number of its young engineers and technicians. But to have more such people in your country," he said, "we are willing to share our knowledge and experience."

He said he made the offer "not to teach you, but to want desperately to help the Indian people and the Indian government."

Khrushchev's remarks about American views on Goa referred to a joint statement issued in Washington by Secretary of State Dulles and visiting Portuguese Foreign Minister Juan Cunha. Dulles and Cunha referred to the two top Communist leaders in India and condemned speeches which the two men had made in New Delhi and Premier Nikolai Bulganin were making in India. The joint statement said these speeches were designed to foment trouble between East and West.

Later Dulles denied that, by issuing the statement with Cunha, he had put the United States on Portugal's side in the dispute over Portuguese India. The secretary of State insisted he meant only to state the traditional American policy that such disputes must not be settled by force.

Many Indians reacted even more strongly to Dulles' explanation than the original statement. They said that just as the Indians were getting tired of the violent Khrushchev-Bulganin attacks on the West, Dulles had played into Soviet hands by seeming to side with Portugal.

Khrushchev today denied that he and Bulganin were trying to "set one country against another." The Communist statement said the "imperialists" had always "oppressed and oppressed" the people of India. Yet, he added, if the five "big powers" were put on one side and you on the other, you are in no way inferior, and in many ways you are much greater.

Khrushchev added: "Now that you are free and have overthrown foreign imperialism, there is no reason why you should not go forward and occupy the highest position in the world arena. That is my wish and that of my countrymen."

Last night the two Kremlin big-wigs gave a lavish eight-course dinner for Prime Minister Nehru and nearly 1,000 other guests. The party was given at a palace which once belonged to the wealthy Nizam of Hyderabad. It was the last Russian entertainment in India during the Khrushchev-Bulganin tour.

Earlier yesterday Nehru conferred with his Russian visitors on a joint communique. The communique will be ready tomorrow before Khrushchev and Bulganin leave for Afghanistan. Indian informants said the communique was expected to be an extended version of the communique which Bulganin signed with Burma's Premier U Nu Dec. 7. That statement reiterated demands by both parties for a ban on nuclear weapons, transfer of Formosa to Bolton, Dec. 13 (Special)—The school Building Committee has directed the architectural firm of Percy F. Gilbert Associates to advertise for bids on the 6-room addition to the Elementary School at 8th and 10th Sts. The estimated cost of the 6-classroom addition has been placed at $150,000. It will include a 68-foot basement room, designated as a Civil Defense Control Center but usable for school and municipal purposes at all times other than occasions of civil emergency; storage rooms; teachers' room and an incinerator room. It is expected the addition will be ready for occupancy in September 1956.

This statement listed what he termed specific "complaints of rent control" which have been received by the Rent Control Commission from communities that have been decontrolled.

It listed these cases:

Bloomington, rent for one-family was raised from $20 to $40 after the town was decontrolled.

Woodbury, from $20 to $100.

Burlington, from $20 to $60.

Granby, from $25 to $70.

Darien, from $15 to $100.

Suffield, from $25 to $50.

Middlebury, from $24 to $90.

Farmington from $70 to $125.

Yanville, from $20 to $70.

Rockville, from $25 to $65.

Windsor, from $20 to $50.

Greenwich, from $24 to $110.

Stratford, two instances, from $20 to $100, and from $85 to $125.

and from $85 to $125.

The statement continued to say that complaints such as these have been made to the Rent Control Commission from almost every decontrolled community in Connecticut.

Can Only Ask Fair Pay

"The State Rent Control Commission has no authority to remedy these conditions. The only thing it can do is write a letter to the landlord and plead for a sense of fair play. None of the letters has produced results."

The statement continued to say that the commission reports that rents are scarce throughout the state.

"The commission says the rent scales for the few dwelling units available in the cities are beyond the reach of the average working man."

The statement added that the August and October floods aggravated "the acute housing situation in Connecticut."

Of the 149 towns, the statement said, only 24 now are under control. The controlled towns, most over, according to the statement, include all of the larger cities, representing 75 per cent of the state population and 80 per cent of the state's rental units that were originally under control.

The statement also said that there are now 330,000 Connecticut families with an estimated 1,000,000 persons in their homes.

The Democratic Senate yesterday approved and sent to the House a number of bills covering various forms of tax relief for flood sufferers.

