More Truce Progress

For several days past, the news from the Korean negotiations has been one of deadlock featured by charges of "blackmail" on the part of the Communists. The "blackmail" was that they were holding back the list of United Nations prisoners they held, refusing to divulge it while the Communists refused to accept their plan for a wholesale exchange of all prisoners on both sides.

Today this "blackmail" has ended. The Communists have handed over their list of prisoners, and we have given them our list of prisoners, and now the only longer, dealing in the dark on the prisoner issue.

The Communist list of prisoners is small, carrying, in particular, the names of only about one fourth of the nearly 12,000 American soldiers who have officially been listed as "missing" in Korea. The UN officers fear that many of our men may have died because they did not receive proper medical treatment for their wounds. Our previous charges of Communist atrocities also come to mind.

And, in any case, the number of one side's "missing" in a war is seldom matched by the number of prisoners taken by the other side, since many deaths in action, when they are not witnessed and reported, get included in the "missing" category.

We cannot be too sure of our own facts, then, in any case, to over the number of prisoners. The important thing, perhaps, is to negotiate the safe return of those who are being held by the Communists.

And, in any event, the exchange of lists represents one more deadlock broken in the truce negotiations. Other concessions made during the past week, including Communist acceptance of the principle of troop rotation, and our acceptance of truce supervision by neutral nations instead of by the Communists and ourselves, bring the negotiators so close together in fact and in spirit that there is even a possibility that the Dec. 27 deadline for truce negotiations on the basis of the present cease-fire lines can be met. It would be quite a Christmas present for the world—this halt of the thing which might otherwise grow into World War III—if the negotiators could manage it in time. But the situation looks good even if such happy timing proves impossible.

The 14 Outside The Door

Encouraging reports from Paris say that, once Russia has once again performed its veto of the latest attempt to win admission to the United Nations for Italy, several intermediate nations will launch a move to break the East-West deadlock on the issue of new UN memberships.

This deadlock has existed since 1947, when Russia first insisted that, if Italy was to be admitted, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Finland be admitted too. Since that time, Russia has added Albania, and the Mongolian People's Republic to the list of prospective members. It is especially threatening, while the West, in addition to Italy, is seeking membership for Austria, Ceylon, Ireland, Jordan, Nepal, Portugal and South Korea.

The West has, however, steadfastly refused to bargain, insisting that each nation should be considered on its own merits which means, however, that the West believes that only nations standing on the side of the cold war should win admittance.

This deadlock has operated to keep 14 nations of varying degrees of usefulness outside the United Nations door, and this spectacle has, in turn, led to some reconsideration of the original membership standards of the new world organization.

But all the present members of

Agrees With Reed To The Editor.

I agree with Mr. Philip D. Reed's conclusion that "the evidence indicates that Russia will not deliberately precipitate another world war within the foreseeable future"—a quotation which appeared in your editorial, "A Citizen's Guess." I don't know what was his reason for saying that, but I am in agreement as to the most dissonant thermometer in town. In fact, we are a little bit ashamed to show up on cold mornings, knowing that we will, after so many years of championship, have nothing of sensational interest to offer. About ninety-nine percent of our early cold morning personality has vanished, to tell the truth.

Why is honesty so prosaic? So uninteresting? So dull? So drab? Oh, that we had back again our old reliable hair, our old dependability, our old "I don't know" which never once betrayed us!

Of the many facts contributing to military non-aggression in Europe, the one overriding fact is the great superiority we enjoy in industrial production, an advantage we hold due to a much earlier

Connecticut Yankee

By A. H. O.

In the Lodge administration's zealous attention to budget detail there is, beyond the search for efficiency and economy we have previously described, a slight ideological tinge.

This is a Republican administration, and it is a Republican administration which was as unreservedly liberal as any Connecticut has ever known. It recognized the appeal of the Bowles regime, and it has moved to combat it, or share it, by the adoption of a liberal Republican platform. In the General Assembly, it likewise visualized the liberal ghost of its predecessor still holding some claim on the affections of Connecticut voters and it participated in a liberal legislative record. It has to be classified as a liberal Republican administration.

And yet, inevitably, there are differences between the liberal Republican administration and those of a moderately liberal Republican regime.

