 In the President's message to Congress on the subject of Foreign Affairs, the President has taken certain risks which we thought decisions by the President himself had already avoided.

There are the risks of becoming involved militarily in the fate of islands near the Chinese mainland which it seemed to have been decided only a few days ago, when we deemed militarily essential to the defense of Formosa.

Where we once thought we were out of involvement in localities where we can hardly function without the aid of the Chinese mainland, we are now back to the possibility that we will be drawn from positions close to the Chinese mainland, we now discover him apparently ready to move forward again, heavily armed for very special purposes.

This is the alarming, disquieting part of his message, not that it once again pledges what we already knew, which was that we are to defend Formosa—but that it threatens to take us back toward the Chinese mainland.

Once we recognize this element of alarm in the new position, we can begin reassuring ourselves. The message itself indicates that we would move back toward the mainland only for two purposes. One would be to cover the Chinese Nationalist forces if we persuade them to evacuate the Tachen Islands. This would be risky, but its actual object, if this evacuation could be accomplished, would be a lessening of tension and challenge in the situation.

The other thing that might take us back toward the mainland would be the obvious concentration of Communist forces for the invasion of Formosa. And if the Chinese Communists continue to just talk about Formosa itself, this need produce no change.

So, from this angle, the effort of American foreign policy in this instance can be seen to be reassuring. It would seem to be our aim to leave the area of conflict, by persuading the Chinese Nationalists to give up some territory, which we strengthen our own guarantee to defend what they will have left.

The new president of a certain railroad made a speech in Hartford, the other night, in which he denied his leaders with his gift talent for solving all problems ratoriously at heart. What he did for the community of Hartford, in that one speech, represented more than all the mere pedestrian community leaders who have been working for Hartford, day in and day out, have been able to accomplish in decades.

Perhaps one promising, so much was able to sense some atmosphere of skepticism present. At any rate, the new president of a certain railroad made a speech in Hartford, the other night, in which he denied his leaders with his gift talent for solving all problems ratoriously at heart. What he did for the community of Hartford, in that one speech, represented more than all the mere pedestrian community leaders who have been working for Hartford, day in and day out, have been able to accomplish in decades.

Now this may seem, to some, an accurate and humorous sketch of describing the way we New Englanders look at dealing new propositions. Even if that is so, at the center which is standard procedure. He was found to be in good health but "manifesting a great many tensions," as the examining physician put it, and these tensions were evident to the probation officer when she met him that morning.

Second of a Series The Case of Ronald Mitchell Referred to Juvenile Court Jan. 1953

The probation officer, Mrs. Justin Scher, who has been in the office since 1944, said she had known Mitchell since he came into the office when he was 10 years old. She kept looking at the window or at the ceiling and kept playing with the zipper on his jacket, and at with the high school crowd. But when the party broke up, about 1:30, and his friends had dispersed to their homes, all of a sudden Mitchell and his friends began pushing themselves to the front of the line.

Mother Worked Nights
Ronald didn't want to go home. His mother, with whom he got along very well, wanted him to go to the factory where his father was employed. His father, however, who worked days, would be home, unless he was at a tavern.

"I was getting madder and madder," Ronald told Mrs. Scher of his feelings the day before. "I felt everything was closing in on me. I wanted to get away. I wanted to get even with my father."

When he came upon the car, a brand-new Oldsmobile convertible parked on a side street near his home, he thought he had found the means to accomplish his ends. He was driving the car when he struck by its headlights a man who was walking across the street. The man was killed.

"I guess I didn't think about it," he said.

"What about it now that you think about it, doesn't it?"

"Yes, I guess I did. I was thinking about it at home? At school?"

Both, Ronald said, looking around the small office, with the Norman Rockwell illustrations of boys of various ages and shapes playing football and basketball.

On leaving school the day before, he had been disturbed by the way things had run against him that morning. It seemed that pressure had been building up in him all morning and that he was in a state of tension. He was in a state of tension when he was in the car.

He had been driving the car when he struck by its headlights a man who was walking across the street. The man was killed.

What made Ronald go back to the car later that night to remove his trip into New York, he told the probation officer, was another night at home.

By the time Ronald had gotten the car out of sight and walked home, it was after 8 o'clock, and he was late for supper. This, however, wasn't unusual, since he and his father had supper together at a restaurant. Ronald said, however, that he was late for supper that night because he was in a state of tension.

Iwo Jima Hero Dies, Seen as Peace Casualty

Sacaton, Ariz., Jan. 25 (AP)—An American Indian hero of modern war is dead—9 bewildered and disillusioned victims of peace-line.

Ray Hayes, one of the Marine fighters on Iwo Jima at the climax of World War II, was found dead yesterday on the Sacaton Indian Reservation. He was 22.

The doctor's verdict over-exposure to freezing weather—too much alcohol.

Hayes' moment of glory atop Mt. Suribachi in the Jan. 1945 battle for Iwo Jima is well known. He was the first to plant the American flag on the island.

But for the chubbiness, friendly Pima Indian, things didn't go so well. He was killed by a Japanese plane on the island.

"We hit the beach at Iwo with 250 men in my company," Hayes once recalled, "and left with 27."

"I still think of those things all the time."

Once he was found on Chicago's St. Louis, wandering drunk and incoherent—without shoes.

When Mrs. Scher had finished taking the statement, she decided to take a few days until she had a chance to talk to his parents and teachers, a plan apparently, that was much to Ronald's satisfaction.

He seemed relieved that the interview had better results. He noted in her report of the interview that he was grateful that his impression was going to face with him what was going to be a very good job.

But he didn't last.

Another chance came from a Hollywood family who hired him as a chauffeur and handyman.

Other hobby and craft classes in addition to those formally listed in the new series of courses to start next week will be organized if there are 20 requests for a particular class. It was announced by Mrs. Albert Hurling, vice chairman of the planning of the YWCA, who is in charge of the planning of the class program. The YWCA is glad to have the planning of the classes in sufficient interest, she said.

When you are 40, 50, 60, or older, you are not old. You are just a young man or woman who has lived a long and interesting life. You are still full of life and energy. You are still capable of doing great things. You are still a man or a woman who is worth knowing.

Concordia Church Planning Dinner

Concordia Church, under the leadership of Bishop Ring, will serve a turkey dinner to members at a family night gathering Friday at 6:30 p. m.

Albert Cervini is chairman of reservations for the meal, which should be made with him or any of the members of the church.

Picture taken at the event shows his deepest eyes staring helplessly at the camera.

Comments from his two buddies helped explain Hayes' mixed-up life.

Gagnin said he would try to attend the funeral, and added: "He was a great guy—a modest guy who didn't like the spotlight."

Bradley said Hayes' death makes him "truly a war casualty."

His unusual politeness and once-picked-up Hayes for drunkenness supplied the statement that he would try to attend the funeral, and added: "He was a hero to everyone but himself."