The legislature wants to adjourn by Thursday if possible. It is now in its sixth week.

Flaherty Flood Fund Bill

The finance committee has finished work on the bill to raise $10 million in taxes for flood relief. The bill to take another $10 million for that purpose from the Highway Department is expected to be reported favorably last week.

Members of the House approved and sent to the Senate the latest version of the state primary election law. The law will not go into effect until the first of the next year. The present proposed legislation is intended to make it more workable.

The new bill provides that town caucuses can name local candidates, and defeated candidates can petition for a primary in their district.

Another provision makes it possible for a candidate who has defeated at a convention may petition for a primary if he has not received at least 20 per cent of the delegate vote on any ballot at the nomination.

This provision is opposed by members of the Democratic Party in the Senate. They want to make the requirement for petitioning more strict by providing that the minimum 20 per cent vote must be won on the convention's last ballot.

Under the bill, petitions for a primary must be filed within 14 days after a convention.

The new law also provides that state conventions must be held between June 1 and July 15.

The tax relief bill passed by the Senate provides:

"For corporations to make flood loss deductions from their tax returns.

"For exemption or refund of sales taxes on purchases of $35 or more to repair or replace flood-damaged property, up to Dec. 31, 1956.

"For tax refunds on liquor destroyed by floods.

The Senate also passed, over House objection, a bill to pay the pre-flood valuation of any property earmarked for condemnation before the flood.

It passed another bill to set up a $2,000,000 bond issue to build a vocational school in northeastern Connecticut.

Both House and Senate approved a bill allowing Civil Defense officials power to stockpile equipment against natural disasters as well as enemy attack.

They both approved a bill liberalizing terms under which building and loan associations may make flood damage loans.

Two more bills approved by both Houses provide the same death benefits for the families of State Highway Department workers killed in line of duty as the families of State Police and Firemen.

Guards receive, and made Connecticut party to an air pollution study by New York and New Jersey.

GOOD WILL METERS

Detroit, Mich. (AP)—All parking tickets in suburban Dearborn were paid to the Optimist Club for a week. Said a club spokesman: "It is a means of focusing attention on the club's group activities. Violators will be given an opportunity to reimburse the club if they wish."

LAST-LAP TROUBLE

Houston, Tex. (AP)—Mrs. Rosevelt Werlin was finishing up a 10,000-mile tour of Old World countries when she landed at the airport here. Coming down the gangway, she missed a step, sprained an ankle and fell. She was being helped without a mishap, she said.

Mayor Presides at Organ in Lobby of Bank

Mayor Harold A. Tuckington concentrated on playing the organ while Mrs. Arthur H. Becher, left, and Mrs. Austin Becher, right, sang Christmas carols in the bank lobby at noon today. The mayor played from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and will do so again at the same hours on the next two Thursdays by Fred Werner and Paul Chetelat, well known music instructors, alternating at the console.

Armstrong Pleads Guilty to Charge

In Federal Court, Hartford, yesterday, Alexander Armstrong, 25, of 4 Mintz Court, pleaded guilty to a charge of interstate theft of a motor vehicle. He was released under $500 bond pending sentence.

Armstrong drove a stolen truck from Detroit to Bolton last month, and allegedly left the truck parked on a Bolton road after he had run out of gas. He was arrested and charged with possession of a motor vehicle by State Trooper Clifford Bombard when he returned to Bolton.

The possession charge lodged against him was noted by Justice John Swanson in Bolton Justice Court Dec. 7. He then turned over to FBI agents, since the charge of interstate theft of a motor vehicle comes under federal jurisdiction.

SHERIFF IS OWN VICTIM

Rose Hill, N. C. (AP)—Deputy Sheriff Bertie Fuzell carried a pistol for 19 years and never had to use it. Then he accidentally became the first victim of his pistol.

It happened after he received a call to investigate a disturbance. As he picked up the pistol from his desk, he dropped the weapon. It hit the floor and the bullet struck and killed the sheriff.

UNMISSED BICYCLES

Rosamoth, Va. (AP)—Det. Capt. Kermit Altman wonders why so many people abandon bicycles.

"We've got so many that if you open the door to the storage room, bikes fall out of them," Altman said. "The cops are always happy when someone identifies a bike and takes it away."