These differences are revealing themselves especially in the realm of the state's social and economic policy. The Bowles regime, the so-called "do gooders," who rushed impetuously into one program after another, whose hearts glowed with light in discovering some new function the state could assume for the alleviation of human tragedy and misery and maladjustments which were the result of that it is impossible for the state to do too much to help its own, enjoyed something of a miracle time. Not only was the Legislature itself somewhat responsive, under the pressure of the Bowles appeal, but the Governor's office itself was often capable of finding some way to make a beginning on something the Legislature itself might not have gone for. And in instances where the "do gooders" had enlisted the sympathy of the state's bureaucracy, who do not shy away from extension of their own functioning, it was a happy time of swift acceleration in the state's role as the provider of a wide variety of human needs.

The Lodge administration is less enthusiastic about the business of extending and amplifying the state's functions in this realm. It tends toward the view that some limit to the state's capacity to absorb the headaches and discomforts and tragedies of its own citizens must be set somewhere. It does not buy into acceptance of new experiments, and it is keeping a wary eye on the status of some of those it inherited from the Bowles regime.

As a result some of the state officials who had themselves become immersed in the philosophy of the "do gooders" are being more and more, and some of the "do good" groups who function to bring pressure on the state itself are beginning to be aware of what they think is a slight edge in the attitude of the Lodge administration toward their pet projects. For making Connecticut a kinder and more humane place in which to live, some of these groups even report encountering veiled suggestions that if people themselves were kinder and more humane, there would be fewer burdens of a humanitarian nature being thrust on the state.

This which may seem common sense to the Lodge administration, is something like a throw-back to the dark ages, so far as the "do gooders" are concerned. The administration had better watch its ideological step, before it finds itself pilloried as reactionary and inhuman.

Churchill's Bold Front

If Winston Churchill had not once before persuaded Britain to lift herself by her own bootstraps, in a military moment when all seemed lost, there would be more valid skepticism with regard to the current effort of his new government to ignore what seem the hard facts with regard to Britain's economic position, too.

What the Churchill government is doing is to behave as if Britain were economically solvent. Thus, Britain is going to pay on the first of the year, both installment and interest payments due on its loans from Canada and the United States. Thus, Mr. Churchill himself is coming to Washington in January, but not, it is contended, being pointed out, to try to get the thing Britain is supposed to need most—more dollars. Thus the British government, as at the first time since the "do gooders" had the normal operation of the British foreign exchange market, is assuming the ban on the normal operation of the British foreign exchange market, and our acceptance of the British currency is stable enough to enjoy such free market conditions.

In all three instances, the Churchill government is being bold and perhaps artificially confident. Certainly, such actions are a surprise to those who have their thinking about Britain on the certainty that Britain is "broke."

But actually, as in 1940, there was, after all, the British Air Force ready, once Churchill had set the spirit, to do the deeds in the air which would keep up his seemingly bold and artificial optimism, so today Britain's economic position is not as desperate as many Americans seem to think. Britain has actually, considering the odds it has faced in impoverishment for war, managed anything the country could imagine, been performing miracles. Its production is the highest in its peace-time history. And until we came along with our insistence that Britain head back into purely military production, from which no national profit can come, Britain was well on its own feet, economically speaking. In other words, the British situation is really no marginal at all, given the Churchill temperament, the positive attitude and outlook is quite as well justified as would be an attitude of pessimism. And the attitude that Britain is going to win through now may be just as tonic, in its way, as it was back in 1940. There are times when confidence and self-respect are economic as well as military assets.

Cold Morn Champ No Longer

Honesty may well be a very fine thing, but it is no fun applied to thermometers.

For many years we enjoyed the possession of a thermometer which never failed to win us the winter morning championship of Manchester. No matter what the temperature might be elsewhere, we had one lower. It was even better than that. Not only were honest thermometers its easy prey. It was a reading lower than that of other dishonest thermometers.

It was so reliable that we never had to play the strategic position in the morning temperature game. We didn't have to wait for others to give their "my, it was cold" report, first so that we could, if necessary, make a little mental adjustment in our own report. The figure we got from this thermometer was not only lower than that of other thermometers, but also beneath even

Why are they still outside the Iron Curtain?

These and other facts no doubt influenced Mr. Reed to a considerable extent.

Before closing, I would like to pose a question. What was the underlying motive behind the recent Western disarmament proposal on one hand, and disarmament proposals on the other?

