Connecticut Yankee

By A. H. O.
Ever since we have been contemplating the passage of the bill which would have the effect of negating recent court decisions establishing the right of American citizens to have an open hearing, with all evidence against them presented openly, in cases where the State Department wishes to refuse to issue them passports.

The State Department itself wants this provision passed, so it can retain the power to deny passports on the basis of confidential information. The application of this provision of course would be mainly to those Americans who are suspect of being either Communist or Communist sympathizers, and might, in the view of the State Department, harm our interests if they were allowed to go abroad. But, although the bill is in the hands of the Senate, it is not yet in the hands of the President, and it is not yet in the hands of the Supreme Court.

It is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the President, and it is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the Supreme Court. It is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the President, and it is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the Supreme Court.

It is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the President, and it is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the Supreme Court. It is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the President, and it is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the Supreme Court.

It is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the President, and it is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the Supreme Court. It is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the President, and it is a pity that the bill is not yet in the hands of the Supreme Court.