Mayor Presides at Organ in Lobby of Bank

Thirty-five women town employees will leave the Municipal Building after working hours today to travel by chartered bus to Cook's Tavern in Plainville, where they will hold their annual Christmas party.

The group has reserved the Forge, one of the Tavern, which was given by the group two weeks ago after the group had scheduled an excursion there for Thanksgiving time.

A dinner is planned and an exchange of gifts.

ALARM WITHOUT WORD

Grand Haven, Mich. (AP)—A 2-year-old who hadn't learned to "speak" woke his father in time for him to rescue members of the family from their burning home.

Douglas Boyer kept screaming "hot!" until he woke his father, Walter, 36. An overheated furnace had set the house afire.

PIECEMEAL ON TIME

Tampa, Fla. (AP)—In case you're wondering how long it takes a fireman to get out of bed, dress, slide down the pole and reach the fire truck, the time is 11 seconds.

SIR WALTER KNIGHT

Salt Lake City (AP)—School crossing guard Walter Knight had an easy solution when rainwater in the gutter blocked his curbing. He pulled his car up to the curb and parked it astraddle the puddle. Then he opened both its rear doors and invited the children to walk—high and dry—right through.

Christmas Overseas Warm Weather Marks Yule Fete Down Under

By GORDON TAIT Sydney, Australia, Dec. 13 (AP)—Imagine Christmas Eve with the temperature 80 or even 100.

It's a cloud in the sky and people are sleeping off their dinner on a beach, or under a tree in the mountains. The kids are running around in swim trunks or the minimum of clothing, jumping into the surf or a river, or playing around with the hose if they happen to be at home.

In Australia, Christmas comes at the height of summer, and in the middle of the children's vacation from school.

Most Australians try to get away from the city to the beach or mountains for Christmas-New Year, and hundreds of Australian factories and offices close for the period. Thus many persons spend Christmas Day in the sun—in hotels, holiday cottages, or tents. But wherever Australians happen to be, Christmas Day remains a family day. Often it is the one day in the year when whole families can get together.

More Australians go to church on Christmas morning than on any other day.

After church hundreds of thousands appear at the many surfing beaches strung along the coast. The surf helps the appetite, but unfortunately Australians also have found you easily get sunburnt on Christmas Day.

The big meal, despite the heat, is in the traditional English style. Turkey or some other poultry, ham, pork, pudding, with three-penny pieces inside and brandy sauce outside, and plenty to drink—all steaming hot, sent to the ham and drink.

Some families enjoy to "beet" clothes for the men, but most and more people eat in a sun dress or shorts and shirt.

There are fewer at the beaches after dinner, but some thousands still go along to sleep in the open air.

Christmas presents and cards are exchanged by the million. Most cards depict English villages and other white Christmas scenes.

An American Dental Assn. reports says only 40 per cent of Americans get a reasonable adequate regular dental care.

Andover Yeggers Entertain Surprise Guests

Andover, Dec. 13 (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Walton Yegger, Long Hill Road, are entertaining twenty unexpected guests and they love it.

Walt Yegger has even had to add extra facilities to take care of his guests, and as far as feeding is concerned, the newcomers ate at the Yeggers' similar company last winter.

It isn't as expensive as it sounds, though, for the Yeggers' guests are about the size of robins, and their favorite dish is sandwiches.

They arrived early last week and joined the Yeggers year-round guests, the parrots and nutcrackers.

In order to accommodate them, Yegger has built a new feeding station and is buying his bird food in large lots.

The evening groats are a sight to see.

According to Robert D. MacDowell, assistant professor of wild life management at the University of Connecticut, the birds are likely to make periodic invasions every four years. MacDowell has seen them as far south as Pennsylvania,

The luxury of being able to campaign not so much against Eisenhower as against the man who might have to finish the Eisenhower term.

This poses a dilemma for the Republican party even if Eisenhower does solve its main problem by agreeing to run again. And the dilemma would be certain to be pushed toward the President, even though it seemed certain to be painful to him.

Apparently, as the political climate stands, some of Eisenhower's own best friends would be against the re-nomination of Vice President Nixon. Whether or not they could put forward any other candidate would seem better, or safer politically, is just as much a question as is the other problem, that of whether they can obtain a suitable substitute for Eisenhower himself, if he do not run. So the question is not purely one of whether Nixon is a liability, but merely one of whether he would be a liability than any other vice presidential candidate who could be proposed. The ideal solution would be to have two Eisenhower.

