First Selectman Goodwin W. Jacobson said today that the Hop River Bridge has been completed and was opened to traffic. The Hop River Mill race is practically completed, he said, with the exception of the dam which will be applied later in the season. Work is well under way on a small bridge over the Otis Brook on this road and is expected to be completed soon, Jacobson said.

Bolton Methodist Church Schedules Unique Christian Unity Event

Bolton, Oct. 8 (Special).—Observance of World-wide Communion Sunday at United Methodist Church this weekend will be highlighted by an unusual event. Christians of six nations of the world will join hands about the altar in a symbolic gesture of the unity of Christendom of every age in a service to be held at 8 p. m. in the church.

The annual meeting will be held at 8 p. m. today in the ball room at 444. Invited have been groups as follows: Brooklyn, Natchaug, Chaplin, Konoma of Waterford, Hilltown of East Hartford, and Connecticut River of Windsor.

Considered by the Board of Finance to be one of the most important changes in the town's financial history at the town meeting on Oct. 12 is the proposal to increase the town's share of the $4,000 annual salary basis from the present commutation status.

Statistics Show Employment Up

Non-manufacturing employment in Connecticut rose to 562,000 in September, the second highest level on record, State Labor Commissioner Renato E. Ricciuti reported today.

Although he listed no specific numbers, he noted that manufacturing employment rose to the June level after a summer drop-off due to vacation shutdowns.

According to his report, construction work activity will continue to be below the average level for 1957. Cost of construction, during this period, however, rose to $180,000,000 as compared with $158,210,000 during the first half of 1956.

Artificial Method for Curing Hay Boon to Farmer, Says Roger Olcott

By STEVE BARNETT

On a rainy day about five years ago Roger Olcott, of 403 W. Center St., was awakened by the sound of rain falling on the tin roof of his old Colonial house.

Most men in this situation would merely turn over and go back to sleep. Olcott, however, was too dignified to do this. He sat up and thought.

"For Olcott was a farmer. To him the rain meant that his spring hay crop cut and left to rot in the field the day before was ruined.

Farmers throughout the ages, losing their valuable forage crop because of a heavy rainfall at just the wrong time, have enacted the same scenes of anger and frustration. Traditionally, they become resigned to such setbacks. They recognize that it is simply an occupational hazard of farming to be prey to the whims of the weather.

But Olcott, sitting up in bed that spring night and listening to the rain, could not get to sleep about his loss. Perhaps because of a long heritage of family tradition, perhaps because of a long heritage of family tradition, perhaps because of a long heritage of family tradition, he determined to see what he could do to protect the hay farmer from the mercies of the weather.

That night changed Olcott's life. As the result of it, he has now all but given up farming and has become, in the main, a salesman. What he sells is the "Brite-Green System for Superior Quality Hay"—an artificial hay-curing system that he himself has developed.

At a turning point in his life, Olcott decided to turn to the mechanical side of his profession. He has now all but given up farming and has become, in the main, a salesman.

Commercially, the Brite-Green venture is now at a turning-point. With Olcott working only part time, some 100 Brite-Green units have been sold in the past two years that they have been on the market.

During the coming winter and spring, Olcott plans to devote virtually all his time to developing and selling the Brite-Green system, and he hopes to make that his primary occupation.

If enough units are sold and the system becomes a success, Olcott will have earned a position in the forefront of agricultural mechanics. And he will have made economically possible for himself to do further work in this field.

"Next year will make or break the Olcott venture," he says.

From the individual farmer's point of view, it can be said that Olcott's product has a great deal of merit. It is a system that provides a respectable degree of success. After the system is installed in New England and New York State, he says, it should be as good as a farmer's money paid in advance.

One man who thinks it has a great deal of merit is Wilber T. Little, of Spencer St.

Of course, since Little is the friend who helped Olcott develop the system, and since he sells the commission base, Olcott is not considered strictly impartial. But on the other hand, Little has 20 years' experience as a dairy farmer, together with his leadership in the Connecticut Artificial Breeding Commission, the Jersey Sire Assn., and other similar organizations, should give some authority to what he says about curing methods.

At any rate, Little says he would not be without the Brite-Green system for curing his own hay, and he is not alone in his wonderful things that has ever been developed in the hay curing business.

