Urges Laymen Set Example

quoted the statement by Cardinal Newman that the laymen is the measure of the Church to the non-Catholic.

Pointing to the form of address as the "new form of address," which declares there will be no peace until the last roots of religion are torn up, Kerrieh declared that "we must be on our guard against the enemies of our faith because they are rampant here."

Forty years ago, he said, people in those countries now in the power of the Communists would not have believed it if someone had told them that they would be in the hands of the Communists.

He said that he believed that the Catholic Church is the only institution that has remained true to its principles of justice that are incorporated in the Declaration of Independence.

Good Lives 'Can Preach Powerful Sermon'

Catholic laymen need not "mound the pulp" to spread their faith because by the example of good lives they "can preach a powerful sermon," William E. Kerrieh of the Holy Family Retreat House in West Hartford told approximately 225 members of the Manchester Chapter of the Laymen's Retreat League at a communion breakfast yesterday morning at St. James' School.

The speaker, who covers several towns in this area, received Communion at the 8 a. m. Mass at St. James' School. The speaker is secretary to Very Rev. Joseph Leo, C.P., director of the retreat house.

Kerrieh, a native of England and a convert to Catholicism, told the retreatants that it "wouldn't have taken me so many years to find the true faith if all the Catholics I met had been good Catholics."

He said that he believed that the Catholic Church is the only institution that has remained true to its principles of justice that are incorporated in the Declaration of Independence.

Washington, March 25—(AP)—Three industry members of the Wage Stabilization board said today the board "should go out of business" because it is "causing inflation and defeating its own purpose." Their statement was further evidence of the bitterness in the controversy over the board's recommendations in the steel case.

Murray Shuman Parley, in reply, CIO President Philip Murray blasted Wilson as "unfair and unprincipled" and refused to meet with him on the crucial steel dispute.

The three industry members of the wage board who said it ought to be abolished are George Armstrong, Douglas Stone and Milton Glendon. They told reporters the boards were "higher than the clouds" and through issuing recommendations for setting wage disputes.

Wilson is the top man in the government's mobilization program with the 18-man wage board each from labor, industry and the public part of the structure.

Unions have been previously labeled as "harmful" and "unproductive" and "wage gougers" in the mobilization set-up.

A spokesman for Wilson's Office of Defense Mobilization (ODM) said today Wilson still hopes to bring steel labor and management together.

workers, rapidly brought a semblance of order to the chaos. Unsettled dispatches truckloads of clothing, food and furniture to the destitute communities and sent thousands of dollars in cash to finance relief work. The elderly of Warren, southeast Arkansas—hit by a death-dealing tornado in 1946—sent the cash contributions made to all their churches Sunday.

The Federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation declared five of the states hit—Arkansas, Tennessee, Alabama, Missouri and Mississippi—as disaster areas, opening the way for federal money to the storm victims.

Consumer credit restrictions all were lifted for all Arkansas persons in the affected areas by the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

At Joplin—the White County, Ark., community that caught the full force of the raging storm—11 of its 34 victims were buried in a mass funeral.

A Congressional delegation arrived from Washington to survey long-impacted areas.

Other storm-stricken areas also began rebuilding operations—A brief tornado in Alabama killed and injured 54 and damaged 45 homes. The death toll in Tennessee and north Mississippi reached 44 and 288 were injured and 224 homes destroyed. Sixteen were injured.

Town Ranks High in Money Used for Public Recreation

New York, March 24.—(Special)—More money is spent in Manchester for public recreation and municipal park maintenance, in proportion to population, than in any other city in the New England States.

This is brought out in a study of the first 10 years, made by the National Recreation Association. Over 2,000 cities were examined as to the amount of money spent for public recreation in 1940.

The expenditures made in Manchester for public recreation in 1940 amounted to $99,722, according to the report. Of this amount, $55,425 was for current operating costs and $24,247 came under the head of land, buildings and improvements.

This total was at the rate of $2.62 per capita in Manchester. It was more than was spent in most other cities in the New England States. $2.18 per capita. In the State of Connecticut, public recreation cost $2.22 per capita. In Massachusetts, $2.10 per capita. In Rhode Island, $2.00 per capita. In Vermont, $1.90 per capita. In New Hampshire, $1.80 per capita. In Maine, $1.70 per capita.

The study also showed that Manchester ranked high in the amount of money spent for public recreation in 1940. It was one of the top 10 cities in the New England States.

Naples. Police halted another March of students against the British legation in Milan.

The most serious outbreak occurred at noon in Rome's downtown Galleria, near the foreign ministry. Here at least 500 people were clubbed when the demonstrators broke up chairs from a sidewalk cafe and used them as weapons. Police fired tear gas bombs and broke up the crowd.

The gas barrage caught thousands of people waiting for buses, as well as the agitator, McCormack said in a statement he submitted to occupy the dual position.

Eleven other pro-President headquarters called McCormack's statement a bluff that the demonstrators would be home before the 1952 election.