That being impossible, unless, of course, whether or not he runs Eisenhower into the ring, the President will be under some pressure to help pick his own successor, whether or not he runs again, his far as his personal feelings are concerned, he would rather pick a new President than a new vice president. The first would involve merely passing over Nixon, the second would involve getting rid of him. We doubt that the President sees anything in Nixon's conduct to justify any such action, but the political realities, no matter what the political realities may seem to be.

Once again, this Republican legislative leadership and this Democratic Governor have not of the field of potential battle, and instead of coming to blows, retired to a compromise containing satisfaction and credit for each.

This is getting to be almost a routine, and it contrasts vividly with the routine of past presidential elections, more recently achieved, more fiercely held, and never abandoned until each side had exhausted all its resources in an effort to crush the other.

At the conclusion of the two days of bipartisan conferences which produced the compromise settlement of the main issues of this special session, we found ourselves curious about the mechanics and techniques of such compromise. We and we evolved what we call a "Munich method" for the future. We are sure that it will be a valuable addition to the arsenal of the negotiator.

So we sought, for purposes of background information, and with a clear understanding that we were not undertaking to publish a blow by blow account of the negotiations, to have ourselves briefed on the course of the two conferences.

We consulted a Republican familiar with the course of the negotiations, and we consulted a Democrat familiar with them.

It was our somewhat naive expectation that, as we obtained the details of the making of peace from both contestants, each side would make a case for itself, claiming its own triumph, and at Munich, Britain and France were willing to try to pay peace for themselves at the expense of Russia, and were hoping that, if Hitler attacked anybody, it would be Russia, they have some justification for it.

But what Khrushchev does not mention, in his Asian speeches, is the next chapter of the story. That is the chapter in which Russia, less than a year after Munich, made herself a partner with Hitler, offering him that security in the east which made it possible for him to challenge Britain and France by his attack on Poland. This time, without the slightest doubt, somebody told Hitler it was all right to wage war as long as its real direction headed west. And the somebody who told Hitler this was the United States. World War II, it was Russia, that part of the story Khrushchev does not tell.

If he had to defend it, he would probably say that it was far enough for Russia to turn against the West the same strategy the West had used against Russia. But the fact will remain that Hitler had not, at that time, begun in the year after Munich, been stiffening themselves, and that Hitler did not go to war only after he had made his deal with Russia. Had he not been able to make that deal, he might not have gone to war. Or, if he had gone to war, his war might have been much more swift.

At any rate, history is a little more complicated than the textbooks of either East or West will ever make it.

He Done It.

The tipsters from Washington have answered some of the questions about what was probably the diplomatic honor of the year, that being the statement, Secretary Dulles issued jointly with the Foreign Minister of Portugal, seeming to defend Portugal's right to hold the colony or province of Goa on the coast of India.

The worst fear the borer inspired was the fear that it was a product of the collective intelligence of our State Department. That fear seemed to be well substantiated when, a day or two later, Mr. Dulles steadfastly maintained that the statement was deliberate and not anything light-bly made.

That fear is now removed, by reports from Washington that Mr. Dulles did this one all by himself, without consulting regular channels in his own department which, say the reports, would certainly have vetoed it.

There is also an explanation of why Mr. Dulles did it. It seems that our leases on military bases in the Azores are expiring next September, and that one of the items of business being discussed with the Portuguese Foreign Minister was the extension of these leases, and that the latter asked a little advice about it and got it from Mr. Dulles.

The situation involved does become what was suspected in part payment for a military base in the Azores, Mr. Dulles put his signature to a statement which may have created the parcel of two continents, inasmuch as the statement had the effect of putting the United States in a position defending colonialism.

It is at least reassuring to find that the State Department staff was not involved in the matter which did produce it, but only the mentality at the top.

 Christmas Again
 Another year has rolled around. The lights are on again. The air is filled with carols. Peace on earth, good will to men. It is the time when most are gay. But still some folks are sad. Because the comforts of this life they never really had.

There are about 5,200 new cases of pneumonia a day among Americans.

He lost a 4-block chain to one of the city's newest police officers. That fact seemed to be well substantiated when, a day or two later, Mr. Dulles steadfastly maintained that the statement was deliberate and not anything light-bly made.

