Connecticut Yankee
 By A. H. O.

At the outset of his administration, the most important thing about Governor John Davis Lodge's concept of his incoming relation with the General Assembly is the fact that he has a legitimate interest in it.

The fact is the background for a noble gubernatorial resolve. Having been a legislator himself, and having experienced personally the feeling of legislative dignity which results from the executive branch, Lodge comes into his Connecticut executive office with a keen sense of the value of legislative action.

His concept is that the Legislature is its own free agent. It is neither his own inclination nor the duty to try to make it one way or another; and that, as a responsible executive, he must not bear too much responsibility for what the Legislature may or may not do.

This is going to be an interesting experiment. If it is successful, it is going to be of the highest importance in achieving a good ranking and a good atmosphere for the new state administration.

Yet, from cynical experience, we must say that it has a chance of being successful only if it really betrays itself. . . . If the Legislature will do a good and creditable job, will be able to get on to the accomplishment needs of the executive and the party itself as a whole.

But as the average legislator goes, there is almost certain to come a time when the Legislature seems headed for failure, seeks to do anything, seems to have lost sight of administration goals.

On such occasions in the past, Governors who have also begun office with an intent of spotless deference toward the legislature have sometimes wound up in a more furious battle with the legislature than would have occurred if they had taken stronger positions in the first place. We can well remember how the last Governor who had been a legislator, Raymond E. Baldwin, wound up on the floor of the House, on the evening of the 14th of the House, from the leaders of his own party.

He had finally become impatient with the indecision of the legislative branch, stepped in with a blunt and forceful recommendation of his own, and that brought the House down on him, heavily.

The present legislature, unless it is indeed exceptional, is bound to try the patience of any no-frills executive. The real formula for success when they are light and almost invisible, but their nominations, . . .

But, at any rate, just as the new state administration is beginning to have a de-emphasis of the professional publicity angle, we are also opening with a marked consciousness of dignity and responsibility to the legislature. The honest man and the whip have both been hidden away, down in the labyrinthine, either region of the Capitol basement, where there is no easy return.

Pop Bottle Diplomacy
 James Reaton, the distinguished roving correspondent of the New York Times, describes the reaction of Secretary of State Dean Acheson during the past year in the following words:

"Last January, Secretary of State Dean Acheson was ridiculing the Chinese Nationalists in public, exhorting the Dutch and the French to recognize that revolution had taken place in Asia, and emphasizing that the first rule of United States policy in the Far East was to refrain from doing anything that would aid the aims of the Chinese Communist and the Soviet Communist together."

"Now Mr. Acheson is all for giving more help to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, insisting that military considerations must determine United States policy toward the future of China. . . . In conducting a policy of economic sanctions against the Peking regime, and urging the United Nations to get together on a policy of active action against that regime. . . ."

"What is the most important single fact in Asia today? Mr. Acheson asked just a year ago. It was, he said, that the Soviet Union was continuing its expansionist policies against the northern provinces of China. And what did this mean for the United States? It means something very, very significant, he replied. It means that nothing we do, and nothing that we say must be allowed to obscure the reality of this fact. All the efforts of propaganda will not obscure it. The only thing that can obscure it is the folly of ill-conceived adventures on our part which easily could do so, and I urge you to be thinking about these foolish adventures to remember that we must not seize the unenviable position which the Russians have carved out for themselves.

"We must not undertake to defeat from the Russians to ourselves the righteous anger and the wrath, and the hatred of the Chinese people, which must develop. It would be folly to deflect it to ourselves. . . . That, I suggest, is the first and greatest rule in regard to the formulation of American policy toward Asia."

Mr. Reaton has a somewhat charitable explanation of how Mr. Acheson has come to be the leading proponent of those very policies which, a year ago, he himself labeled "folly." It is that the Chinese Communists have not been behaving in such a manner as to make Mr. Acheson comfortable in his policies of a year ago. Yet, Mr. Reaton warns, the fundamental of the situation in Asia have not changed from what they were as Mr. Acheson saw them a year ago.

The Alsop, writing in the Current on the same day, had an explaining statement in a kindly, discussing the present course of our Asian policy, the Alsop says:

"The worst of this situation is that this highly dubious course has quite evidently been taken as a concession to public and Congressional opinion. A gesture had to be made. It was played because of the natural, bitter and universal indignation against the Chinese Communists."

"But this method of making policy evidently implies a belief that the American Congress and American public are incapable of listening to the truth. . . . The Alsop seems to feel that Congress and the country cannot understand the desirability of a major war in the Far East, cannot be made to see how the very different and far

Attention All Building Contractors, Architects, and Anyone Now Building or Planning to Build a Structure for Which Electric Service Is Desired

An order of the Federal Government limits the amount of copper wire that the Company may use or obtain in the future and restricts the Company's ability to extend its wires along streets and in new locations.

Anyone building or planning to build a structure for which electric service is desired should call at our Main Street office for up to date information as to the availability of service as frequent changes in restrictions are expected.

The same applies in the case of a commercial or industrial customer contemplating the purchase of additional equipment and a consequent increase in electric load.

