U.S. to Reject Red Protest Cover Downed Soviet Plane

By STAN CARTER Tokyo, Aug. 1.—(AP)—"It was absolutely an unprovoked attack, 40 miles from Russian territory," said the co-pilot of an American B-50 shot down at sea in a Russian jet attack off Siberia Wednesday.

Monday's big practice session, a UN spokesman said, will cover every angle from the moment the prisoners leave Communist control until they start home.

Five U. S. Air Force C-119 Flying Boxcar aircraft, 29 tons of American Red Cross kits to South Korea, and 100 tons of supplies were loaded on the aircraft.

The kits, stockpiled in southern Japan for the past several months, contained razors, shaving cream, soap, tooth paste and brushes, and letter writing materials.

Whether Red Cross teams will be able to visit North Korea, a UN spokesman said, will depend on the situation in the north. He said that the situation remained in doubt. At a joint Allied-Communist Red Cross conference in Seoul, the Red Cross officials said they would be ready to start work on Monday.

far the crash—had stopped a Russian "traveler or tug boat" and questioned the crew, but saw no indication that it had any survivors aboard.

"I must have been about 6:15 Wednesday morning when it happened," Roche said. "It was 6:30 when I hit the water and my watch stopped.

"I was sitting there relaxed ... I didn't enter my mind at all ... I might be attacked. We'd been in that area before and never seen any MIGs. It was international waters.

"I had just lit a cigarette when I saw the jet. It was a B-29 Superfortress. I was hit and caught fire.

Roche said a gunner on the B-29 fired back at the plane. He was hit five-second burst of machine-gun fire. No other gunners were seen.

"I never saw the second MIG at all. It got our No. 4 engine 45 seconds after the first attack. I was hit on the No. 1 engine.

"I feathered No. 2 and looked out. There was a hole through the prop about that big (Roche indicated a size of about 12 inches). It was a heavy machine gun. I was hit in the chest and the head. I was almost dead.

"I was thrown forward into the water. I pulled myself up and climbed back into the cockpit on my hands. The engine and navigator were already bailed out. The plane shook. You could see daylight through the fuselage.

"I dove out past the nose wheel. I landed smoke and looked up to see if my chute was on fire. It was open and there was nothing wrong with it. Then my feet touched the water.

"I was about 75 feet from the wreckage of the plane. The water was 150 or 200 yards from me. I swam backward to get away from the wreckage.

"I found Captain in Water. I had my hand on a mattress and used it as a raft.

"I heard somebody holler. I started swimming toward the sound and found Capt. O'Keley. We stayed together for the next 11 1/2 hours. We spotted a B-29 flying over.

"I fired my flare and marked the area with sea marker dye. I kept backing up to keep out of the dye. I was 75 or 80 yards away from Capt. O'Keley when the B-29 dropped a lifeboat.

"O'Keley was a little weak. I swam to the boat. It was 150 or 200 yards from me. I climbed into it. I had cramps and was violently sick. I couldn't move. I never got a chance to get to O'Keley after that.

"Roche said he did not see any other crewmen, but after they had been in the water about a half hour, he and O'Keley heard some body yelling.

"I was so far away and my eyes were weak. We had no way of recognizing the voice," he said.

Roche was rescued and carried about the neck and head by the first explosion in the plane—about 40 miles beyond Soviet territory and far out over international water.

Eight Vapor Trails
In the spring of 1952, vapor trails were sighted above the Aleutian Island chain which extends outward from the Alaskan mainland. There was an actual sighting of Russian aircraft reported by a U. S. air defense throughout Alaska and the northern United States.

Reconnaissance flights over Greenland and the northern areas of the continent presumably are flying to those areas from Soviet bases in Siberia and Alaska islands held by the Russians north of the Bering land mass.

A still later bomber design, of capabilities similar to the American B-36, is believed to be in production.

West Food Aid Totals Hit Million

Berlin police quickly broadcast warning for East Germans to find other safer routes home.

This week end, the food stations served only residents of the Russian zone, many of whom rode miles on overcrowded trains and buses. So big was the flood to Berlin that in many places the public transport systems became surging.