Washington Newsmen Bored At Gettysburg's White House
 Gettysburg, Pa. (NEA)—Down Route 1, south of the town, the Washington Post's newsman, Murray Stoyler, was here at the Gettysburg Hotel for the 50-man Washington press corps, reclusive on a diet of briefing and boredom.

Twice a day the newsmen go next door to a gymnasium converted into a news room. At noon and later in the afternoon, other Press Secretary Jim Hagerty or Assistant Press Secretary Stoyler shows up, sits at a table with a green bare cover, and reads the latest report on what the President is doing down on his farm.

Occasionally, President Eisenhower drives into town and spends a few hours at his desk in the Post Office. Photographers take pictures.

They will talk back along the road. General Pickett crossed in his historic charge. The town celebrates its 75th anniversary. The newsmen are bored. They never sleep.

That Big Silent Vote
 There will naturally be a great deal of comment in Manchester today on the remarkably poor turnout of voters in yesterday's referendum. Here were matters involving a total expenditure of $2,000,000, and "nobody" was interested enough to get out and vote. All of us can remember occasions in which there was no public interest in the expenditure of sums as paltry by comparison. It is easy, therefore, to assume the Manchester vote was the result of a sudden turn of laziness and indifference to its own welfare.

"It is a shame," we may hear, "that we have earned the right to say that by voting ourselves."

The low vote is, however, understandable, and being understandable, very far from constituting an indication that the quality of democracy in Manchester has suddenly declined.

There was not, and could not be, the slightest breath of controversy over the $2,000,000 program of modernization of the sewerage disposal plant.

Normally, one might have expected a great deal of controversy over the $2,000,000 purchase of the Globe-Hallow tract. But this proved to be one of those miraculous instances in which all elements of public and political opinion flowed smoothly together toward one favorable verdict.

There has never been anything like it before, and there will probably never be anything like it again.

The Chamber of Commerce, the Democratic Town Committee, the Republican Town Committee, and the Brown bloc unanimously claim that seems a kind of municipal sentiment.

The result was that no voice of argument of opposition was raised. But it is a fair assumption that if there had been more controversy, the vote on both sides would have been much higher, but the final outcome proportionately the same.

A good many voters, yesterday, were obviously more than George would do it. If they had been less certain of his performance on their behalf, they would have tended to appear in person. Such relaxation of responsibility can be dangerous. But it was, yesterday, quite understandable.

The point is that, although the will of the community was expressed by a vote small in size, the community will was nonetheless expressed, and expressed decisively. The real big vote yesterday was, of course, a silent vote of assent.

Who Loosed Hitler?
 One of the unfriendly charges Khrushchev has been making against the West in Asia is at least in the realm of half truth. He is charging that Britain and France plotted to encourage Hitler to strike against Russia. And that seems at least a half truth. But Khrushchev never mentions the sequel.

In 1938, when Britain and France went to Munich and the Czechoslovakia, they barred Russia, Czechoslovakia's good friend, from their conference with Hitler. Munich has been labeled as a "Munich method" for the future. We are sure that it will be a valuable addition to the arsenal of the negotiator.

So we sought, for purposes of background information, and with a clear understanding that we were not undertaking to publish a blow by blow account of the negotiations, to have ourselves briefed on the course of the two conferences.

Wanted! Two Eisenhowers
 One of the more unpleasant considerations likely to be thrust upon the President as he considers his own political future is that he will be under some compulsion to select his own successor, whichever decision he does make for himself.

If he does not run, then, obviously, he will be asked to find a blessing upon the candidate the party selects to run in his place. And the interest and strategy of his own faction in the party will be much sharper than that. It will want him to help select the new candidate.

But some of that same responsibility, for selecting his own successor, will also be pushed toward him if his decision is that he himself will run again. It will be a harsh political fact that people, as they consider voting for Eisenhower, will think of his lines, and then take much more than the usual look at the individual who is in second place on the Eisenhower ticket. And, for once, the individual in second place will be measured not against the vice president, but against the president-elect. And the Democratic nominee for the presidency, whoever he is, will have, if he wishes,

But some of that same responsibility, for selecting his own successor, will also be pushed toward him if his decision is that he himself will run again. It will be a harsh political fact that people, as they consider voting for Eisenhower, will think of his lines, and then take much more than the usual look at the individual who is in second place on the Eisenhower ticket. And, for once, the individual in second place will be measured not against the vice president, but against the president-elect. And the Democratic nominee for the presidency, whoever he is, will have, if he wishes,

When All's Lost—
Send a Book

New York 10—When your television set goes blank, what do you do while you're waiting for the repairman to come and fix it? Do you get cross and upset? Do you fume and fume over wasted hours—precious hours you could be spending deep in a coma watching your favorite video shows?