Yours very truly,

Pearson Directs Students In MHS Christmas Concert

Under the direction of G. A. French, the choir and orchestra of Manchester High School combined last night for their usual fine performance with the presentation of the 25th annual Christmas Concert at the high school auditorium. A large audience was on hand to enjoy the concert, which is one of the school's outstanding musical programs each year.

Participating groups were the MHS Orchestra, Boys and Girls Choir, A Capella Choir and the Round Table Singers. Soloists were Joyce Jarvis, soprano, and Hans Doring and Werner Vetter, natives of Germany who only recently came to this country.

Mr. Pearson, over a period of years, has developed a complete musical program at the high school which has resulted in consistently well-trained and talented orchestral and choral groups. Among the best-known of these are the A Capella Choir and the Round Table Singers.

Last night's program opened with Yoder's "Christmas Echoes" by the orchestra. The Boys and Girls Choir then rendered "Angels We Have Heard on High," a

Bristol Chief Fails To Quit His Post

Bristol, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The deadline which Mayor Daniel J. Donovan set for the resignation of Police Commissioner William F. Dutton has passed with no action from Dutton.

The mayor waited until the last possible moment before announcing that he would instruct Corporation Council Thomas J. O'Donnell to start making proceedings immediately against Dutton.

Donovan said the city attorney will prepare the charges to be heard by the city council soon.

Neither Dutton nor his attorney offered to comment on the mayor's statement.

Donovan declined to disclose the nature of his charges, but city hall sources said they were based on a visit by Dutton to the State Attorney's office with information relating to the alleged use of marijuana at the Bristol High School.

The commissioner's visit followed a public statement by Police Chief Edmund S. Crowley to the effect that a long investigation by local and state police had failed to disclose any evidence of the sale or use of marijuana in Bristol.

The mayor told the police board yesterday afternoon that in view of information which had come to his attention, he called Dutton to his office several days ago and gave him until Monday to resign.

Raps Speculation On Ike's Politics

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Attempts to smoke out Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's political plans met another rebuff today.

Asked for comment on one report that the Atlantic commander had definitely decided to become a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, and another that he would give up his political ambition to press for a European army, a high-ranking officer who works close to Eisenhower said: "Those people (authors of the reports) appear to be closer to the general than I am. As far as I know the general has not told anybody anything about his political plans."

Churchill has been a prime advocate of European unity in post-war years. But since he returned to leadership in Britain Oct. 25, he has balked at committing Britain to the European army plan.

Old Hebrew Works Brought by Arabs

Tal Aviv, Israel.—(AP)—Valuable Hebrew manuscripts recently have been brought immigrants from Arab and other Oriental countries to Israel, according to a spokesman for the Oriental Communities Research Institute here. Some of them will soon be published in book form, he said.

In addition, the institute has arranged for thousands of important Hebrew manuscripts to be micro-filmed in library archives in Cambridge, Oxford, Istanbul, N. York, and other cities. Cooperation between Israeli and American libraries was agreed upon during the recent visit of Dr. Lawrence Marwick, chief of the Hebrew section of the Washington Library of Congress, which contains 150,000 books in Semitic and Jewish subjects, and 60,000 publications in Hebrew and some 10,000 in Yiddish.

Gen. Dean Still Alive, Red Claims

exchange of names "is by no means a solution to agenda item four" dealing with actual exchange of prisoners.

"We merely have started off on the road that will lead us to a solution," he said.

He reported the UN command studied the Red document with "astonishment as to its details, authenticity, accuracy and completeness."

The Communists list far more than 200 American prisoners of war, of whom 100,000 or more.

The 2,100 Americans listed as prisoners compare with approximately 12,000 Americans officially listed as missing in action.

But a reliable source in Tokyo said the Red document was "undisputed" between the official U. S. Army estimates of the number of prisoners held and the number announced by the Reds.

He said that reports of those listed as missing actually died in battle.

Col. James M. Hanley of the U. S. Eighth Army reported that 5,000 Americans were slaughtered by the Reds after being captured.

The lists supplied by Red troops yesterday were the first official information from the Reds since July and August, 1950, when the Reds gave the international Red Cross the names of 110 prisoners.

Coincidentally with the sudden change in Red attitude, General Ridgway flew to Manila from his Tokyo headquarters.

He immediately went into a top strategy conference with his assistant military negotiators and military commanders.

Ridgway was quoted as saying the "military and intelligence agencies are in complete accord on future steps in Korea."

The conference was attended by Gen. James A. Van Fleet, U. S. ground commander in Korea, and Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, head of the UN armistice talks.