"When it comes to curing hay, you can't cure it any other way," Little says. "The Brite-Green system is the only way to cure hay that I know of."

The problem of curing hay is always one of the prime reasons why farmers need machines. Even though the day may be perfectly clear and the weather men may forecast no rain for a week, the farmer who proceeds to cut his hay can never be sure that a sudden rainstorm will not hit during the curing process.

On the other hand, should the farmer try to beat the rain by baling his hay and raking it into the barn before it has cured sufficiently, the moisture is very likely to start "sweating" in the hay. In this fermentation-like process, the hay not only loses much of its nutrient value but even, in advanced cases, sets the barn on fire.

One Last Best Quality Ever If the weather is perfect and the farmer patient, the hay will cure in the field. In the case of a heavy rain, the hay will be ruined. In the case of a heavy rain, the hay will be ruined.

With such a higher grade of hay, like alfalfa, field curing is unsatisfactory because of the numerous weather conditions. As Olcott's Brite-Green brochure points out, "The better the quality of your standing crop, the harder it is to cure it."

No matter how experienced and how careful the farmer be, he is apt to take the crop into the barn either too soon or too late, and thus to lose some of its nutrient value. Such losses may seem relatively minor, but they are crucial in the long run. The "economic margin" of farming is getting narrower and narrower in New England, and when only those farmers with the very best cattle can survive.

In order to have the very best cattle, of course one must have the very best forage to feed them. It is, therefore, not only a matter of having the very best forage to feed them, but also a matter of having the very best forage to feed them.

Several such systems are on the market. They include mainly fitting a farmer's hayrack with a commercial venture. Olcott's system, the pair of his time winter and next spring to further develop and sell the product.

He says he does not expect to get rich, and would settle for being able to sell two Brite-Green units a week. His main hope is that the product will be successful enough to enable him to stay in the field of experimental agricultural mechanics.

"On average, the financial security of regular farming," Olcott says, "is very low. It is a transition he is making, but you must get the excitement of something up yourself, and of being right on the frontier in the field of agricultural mechanics."

Anyone who has talked with Olcott will not be surprised to find him in such a pioneering field of endeavor. The "gray-haired" farmer, entrepreneur, and staunch individualist, where he got these traits is not secret. Olcott's ancestor not only went back into New England history, but he has a tradition of being both leading farmer and gifted inventor.

Some of his forebears were, in fact, virtually the very first settlers in the Manchester area. According to the history of the town written by Matthew Spence and Percy Bidwell, an early settler was one of the first to settle in the area then called Oxford Parish within the Connecticut General Assembly for permission to hold religious services here for seven years. Olcott's ancestor, he says, was then called Oxford Parish within the Connecticut General Assembly for permission to hold religious services here for seven years.

Knowland in Race Against Gov. Knight

made no deal or reached any understanding with Nixon based on the state of the race.

Of more immediate import, the California outcome may turn into a referendum on the issue of the prospective contest with Knowland as a showdown between the Republican and Progressive wings of the party.

Gov. Dan Edmund G. Brown, only Democrat holding state office, has all but agreed to be upped by the Progressive wing of the party.

Knowland has announced his intention to run for the state office in 1960, and has been active in voter registration since the New Deal. He has elected only one year in 64 years. That was in 1934, the last time the Republicans got into an intra-party squabble over the nomination for governor.

Knowland is a member of the California State Federation of Labor. The Governor indicated in announcing his candidacy for reelection Aug. 19, that Knowland's support of the labor movement was a key issue in his campaign.

Knowland, first appointed to the Senate in 1944, by Gov. Earl Warren, has said "I have

75 Little Rock White Students Out in Protest

The 75 white girls said their parents had supported their plan to join the walkout.

The girls said their parents had told them it would be impossible to discipline them. They conceded the demonstration was a failure and that they probably would be punished.

The girls left school at a quarter of 10 and went to a nearby hotel. They were met by a group of about 200 white students who had gathered across the street and across the highway. The girls were escorted to the hotel by a group of about 200 white students who had gathered across the street and across the highway.