Well, why not protect yourself against these tragic lulls in living? Why not buy yourself a book, and sit down and read it? What if it does make your lips titter? You probably could use a little more exercise.

Now don't say, "I've already got a book." Every home that yearns for a two-car garage ought to have room for two books, too. You can find space for the extra one somewhere.

As a matter of fact, why not really surprise a friend this year and send him a book? It's a Christmas present! He'll talk about it for days and days.

To help you pick the right one, we have made up a list of suggested Christmas books for folks you hear about. And so, kids, here we go—all in fun:

"A Charmed Life"—President Eisenhower.
"Beyond Desire"—Winston Churchill.
"The Near and Yet So Far"—Adlai Stevenson.

Sings at Church

The Women's Club of Manchester held its December meeting last night in the chapel of South Methodist Church. Mrs. John Trybal introduced "The Pipes," an octet from Trinity College, who sang a group of spiritual, barbershop and popular songs.

"The Pipes" consist presently of the following Trinity students: Douglas Green, leader; Winston Perry, Peter Dodge, Jack Marino, Steven Von Mohr, Joseph Blidin, William Waidler and Jon O'Connell. These students arrange most of their own material, and as each student graduates the group chooses a successor. In this way, "The Pipes" have continued since 1941. They have sung before women's groups and charitable organizations and have recently done

Interpreter Has Souvenir Of Days Spent in Germany

By JOSEPH A. OWENS

Andover (Special)—When he was not yet eight years-old, Carl Stiens observed recruits in the Kaiser's German army being trained by an instructor. Carl Stiens and the sight of the brutal spectacle is still vivid in his mind though four decades have passed.

A few years later he was struck repeatedly by the fate of Communist sympathizers in Germany because they considered his father (a small land owner) a capitalist. About a quarter of a century later he returned to his native Germany wearing the uniform of the U.S. Army.

During his Army duty and also for a four-year period following his discharge, Stiens acted as an interpreter for Americans in Germany. His first work was for his commanding officers in the Army and later he and his wife, Elise, worked as civilians for the War Department.

The operator of a tourist home on R.I. 6, Stiens has plenty of interesting stories to tell for guests. For instance in 1928 when he was sailing across the Atlantic Ocean for the first time a Japanese family was on the same boat. According to the blue-eyed gentleman, the Japanese native identified himself as a diplomat and when he learned Stiens was leaving Germany to make his home in the United States, a man named Hitler would someday be the top man in Germany.

To this day Stiens marvels at the uncanny prediction because at that time Adolph Hitler was comparatively unknown and it wasn't until six years later that he rose to power.

Defted, but Unavailable

In 1928 Stiens was drafted to serve in the German army, but he was living in the United States at the time and was able to ignore the notice. He recalls the German conscription was done according to birth records and his call to duty was sent to his mother, who was living in Germany, and she later informed him.

He says that as early as the twenties Germany was preparing for World War II though the men who eventually led the country into conflict had not gained stature. Stiens maintains a boy was taken out of a university in the late 1920's, sworn into the German army, sent to Switzerland, to become a watchmaker and during World War II turned up in England and supplied the Germans with a tip which enabled the Nazis to sink a battleship in an English harbor. He does not name the person, but insists the story is true.

During the war he took part in the Allied liberation of Germany and asserts the men who had close contact with German soldiers respected them for their fighting ability. However, Stiens declares as an army, the strict regulations each man was made to follow proved cumbersome.

It was during his four years with the War Department, 1946 to 1950, that he mingled with the people of Germany and did undercover work for his employer, much of which, according to him, must remain secret.

The markman has also shot wild bear and has several snapshots of his bounty to prove his ability with a rifle.

Hunting in Europe is much different than in this country, according to Stiens. Selective hunting rights of property owners are relinquished and the areas leased to the hunters on bid. This money is applied toward the taxes and also enables men acquainted with the sections to lease fertile hunting areas.