It means that construction will start forthwith.
Specific rights-of-way for the road still have to be chosen in several of the communities.
The semi-public installation of the new road will be completed by the end of the fiscal year. Also, the Highway Department's budget does not contain funds to finance immediate construction.
Recommendations
In a letter to the governor, Commissioner Hill said that he had approved the new road could be had. But noted that the engineer's survey by H. W. Lochner and Company recommended that the road be built in two sections.
"I realize," said Hill, "that this view commends itself also to many of our fellow citizens. If you approve of the Lochner recommendation regarding the financing of this highway, I shall be glad to work legislation up in 1952 for the installation of toll stations at selected points."
In reply the governor told Hill to appreciate your willingness to advise your position on the matter of financing the road. This is a question to which I think an official study should be given. Fortunately we shall have opportunity to give this matter full consideration before the opening of the General Assembly next January.
Darius B. Pass
The Lochner survey set the estimated cost of the road at $111,000,000, of which $3,000,000 already has been allocated for construction of a Route 1 bypass in Danbury.
The location of a new highway through the county has been the subject of much controversy. The Long Island Sound shore area through which the proposed road will pass is occupied by many wealthy residents. There have been

The St. George is a 100-room hotel. There were apparently about 100 patrons in the place. The fire department called for all available ambulances. Inhalator squads were rushed to the scene. Firemen raised extension ladders to rescue patrons from upper floors.
The hotel's location is just off Main street, the downtown Skid Row section of Los Angeles. It is two blocks south and a block east of the civic center cluster of public buildings including the city hall.

What's Doing at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft—

HARTFORD-BUILT ENGINES POWER THE XB-52

Eight Pratt & Whitney J-57 Turbo-Wasp axial-flow jet engines have been chosen to power America's newest jet bomber, the new Boeing B-52 (above). Other new aircraft to be equipped with the powerful Pratt & Whitney engine include the YB-60, an all-jet version of the B-36 bomber, and other high speed aircraft still under military restrictions.

HONORS TO THE CHAMPIONS

NEW ADDITION

May is the target month for completing the brick and steel extension to the Hamilton Standard plant adjoining P&WA. This spring, P&WA will move into Hamilton's enlarged facilities to expand its production of jet engines. The new addition, just south of the main P&WA plant will add one third more production space to P&WA's East Hartford facilities.

AIRCRAFT TOPS ALL LOCAL BLOOD DONATIONS

Employees of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft and Hamilton Standard recently teamed up to contribute 691 pints of blood to the Red Cross, the largest amount ever given by employees of local business and industry. Some 28% of the blood was shipped immediately to Korea (see photo below). The balance went to local hospitals.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS

A NEW steel salvage plant which accelerates the flow of vitally needed steel scrap into the defense hopper where materials are short in supply has been announced by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. Adopted last fall the plan has speeded the return of 17,642,243 pounds of scrap to the nation's mills.

THE GREATEST search for engineers in Pratt & Whitney's history is currently taking place on a coast to coast basis. Company representatives are visiting 80 of the nation's leading colleges and universities. Top-notch engineers are needed for P&WA's stepped up engineering development program.

COST-OF-LIVING allowance adjustments, which are made periodically for all Pratt & Whitney Aircraft employees, were recently raised again. An increase from 13 to 16 cents an hour was made for both hourly rated and salaried employees.

Join The Hartford Exchange?

Beginning tomorrow, Manchester telephone subscribers will be asked to express their views on a proposed merger of the Hartford area exchange with the Manchester exchange.

The first thing obvious about the proposition is that it is a merger of two exchanges, which means the abolition of the toll charge between them.

But it is also apparent that there is a financial situation involved, for the individual subscriber, which may be either an advantage, or a penalty, according to the telephone usage of the individual subscriber.

The new rates Manchester would pay would be the rates now current in the Hartford exchange.

These rates are considerably higher than the Manchester rates, and have been established under the company practice which calculates that the larger the exchange, the more calls an individual can make within that exchange—the higher the rate should be.

By this rate-making theory, each Manchester telephone subscriber would, if the merger went through, have more 17,000 numbers added to the list which he could call without toll, and by this theory, that is a privilege supposed to justify an increase in his rate, even if he never calls even one of these 17,000 new numbers.

This is the theory. There is also a reality, which is that the company could not very well let its Manchester people into the Hartford exchange at a rate lower than that already obtaining in Hartford.

This being the situation, a good many Manchester people will probably approach their decision on this question from a purely dollars and cents basis. They will note that, if they have a private residence line, the increased toll on their exchange at a rate lower than that already obtaining in Hartford.

A Melodic Year

During the week in which the red-wings have been gradually lowering their free-top stations, preparatory to the really warming motion in which they have been at it since the first of the year, they have been at it since the first of the year, they have been at it since the first of the year.

They begin their spring migration at the topmost tip of the tall-tall tree they can find, a towering ash or a full-grown elm. They come down, literally, by the degrees of the thermometer. At this writing, they are down to quarter-size elms and the first "warm day" song, "sing" rain, they sing down on the meadow and pasture level, busy with courting and nest-making, and incidental flying into every human ear.

But never before have they begun this cycle with such insistent song. Although one or two would ever make a respectable glee club, their voices have been at it since the first of the year, they have been at it since the first of the year.

