Urges Teacher Raises To Save Town's Staff

Education Board Chairman House Presents Proposal: Adds $176,000 in 2 1/2 Years

Presenting a salary increase proposal that in the next two and one-half years would add $176,000 to Manchester's education budget, Chairman of the Board of Education Charles S. House last night told the Board of Directors the new basic wage plan would add $44,486 to the budget this year, $50,543 in 1952-53 and $81,000 in 1953-54. Asserting that unless the increases are approved Manchester stands to lose its "competitive position" in bidding for the services of qualified teachers and employees, Chairman House said the new scale will only bring Manchester in line with other school systems. He cited figures from other nearby towns now in the process of granting substantial pay boosts.

"Take What's Left" Manchester House said, might shortly find that if it maintains its present pay scale it will be in the position of having to "take what is left after the best have been removed by more attractive offers." Only the loyalty now of many older faithful teachers and employees, he said, has preserved the staff even to this point. House said that the wage question had been fully explored with the education teaching and administrative staffs, and the wage levels proposed, to go into effect February 1, are acceptable. The basic pay increase is graduated rather than being an across the board jump, but it approximates 10 per cent in the lower and middle wage brackets, based on House said, on considerations of merit and experience as well as "cost of living."

Start at Once On School Job

Grading immediately for Broad St. Building Endorsed by Board

The rough grading job on the site of the new Broad street school will be negotiated at night. The board of directors last night authorized General Manager George Waddell to prepare details and ask for bids on the two-acre wood-clearance and grading job at the earliest moment. This, the board indicated, there will be no delay for any delay. The moment plans are ready on the school for contractor's bid.

Separate bidding on the grading job also was thought to be the cheapest method by General Manager Waddell, who said that if the general building contract, the architect would get a fee based on the inclusion of the clearing cost, and moreover, probably any general contractor would submit the grading making a profit himself on handling the deal.

Plans Soon Ready

The plans on the new elementary school, it is expected, will be ready and approved by next week. The general manager said the grading job is a large one and might take three weeks. In making a note that rough grading work started at once, Director Raymond Cooper said he was concerned that the board members, with the possibility that delay in some government building restriction. He said that the school is out of the picture. The delay in getting started, it was pointed out, was due to the need for conference in perfecting the plans.

Every building detail has had to be approved by fire, state, local education, building committee and director authority. Waddell said, besides which the plan is of an alternative type, providing for construction either in brick, steel and block, or in reinforced concrete, whichever may be cheaper. But all agreed that the school has slipped now, and it is the month to get up action for an actual building start at the earliest moment.

A Great Human Cause

The annual "March of Dimes" originated as a result of the dramatic example of a polio victim functioning in the Presidency of this country. But after that beginning, Manchester has had dramatic examples of its own—examples of Manchester people, old and young, coming back from the attacks of one of the most dread of diseases and resuming their normal functioning in their community.

It is this work of cure and rehabilitation which is made possible by the annual procession of dimes in this and every other American community. By this relatively small amount of giving, on the part of the individual, the collective battle against the disease and its effects is maintained with increasing efficiency and good results.

There is no effort which becomes the American people more. There is no effort which brings such rich returns as our disease which at least this one disease is being met, and will continue to be met, no matter where it strikes, with the best medical care which is the best that medical science can devise.

There is one other insurance award involved in this giving—the determination to meet this disease with its full resources, there will be discovered not merely the means to handle it when it does occur, but the way to prevent it in the first place.

This great human cause, this spirited and determined attack upon one of the great scourges of mankind, is something every one of us should be proud and willing to join. Here in Manchester, Attorney John Mrosek, chairman of the 1951 drive, and his volunteer campaign organization, will be giving much more than money. They will be giving time and energy to the business of making it easy for the rest of us to join in the March. Let us be sure that we do, that we send our own dime marching on so that human beings may walk.

When Law Is Born

Some American thinkers are proclaiming their opinion that events in Korea have demonstrated the complete fiasco of the United Nations. They say the world's first venture at the enforcement of international law is a total loss.

Other orators are busy proclaiming that not even our friends in Europe take the United Nations seriously. They say the world's first venture at the enforcement of international law is a total loss.

Such claims are in a realm where everything is, of course, highly debatable.