In general, available supplies of materials will be used in such a way as to furnish service to the greatest number of customers, with construction requiring the least amount of critical materials being taken care of first.

We regret exceedingly any inconvenience which may be caused our customers, and we will do our best to take care of everyone's needs. However, this government order, and others which will undoubtedly follow, all designed to aid our country's mobilization, are of necessity binding on everyone.

How to Mark Pleasantly

One of the clearest advantages of a totalitarian regime is that it can bring about, in a twinkling, a "reform" which might take the democratic process, perhaps fortunately, years and years.

The Chinese Communists have, for instance, wasted absolutely no time in carrying out to an extreme degree a policy of education for the masses. . . . The Communist rates among the more extremely "progressive" educational leaders of this country. In fact, they seem to have carried the thing quite far enough, inside a period of a few months, to make it ludicrous enough to cure American thought leaders of the notion that anything of the sort is possible.

Now and then, in this country, we hear of some community which has become "progressive" enough to abandon the institution of the report card at least a report card which carries actual marks.

"We must not undertake to defect from the Russians to ourselves the righteous anger and the wrath, and the hatred of the Chinese people, which must develop. It would be folly to deflect it to ourselves. . . . That, I suggest, is the first and greatest rule in regard to the formulation of American policy toward Asia."

PUC Grants Bus Increase

Rates Up 9.3 Per Cent Average; Will Cover Annual Current Loss

The State Public Utilities Commission Wednesday authorized the Connecticut Transportation company to increase fares on its bus routes in Connecticut. The increase varies on different routes but averages about 9.3 per cent on an overall basis. The new fares will become effective not less than five days after the company files a schedule showing the new fares with the Commission. In granting the company's application to increase fares, the Commission said that it retains jurisdiction over the authorized increases in fares to make decreases in fares that may appear proper if the company has an unexpected increase in fares. The Commission said, "It appears that the company has made a reasonable effort to effect curtailment or reduction in expenditures or to obtain increased income or other means to offset the increase." The Commission also said that it is authorized to increase fares as follows: "Where the present one-way fare is more than 30 cents, the fare may be increased 10 per cent with sufficient pennies added to make the increased fare end in 0 or 5. Where the present one-way fare is 30 cents or less, no change is granted in the majority of such fares. Where such fares are increased, the increase authorized is 10 per cent with sufficient pennies added to make the increased fare end in 0 or 5. The company did not ask to increase fares on its New Haven-Waterbury route. The company filed its request for a fare increase on October 15, 1950. The Commission held a public hearing on the application on December 18, after the company had asked a postponement from the date originally scheduled, November 30. There was no opposition to the application. Company officials testified that they had asked the fare increase mainly because of the added expenses borne by the company as the result of an Arbitration Board award increasing employees' wages in a substantial amount. The award was retroactive to October 1, 1949. The officials also testified that the company is operating at a loss of about $40,000 a year in Connecticut, and that the fare increase would offset that annual loss.

Minstrel Show In Rehearsal

Tall Cedars Preparing For Event to Be Held February 13 and 14

Nutting Forest, Tall Cedars Minstrel, will hold rehearsals on Sunday, February 4, at 3:00 p. m. in Odd Fellows hall, and on Sunday, February 11, at 2:00 p. m. there will be a dress rehearsal on the stage at the Verplanck school. An enjoyable evening is in store for those who attend the rehearsals. Considerable talent will be displayed by the cast under the able direction of Harold Turkington. Jack Gordon, Past Grand Tall Cedar of Nutting Forest, will be the introducer, and Larson Pearson, Elmer Gardner, Daniel Hair, Fred Kuyvenot, Otto Wood and Ed-ward Finney will act as end men. All of these members have given much of their time to bring their parts to perfection, and their jokes, songs and acting should prove amusing.

Sixty-two numbers will be presented by Victor Johnson and William Ritchie, Jr.

A Harber Shop Quartet with Rev. Norman Gus Peterson, Harold Turkington and Ormand West doing the honors, will bring back food menus, and should be entertaining. Although not members of the National Association of Harber Shop Quartets, it is believed that these four would rate high with the best.

Tickets have been mailed to all members of the Forest, and additional tickets may be obtained from members of the general committee. Children's tickets may be purchased at the door. Tickets are good for either performance.

Edwin Swanson is general chairman and Fred Boot and Harold Ricketford are assisting him on the ticket committee. Harold Turkington is director. A. C. Thompson in charge of make-up, W. A. Allen, publicity, Daniel Hair, Grand Tall Cedar of Nutting Forest, is in charge of end men. Also acting as members of the general committee are William Forber, John Fox, Charles Gill, Ralph Harbord, and E. Schaefer.

The public is cordially invited to attend either performance.

Lodge Faces Tough Battle On Austerity

State Institutions Set to Protest 22 Million Dollar Cut in Funds; Democrats Hit Budget

Signs were already cropping up that some agencies are out to have the Legislature's Appropriation Committee hike their budgets above the amounts recommended by the Governor in his message Thursday.

The Governor's office, a spokesman said today, will today visit state agencies who feel they should get more money. This is in line with the usual policy of the state agencies having a free hand before the Appropriations and Finance Committees.