What the red-wings have been doing from their high stations, those mighty notes of melody, the song sparrows, have been doing at the level of the human ear, and with much more pleasing results. And between the high cacophony of the red-wings and the intimate melody of the sparrows, there is, every day, a whole range of bird-sound too tumultuous and confusing for all except the best of us.

When the red-wings finally vacate the tree-tops, the meadow-larks will arrive and take over the red-wings' stations. When that happens, there will, from all signs, be a cascade of true melody which will make all of us think we are

Connecticut Yankee

By A. H. O.

We pause to avail ourselves of a double pleasure—a salute to an old friend who is wearing new laurels and a compliment to the people of a Connecticut city.

The old friend is Mayor John L. Sullivan of New Britain, and that is the way he is wearing it.

The new laurel he is wearing is that of a 8,707 to 4,620 victory in New Britain, the victory resulting in his re-nomination for the city election next month, when he will engage in a friendly contest with former Mayor George Quigley as his Republican opponent. That is for the future.

Mayor John's victory the other day was within the ranks of his own party, and the result was a notable victory was that, from an artificial view of the situation, he was supposed to be defeated.

The situation was somewhat comparable to that which faced Socialist Mayor Fresco of Newark last fall, when, in his city election, he faced the combined opposition of all the political organizations of Newark, and won in spite of that fact.

In New Britain what had happened was that, by artificial arrangement all the supposed leadership of all the various racial groups within the Democratic party, except, of course, for Sullivan's own, had been banded together in formidable opposition to Sullivan. It has long been classic practice that no candidate in New Britain can win with these racial groups against him. It was therefore, that if the individual members of these racial groups were not banded together, it was not possible, on paper, to see how Sullivan could win. True, this threatened to be a racial political contest in an extreme, but what was it?

The story is, of course, that it was stopped, and for two very good reasons.

In the first place, Mayor Sullivan has, as all who have watched him on the state scene expected he would, been a good chief executive—refreshing, perhaps, in his occasional lack of diplomacy—but good on performance.

In the second place, the Democratic voters who were supposed to be packaged refused to stay packaged. They exercised a higher instinct than that of purely racial political solidarity. They dropped the hyphen out of their voting. They voted on the record of the man and the job he had been doing rather than upon his racial origin or that of his opponent.

And this outcome takes its place as one of the most pleasing in a long and progressive series of demonstrations that Connecticut voters are more liberal themselves, more and more, than they are by election, from the concept that they must follow the lead of the political leaders blindly. Eventually, even the pre-fect politicians themselves will wake up to the fact that

When Methuselah was a boy

Pharmacy is one of the world's oldest professions. It was a recognized art long before the time of Methuselah. In centuries past, herbalists and medicine men had their concoctions and mystic rituals, which were both comfort and succor to the ailing. The advent of scientific medicine and pharmacy brought an end to superstition and empiricism, but service to the sick has remained the first concern of the pharmacist. Today the pharmacist is not a diagnostician, nor is he qualified to prescribe medication. Compounding and dispensing the physician's prescription is the pharmacist's specialty. That is our livelihood, and we appreciate the opportunity to serve.

Connecticut Yankee

By A. H. O.

We pause to avail ourselves of a double pleasure—a salute to an old friend who is wearing new laurels and a compliment to the people of a Connecticut city.

The old friend is Mayor John L. Sullivan of New Britain, and that is the way he is wearing it.

The new laurel he is wearing is that of a 8,707 to 4,620 victory in New Britain, the victory resulting in his re-nomination for the city election next month, when he will engage in a friendly contest with former Mayor George Quigley as his Republican opponent. That is for the future.

Mayor John's victory the other day was within the ranks of his own party, and the result was a notable victory was that, from an artificial view of the situation, he was supposed to be defeated.

The situation was somewhat comparable to that which faced Socialist Mayor Fresco of Newark last fall, when, in his city election, he faced the combined opposition of all the political organizations of Newark, and won in spite of that fact.

In New Britain what had happened was that, by artificial arrangement all the supposed leadership of all the various racial groups within the Democratic party, except, of course, for Sullivan's own, had been banded together in formidable opposition to Sullivan. It has long been classic practice that no candidate in New Britain can win with these racial groups against him. It was therefore, that if the individual members of these racial groups were not banded together, it was not possible, on paper, to see how Sullivan could win. True, this threatened to be a racial political contest in an extreme, but what was it?

The story is, of course, that it was stopped, and for two very good reasons.

In the first place, Mayor Sullivan has, as all who have watched him on the state scene expected he would, been a good chief executive—refreshing, perhaps, in his occasional lack of diplomacy—but good on performance.

In the second place, the Democratic voters who were supposed to be packaged refused to stay packaged. They exercised a higher instinct than that of purely racial political solidarity. They dropped the hyphen out of their voting. They voted on the record of the man and the job he had been doing rather than upon his racial origin or that of his opponent.

And this outcome takes its place as one of the most pleasing in a long and progressive series of demonstrations that Connecticut voters are more liberal themselves, more and more, than they are by election, from the concept that they must follow the lead of the political leaders blindly. Eventually, even the pre-fect politicians themselves will wake up to the fact that
