Many women combine marriage and career, successfully. They bring fresh ideas into their homes each day and never are at a loss to keep conversation in an interesting vein.

Often the reason for divorce cited by errant husbands is that their wives are too busy with the house and children to be company, loving and understanding.

Lydall Brook Being Cleared

North End Residents Assured Action Will End Pollution Conditions

North End residents, aroused over the pollution of Lydall Brook by manufacturing wastes, were assured today by Director Richard Martin of the State Water Commission that action is currently being taken to clear up the condition.

In a letter to Attorney Vincent P. McFadden, who is an interested party in the matter, Martin stated that it is anticipated a survey of corrective measures now being made will be advanced to the point of preliminary planning by August 1, with construction to follow.

Other local water pollution conditions also are being pushed for cleaning, notably those on the Hockonum river and its south branch.

Results of hearing on a bearing on local pollution of streams was called by the State Water Commission and local firms held to be contributing to such pollution were required to initiate measures within 30 days that would lead to a correction of the situation.

Residents at the north end, apparently the most concerned of the local residents, stated that the Lydall brook pollution was offensive in the extreme and was a general detriment to the neighborhood.

Recently Attorney McFadden asked what was being done to clear the brook.

Director Martin's letter in his reply, Director Martin stated:

"This is in reply to your letter inquiring as to the status of the program for the abatement of pollution of Lydall Brook in Manchester."

Board O.K.'s 18 Room Broad Street School

Directors Authorize General Manager to Go Ahead With Plans For Its Construction

General Manager George H. Waddell was authorized by the Board of Directors last night to proceed with the preparation of plans for an 18-room school on Broad street.

The directors also emphasized the need of economy in the planning and construction of the Broad street plant.

The action was taken after the Board of Education and the School Building committee requested that the board record its previous instructions to Waddell to prepare a 12-room school on Broad street. After plans for an 18-room plant had been defeated in the March referendum, the board had directed Waddell to start on preparations for a 12-room school on the same site.

Chairman Charles S. House of the Board of Education directed that body before the directors and pointed out that the Adams and Greely survey indicated a need for approximately 100 new classrooms here in the next 10 years.

Waddell had set writing the building committee to get the request was set forth in a letter to the directors from Acting Secretary Katherine D. Bourne, which when asked for his opinion, also recommended an 18-room plant for the Broad street area. He also pointed out that he, and not the Board of Directors had set the $25,000 per classroom ceiling on the previous plan for a 12-room school.

Walter H. Hubbard raised the objection that the directors, in their motion, set no cost-per-classroom ceiling and he felt such a limit should be set in proportion to the increased construction costs. In answering, the directors stated that they were not qualified to set such a ceiling since they are not builders and do not know the intricacies of building.

Director Christie McCormick pointed out that the details of construction planning are up to the general manager and the School Building committee, who have the responsibility for final approval rests with the directors.

Walter Mahoney suggested the possibility of price controls returning construction planning to a lower level and the further possibility of school building by the state's and St. Bridge's churches. House answered that the Board of Education, while conscious of aid guard-
