Admirals See Navy Morale At Low Ebb

"Admiral and high standing" of the navy whose names were listed to them, merit full consideration.
He noted, though, that they were not official documents officially released and said, too, that there was a possibility that propaganda on behalf of the Navy might have been the motive behind their publication.

It is likely to sit well with those who think the world had best make gradual approach to peace and unity it can. By this view, it is better to take something than nothing, better to have some kind of law outlawing the use of atomic bombs than to have no law at all. Perhaps, so goes the gradual view, if we pledge ourselves not to begin the next war by using atomic bombs, perhaps in time human nature will get good enough to get rid of war itself.

For ourselves, we distrust the great. We think our true problem is not merely to prohibit ourselves from using atomic bombs, or still more terrible biological weapons, but to forbid ourselves the basic horror, the basic inhumanity, which is that we should have to get very much better, or at least allow its existing better part to govern more, in accepting of a hurry. We think it has to aim not at living through atomic war, but at living through peace, positive peace.