New School Seen Necessary; Two More Buses Approved

Vernon, Oct. 3 (Special)—A case recommended that adequate liability insurance be taken. Dr. Joseph Krist, town health officer, replied to a Board request regarding Alford flu inoculations. He advised against mass inoculations of school children at this time, saying inoculation by private physician was preferable. School directors, including the Medical Assn. are Raymond I. Kummer, John L. Phifer and Oliver J. Purnell. Talcott Landolt, town clerk, said that the Board had approved the purchase of two more school buses to be added to the present fleet of six, and may give rural Vernons a new elementary school next September. In approving the addition of school buses, the Board acted on a recommendation of Superintendent of Schools Raymond E. Ramsdell and the Manchester School Bus Service. In a letter to the Board, Elmer M. Trull, owner of the bus service, noted that the six buses are transporting 1,386 children, each way, for a total of 386 miles per day. The period of time allowed for the transportation is "insufficient to permit a safe or efficient system." Trull's letter said, "I have added that serious overloads exist on some trips which cannot be corrected with the present number of buses. The need for at least 10 more classrooms by September was explained by Supt. Ramsdell who pointed out that the estimate is based on present enrollment and is continually increasing. The need was outlined as follows: Three more rooms will be needed at Northeast, two at Maple St., four at Vernon Elementary and one for Grade 8. William Shiles noted Ramsdell's estimate are usually conservative and the Board discussed the possibility of a 14-room school being built by September. Ramsdell pointed out that it has been done in other communities, but immediate action would be needed. The Board voted to reaffirm the need in a letter to the Selectmen, hoping that a building committee could be named soon. Guest Dance Caller—Herbe Gaudreau, columnist for the New England Call, a monthly publication, will be guest caller at a square dance Saturday at 8 p.m. in Vernon Elementary School. Student Work Shows—Anthony Magliocco, teacher of the Vernon Traffic School, participated in the third annual state-wide contest of the Connecticut Council for Retarded Children, held Saturday at Manchester High School. He exhibited work accomplished by his students and answered questions concerning the Vernon special education program. A large number of local residents attended. Vernon and Talcottville news items are handled through the Herald in the Bureau, 7 W. Main St., telephone 218000-5. NIGHT CRASHES CONTLY Chicago—Although night traffic is only one third as heavy as day traffic, it accounts for more than 22,000 deaths, 400,000 injuries, and a $4,000,000 loss of two billion dollars every year. New Haven R.R. May Drop Line

Boston, Oct. 3 (AP)—The president of the New Haven Railroad says the road's commuter service in Massachusetts faces abandonment unless there is a quick solution to the four million dollar annual losses on these services. "George Alpert, in a television address last night WNAOC-TV, asked for fare increases, tax relief and some form of subsidy to eliminate these losses. Alpert said rail commuter service to Boston, not multi-million dollar expressways, are needed to save the city from strangulation by automobile traffic. Buildings which now help carry Boston's tax load will have to be torn down to provide parking spaces for the automobiles these expressways will carry into the city in increasing numbers, Alpert said. He added that with some help from public sources, railroads can cover Boston's traffic congestion cheaper than expressways. He said a federal court decree allows New Haven to close its Old Colony Line "without anybody's permission." Alpert added, "The situation on the Old Colony does not differ very much from the situation on our other commuter lines, so what I have to say applies to the entire commuter service in Massachusetts."

Lutheran Women Elect Area Chief

Hartford, Oct. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Eugene H. Rowell of Rochester, N. Y., is the new president of the United Lutheran Church women of the New York and New England synod. Mrs. Rowell succeeds Mrs. C. Gustav Strömstrom of Tennessean. A 3-day convention which began Tuesday. Three hundred women are attending. Other women elected to office for two year terms were Mrs. George H. H. Rowell of Rochester, N. Y., vice president; Mrs. Earl S. E. of Jackson Heights, secretary; Mrs. Gertrude Lawrie of New Britain, financial secretary; and Mrs. Robert Hoffman of Woodstock, N. Y., treasurer. Dr. Frederick R. Knobel, president of the synod, spoke on the importance of evangelism and the importance of wider contacts between Lutheran congregations in the synod. A new constitution was adopted covering a change in the organization's name from United Lutheran Women's Missionary Society to United Lutheran Church women are attending. Mexico is named for the Aztec god of war, Mexitli.