But we find what seems to us a good answer to both these claims in a despatch from Paris to the Christian Science Monitor. In this despatch, Roscoe Drummond undertakes a survey of European opinion with regard to the United Nations action in Korea.

"Although the United States bears the principal brunt of the Korean fighting," Mr. Drummond writes, "the military forces of 15 members of the United Nations from Turkey to the Philippines are engaged in the defense of the South Korean Republic."

"It is for this reason, among others, that the governments and people of western Europe read the news from the Korean front with anxiety and concern similar to that of Americans."

"While the shifting lines of battle have merged the near unanimity with which western Europe greeted and supported the UN action, I think it would be accurate to summarize dominant opinion in Europe in these terms: 'The United Nations have not yet achieved their purpose in Korea, the free world's safety and security from creeping aggression by Soviet communism are not yet secured, and the United Nations have not yet been able to defend the Korean Republic through the United Nations.'

Western Europe, the British Commonwealth, and the United States, the heart of collective security, have demonstrated to the world today for having aggression cannot be had for nothing, that they cannot be had cheaply. It is now evident to Moscow, and not merely by words, that the free world is standing together in mutual defense, and this is a deterrent to light-hearted aggression."

This report from Mr. Drummond leads us back in our imagination to a picture which is constantly recurring to us in relation to the United Nations in Korea. The picture is that of some early western American community settling about the business of curbing and restraining its own lawlessness for near. Usually, the first attempt at such law enforcement thing was a voluntary thing—the United States army in Korea followed, later on, by formalization of the procedures of law enforcement—a little like the United Nations General Assembly's adoption of the Acheson Plan.

Very often, we are sure, these early attempts at law enforcement ran into more guns than they could handle at the moment. Very often, we are sure, they were hailed of complete initial success in their effort to stamp out lawlessness. Very often, however, they were temporarily derailed because this or that outlaw defied them successfully for a time, or because cynical citizens did not believe that law and order could be established in such unruly communities.

But always, in the end, the knowledge that they had determined upon law and began to organize for law had its sure effect. Always, in the end, the community in question did succeed in establishing the kind of law its best citizens wanted. Always, in the end, those who lived such rich returns as our disease which at least this one disease is being met, and will continue to be met, no matter where it strikes, with the best medical care which is the best that medical science can devise.

Every fledgling movement toward law survived, in the end. Every well-intended force of lawlessness was, in the end, defeated. We don't doubt that, on the long road to this result, the forces of lawlessness won many individual gun battles. But so long as these battles did not result in the death of the intent of ally, they were not victories. They were merely bloody postponements of the inevitable.

The United Nations went into Korea like the first citizen's posse of one of these western frontier towns. It has met with strong opposition. It has not yet evolved the pose of leadership and the exercise of decision which belong to any well-established law enforcement agency. But its final resolution from this first step is as inevitable as that from the first volunteer posse in some western town to the placid cop of today whose mere presence, even when he just directs traffic, is a valid assurance of community peace and order.

Connally's Protest

Senator Connally has sharply criticized the United Nations action in Korea, and has urged the State Department to accept the latest United Nations cease fire proposal, particularly without notifying Congress.

And State Department officials have replied.

Their reply is that the United States has made no departure from its own basic policy, and that what was necessary if it was to maintain any unity of policy within the United Nations.

But the real truth is sharper than that. The real truth is that this country, in its State Department policy at least, is trying to run out on the support of the United Nations. But the decision on these matters were left to a point blank vote in the Senate, our escape from these positions would never be agreed point blank to the admission of Chinese Communists to the United Nations. It is in general world opinion that that admission must come. Almost immediately after our first intervention in Formosa, the

Barstow Reports On Trade Outlook

Neither America nor anyone in it can afford to quit selling for a single day. Gene Flack, general manager of Evinrude, at the 1951 National Motor Boat Show. He reported that the civilian supply of boats and motors has been cut back sharply to provide for military needs.

In his talk to the dealers, Flack, sales director of Sunbeam, Blount and one of the country's most prominent sales executives, warned that the tax burden will increase to the point where the standard of living must shrink unless business continues at this present high level. Selling, he said, offers the only solution to keeping a business prosperous enough to carry the greater part of the tax load.

Mr. Barstow said boating enthusiasts in Manchester who place their orders early will have an opportunity for new thrills this season with the new equipment available. A new 20-horsepower Big Twin motor by Evinrude, he said, promises to provide all the thrills of bigger boats at a fraction of the cost.