Carl decided to become a resident of Andover about four years ago when he visited a friend in town. He acquired a piece of property which he thought resembled his boyhood surroundings to some extent and in addition to catering to tourists, is an employe of the Post Office.

The Doctor Says

Usually Mental Retardation Can Be Found by I. Q. Test

By EDWIN F. JORDAN, M.D. Written for NEA Service

One of the big problems facing our society concerns those among us who are mentally retarded. A mentally retarded person is defined as one who does not have the natural intelligence and ability to learn enough to support themselves in simple occupations, but are not likely to go beyond the elementary grades of school.

It is not possible to drill or train a youngster with a low I. Q. into a definitely higher group. This may be a hard thing for parents to realize, but it should be faced.

There is, however, some experimental work going on with a substance called glutamic acid and its effect on the intelligence. This substance appears to raise the intelligence as measured by the I. Q. slightly.

However, it must be emphasized that the results are not remarkable and the work has not gone far enough as yet for anyone to be sure whether it will have practical value for children of below normal natural intelligence.

It should be pointed out that normally mentally retarded children can be helped to lead useful, productive and happy lives. In addition to the aid which can be obtained from physicians, institutions, school superintendents,

What Ails Britain? Britain Sees Little of Eden In Role of Prime Minister

London — (NEA) — Britons have yet to see Sir Anthony Eden in action as prime minister. Now, five months after a pompous Tory victory at the polls, Sir Anthony remains something of a mystery, like a public monument yet to be unveiled.

The irony is that Eden, whose whole career has been devoted to foreign affairs, should suddenly find himself heading a government beset by grave domestic problems.

And what problems.

That Eden was able to weather this storm was largely due to good teamwork on the part of his Cabinet colleagues.

But what does Sir Anthony know about domestic affairs, his critics ask. He may know where the coal mines are, but does he know how to run a business? Does he know anything about balance of payments and the balance rate of the gold price? He runs the argument.

What his critics forget is that Eden has had more than Churchill, to whom economic were "those damned dots." Eden has seen the Westminister Bank during the war, and he has made a point in speaking in economic debates between 1945 and 1950.

Neither new little of Eden. Unavoidably the nation has seen Eden in action as prime minister because Parliament has been in summer recess. But the prime minister has used the interlude to brief himself on the nation's most pressing needs, calling in his Cabinet ministers one by one for talks.

No British government since the war (whether Labor or Tory) has had the fortune to tell the British public that it is making itself sick on the much indicated.

It has been left to the Eden government to administer "the Eden ail." And by now the attention calls for heroic doses.

Britain's decline can be diagnosed simply: Too much money is chasing too few goods; too many jobs are chasing too few men; the remedies are obvious enough: cut down on spending, and boost production, while making more working available by eliminating some existing jobs.

But no government "had" the

Cheer for Convalescents
Dear Citizens of Manchester,
During the past few years, the Manchester Council of Churches has been performing a special ministry in the convalescent homes in this community.

Once again, we wish to bring to your attention, one of the special services that can be performed by local citizens. We would like to suggest that you invite one or more of these convalescents into your home for Christmas. We are sure that many of you have friends in these homes and if you invited them you would make them very happy.

Of course, the guests in the various homes will be taken care of at Christmas time, but we feel sure that there are some who would appreciate being invited to a private home for Christmas dinner.

If you would like to entertain a guest in your home on Christmas Day, you may contact the convalescent homes, the Pastor of your Church, or the writer.

Sincerely yours,
Herman V. Johnson

Slover's Job
Because I am going to be a bit person in this letter I would like to qualify as one capable of appreciating institutional management for whether you operate hospitals in the problems which confront you 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and having operated three hospitals in Hartford for a quarter of a century and having fed more guests than our local hospital I think I know what caused the "obnoxious" of Mr. W. P. Slover who has regretfully resigned an superintendent of the Manchester Memorial Hospital, a job he has done most efficiently for 12 years. Just as no housewife, even if the greatest culinary expert, can throw things away, even if they are week, satisfy the tastes of all members of her family, so no director of a dining room engaged in stream-line production can always cook favor, etc. the food for large numbers of people and more especially if they are ill or are ordered to have only special diets.

Mr. Slover's operation of his kitchen and service over a period of years has been comparable with that of the best hotels. I ought to know, I was recently a patient in the Manchester Memorial Hospital for several weeks for observation. The dietitians, under Miss Burr, cheerfully served guests of all ages, with all kinds of dishes. The food was excellent.