WOMAN FORGER Jailed

Hartford, Oct. 3 (AP)—A woman who formerly lived in Meriden has received a 2-year prison term on charges of passing 10 forged checks last December in Colorado, Fla. She is Mrs. Frances Monastick, 31. She and a male companion were accused of passing three bogus checks worth $750. The pair pleaded guilty to the charge in U.S. District Court yesterday. Raymond C. Leahy, 35, Pittsfield, was the co-defendant, was ordered on probation for two years. Payment of the $750 was a condition of the probation. Judge J. Joseph Smith recommended that Mrs. Monastick's term be served in the federal prison at Alderson, W. Va. "However," Alpert added, "the weathervanes, windmills, and shelves, some partly-finished, some completed, covers his workbench. His family came to Manchester when he was four years old. Before the minimum schooling, he went to work for Cheney Bros. as a finisher, retiring six years ago after 35 years of service to the silk company. Devoted Attachments—While working for Cheney Bros. he devised and made several attachments for the various machines. One device was a guide for a velvet finishing machine. He said, "I noticed that the cloth didn't come off the machine smoothly so I made this guide for it. It fit right on the machine, and made it work better. They gave me a certificate for it." With this he showed a certificate from Cheney Bros. commending him on his inventions. "They paid me for it, too," he added. Hopfer recalled some of his other inventions, all of which he made for the silk mill machines. He spoke of combs and cards and guides which he had invented for the finishing machines. He said he can make just about anything with those hands," his wife Alma said, indicating the knick-knack covered walls. Hopfer has a small business sharpening lawnmowers and garden tools in his home. But his main interest is his workshop. A wide assortment of birdhouses,

Braves Nervous and Restrained in Losing Series Opener

Lew Burdette, Shantz Rivals in Key Contest

New York, Oct. 8 (AP)—The New York Yankees ruled a solid 12-5 victory over the Boston Braves in the first game of the World Series at Yankee Stadium today in what is regarded as the key game of the October classic. Another round of some 10,000 was expected.

Should Shantz nab the five-hit 5-1 triumph for New York yesterday, the Yankees could conceivably sweep the set in four straight, but the light-hearted Milwaukeeans about the Braves rally behind Burdette and even the series, the outlook is for a knock-down and drag-out seven games.

The Braves, who were nervous and restrained in the opener, did not get the ball until the eighth inning. The Yankees, who were sharp and they didn't play until the eighth, outpitched them, pitched them and outbatted them. Yet the Braves were not easily outclassed. Certainly the Yankees did not overcome them. They just did, certainly a little bit better than they did in the first game.

Little More Comfort

If there is any comfort in losing the first game, it is that it is a little bit more confident, a little bit more nervous and certainly more eager and anxious to meet the Yankees again, even in their own back yard.

Warren Spahn, who batted in the seventh, was the only one to get a hit, a double, and a run. He was the only one to get a hit, a double, and a run. He was the only one to get a hit, a double, and a run.

Series Notes

New York, Oct. 8 (AP)—The New York Yankees have long been known as a "muscle" team, but the first extra base hit of the World Series opener yesterday was a "muscle" hit.

Jerry Coleman, the leading Yankee second baseman, headed across the plate in the second inning and gently stroked the ball between Milwaukee first baseman Joe Adcock and the foul line. Before Andy Pafo, in right field, could come up with the ball, Jerry was pulling into second.

Coleman came to mind when the Spahn pitcher said: "I'm glad I'm mixed with herd hip which his muscle."

Spahn a Few Words

For three 125 pitches, 10 in the fifth and 24 in the sixth, in either of which he pitched a key ball, he pitched a key ball. He pitched a key ball. He pitched a key ball.

Del Crandall Arrives Much Too Late

Milwaukee catcher Del Crandall (1) twists as he starts his slide into third in the third inning of the World Series opener yesterday. He was much too late for Yankee shortstop Gil McDougald, who already ground out the runner. Crandall was the only one to get a hit, a double, and a run.

Downhill Slide for Yankees Drama, Turning Points Missing in First Game

New York, Oct. 8 (AP)—The New York Yankees figure they have won the "big one" of the World Series. They have beaten the king of the Milwaukee Braves pitching staff, Warren Spahn, and they have done it with their own pitcher, Lew Burdette.

The first game of the series, won 12-5 by the home team, was an almost devoid of drama and turning points. In fact Spahn and Burdette, who were the only two pitchers to get a hit, a double, and a run.
