Columbia Soldier Bug Juices Rifles

A Columbia soldier in Korea, Sergeant Joseph R. Rabic of Chestnut Hill, Mass., has a bug juice rifle which is so effective that it is being used by the military.

Rabic, a mechanic attached to an infantry assault unit with his group when it sought to take a hill position, according to the military report, the troops were firing fast and rifle mechanics began straggling.

Rabic was sent down the hill to get some gun oil. There was none of that available, but he did find some mosquito repellent. It was greasy enough to do the job.