In the border were scores of crippled and war amputees, many leaning on canes or on the arms of friends. Hundreds stood through a heavy morning rain to get their documents.

Communist propagandists hammered away at the relief camps, saying that the West was trying to suppress the German people.

The Oder-Neisse line was accepted provisionally by the United States and Britain at the 1945 Potsdam conference.

Poland was given administration of the German territories east of the Oder-Neisse line in compensation for other lands it had surrendered to Russia. Russia also annexed a slice of German East Prussia.

The Potsdam agreement stated the German-Polish frontier should finally be determined at a peace conference.

The Russians soon broke this agreement, however, and unilaterally changed the Oder-Neisse border final.

"The Moscow-made East German government with the Potsdam Red government in July, 1950, occupied the Oder-Neisse as an 'interim peace frontier'."

stances of Soviet scouting of the Arctic and Greenland are only for the past year. Others are suspected to have occurred before that.

Recent Two Incidents
Only two such incidents during the last 12 months have been made public.

Last November, two F-104 jet fighters on patrol in the Bering Sea encountered a Soviet-made, propeller-driven fighter-bearing Russian markings. The U. S. Air Force planes closed in and flew alongside the Russian aircraft until it crossed the international boundary, headed for home.

Last Feb. 17, two Russian planes of the same type were discovered by U. S. Air Force interceptors above eastern Hokkaido. The Soviet planes made a wide pass. The two F-104s returned to the base with one of them hitting and apparently damaging one of the L-119s. The American plane was hit. The February incident was at least three miles inside the international boundary separating Japan from the Russian-held Kuril Islands, where the Red air force reportedly maintains big bases and long range bombers.

This contrasts with the Russian attack two days ago on the B-29, 40 miles beyond Soviet territory and far out over international water.

Hungry Kids ... Load of Watermelons ... Eating Contest

Ray Kuhn and Camera Get New Angle on Old Subject

Ray Kuhn, of the United Air-bridge and an empty Yankee stadium, capturing scenes tourists and natives alike have known the city had, putting the old and familiar glamour in a new perspective.

Technical Data
The majority of the photos were taken with a hand operated 35mm aerial camera, with an 8 inch F2.8 Ektar lens. The basic exposure was 1/400 sec. at f8 with no filter on Kodak Super XX Aerial film.

Several of the photos in the series were taken with a 4 x 5 Speed Graphic equipped with a 10 inch Walentaek. Telephone lens. These were shot on Super XX film pack. Two of the photos were taken with a Rolleiflex camera.

The assignment presented several problems that seemed to have been overcome. At first, it was thought that a perfect day would be needed to make the photos, but the time of publication of "The Bee-Hive" did not allow a long wait. They were taken on three separate days.

The first day the weather report was fairly good for the New York City area, but when the helicopter got there from East Hartford, it was far from good. In some locations the visibility was less than three-quarters of a mile. But the outfit up about the third day was taken that day.

The second day was better but there was still a lot of smoke and haze present. Most of the photos were taken that day. The third day was good, and it was used to fill in the areas where there were left blank by the bad weather.

Fire Fighters Battle Blaze Seven Hours

Fire fighters from the State Forestry Department and Cheshire Brothers this morning were still patrolling the thickly wooded area and "so far as I can see no damage," said a spokesman.

At that time Flinders sharply criticized the Air Force for issuing a false report of a glider being shot down on a routine weather reconnaissance flight off the Rhode Island coast.

Flinders called this preposterous and said that the Air Force was not to be trusted.

"This time, Flinders said he believes the U. S. bomber had a right to be in the area and "so far as I can see no damage," said a spokesman.

Members of the Senate are expected to discuss the matter and his political friends are expected to know his plans, although there was some talk he might appoint a Republican.

However, Morse, who halted the republican campaign to support the Democratic ticket, told reporters yesterday he would vote to keep Republicans in control of the Senate as he did early this year and for the same reason.

"The real test of my determination to keep faith with my ethical obligation to vote with the Republican party is whether I shall vote for the Democratic ticket," he said.

"The people of the nation in the election of 1948 voted the Republican party into power and I shall abide by that mandate on Republican control of the Senate until the people have the chance in 1954 to revise their decision."

