Could Happen Here: The following is a probable main street conversation in Manchester next Tuesday morning.

Blinker: Vote yes? Thinker: Many thanks? Blinker: Yes.

Blinker: Well, it's a unique chance we have here in Connecticut to register a Popular vote for peace.

Blinker: Peace! I should have paid more attention. Why didn't they tell us about it in the papers?

Thinker: They did. The Herald had editorialized on it and printed letters to the editor about it.

Blinker: I never read editorials. But I didn't see the question on the machine. Where was it?

Thinker: Neither, you chump. It shows all the papers, right? Blinker: Yes.

Connecticut Yankee

Any one who believes, as we do, in the merit of the high-level political campaign, in which the voters are treated as if they were the repositories of a certain degree of intelligence, gets precious little opportunity to come, but it is going to come.

We remember that, two years ago, we were high on the late James H. McConamy, only to have him, in the closing days of his campaign, turn on us.

The voters have shown their faith in the high vote in the recent election, and I hope and trust that the Board of Directors will act accordingly.

Reply to Mr. Spies: With a "will small spirit" of my own, I must protest as a Republican in general and as an Open Forum letter writer in particular.

State Senate Control Question Overlooked

Shifts Back and Forth Unlike House Which Is Likely to Remain Republican... Hartford, Oct. 29.—(AP)—One of the questions to be answered next Tuesday, largely overlooked by all but active politicians, is when the party will control the state Senate.

House Always Republican