Another yardstick of institutional management is courtesy to all and particularly to the staff, including maintenance men.

Still another acceptance barometer in institutional direction is cleanliness. Another is the acceptance of this challenging job in a cheerful manner—never in a curt or "I should worry" attitude.

Sincerely yours,
Mr. Slover's job as head of our hospital was never done. There are no hours. Whether he is reclining at his home after a hard day's work he must at all times be available for emergencies and be as the directing head must have the meaning well-just do not understand institutional activities.

My best wishes to you, Mr. Slover, and may you soon have regained your good health, as I have, thanks to the Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Rockville-Vernon City Hospital Gets $18,400 Ford Foundation Award

Rockville, Dec. 13 (Special)—A $18,400 grant from the Rockville City Hospital by the Ford Foundation, it was learned today.

The grant is part of a half-billion dollar donation to universities and hospitals throughout the country. According to the terms of the grant, the funds may be used for any program of improvement, or extension of hospital services, but not be used for operating expenses for services currently being given by the hospital.

Further requirements necessitate the hospital governing board to submit evidence of tax exemption before receiving a grant. They must report preliminary plans for use of funds within three months of receipt, and report at the end of two years on the actual or projected use of the funds.

Joseph P. McMahon, business manager at the hospital, said that the grant would be used to complete a new wing of the hospital. The number of patients during the past year at the hospital has increased to such an extent that the existing building is at capacity has been severely taxed.

Additional space for care of patients would be needed in the not too distant future.

Rock Draft Exemption
Superintendent of Schools Arthur E. Chastain has written a letter to the State Department of Education requesting that it be included in the list of exempted schools at the end of the school year.

The problem was brought to light at the December meeting of Education meeting last week when Mrs. Charles Crowell, a commercial arts instructor, is leaving the system after the Christmas holidays to serve his military obligation.

Members of the Board felt that teachers should be given the same consideration as other public employees in being granted 8-month deferments under certain conditions.

The Board's letter to the State Department of Education asked for information on how other public employees were doing in regard to the problem.

Michael Russell, a senior at the New Britain Teachers College, will receive a place at a salary of $2,100. He will also assist in coaching basketball and increase in salary.

Soviet Culture Film--Seen Latest Trick in Propaganda Campaign

Washington (NEA)—Million-dollar movie extravaganzas of the Soviet Union's propaganda bag or tricks.

These artistic films compare with the best Hollywood is able to produce in the cultural field and is no barrier for the state-backed Communist movie-makers.

It's part of a stepped-up program to sell Russia as the cultural leader of the world.

This is the opinion of officials at the U.S. Information Agency who are gravely concerned. They fear the Communists will hood-wink the free world.

Weak Link in U.S. Defense
Others are apprehensive. "One of the weakest links in the U.S. defense against Soviet Russia is in the general field of cultural relations with other nations," declares Rep. Frank Thompson (D-N.J.). "The Soviet Union has long accused the U.S. as a nation, because of its cultural backwardness and its propaganda has had considerable influence throughout the rest of the world."

Recently USA movie experts attended a secret showing of Russia's latest product. It was a color film, "Homes and Jolies," music by Prokofiev.

"There were no smiles when we stepped out of the room after the movie," reports one official. "We knew the opposition had come up with something."

Other than a brief narration, no words were spoken. There was no obvious propaganda, just art and culture all the way.

"This product is one of such beauty, such grace, such elegance, and such dramatic presentation of the sweetness of true love that one wonders how it could have come from the land of mass obsession by fear," commented a Washington society reporter.

Gives USA Experts Chills
"This type of reaction gives USA experts the chills. They don't blame anyone for enjoying Russian films. But they realize this cultural barrage can pull people into thinking the Soviet hierarchy is more concerned with culture than communism."

The Kremlin is pouring huge sums of money into the Red movie program, according to Turner Shelton, Chief of the USA's Motion Picture Service. He estimates Russia is spending approximately 200 million dollars a year on feature films and documentaries.

On the optimistic side, Hollywood films are more than holding their own with Russian films. Shelton reports. And the Soviet emphasis on spectacular films could be a reaction to "Cinemascope" shown successfully last summer at the International Trade Fair in Damascus, Syria.