It was learned that Democratic Senate Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas and other minority leaders have no desire to see Senate control with a narrow margin.

However, seeking a stronger tie with the United States, Rhee said that the treaty include a provision for stationing American forces in Korea. Dulles has said this would permit, but not require, the stationing of U. S. forces there.

Other issues seem certain to be raised repeatedly made by Rhee to remove the war himself after 90 days of the projected political campaign has failed to bring Communist agreement on the unification of Korea. At the moment diplomatic talks are in progress but no agreement has been reached.

Union to Criticize Governor Lodge

Hartford, Aug. 1.—(AP) Members of Council 16, AFL State, County and Municipal Employees Union are scheduled to open their annual convention here at noon today with Gov. John Lodge scheduled for criticism for his refusal to sign his executive order for state of living adjustments for state workers.

Prepared for action during the convention are other resolutions which would:

1. Score the legislature's failure to increase salaries and make one of living adjustments for state workers.

2. Fit the legislature's failure to increase salaries and make one of living adjustments for state workers in the provisions of a union dues check-off, provided for by the 1953 legislature.

3. Demand that the provisions of a union dues check-off, provided for by the 1953 legislature, be put into effect not later than Oct. 1, 1953, by the State Comptroller.

Technical Data
The majority of the photos were taken with a hand operated 35mm aerial camera, with an 8 inch F2.8 Ektar lens. The basic exposure was 1/400 sec. at f8 with no filter on Kodak Super XX Aerial film.

Several of the photos in the series were taken with a 4 x 5 Speed Graphic equipped with a 10 inch Walentaek. Telephone lens. These were shot on Super XX film pack. Two of the photos were taken with a Rolleiflex camera.

The assignment presented several problems that seemed to have been overcome. At first, it was thought that a perfect day would be needed to make the photos, but the time of publication of "The Bee-Hive" did not allow a long wait. They were taken on three separate days.

The first day the weather report was fairly good for the New York City area, but when the helicopter got there from East Hartford, it was far from good. In some locations the visibility was less than three-quarters of a mile. But the outfit up about the third day was taken that day.

The second day was better but there was still a lot of smoke and haze present. Most of the photos were taken that day. The third day was good, and it was used to fill in the areas where there were left blank by the bad weather.

Fire Fighters Battle Blaze Seven Hours

Fire fighters from the State Forestry Department and Cheshire Brothers this morning were still patrolling the thickly wooded area and "so far as I can see no damage," said a spokesman.

At that time Flinders sharply criticized the Air Force for issuing a false report of a glider being shot down on a routine weather reconnaissance flight off the Rhode Island coast.

Flinders called this preposterous and said that the Air Force was not to be trusted.

"This time, Flinders said he believes the U. S. bomber had a right to be in the area and "so far as I can see no damage," said a spokesman.

West Food Aid Totals Hit Million

Berlin police quickly broadcast warning for East Germans to find other safer routes home.

This week end, the food stations served only residents of the Russian zone, many of whom rode miles on overcrowded trains and buses. So big was the flood to Berlin that in many places the public transport systems became surging.

In the border were scores of crippled and war amputees, many leaning on canes or on the arms of friends. Hundreds stood through a heavy morning rain to get their documents.

Communist propagandists hammered away at the relief camps, saying that the West was trying to suppress the German people.

The Oder-Neisse line was accepted provisionally by the United States and Britain at the 1945 Potsdam conference.

Poland was given administration of the German territories east of the Oder-Neisse line in compensation for other lands it had surrendered to Russia. Russia also annexed a slice of German East Prussia.

The Potsdam agreement stated the German-Polish frontier should finally be determined at a peace conference.

The Russians soon broke this agreement, however, and unilaterally changed the Oder-Neisse border final.

"The Moscow-made East German government with the Potsdam Red government in July, 1950, occupied the Oder-Neisse as an 'interim peace frontier'."

The official East German news agency ADN daily denounces the dismemberment of the German people with the June 17 workers' rebellion and confirming that in some parts of the German Democratic Republic, Communist rebels also shouted for the return of the lost lands.