South Coventry

Mrs. Pauline Little
 Coventry 4-221

Thirty-eight of forty members of the Alfred G. Crickmore family gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Crickmore Sunday for a mass celebration of five birthdays within nine days and a family reunion. The birthdays ranged from three years to 84 years. The youngest Crickmore, son of Mrs. Alan Leonard Crickmore and the late Alan Crickmore, was three years of age on January 21. His grandmother Mrs. Alfred G. Crickmore was 84 years of age on January 13. The other birthdays falling in between were those of Mrs. Helen Bond and her son, William Leslie, both of Scotland and both falling on Monday and Mrs. (Edward) Elizabeth "Betty" Pease of Williamette on Thursday of this week.

The Sunday gathering included the following members: Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Crickmore and family and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pease and family, all of Williamette; Mr. and Mrs. John Haloburda and family, Mrs. Alan Leonard Crickmore and family, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cargo and family, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Crickmore and their family, 100 High street, all of Coventry. The two members still present were Mr. and Mrs. Irving Polakoff of Barre, Vt., Mrs. Polakoff is the former Eunice Crickmore.

The name of Edwin Kohler as an assistant exhibitor was inadvertently omitted in the recent report of officers of the Civil Service of Troop 57 and the committee. An investigation is extending all months not already given mothers who care to join the group to feel free to do so. The civil committee suggests that all interested mothers contact Submaster William H. Kenyon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jacquemin of North Coventry are the parents of a daughter born Saturday at the Hartford hospital. Mrs. Jacquemin is the former Josephine Hecker, daughter of Charles Hecker of North Coventry.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Kingsbury, Sr., John F. Kingsbury, Jr., and Miss Cora Kingsbury attended a party Friday evening in honor of the ninth birthday of their grandson and nephew Carl Tomlinson at his home in Wapping, John F. Jr. was home for the week-end from the Yale Divinity School in New Haven. Miss Cora was home for the week-end from Falls Village where she is in the home economic department at the Housatonic Valley Regional High school.

Lawrence R. Robertson, Jr., spent the week-end at his home in North Coventry from Ft. Devens, Mass.

A demonstration on "What To Look For When Starting To Buy" will be given during the Lecture's Hour of the Coventry Grange No. 75, Thursday night following the business meeting at the Grange Hall at 8 p. m. Mr. Ladd, manager of the Montgomery Ward Company in Manchester and members of his staff will give the demonstration. At the 8 o'clock meeting Mrs. Cora Webb, Tolland county home demonstration agent will demonstrate "Working Heights."

But the real truth is sharper than that. The real truth is that this country, in its State Department policy at least, is trying to run out on the support of the United Nations. But the decision on these matters were left to a point blank vote in the Senate, our escape from these positions would never be agreed point blank to the admission of Chinese Communists to the United Nations. It is in general world opinion that that admission must come. Almost immediately after our first intervention in Formosa, the

Hebron

Hebron people were saddened to learn of the death of the Hartford Hospital, at 11 p. m. Saturday, of an elderly woman, Mrs. Anna Thompson, who was a teacher in the Hebron Green school a number of years ago.

The state school building committee has approved plans for a four-room addition to the Hebron elementary school, made necessary by the increased enrollment. This will have to be taken up at a town meeting next month. Monday afternoon the matter of the school teachers met with the school board at its Thursday evening meeting, when the matter of a salary increase and possible bonus for teachers was discussed. The Rev. George M. Milne and Mrs. William W. Hammond will represent the board of education in considering this question, and Mrs. Floyd A. Fogel, Mrs. Archie Green and Ignatius Lombardi will represent the elementary school staff. The board meeting of the Rev. Mr. Milne to act as chairman member of the Civitan Deacons Council to coordinate action in the town and state.

The Hebron Girl Scouts have decided to divide into two sections, the former and younger girls. May Sherry has been elected president, Dolores P. Harter and Lucilla A. Miller, as treasurer, for the coming year. The younger girls will be divided into the Daisy Patrol, with Patricia Harris as their patrol leader. The older girls, in the Lone Pine patrol, with Patricia Sherry as their patrol leader, her sister, Helen, is troop leader. The girls meet weekly at the Hebron elementary school.