No progress was reported by a second troop submarine which departed at Panmunjom over how to negotiate the armistice. It adjourned until 11 a. m. Wednesday (9 p. m. Tuesday e. s. t.).

Sudden Communist capitulation in turning over the names of prisoners they hold in the most hopeful break in talks since the provisional cease-fire line was drawn last month.

The Red line will become effective if other terms are agreed to by Dec. 27. Otherwise it will be changed to conform to changes in the battle line.

The reported listing of General Dean among the prisoners, claimed a long series of reports that the front line general was wounded—was killed—was taken prisoner.

One Red prisoner told Allied interrogators that Dean had been captured south 35 days after the fall of Taeyon and nearly reached safety before falling into Communist hands.

Dean now 53, was one of the last to leave burning Taeyon. He personally helped blast Red tanks plunging into the city and led a handful of rear guards into the hills. He was last seen by his men when he went to look for stragglers. His bullet-riddled helmet lies in a field near the town.

The red-haired general is the highest ranking American listed as missing in action in Korea.

No Home Towns
The Reds' list included the name, serial number, rank, unit and the number of the prison camp in which each man was held. It did not include home towns.

Business Of $5,376 Presented By Herald

The Herald Printing Company, Inc. distributed Christmas checks to 45 employees of the Herald today morning, the total being $5,376.

The checks, which have been awarded to Herald employees for many years, were distributed to Chinese and North Koreans held in UN prison camps.

Mrs. Ulbert Sent To State Hospital

Mrs. Ira Wilson Ulbert, 34, of this town, divorced wife of Fred Ulbert, was committed to the State Hospital today by Superior Court Judge Edward J. Ryan.

Mrs. Ulbert had been awaiting trial for obtaining money by false pretenses after allegedly wrongfully withdrawing $300 from the bank account of a brother. She was arrested here when a bank letter at the Manchester Savings Bank became suspicious.

Mrs. Ulbert had been awaiting trial for obtaining money by false pretenses after allegedly wrongfully withdrawing $300 from the bank account of a brother. She was arrested here when a bank letter at the Manchester Savings Bank became suspicious.

Dr. H. A. Bancroft of Hartford and Dr. Roy Leach of West Hartford, physicians, testified they had examined Mrs. Ulbert and found her mentally ill and unable to understand the nature of the proceedings against her.

She is divorced from her husband, Fred Ulbert, who was allegedly stabbed his 21-year-old son who was adjudged recovered and brought back to the Hartford County Jail to await trial.

No Bad Accidents Despite Weather

Despite the poor driving conditions brought about today by the steady rain, no serious accidents were reported as the Herald went to press this morning. Traffic was moving slowly on the streets in town, some of which have been sanded and others had rock salt spread on them.

The Reds' list included the name, serial number, rank, unit and the number of the prison camp in which each man was held. It did not include home towns.

The UN command had refused to go into detailed discussions on the question of exchanging prisoners until such a list was supplied. Allied spokesmen said they wanted to know what they were negotiating for. They emphasized that they could expect from the Reds no more than returned men who were actually listed.

Nicolaides declined to indicate whether the UN would be satisfied with the list. Presumably the UN command will complete its study of the list before deciding whether to press for additional names or inspection of the 11 prison camps in which the Communists say the men are held.

British Total Checks
A reliable source in Tokyo indicated that the Red list of British Commonwealth prisoners tallied closely with the British list of men missing in action. This source said "a little more than 1,000 men are listed as missing in action."

The Reds said they had 919 British and 11 other Commonwealth troops in their prison camps.

Both sides agreed that lists submitted Tuesday could be checked from time to time until an armistice is signed.

Tuesday's exchange underscored the differing positions taken by the UN command and Reds on how to exchange prisoners.

Until Tuesday morning the Communists insisted the Allies must first agree to a flat exchange of prisoners on all fronts for all men before any other details were considered.

The UN, holding 12 prisoners to every one the Reds have, said the first step must be an open listing of exactly who is in prison camps and where. Thereafter, the Allies proposed talking about exchanging a man for man basis.

'It's My Brother'

Who don't want to be returned. National Foreign Minister George Yeh, educated at Harvard and Cambridge, said the protest applied equally to Chinese and North Koreans held in UN prison camps.

The Communists list far more than 200 American prisoners of war, of whom 100,000 or more.
