veto, give pro-tem judges terms of four years, instead of two, and permit the General Assembly to establish its own offices for retaining forfeited citizenship rights.

Several appropriation bills called for grants totalling more than $2,000,000 were introduced by legislators during the day as well as a proposal to permit the appointment of two or more panels to assist the State Mediation and Arbitration Board in handling cases.

Measures also were presented seeking a $4,500,000 bond issue for dormitories, faculty housing and a swimming pool at the University of Connecticut, and an appropriation of $500,000 for the State Commission on Forest and Wildlife.

Others propose the creation of a $200,000 fund for the care of the Newington Home for Crippled Children, and a $200,000 student health and infirmary building at the University of Connecticut.

Rep. Irving Prayn (R., Colbrook) introduced in the House four bills based on the "decentralization for liberty" program of Col. Thomas Hawes of Farmington. Similar legislation was defeated two years ago.

The measure, based on Hawes' proposals to create "the Connecticut Trust Fund, Inc." in the interest of small manufacturing and commercial enterprises, and a "Connecticut Home and Farm Finance corporation," call for:

1. A $20,000,000 capital stock issue to make loans available to small manufacturing and commercial outfits.

2. A $10,000,000 debenture issue to provide financial assistance in acquiring homes and farms in Connecticut.

3. Creation of a cooperative division within the State Development commission to encourage the formation of cooperative organizations.

4. Establishment of a five-man body to assist the tax commissioner in studying the feasibility of partial tax exemption for small homes valued at $6,500 or less and farms at $7,500 or less.

Military men privately have expressed the opinion that the general and admirals could reach a speedy decision under ordinary circumstances but that they were stymied by political considerations.

Some claim no progress can be made until such political barriers are removed.

By being a state, Hawaii would have two representatives and two senators; it would get all the Federal benefits any state gets; and it would elect its own governor.

The civilian population is about 320,000. Hawaii has 4,000 square miles of land, more than Rhode Island and Connecticut together.

Sugar and pineapples are its chief products for export.

Since 1900 the Hawaiian Legislature has petitioned Congress 14 times to make the territory a state.

There have been a number of congressional investigations to see whether Hawaii was fit to be a state.

Last year a congressional committee went there, came back and it would elect its own officials.

With this Congress only a month old, already various congressmen have introduced a dozen bills to make Hawaii a state.

Farrington didn't predict statehood this year. He didn't predict "more action" this year than ever before.

For Hawaii to become a state, the would have to be approved by Congress would pass an act letting Hawaiians to draw up a state constitution. When the Hawaiians approved it, by vote, it would come here.

What We'll Do About It

Our State Department has formally preferred charges against the character of the recent election in Poland. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg has taken the floor of the Senate to back up the State Department protest. Both the State Department and Senator Vandenberg's speech emphasize the same point: that repeated promises given by the Polish government to the American people, promises given in return for concessions from the West—have been clearly broken. It is not the fact that American diplomacy has been cheated which rouses most; the worst thing that the people of Poland themselves have been lied out of a free expression of their own opinion and sentiment at the polls.

What is not clear, either in the State Department protest or in Senator Vandenberg's speech, is the question of what America proposes to do about this situation. It is almost impossible to repeat such accomplished facts, or to recall the diplomatic concessions we made on the basis of our assurance of free elections in Poland. And it is obvious enough that we do not intend to attempt any such repeat. The state Department makes it clear that we intend to continue diplomatic relations with Poland. Senator Vandenberg indicated, in his speech, that his endeavor was to be sure that the facts are made and kept clear, presumably for the world's guidance in future dealings with both Russia and Poland.

Meanwhile, a development inside Poland itself offers very convincing proof of what kind of regime has been functioning there—proof even more conclusive than the opinions of any visiting observers. This proof comes in the manifesto of the victorious regime setting forth what are now going to be the new conditions of life in Poland. Now that the rigged election has been won, the manifesto says in effect, the masters of Poland are going to relax their grip. Beneficial reforms are to be put into effect and the new constitution to be drawn up. The Polish people are to be guaranteed freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and the right of public assembly. "The new Constitution," says this manifesto, "will guarantee the liberty of conscience and religious tenets, particularly the rights of the Catholic Church."

This manifesto is rather eloquent, then, in that it has promised for the future so clearly emphasize the tragic lack of the past. This manifesto may point the way toward what may be our future policy with Poland. Since we are not likely to be able to undo the past, our effort is likely to be to play for such improvements in the future, to hope for and to encourage any evolution of this government which has raised power by undemocratic methods into a regime more acceptable by western democratic and diplomatic standards.

We seem to be currently engaged in the same kind of policy toward another dictatorship, that in Argentina. There a dictatorship of the right is in control, having got there by undemocratic methods. There, too, we are beginning to realize that we have no way of undoing its accession to power, and we are, therefore, tending toward a policy in which our encouragement and praise will be given for whatever progress the regime which has come into power through dictatorial methods does make in the direction of democracy. We seem likely now to adopt a similar attitude toward the regime in Poland.

WATKINS of Manchester

Boyles COLUMN

(Hal Boyle has pitched camp in a strange isolated community he discovered on the banks of the Potomac called Washington, D. C. Today our vast pocket Marco Polo presents more on the qualities of its inhabitant.)

Washington.—My notebook is full of horror this day. I have just returned to my camp from a day spent in the great stone towers where the two main Washington tribes—the "Democrats" and the "Republicans"—hold their councils.

Both tribes appear to react in ancestor worship. Each has set up statues of its previous chief in the meeting halls, and their halcyon names are often invoked. This must be a very old civilization indeed—lost forever originally founded by some early heroes who found themselves here. He is beloved by both tribes.

Italian-American bearing striking resemblance to him is depicted in the garb of the 18th century. He also was named George Washington. Both men are still known as "the father of the country." It is indeed puzzling.

Harvesting Sacrificial Ceremony.—Now I must relate the harrowing sacrificial ceremony I witnessed after supper unobserved into a stone dungeon called a "committee room."

August sunbeams from the two tribes were seated in padded chairs behind the sacrificial altar, where the ceremony—known as an "open hearing"—was held.

The victim was led to a table before the senators, who questioned him at length. The man was a sub-chiefman of some kind who labored in one of the huge government huts, and I could not determine the charge against him.

Perhaps sacrilegious utterances against the tribal laws—referred to as "political programs." Machine Magpies Voice.—In any case he was compelled to speak into a machine which magnified his voice to help the senators detect any lie. From time to time, unless unfeeling natives of the village who sat in the room to observe the sacrifice uttered blood-curdling cries.

$10,000 Quota Set for Drive

Tomorrow, February 1, the drive for $10,000 for the Manchester Community Y gets under way and Chairman Mark Holmes with his general committee, consisting of Frank Mackowski, Mrs. Raymond Thors and Herbert Greenberger expressed high hopes of raising this fund in a relatively short time.

A full director's meeting was held yesterday noon at the Y with lunch being served to the business men of fund raising was discussed. Beside the general committee, the following candidates were appointed to head teams for the forthcoming drive: R. E. Anderson, Thomas Bentley, James Blair, C. R. Burr, Harold Burr, Edgar Clarke, R. E. Ferguson, William Fooks, W. G. Gandy, Charles Crockett, Ernie Larson, Harold O. Norton, J. E. Hens, Matthew Griswold, Thomas Rogers, Mrs. Maude Sherrard, Saul Silverstein, Wallis Strickland and Rev. A. L. Williams.

Letters are being sent out to the townspeople, and each Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday of the month of February a Plying Squadron will be sent out to cover the town. Two teams of twenty-four persons will cover different parts of Manchester, the areas to be covered by the Plying Squadron to be announced in the Manchester Herald.

An extensive telephone campaign will be conducted by Mrs. James W. Farr and her committee.

Farmers Plan Their Own Bill

Hartford, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Connecticut farmers intend to submit their own bill to the state Legislature concerning the employment of youth in agricultural work.

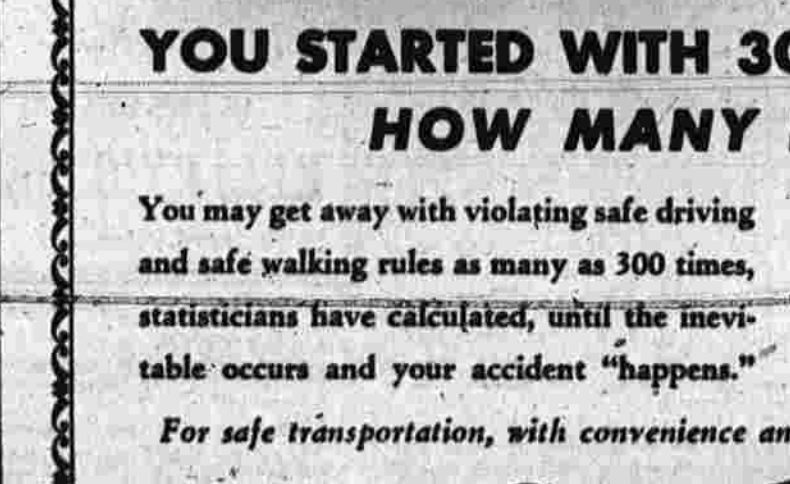

More than 25 representatives of commodity and other farm groups attended a meeting here yesterday under sponsorship of the Connecticut State Farm Bureau federation and approved proposals made by a committee, headed by L. Lee Hand of Wilson.

The measure would establish maximum daily and weekly working hours for farm minors under 16 years of age employed in agriculture. Fines could be imposed on employers who violated the provisions. The bill also would require school guardians who permitted minors to work in violation of the regulations.

Other employment conditions also would be subject to control. Exact wording of the bill was left to the committee. Harry L. Pars of Guilford, Connecticut State Groups member, and another representative of his group have been asked to aid in preparing the final draft of the measure.

Railroad passenger fares in the United States were reduced from an average of about 2.01 cents a mile in 1900 to about 1.87 cents a mile in 1946.
